Burt King, assistant manager to F. G. Morrow, of the New Orleans office of the General Film Company, has been transferred to manage the General branch at Memphis.

This is the first time that Morrow and King have been separated in years. Both formerly occupied similar positions at the General exchange in Jacksonville, Fla.

F. E. Garner, heretofore manager of the feature department, succeeds Mr. King.

NETTER WILL GO EAST FOR STATE RIGHTS PLAN

Leon Netter, who has been general manager of the Golden Gate and All Star Feature Distributors exchanges, Los Angeles, has resigned from his position and will go East in the near future where he will be engaged in a State rights film business.

Mr. Netter's connection with these exchanges has proven his ability in the film business, as he has added much to the success of the organization.

SIMON AND ISAACSON ALTERNATE ON ROAD IN OMAHA SECTION

F. J. Simon has been added to the General's road force out of Omaha. The salesmen alternate in covering their territories.

For instance, Isaacson covers one part of Nebraska, and then two weeks later Simon covers the same territory, while Isaacson goes to the territory Simon was covering. Manager Taylor says the plan is very satisfactory.

COMMITTEE REPORTS FAVORABLY ON CENSOR BILL IN MARYLAND LEGISLATURE

The new development in the Bryant Motion Picture censorship bill at Annapolis, Maryland, last week was the fact that the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Delegates reported the bill favorably on Tuesday night, March 8.

This action had been anticipated, as Mr. Lloyd Wilkinson, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, who is known to be opposed to the bill, announced that he was going to insist that the bill be brought out of the Committee if settled on the floor.

This action was due to rumors that money was to be used to defeat the bill, and the rumors caused a decided sensation in Annapolis a few weeks ago.

The bill was presented to the House intact with just a minor amendment. This amendment, it is understood, dealt more with the remuneration to be received by the censors should the bill finally become a law.

Up to the present time the bill has not had its second reading as the House of Delegates is up to its ears in legislation on the prohibition bill, and it is probable that several days will elapse before other business will be taken up.

The members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League have not gone to sleep on the proposition, however, and they are persistent in their work in opposing the censorship bill.

On Thursday afternoon, March 9, President Guy L. Wonders, of the Maryland Branch Motion Picture Exhibitors League, with Thomas D. Goldberg, chairman of the legislative committee, went to Annapolis, for the purpose of using their influence to defeat the bill.

The motion picture exhibitors of Baltimore as a unit are against the bill. A number of motion picture fans oppose it. There is only a very limited number that are urging its passage, so small in fact, that they are rarely heard from.

President Wonders declares: "The passage of the bill is to be fought. It will be fought in the House of Delegates. Should it go to the Senate it will be fought there also.

"Should it pass both Houses and go to the Governor, the Governor will be urged by a large and strong contingent to pass his veto upon the measure. We are earnestly working and feel very optimistic of ultimate success."

STIFF FIGHT WAGED OVER SUNDAY OPENING IN LAFAYETTE, INDIANA

A STIFF fight is being waged in Lafayette, Ind., on the Sunday opening question in a trial in the circuit court. The case is attracting an unusual amount of attention in Lafayette, and the courtroom was crowded on the opening day of the trial.

The state concluded the introduction of its testimony, March 6, and the defense, in its opening statement by Daniel P. Flanagan, asserted it would be shown that Sunday shows were as much a necessity as anything else that is permitted on Sunday, in violation of the closing law.

He said the popular demand for anything made it a necessity in the meaning of the law, and that the Lafayette public demands Sunday shows.

He declared that the state's contention that an organized conspiracy was afoot here to open the city on Sunday was absurd. The theater men, he said, decided to test the law, and with that end in view pooled their interests.

Just before the state closed its case several theater proprietors testified that they had been approached by various defendants and asked to contribute to the fund with which to fight the Sunday closing law.

Several testified that they refused to join with the defendants and told them they were not in favor of Sunday shows.

A jury for the trial was obtained March 1. It required nearly three days to select the jury. Misha Rubinoff, who is the principal defendant, is charged in the affidavit with pursuing his usual vocation on the Sabbath. He has pleaded, however, that he is a Jew and observes his Sabbath on Saturday.

The jury is composed of farmers. The attorneys for the defense in an argument on a point of law contended that Sunday shows were a necessity as much as concerts.

The state put several witnesses on the stand March 2, and frequent objections were made by the defense to their testimony. The state tried to prove that a conspiracy existed to violate the Sunday law and that the defendants, who are proprietors of Lafayette picture shows, resorted to every possible subterfuge in an effort to bring about Sunday opening.

Judge Burnett ruled that the testimony of Salvation Army men, whom the state attempted to put on the stand, should be excluded. The jury was not present when arguments were heard. The state hoped to prove by their testimony that one of the defendants had tried to engage the Salvation Army to take part in the Sunday performance in order to give it the appearance of a religious service.

WAR TAX ON PROFITS OF FILM COMPANIES IN CANADA IS PRACTICALLY CERTAIN

THE suggestion of Canada's War Finance Minister, the Hon. Sir William White, for the raising of additional revenues by taxing the profit of all companies, firms and partnership in excess of 7 per cent. (this applies to all concerns whose capital is over $50,000), have been received by different film men with a mixture of feelings.

The general impression is that the film companies are doing their share and paying a nice sum to the government coffers, but still there is also a feeling that there should be no complaint, as long as there is reasonable legislation that will cover every business combination fairly.

Steps are now being taken to amend the first bill, so that companies with large watered stock will not escape, while the smaller combinations are squeezed.

When this has been accomplished no doubt the measure will pass without any serious opposition. Radiating from the minister's proposals have come suggestions from many sources that the one-cent tax on theatre tickets be installed in Ontario, as in Quebec. This, however, does not seem to meet with much favor.

In fact, in many quarters the opposition is very bitter. However, a measure of this sort is within bounds of possibility and must be regarded seriously.

"OTHER GIRL" PASSED IN TOTO BY CHICAGO CENSOR

The Raver Film Corporation production, "The Other Girl," passed the Chicago Board of Censorship without a cut.

It was the expectation of the Chicago film men who had seen the advance showing of this production that the scene which depicted Jim Corbett's—in the character of Kid Garvey—first prize fight would have to be taken out of the picture entirely.

Their most extravagant prediction was that perhaps the board would permit a flash of it.

AMERICAN FILMS IN FAVOR WITH PARIS; DARLING MARKETS FOX PICTURES

Special to Motion Picture News

Paris, March 1.

A DEPUTATION, representative of the French kinematograph industry, including MM. J. Demaria, Léon Brezillon, Pathé, Prévot, Gaumont, Pionnier, Colomies, Marin, Ferret and Condat, waited on the Minister of the Interior recently and paid over to him several important subscriptions comprising 61,360 francs for the "Journée du Poilu," 3,000 francs for the Association d'Aide aux Veuves de la Guerre, and 2,000 francs for the "Oeuvre du soldat dans la tranchée."

The delegation then requested the minister to give favorable consideration to certain demands made by kinema exhibitors, who complained that administrative measures sometimes tended to place undue restrictions on kinema theatres.

The members of the deputation also pointed out that exhibitors throughout France had contributed upwards of 300,000 francs to the fund of the "Journée du Poilu."

In a conversation I had with a French colonel I requested him to give me his opinion about the operators at the front, and this is what he told me:

"War kinematograph films, one of the novelties of the present world conflict, have proved of immense utility to the French general staff.

"At first meant only as an experiment, they have been of such practical value to the staff that the return of the kinema operator from his aerial reconnaissance is always impatiently awaited at headquarters.

"The moving picture man who volunteers for this work accomplishes a difficult and daring task. He must be master of his profession, have nerves of steel, and be willing to take great risks.

"More often than not he is obliged to fly at a low elevation, otherwise his pictures would be valueless. Many men who have gone out on these perilous expeditions have never returned.

"As a precaution against films falling into the hands of the enemy the operators are provided with a special apparatus, which, should they be compelled to descend into the enemy's lines, enables them instantly to destroy their records.

"These war films show an experienced observer a great deal of what is going on behind the German lines.

"The enemy trenches are clearly visible, smoke from bursting shells indicates the accuracy of French artillery fire, tiny dots moving across the horizon are recognized as troops, convoys or guns, and it is even possible to discern Germans digging trenches or placing big guns in position.

"Kinema men have often brought back excellent pictures taken from waterplanes showing movements of ships and the track of periscopes."

J. R. Darling, of the Fox Film Company, recently spent a few days in Paris making arrangements with a French firm for the marketing of William Fox productions.

In spite of the vehement attacks by some of the journals, good American subjects are still in great demand.

Our exhibitors take no notice of the recriminations and three or more American-made films are regularly seen on every program.

Can Shakespeare Be Made Shakespeare in Films?

Tree, Back in New York for Stage Engagement After Eight Weeks' Stay on Coast for "Macbeth," Triangle Release, Says the Bard Loses Nothing on Screen

SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE, the English actor-manager, returned this week from the Triangle-Fine Arts studios after eight weeks spent in filming "Macbeth."

After his experience in California, Sir Herbert said, ordinary activity will be a pleasure.

David W. Griffith and John Emerson, who were assigned to direct the production, kept him busy sometimes as many as eighteen hours a day, including Sundays.

Even then, the magnitude of the spectacle required his presence a week longer than had been originally planned.

"I never worked so hard in my busy life," said the foreign star, in discussing his American film debut, "but the results were decidedly worth while.

"Lovers of Shakespeare and lovers of good films will be surprised when they see 'Macbeth' on the screen.

Our choice of Shakespeare's dramas for my first American cinema work was a most fortunate one, for 'Macbeth' is filled with the drama of action.

"In my opinion it is the least dependent on words of all the poet's plays.

"But is it Shakespeare as portrayed in films? That is a question that will be asked, and can be most easily answered. To me Shakespeare means above all, the beauty of the spoken word, but how wonderfully has the poet described for the modern director the scenes that are 'played off,' that is, which come into the plays themselves only as dialogue narrative!

"Charles Lamb wrote his 'Tales from Shakespeare' and never contended that they were Shakespeare. Yet they have served a wonderful purpose in stimulating extensive study of the poet.

"If Charles Lamb could adapt the poet's verse into highly diverting prose why should we apologize for adapting him to the cinema?

"I agree absolutely with Mr. Griffith and Mr. Aitken, the Triangle president, that we have fully justified our efforts. I am sure that the film 'Macbeth' will have a tremendous popularity in Great Britain and the colonies.

"And I am proud that I have been associated with what I understand is to be the only film contribution to the Shakespeare tercentenary, in which such a large part of the world is so actively interested this year, the three hundredth since the death of the poet."

Sir Herbert found life in the California film zone a trifle strenuous, but he refused to remain outside the artistic and social activities of the coast.

The democracy appealed to him greatly and he yielded to none in his efforts to fit into the environment.

He told with evident enjoyment of the hearty welcome he received in California and the noisy farewell.

De Wolf Hopper, Douglas Fairbanks and other Triangle stars, assisted by a hundred Fine Arts cowboys, gave him a rousing sendoff.

He is giving a spring season of Shakespeare in New York, which will probably be at its height when the 'Macbeth' film is ready for release.

Minor scenes, in which the star does not appear, remain to be made.

CHATTANOOGA MINISTERS MAKE STAND AGAINST SUNDAY OPENING

The Chattanooga, Tenn., Pastors' Association at its regular meeting, discussed the "better babies" movement, and expressed itself as being decidedly opposed to the suggestion that the picture theatres be open on Sunday in the interest of the "better babies" movement.

It is understood that the association feels that the opening of the theatres on Sunday would be a desecration of this day.

It is further understood that the Pastors' Association takes the attitude that there is no excuse for the open picture show on the Sabbath.

TYPICAL SCENES IN "SNOW STUFF," A THREE REEL MUSTANG-MUTUAL, FEATURING ART ACORD AND DIXIE STRATTON

THIS IS THE LAST OF THE "BUCK PARVIN" SERIES, WRITTEN BY CHARLES E. VAN LOAN

"U" Program for March 27 Headed by "Autumn"

Red Feather Feature Stars Violet Mersereau and Lieut. Percy Richards (the Man in White), Supported by Paul Panzer—Eight Comedies and Light Dramas Also on List,

THE program released by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company for the week of March 27 is headed by "Autumn," the Red Feather feature with Violet Mersereau and Lieutenant Percy Richards (The Man in White) in the leading roles, supported by Paul Panzer.

The scenario was written and produced by O. A. C. Lund.

The regular releases of the week will include eight comedies and eight dramas, "Autumn" being released on the twenty-seventh with a Nestor comedy, with Lee Moran, Neil Burns and Betty Compson taking the initiative.

Tuesday Grace Cunard and Francis Ford will be seen in a two-reel drama, "The Master Crooks," written by Miss Cunard and directed by Mr. Ford, this being a Gold Seal picture.

The Rex release for the day is "There Is No Place Like Home," written and produced by Lois Weber, in which the Short Family, Antrim, Lou and Mrs. Short are featured.

Victor Potel and Eileen Sedgwick appear in an Imp comedy. "The Gasoline Habit," having been written and produced by Roy Clements, being the experiences of a man who believes he can afford owning a Ford.

For Wednesday the program is topped by the Universal Animated Weekly, in which will be shown all the latest news events occurring in all parts of the world, as well as scenes of the Allies' great repulsive work in keeping the German forces away from Verdun, these views to reach New York City on or about March 11, according to a cablegram received by the editor of the Animated Weekly.

The unusual fashion review will also be shown in this reel. "The Model Husband" is a Victor two-reel comedy with Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby in the leading roles, in which a rank prohibitionist is exposed through someone taking a taste of his cough medicine.

Rupert Julian and Elsie Jane Wilson appear in a drama of domestic life in "The Blackmailer," produced under the direction of Mr. Julian himself.

On Thursday, Carter De Haven's first contribution to the Universal program as a director will be a Powers comedy, a burlesque on the great bank robbery, entitled "Between Midnight."

The scenario was also written by Mr. De Haven and Margaret Mayburn played the leading role.

"Riches" is the title of a three-reel Laemmle drama directed by Richard Stanton with himself and Myrtle Gonzalez playing leads.

"The Dragon's Breath" is a Rex release for Friday. It is a three-reeler directed by the Smalleys with Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley featured.

There will also be a Nestor comedy released on this day, "He Almost Eloped," with Ray Gallagher and Billie Rhodes doing the principal laugh provoking stunts in the offering.

For Saturday, a western picture is offered with Harry Carey playing a breed part. It is entitled "The Breed and the Girl" in two reels, written and directed by Jacques Jaccard. Supporting Mr. Carey are Olive Fuller Golden and Hoot Gibson in the principal subordinate roles.

The Sunday releases will be a Rex two-reel drama and an L-Ko Comedy. Grace Cunard and Francis Ford will be seen in "Her Sister's Sin," written by Miss Cunard and directed by Mr. Ford. In this picture both stellar leads play dual roles. Harry Gibbons and May Emory take the leading parts in the L-Ko Comedy, "Caught on a Skyscraper."

Edwards Will Direct Hamilton and Duncan for Kale

Director Begins Work on Ham Comedy from a Scenario Written by Himself—"Hazards of Helen" Camera Wrecked in Collision During Scenes for "The Record Run"

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, March 11.

KALEM Comedy Director William Beaudine is filming "Jack Williams' Sweetheart," with Ethel Teare as the sweetheart, and Jack McDermott as Jack Williams.

The story is that of a match-making mother trying to induce a confirmed woman hater to marry her daughter.

Jealousy arises between the mother and daughter, which to the young man appears as conclusive proof that all women are more or less mentally unbalanced.

The "Hazards of Helen" camera was the victim of a thriller recently, when it was badly damaged in a collision with a motor driven railroad speeder.

The scene being made was for "The Record Run," current production of the "Hazards of Helen" series. The accident occurred when the second speeder, occupied by Helen Gibson, giving chase to another driven by supposed crooks, who threw a cushion from the seat of their speeder onto the track, was derailed.

The director and cameraman narrowly escaped. The camera and tripod were totally wrecked, but Miss Gibson escaped.

The Green Hotel at Pasadena, the wintering place for the retired rich from all parts of the country, was used this week for interior scenes in the Kalem Ham comedy, "Millionaires by Mistake."

The story for this comedy was written by Lloyd Hamilton and Bud Duncan, who appear in the principal parts.

Harry Edwards, one of the best known comedy producers of the West Coast colony, who served at the Universal for a long period, and for the past year has been directing the Billie Ritchie company of the L-Ko, has been engaged by the Kalem Company and will direct Lloyd Hamilton and Bud Duncan.

WYSE ELECTED VICE-PRESIDENT OF STANDARD NEWS FILM

At a special meeting of the Standard Newsfilm Corporation held in New York, J. F. H. Wyse of Toronto, president of the Ontario Safety League, was elected vice-president.

A branch office of this corporation has also been opened at 34 Victoria street, Toronto.

TEXAS MAN WOULD STAGE "SIS HOPKINS"

Kalem's "Sis Hopkins Comedies" seem to have made a more than ordinary appeal to Texas photoplay followers, judging from a letter received by Kalem last week from William Geibig, general manager of the Hippodrome Amusement Company, Houston, Texas, which, in addition to its other houses, controls the Travis theatre, a stock repertoire theatre.

Manager Geibig writes: "I have just seen some of the 'Sis Hopkins' comedies and it seems to me that I could put these stories on to great advantage in my stock and repertoire house, providing you would be willing and would let me have the full scenario.

"I would like to hear from you on this proposition. If you think favorably of it, please let me know by return mail the price you would sell the stories to me for, the number you have on hand and the number of male and female parts in each cast."

Needless to say, Kalem has not decided to embark on this new "side-line" for picture producers.

DANIELS COMEDIES BOOKED FOR STRAND, NEW YORK

The popular Frank Daniels comedies, entitled "The Escapades of Mr. Jack," produced by the Vitagraph Company, and released through the V-L-S-E, which are amusing audiences throughout the country in a manner reminiscent of the success of the late John Bunny comedies, have been booked by the Strand in New York City, and will be shown in that theatre regularly hereafter.

Kleinschmidt, Battle Scarred, Back with War Films

The Intrepid Captain, Who from His Friendship with Archduke Frederick, Gets Carte Blanche to Visit Practically All the Teutonic Armies

CAPTAIN F. E. KLEINSCHMIDT, registered officer in this country, arrived in America from the war zone last week on the Frederick VIII., bringing with him a collection of war pictures which he will shortly place on the market here.

The last motion pictures which Captain Kleinschmidt furnished the trade will be remembered as those dealing with the Arctic regions, which created much favorable comment wherever shown.

His war pictures were taken chiefly on the eastern German front with the Austro-German armies.

At the time of the outbreak of the European war Captain Kleinschmidt was planning a tour of the larger cities of Germany, Austria and France to deliver a lecture on the northern regions illustrated by his Arctic pictures.

This being then impossible he returned to America but shortly afterwards he left to film his present pictures of the war.

Having become acquainted with Archduke Frederick of Austria through his former pictures, he was given almost carte blanche to visit the Teutonic armies.

Consequently he was able to secure pictures concerning army routine and detail the like of which have never before been obtained.

Captain Kleinschmidt showed a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS his formidable collection of still pictures which he says are fairly representative of his motion pictures.

They show remarkable views taken from aeroplanes, displaying armies on the march, cities like Belgrade, and also the ruins of other strongholds.

The captain accompanied the Teutonic forces during their invasion of Russian Poland. He has been all through Serbia and has been with the Austrian armies during their engagements on the Italian frontier.

He was also on the Italian side of the Mediterranean where he has obtained pictures displaying the planting of mines and like views.

Asked as to what disposal he would make of his pictures Captain Kleinschmidt replied:

"I will probably market them on the State rights basis, although I hope to obtain a theatre on Broadway for their first showing.

"By placing them on the state rights market I will shortly be relieved of all responsibility concerning their exhibition and I will be able to depart again for the front.

"Exclusive of the films which the Austrian government confiscated for their own use, I took about twenty thousand feet of film, eighteen thousand of which is in the nature of educational interest and photography perfectly suitable for public showing.

My scenes showing the planting of mines are, I believe, the most complete ever taken. I also took several feet while in a U-boat.

"Archduke Frederick furnished me with a personal escort, which enabled me to take pictures of army life and plans of attack and charges that have been unobtainable heretofore.

"The greater part of my work was done while in charge of an officer and consequently its authenticity is safely vouched for.

"I am also the only photographer," continued Captain Kleinschmidt, "who aeroplaned across the enemy's lines. These views will unquestionably prove of great interest to the public."

Captain Kleinschmidt attributes much of his success in bringing his pictures to this side of the water to luck.

Although the transatlantic liner that preceded the one which bore him and the ship which followed were thoroughly searched, the Frederick VIII. managed to evade the British scouts, and as a result his valuable war pictures will be presented to the public unedited save by the Austrian censor, who retained such film as he deemed might be strategically instructive to the Allies.

The story which Captain Kleinschmidt has to tell of the European war is worth volumes of written history.

He has been wounded himself, so it can easily and truthfully be said that he has seen real action although the long range at which armies fight in the present day prevented him from procuring views of such warfare.

Burr McIntosh, Master Actor, Cast for "My Partner"

Player Whose Stage Impersonations Have Afforded Keen Delight to Generation of Discriminating Audiences and Later Made Equal Screen Success, in a Mutual on 20th

BURR McINTOSH (CENTER OF TABLE) IN A SCENE FROM "MY PARTNER," MUTUAL MASTERPICTURE DE LUXE

BURR McINTOSH, known to American theatregoers for his impersonations of Pudd'nhead Wilson, Squire Bartlett in "Way Down East," Col. Moberly in "Alabama," Senator Langdon in "The Gentleman from Mississippi," Col. Watterson Blossom in "Cordelia Blossom," and many others; and to picturegoers for his work in "Col. Carter of Cartersville," "In Mizzoura," and "The New Adventures of J. Rufus Wallingford," will appear in "My Partner," a Mutual Masterpicture De Luxe, which will be released March 20.

Those familiar with the history of the American stage will remember that "My Partner," written by Bartley Campbell, was a success of thirty years ago.

In the screen version, Mr. McIntosh has the role of Joe Saunders. He is supported by Mary Mantell as Mary Brandon, Marie Edith Ellis as the little coquette, Curtis Cooksey as Ned Singleton, and others.

The atmosphere of western mountains and forests is brought out well.

"SEE AMERICA FIRST" IN CHARGE OF WHITE

The Gaumont scenic series, "See America First," is now being handled by C. M. White, assistant to F. G. Bradford, general manager of the Gaumont company.

The release of March 19 shows entertaining views of San Francisco, Cal.

"See America First" is a split-reel release with Harry Palmer's animated cartoons which are also the product of the Gaumont laboratories at Flushing, N. Y.

On March 19 Mr. Palmer will devote his part of the reel to a humorous skit on Charlie Chaplin, the latest Mutual recruit. It will be called "Preparedness."

LULU WARRENTON SUFFERS RELAPSE FROM PNEUMONIA

Lulu Warrenton, well-known character actress of the Universal company, who returned this week to work at Universal City, after six weeks' absence from the studios on account of an attack of pneumonia, was taken ill the day after her return and is confined to her bed again.

The attending physician says Mrs. Warrenton's condition is not serious, that she merely overtaxed her strength and after another week's rest will be able to resume her work at the picture city.

BESSIE LOVE IS LEADING WOMAN IN "GOOD BADMAN"

Since completing "The Habit of Happiness," current this week at the Knickerbocker theatre and scheduled for general release within a month, Douglas Fairbanks has returned to California and begun work on his fifth Triangle picture at the Fine Arts studios.

BESSIE LOVE

Allan Dwan remains with him as director. Many of the scenes will be filmed in the Mojave desert with innumerable cowboys assisting.

The scenario calls for some daring horsemanship by the star, and those who have seen his fearlessness in previous Triangle pictures are confident that he will need no double.

Bessie Love is to be the young star's leading woman. The picture will be called "The Good Badman."

A fitting title has been given to the newest Norma Talmadge picture, which the Franklins are directing. It will be called "The Children in the House."

All the Fine Arts juveniles will be prominent, with George Stone, Violet Radcliffe, Francis Carpenter, Carmen de Rue and Nina Fovieri especially active.

MISS FAIR, AGED 12, ESSANAY, WANTS TO WRITE SCENARIOS FOR RECREATION!

Joyce Fair, aged twelve years, the best known child actress in America, makes her debut in Essanay pictures in "Joyce's Strategy," a two-reel picture written and directed by Harry Beaumont.

Little Joyce won a reputation as an actress in "The Dummy" three seasons ago.

In it the little girl, then not nine years of age, was veritably the leading lady, and so well did she handle the part that she won recognition from the foremost critics.

She will be remembered as the little girl who is kidnapped and then rescued by the messenger boy "detectuf." She also played in "Ib and Little Christina" and other dramas.

At that time she spent her leisure moments playing with dolls, rabbits, turtles and whatever other strange gifts she received. Now she has given up the dolls and pets and wants to write scenarios for recreation.

MONTEREY COMPANY WILL MAKE EDUCATIONALS AND SCENICS

Los Angeles, March 11.

A. C. Heidrick and Otto Thomas are the organizers of the Monterey Motion Picture Company, Monterey, California.

General Manager Heidrick advises that this organization will devote its work to that of making educational and scenic subjects, and that the first will be an under water picture made by use of new equipment perfected by these men.

MAE GASTON'S WORK IN A HORSLEY BRINGS HER A LONG ENGAGEMENT

David Horsley has signed contracts with Mae Gaston, which makes her a permanent member of one of his stock organizations at his studios in Los Angeles.

Originally she was engaged for only one picture, "The Love Liar," but her interpretation of the character of Diana Strong-well was done so understandingly and with such a keen conception of the requirements of motion picture acting that Mr. Horsley decided to retain her permanently.

Prior to her appearance in Mr. Horsley's production of "The Love Liar," Miss Gaston was identified with the Reliance-Majestic and Fine Arts studios, playing under the direction of Jack Adolphi and W. Christy Cabanne.

Among the pictures in which she figured are "Up From the Depths," "Rose Leaves" and "Father and the Boys."

Miss Gaston will be cast in the next David Horsley production starring Crane Wilbur.

MOYER IS APPOINTED HEAD OF PARAMOUNT PUBLICITY

Charles E. Moyer, a well-known newspaperman and magazine writer, has been named general press representative and manager of the press department of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, to take the place of Tarleton Winchester, resigned, who is spending a few weeks in the country because of ill health.

Mr. Moyer has been with the Paramount for the past six months, and prior to his affiliation with this concern was dramatic editor and special representative of a number of newspapers throughout Pennsylvania, coming to Paramount from the Reading Telegram and News-Times.

With the rapid growth of the Paramount organization the work of the promotion, publicity, press and advertising departments has vastly increased.

The press department alone covers a total of more than 3,000 newspapers and 4,000 exhibitors throughout the country, besides more than 150 magazines.

RAYMOND G. NYE TO PLAY HEAVY LEADS WITH UNIVERSAL

Raymond G. Nye has joined the Universal forces on the Pacific Coast, where he is to appear in heavy leads in the production of Western films.

Nye and his work on the screen are not unknown to patrons of Universal theatres, for it is but a year since he was numbered among the best known of that company's players.

It was at the old Gower street studios that he made his debut in the company of J. Warren Kerrigan, with whom he played heavy characters, under the direction of Jacques Jaccard. Later he was offered a place with the Biograph and remained with that company during its stay in the West. When it left for its Eastern studios, the name of Raymond G. Nye was among the first to be scheduled for the change. Upon the return to the Los Angeles studios, he accompanied the company.

With the termination of his contract with that company he was offered an opportunity to rejoin the Universal. He accepted and was assigned to the Jaccard company, where he is to play heavy leads with Harry Carey and Olive Fuller Golden in the production of Western dramas.

The first picture in which he is to appear is a two-reel story of the plains, entitled "Hell's Crown."

JACK SHERRILL WILL APPEAR IN PLAY WRITTEN FOR HIM BY SUTRO

Jack Sherrill, leading man of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, has just finished work in "Then I'll Come Back to You," in which he played opposite Alice Brady.

JACK SHERRILL AND ALICE BRADY IN "THEN I'LL COME BACK TO YOU"

Previously he has been seen in prominent roles in "Just Out of College," "The Builder of Bridges," "The Woman in Forty-Seven," "Body and Soul" and "John Gladye's Honor."

Alfred Sutro is now writing a play especially for him.

Attractive Advertising Matter From Selznick

President of the Clara Kimball Young Company Intends to Issue Lithographs and Other Forms of Show Paper Made Notable by Distinctive Art Work

WITH the announcement that the motion picture industry was rapidly evolving into a race between the producer, the exchanges and the exhibitor to see which could lose the most money, Lewis J. Selznick, president and general manager of the new Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, left New York last Saturday for Cleveland and Pittsburgh, to complete the final negotiations which he promises will result in the organization of the first assured film success in the business.

When interviewed just before his departure, Mr. Selznick smilingly said:

"Wait until I get back. On my return from this western trip I shall be in a position not only to talk about it but to show the way and the only way to make money for producer, exchange and exhibitor.

"All I can say just now is that our plans are rapidly maturing to the perfection of organization that will make the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation absolutely a sure-fire proposition.

"We have already secured under contract a half dozen of the most brilliant scenario writers in the profession, to prepare scripts for Miss Young.

"Each of these will be written solely with Miss Young's personality and style in mind and each before our acceptance will undergo a scrutiny that cannot fail to spot the least sign of weakness in the story before it is put into work at the studio.

"Our advertising matter will be a revelation to the industry. We intend to issue lithographs and other forms of illustrated matter prepared by artists whose names are synonymous with the highest form of the illustrative art."

Mr. Selznick spent two days in Cleveland and the remainder of his time in Pittsburgh on important business relative to the new corporation.

Best Pictures From All Sources Is Paramount Aim

Good, Clean and Wholesome Films, Those Obtainable from Literature, Art, Science, Travel and the Industrial World Are Sought by Units of Releasing Company

"WHAT is the great demand in the motion picture industry today?"

The answer of William W. Hodkinson, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, distributors of the productions of the Famous Players Film Company, the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company and Pallas Pictures, is:

"Good, clean and wholesome pictures; the best to be obtained from literature, art, science, travel and instructive matter."

In elaborating upon the subject, Mr. Hodkinson said: "It must be remembered that the motion picture is the psychological fulfillment of a human demand, which has, by reason of its rapid advancement, brought to bear upon the whole world, from which the industry draws its material, and particularly upon producers, distributors and theatre owners, an absolute demand, a demand that has been the means of advancing the industry more than any other phase that has entered into it."

"This demand in a few words is—clean pictures."

"Clean pictures where quality appeals to people who demand the best."

"Clean pictures that are representative of the desires and higher ideals of the great amusement-loving American people."

"Clean pictures conducive to better theatres, those that will be in conformity with the standard and quality of their entertainment."

"Clean pictures that will be the means of perpetuating and strengthening the wonderful qualifications of the fourth greatest industry of the United States."

"Paramount Pictures Corporation was founded two years ago upon those ideals, and their policies have not been the result of guesswork, but of a carefully studied out plan with a definite goal ahead.

"And, moreover, our record for the past year has proven the soundness of our fundamentals.

"We realized that we had a task to fulfill and the long, hard, diligent work of our entire organization has been along the lines of the great demand of the industry today—the demand for clean motion pictures."

"DARDANELLES EXPEDITION" DATED FOR TORONTO SHOWING

"The Dardanelles Expedition"—the first authentic pictures of this great undertaking were screened before a small audience at Shea's Hippodrome, Toronto, Ont., on Thursday, March 2.

Arrangements for this showing were in the hands of Mr. Hague, the Universal general manager, of which company the film was the property.

IT'S UP TO THE EXHIBITORS: WILL THEY COME HALF WAY?

At their regular monthly meeting on Thursday, March 9, the directors of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America passed the following resolution:

WHEREAS, It has always been one of the objects and purposes of the Board to promote the welfare of every branch of the industry, including the exhibitors, upon an equal basis with the other great branches of the industry, and

WHEREAS, It has always been and is the desire of all members of the Board of Trade, irrespective of the class of membership to which they belong, to unify and bring together all branches of the industry, now therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Board re-affirm its policy to co-operate with the exhibitors' organizations throughout the country and that the method of co-operating shall be the personal attendance by the Executive Secretary or other selected representative of the Board before all exhibitors' conventions whenever possible for the purpose of defining the purposes for which the Board of Trade was organized and exists, and of assuring the exhibitors of the Board's desire to co-operate with their organizations for the general welfare of the industry.

SELIG WILL MAKE SURVEY OF VICKSBURG FOR "CRISIS"

William N. Selig expects to visit Vicksburg, Miss., within the next few weeks to take a preliminary survey of the National Park and city surroundings with a view of taking battle scenes there this spring for "The Crisis."

Frank H. Andrews, secretary of the Vicksburg Board of Trade, recently received the following letter from Mr. Selig:

"I have planned to come down and look over the ground in the near future; in fact, would have been down before, but thought perhaps the river was rather high and wished to wait until it had receded some.

"Kindly let me know if it would be a good time in the near future to come down and look over the ground as to the taking of 'The Crisis.'"

In response to the above, Mr. Andrews has written Mr. Selig, suggesting that he should visit Vicksburg within the next two weeks.

It will probably take a thousand or more people to make the battle scenes and some of the Mississippi state militia may be utilized.

Horses and mules will be secured at Vicksburg for working in the picture. Mayor Hayes, of Vicksburg, and the Vicksburg Board of Trade propose to cooperate loyally in the project.

The citizens of Vicksburg appreciate that vast advertising advantages will accrue to Vicksburg when the picture is completed and shown throughout the world.

CROMELIN SELECTS FILMS FOR COPYRIGHT COMMISSION

As a result of the generosity of several film manufacturers, the United States section of the International High Commission, now on the battleship Tennessee en route to the Pan-American Convention at Buenos Aires, has been provided with a representative lot of pictures, which are being shown on shipboard. The Tennessee is equipped with a moving picture machine, and Paul Cromelin, of the Cosmofotofilm Company, was asked to get together a collection of films.

The pictures which were sent to the Tennessee, and the firms donating them, follow:

Mutual Film Corporation—"The Victim," "The Brand Brothers," "Everyheart" and "The Animated Cameraman."

Thos. A. Edison, Inc.—"The Catspaw" and "Cartoons in a Sanitarium."

Universal Film Manufacturing Company—"The Riddle of the Silk Stockings," "The Cage of the Golden Bars," "In the Shadow of the Pyramids," "Blue Blood and Yellow Backs" and "Lady Raffles No. 2."

Cosmofotofilm Company—"The House of Temperley" and "The Bosun's Mate."

Vitagraph Company—"The Isle of Regeneration," "The Right Girl" and "Following the Scent."

Thanhouser Company—"The Five Faults of Flo."

Lubin Manufacturing Company—"The Great Divide" and "Tillie's Tomato Surprise."

World Film Company—"The Senator."

PUBLICITY AIDS FOR "SOCIAL PIRATES," KALEM SERIAL

General Film Company exchanges are preparing this week for an exhibit of the line of publicity aids that Kalem will supply exhibitors with "The Social Pirates," the big new series by George Bronson-Howard.

Samples of each of the publicity aids are being rushed to the exchanges as fast as they are completed and in connection with the showing of the pictures to exhibitors on request make a pre-release campaign that enables the exhibitor to see everything connected with the picture before booking.

The twenty-four sheet that heads the publicity line was set up in the Twenty-third Street General Film Exchange last week and attracted considerable attention.

Kalem has made an innovation in connection with this big lithograph by supplying it free to exhibitors.

Another display that is expected to cause talk is the six-foot lobby cut-out, a representation of the famous pirate ship.

MAE MURRAY IN A PRETTY POSE FROM "SWEET KITTY BELLAIRS" (Lasky)

FILM COLONY SENDS MANY FLORAL OFFERINGS TO MANLEY FUNERAL

Los Angeles, March 11.

At the funeral of the late Charles (Daddy) Manley the Reverend Joseph A. Julius officiated, and the number present more than filled the chapel at the undertaking establishment.

The number of floral offerings was exceptionally large, and included were many from motion picture producing companies.

The Robert Leonard organization sent a large master-key outlined with purple and white flowers, Mr. Manley having taken part in this serial.

The Nestor comedy companies sent a pillow bearing the word "Daddy," and there were other offerings from the Lynn Reynolds company, California Film Exchange, Stephen Norton, cameraman; Laura Oakley, Hollywood National Bank, Lillian Peacock, Harry Carey, D. S. Markowitz, Myrtle Gonzalez, Fred Church, Val Paul, Fred Dutig, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Daly and Mae Wells.

Al E. Christie accompanied Mrs. Manley, who is but a few years the junior of her late husband, who was eighty-six.

The pallbearers were Louis Short, Mark Fenton, Frank McQuarrie, Dr. Harry Crane, Orrin Jackson, Wadsworth Harris, and H. L. Massey, all members of the Universal producing staff.

A fund aggregating more than five hundred dollars was raised at Universal City among players for the widow.

SAM SPEDON, KNOWN AND LIKED BY EVERBODY, TAKES UP NEW DUTIES FOR "V"

The announcement has gone forth that Sam Spedon will no longer be in command of the press forces of the Vitagraph Company. His extensive acquaintance and long experience as well as his genial personality will be utilized in other fields of endeavor for the company.

No one is better or more widely known in the industry than Mr. Spedon.

It has long been his pet idea that a publicity and advertising man should broaden his viewpoint and get a more comprehensive knowledge of the advertising field in all its ramifications.

No matter what Sam Spedon does, he does it right and it is a sure guess that his knowledge and effort will be for the benefit of Vitagraph.

He still retains his old title with the addition of Special Representative. He spends part of his time at the Brooklyn studios and is frequently seen in New York City in the afternoons.

MISS COURTOT, SUPPORTED BY MASON, IN SOCIETY PLAY FOR GAUMONT BY VERNOT

So successful has Marguerite Courtot been in "The Dead Alive," written by her director, Henry J. Vernot, that Gaumont will put in work another five-reel feature from the pen of Mr. Vernot.

"Feathertop" will soon be completed, and then the little star will begin at once on the new photoplay.

Sydney Mason has been featured in Miss Courtot's support in both "The Dead Alive" and "Feathertop." In the new photoplay, as yet unnamed, the male role will go to Henry W. Pemberton. No announcement of the story in its entirety is being made at this time by the Gaumont company.

It is known, however, that the scenes are laid in America's most exclusive social circles. Mr. Vernot, as author, has taken as his theme the efforts of society matrons to marry off their daughters to the best advantage.

Miss Courtot plays the pawn in this matrimonial game. How her mother succeeds in getting her married and what happens as the result of this matrimonial sale makes the photoplay.

BLUEBIRD FOR APRIL 10 IS SCREEN VERSION OF WILLARD SUCCESS

The Bluebird release for April 10 will be a screen version of the late E. S. Willard's stage creation, "John Needham's Double." In the Bluebird picture Tyrone Power plays the dual role of John Needham and Joseph Norbury and the Smalleys have directed the production.

Mr. Power is introduced to the Bluebird program in a play that won great renown for Mr. Willard when he produced it during his first American tour, at Palmer's Theatre, in 1892, when he made his first trip to this country under Mr. Palmer's management.

In arranging the Joseph Hatton play for Bluebird, the adaptation made by Olga Printzlau, has differed in some particulars from the original stage version.

In presenting the "double" Mr. Power is photographed in several long scenes, in the act of conversing with himself, drinking and shaking hands.

The supporting roles are all subsidiary to the lead played by Mr. Power, and are played by Marie Walcamp, Agnes Emerson, Frank Lanning and Buster Emmons.

PEOPLE DON'T GET TIRED OF "THE SPOILERS"; ANOTHER FRISCO RUN

San Francisco, Mar. 11.

"The Spoilers," enlarged and improved, has made its appearance in San Francisco again at the Portola theatre and some of the best records at this house have been equalled.

Despite the fact that this attraction has been shown here for four weeks previous to the late engagement it has been found impossible to accommodate all who desired to see it again.

"The Spoilers" has probably been shown to more people in California than any other film, but the fact that it is still a big money maker for exhibitors is demonstrated by the experience of the Portola management.

Doris Pawn Makes First Appearance in a Fox

"Blue Blood and Red" Is Play Affording Young Woman Who Made Rapid Rise from an "Extra" Chance to Demonstrate Her Ability as a Pantomimic Actress

DORIS PAWN, who appears for the first time in a William Fox production, a western drama, "Blue Blood and Red," entered the realm of filmdom almost by accident.

This young pantomimic actress—she is not twenty-one years of age—is a native of the west and when in her early teens could ride "Indian saddle" as well as any rancher.

Doris Pawn was born in Norfolk, Neb., where she attended the public school. Her vacations were spent on the ranch of an uncle, where she learned to ride horseback.

She early developed that healthful love of the great out-of-doors which radiates in her beauty and acting.

But little Miss Pawn entered a business college to prepare for a life over the ledger and typewriter. The stage was farthest from her thoughts.

But that good fairy which looks after the interests of all artists no matter what ordinary things they insist on doing sent Doris with her mother and brother to California.

Her family returned east, leaving the young woman in San Diego, with diminishing funds and no position.

By chance she met Wilfred Lucas, a motion picture director who was producing the "Trey O'Hearts." She was offered a chance to "fill in," which she did during the fortnight the company remained in San Diego.

So apt was Doris Pawn and so charming that she was offered more extra work if she went to Los Angeles, where other parts of the picture were being taken.

With a couple of suit cases she journeyed to Los Angeles where she worked three months as an "extra."

But Miss Pawn's sudden rise to stardom did not come without its difficulties. During those few weeks she worked as diligently to learn all of the fine points of screen acting as she had labored at the business college.

One day another director, Sydney Ayres, was seeking a leading woman of a certain type. His eyes alighted on the little woman who was merely "an extra." Miss Pawn was given a chance to prove that she could act as well as she could look. And Doris Pawn has been "making good" ever since.

Universal Director Wins Gold Watch from Star

Bowman Made Wager with Bushman That Picture, If Completed According to Producer's Ideas, Would Prove Best Subject Featuring the Player

RECENTLY in the making of a six reel feature an argument arose between one of the screen's most noted stars and his director with regard to how certain scenes should be made.

Finally the director wagered the player a watch that if the scenes were made as he, the director, dictated, the player would admit after the subject was finished that it was the best he had ever played in.

As the result of this wager much interest was manifest in the trial showing at the studio.

At the conclusion of this projection, the actor as well as every member of the cast and company were unanimous in the opinion that it was the actor's greatest work, and thus William J. Bowman, then director for Quality Pictures and now director for Universal, has a beautiful jeweled timepiece presented him personally by Francis X. Bushman.

GRACE CUNARD AS SHE APPEARS IN "PEG O' THE RING" (Universal)

This instance illustrates the ability of Mr. Bowman as a director and his success in this field must be attributed to his several years of experience on the legitimate stage, his work as a motion picture director, and the careful study he has made of dramatics and the pantomimic art.

In order to study the various angles of the motion picture industry, and to become familiar with the comedy subjects, he secured an engagement at the Keystone studio where he directed Mabel Normand, Ford Sterling and others for several months. In this work he was in constant association with Mack Sennett, and believes that in the short time he spent there he learned more pertaining to continuity of the photoplay than in all his previous motion picture experience.

In Mr. Bowman's opinion Mack Sennett is the peer in assembling photoplays.

In the production of a photoplay, Mr. Bowman gives his attention to the tiniest details of both the setting and the acting, fully appreciating that it is the little touches of realism that add so much to a screen subject.

The settings receive particular attention, and he has a knack of instantly deciding what of the furnishings for the set will add to or detract from the action.

The Press, Press Representative and the Picture-XXIII

Motion Picture Theatres in Indianapolis Increase Advertising in Daily Newspapers—Men Who Conduct the Pages Devoted to Film News Experience Difficulty in Getting Right Kind of "Copy" From Theatre Publicity Departments—In Many Cases It Has to Be Rewritten—Hard to Get Available Photos

ABOUT 25,000 persons daily attend the sixty picture theatres running in Indianapolis.

Six downtown houses in Indianapolis used more than 17,000 lines of advertising in the three Indianapolis newspapers during January, 1916, at a cost of more than $2,000, which shows that the proprietors realize the actual value of newspaper advertising.

These figures do not include twelve resident theatres that advertise on Sunday in the Indianapolis Star, but do not advertise in the Indianapolis News on Saturday because the Indianapolis News does not mention Sunday shows for any theatres in the news columns, and resident theatres depend largely on their Sunday performances to increase their receipts for the week.

In January, 1916, the six downtown theatres carried 6,282 lines of advertising in the News, which is published only six days a week.

The same six theatres carried 6,536 lines of advertising in the Star in January, and 6,380 lines of advertising in the Daily Times, an evening paper.

Film Advertising on Increase

This is an increase of more than 6,000 lines of advertising in the News in four months, for the News was only carrying about 200 lines a month before October 1, and was carrying no local motion picture theatre advertising a year ago. The only motion picture advertising then was that of motion picture companies, placed through advertising agencies.

Since October 1, however, the complexion of the motion picture situation in Indianapolis has changed by leaps and bounds, and the advertising in the local newspapers has increased accordingly.

While last month was an unusual month, because of the opening of the Strand theatre, which carried 10,584 lines of advertising in the three Indianapolis newspapers, still there was an unusual increase in advertising exclusive of these figures.

About October 1, 1915, the News was only carrying one theatre—the Colonial. The Alhambra theatre changed hands, and the Alhambra and Isis were added to the News's list.

The Regent theatre, operated by the same men as the Colonial, opened November 25, and it was added to the list.

Then the Keystone, which had been a five-cent theatre, changed to the Triangle program December 12, and it came into the list.

The Strand, which was formerly the Lyceum theatre, opened January 15. So, where four months ago the News had one theatre advertising in the News, now six theatres are advertising.

Admission Prices of Advertising Theatres

Another interesting phase of the situation is that of these six advertising theatres—the Alhambra, Colonial, Keystone, Isis, Regent and Strand—four charge a straight ten-cent admission, one charges ten cents on Sunday, and the Strand charges ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents in the afternoon and ten, fifteen, twenty-five and thirty-five cents at night.

It might be interesting to know that the combined seating capacity of the Alhambra, Colonial, Keystone and Regent is only about 3,000 persons, the Isis 600 and the Strand 1,800.

Yet these six theatres with a seating capacity of less than 6,000 persons carried nearly as much advertising in the News during January, 1916, as the four legitimate theatres with a seating capacity of about 6,000 persons and charging admission as high as two dollars a seat.

The Alhambra theatre carried 700 lines of advertising in the News in January; the Colonial, 423 lines; the Isis, 250 lines; the Keystone, 642 lines; the Regent, 705 lines; and the Strand, 3,562 lines.

The figures for January probably will run about 1,000 lines more than normal because of the opening of the Strand, which carried about three-quarters of a page in the News, and also in the Star, and also carried a double-column ad. daily for a week before it opened.

The News motion picture department, which is edited by the writer, carries a three- to four-column layout on Saturday, with the pictures of shows at five of the theatres the following week, and about a column on each Wednesday about the shows for the rest of the week.

Photos from Exhibitors to Dailies

Not too much stress can be laid on the fact that producers do not send to theatre owners the proper sort of photographs for layouts.

This has been the experience of the writer for the last four months.

Also, if the writer were to allow the copy to go through as it is written by the local theatre men from press matter sent out by the producers, there would be such a howl from the copy desk that the writer would get orders to rewrite it before turning it in.

In the first place, in order to give all the five theatres a fair showing it is not possible to use scene pictures to advantage. It is necessary to make the layout not larger than four columns, and three columns, if posible.

In order to do this, it is not feasible to give one theatre a scene picture which, with justice to the picture, should be at least two columns; then the other pictures would have to be made about one-half to one column.

Then, too, if scene pictures have three to four or five persons in them, as they generally do, even if the cut is made two columns wide, the scene has been reduced so much there is not a great deal left. Scene pictures are often sent in by the local theatres, and the writer is forced to spend a great deal of time attempting to substitute pictures, either from the library of the newspaper or local exchanges.

By using individual photographs, it is possible to make a presentable layout with each picture large enough to be seen in a three-column layout.

But, motion picture producers do not send out individual photographs. They send out scene pictures, and it would take a layout six columns wide to do justice to all the theatres and scenes.

When the Strand theatre opened, the publicity representative sent in a scene picture of Marguerite Clark in "Mice and Men." No exception could be made to the picture from the standpoint of a scene picture.

However, the writer desired a photograph of Marguerite Clark alone. The publicity representative had no picture, and the Famous Players Film Service, the local exchange, had no picture of Marguerite Clark.

So, the writer was forced to use a picture of the soloist in the layout, and Marguerite Clark's picture was not used.

Difficulty Comes Up Every Week

The writer experiences this difficulty every week in attempting to make-up a layout for the theatres. This is true not only of the Paramount program, but also it is true to a more or less degree to all programs.

The writer has had numerous experiences along this line. Not a week goes by but the writer is unable to obtain a picture of some star on one of the programs for his layout, and yet the Paramount, World, Mutual, Bluebird, General, Pathé all have exchanges in Indianapolis.

The copy sent out by the motion picture producers on the new pictures is so poor that it could not be printed in any paper. This is not the individual view of the writer, but is the view of the Indianapolis News, and probably is true of any newspaper that attempts to run news in a news way.

In handling the motion picture department on the News, the writer makes no attempt to handle it as a theatrical or a review column, but as a straight-away news column, unvarnished, confined entirely to facts.

A Hard Thing to Do

I might comment that this is a hard thing to do. The local publicity men, although almost all of them are ex-newspaper men, are not competent or do not send in copy that can be used without being rewritten. No doubt that is the reason they are ex-newspaper men.

Handling copy in this way it is not possible to permit superlative adjectives to go through indiscriminately. Every picture produced is not the "best picture yet produced," no matter what company produces it.

Too many pictures are being produced, and too many pictures are being shown in

HAMPTON DEL RUTH, KEYSTONE SCENARIO EDITOR, ANNA LUTHER, AND PRESIDENT ADAM KESSEL, JR.

Indianapolis to permit of such things being said about the pictures.

Change Your Style, Publicity Men!

In the opinion of the writer, to attempt to print a synopsis of all the pictures shown, even at the six downtown theatres, advertising in the News not only would take up too much space, but also would weaken the news value of the articles for the theatres.

It would weaken them, because so many of the stories are weak and flimsy, and also because the synopses of films prepared by motion picture companies are not prepared for newspaper purposes or in newspaper style.

So many of them say, "George walks into the room. He kisses Ruth. He leaves the room and then comes back." They are excellent descriptions of what actually is seen in the picture, but not a brief summary of what the picture is actually about.

Many pictures pass the National Board of Censorship that are of questionable character, and the policy of the Indianapolis News is very strict on printing matter of this character.

The Alhambra theatre shows two or three principal photoplays each week. The Colonial theatre has three principal photoplays; the Keystone has two dramas and two Keystone comedies; the Regent has three, and the Strand has two.

If an attempt were made to give synopses of all these pictures it can readily be seen how much space they would occupy, and they would not help the theatres, either.

That would be about fifteen synopses. It is about as many as some trade magazines review every week. What should be sent out is a paragraph review of the films; not giving the details of what happens in the pictures, but a paragraph review that the picture is "a society drama, with scenes laid in New York and Atlantic City," or something on that order.

Gets Facts from "News" Reviews

Something that a person could obtain an idea about the picture quickly, without wading through a mass of details and then being forced to make his own deductions.

The writer is depending more and more every week on MOTION PICTURE NEWS reviews for an accurate description of the pictures.

The writer's name is on the mailing list of most of the leading motion picture companies. A mass of printed, typewritten and mimeographed material is received every week.

Some of it is real pretty to look over, but all of it eventually finds its way in the waste basket as it takes too much time to wade through it for a stray paragraph of news that might be covered up among the voluminous bunch of printed matter.

The Indianapolis Star and the Times are running daily motion picture columns about the local theatres, covering the six theatres that also advertise in the Indianapolis News. The Star only inaugurated the daily news department about three weeks ago.

At the top of the column a calendar of the shows to be seen at the theatre that day is given, with the hours the theatres are open, and following that calendar a description is given about the show at each theatre.

In order to prevent kicking by any individual theatre proprietor, the Star rotates the order of the theatres each day.

On Sunday, the screen calendar follows that of the legitimate theatres, and the whole bottom part of the theatrical page is given over to a layout for the film theatres, connecting with the legitimate theatre layout at the top of the page.

Thirty-five Cents for Best Circle Seats

Four months ago only two theatres in the downtown district were charging an admission of ten cents.

Now five are charging either ten cents or more, and the Crystal, also in the downtown district, is being rebuilt and will charge ten cents when it reopens, the middle of March.

The Circle theatre, which is being built in the Circle, will charge thirty-five cents for the best seats when it opens.

It is the opinion of the writer that the legitimate theatres will either wake up and get some good shows here for a change or else all will be motion picture houses in Indianapolis in the near future.

While possibly that assertion is a little strong, it is true that both English's and Murat, the two legitimate theatres, were dark a great deal last winter, as well as this winter.

Next week "The Birth of a Nation" plays a return engagement at English's theatre for one week, and "The Battle Cry of Peace" will begin a three weeks' engagement at the Murat theatre.

This is evidence that motion pictures have gripped the Indianapolis public and that Indianapolis people will pay to see good motion pictures, but like legitimate shows, they refuse to be stung more than once on something that is not up to standard.

MAE BUSCH (Keystone-Triangle)

MABEL NORMAND, KEYSTONE FAVORITE, WILL NOT ACT FOR 2 MONTHS

Mabel Normand, popular comedienne of Keystone comedies, has decided, according to her own statement, to do no active work in pictures for two months. Miss Normand's contract with Keystone expired shortly after the first of March and she has announced that she will take a much needed rest before resuming work.

Miss Normand recently suffered an illness, caused by strenuous work in the product of the Keystone studio and she was unable to appear before the camera for several weeks. Her failure to immediately renew her contract with the Keystone company she lays to her need of a vacation as she is not yet sufficiently recovered to resume her strenuous career.

Miss Normand recently came east with a comedy company headed by Director Roscoe Arbuckle and the two pictures in which Arbuckle and Miss Normand co-starred, "He Did and He Didn't" and "The Bright Lights," have met with unusual success.

And, going back for a moment to the use of the moving picture as a political asset, if both sides in a great campaign will use the moving pictures, not only of a man at the beginning of the day, but a picture of where he goes next, and what he does, and the condition which he is in at the end of the day, you will have a great political education for the people. If you will do this, and pursue this policy of watching, not only will you tell the people what is happening daily, but the moving picture will carry the election, and editors will be as much 'has beens' as Harper's Weekly."

H. E. Aitken Announces Triangle Film Merger

He Declares That Ownership of Reliance-Majestic, Keystone, New York Motion, Kay-Bee, Domino and Fulton Companies Has Been Transferred to Company—No Confirmation

A TELEGRAM to MOTION PICTURE NEWS from Los Angeles says: H. E. Aitken, before departing for New York on Friday, March 10, anonunced that contracts had been signed by Adam Kessel, D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince, Mack Sennett and himself for the transfer of ownership of the Reliance-Majestic, Keystone, New York Motion Picture Corporation, Kay-Bee, Domino and Fulton companies to the Triangle Film Corporation.

The capitalization of the latter corporation is to be greatly increased. It is President Aitken's plan to merge other feature companies in the East, to reduce feature production and to add a program of suitable one, two and three reel subjects.

At the Reliance-Majestic studios it was stated that the new plan would not change the present production there, as separate studios are to be maintained as before.

The Griffith and Ince big productions, two of which are about finished, are not to be included in the new scheme of output.

H. E. Aitken arrived in New York on Tuesday morning, March 14.

At the New York offices of the New York Picture Corporation no confirmation of the contracts could be obtained on Monday.

The rumors of mergers have crept into the New York press. The New York Times of March 13 suggests a number of possible line-ups. J. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitagraph company, is quoted as saying:

"A state of overproduction in the ratio of about five to one exists in the business. This was bound to bring about a readjustment, and I have no doubt it is about here and that the many rumors afloat arise from that fact.

"There has been stock jobbing by companies which have been formed to solicit money from the public with the prospect of large returns, and at the same time salaries have been sent soaring.

"For the good of the industry there must be a general purging, which only the fittest will survive."

John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, said his company was not yet included in any of the proposed mergers.

So far as Wall Street is concerned, it may be stated that the matter of merging several prominent distributors and producers has been and is being seriously investigated.

Plenty of capital seems to be available, but no satisfactory plans. The house of J. P. Morgan considered the proposition some time ago, but dismissed it at the time as impossible of accomplishment, to their satisfaction at least. Nothing has since been done.

Horsley Announces His Platform for Congress

His Advent into Politics Is Not Political in Generally Accepted Sense—He Will Make Stand for Election on Need of Representation of Film Interests at Washington

DAVID HORSLEY, one of the largest producers of feature pictures for the Mutual program, who recently was prevailed upon to become a candidate for Congress from the Los Angeles district, this week announced the platform on which he will make the race. His incursion into politics is not political in the generally accepted sense; instead, he is to be the candidate of the film interests.

Mr. Horsley, who is now in New York, said to MOTION PICTURE NEWS: "It has been borne in upon me forcibly that the film industry must be represented at Washington—not by delegations who go down to appeal to Congressmen, but by a Congressman of their own. Last summer I spent nearly all my time entertaining Senators, Representatives, the Vice-President, and other officials, who came to California, and almost without exception they suggested that so great an industry as ours should have a representative in Congress.

"Somebody must make a great sacrifice of time and money, and through various means it seems to have devolved upon me to be the goat. I have never been identified with politics, and have no inclination to become so; if I am elected to Congress it will mean a great sacrifice. I would be in Washington looking after the interests of the film business, when I should be in Los Angeles looking after the interests of David Horsley.

"Yet the Los Angeles district is the only congressional district in the nation where the film interests are strong enough to become a factor in an election of this character.

"If I could find another district in the United States where a film man would have a chance of winning, I would withdraw in California, and contribute $10,000 for his campaign fund.

"I am in the fight now, and I trust the industry will stand behind me. I know it will so far as its Western connections are concerned.

"My admiration for President Wilson is strong. Outside of that I am a Republican. So you see my politics are of a hybrid sort. Consequently my platform will be that I am only a representative of the motion picture industry."

Scenario and Comedian Added to E. and R. Staff

Lillian Brown Leighton, Newspaper Publisher and Experienced Stock and Vaudeville Player, Will Prepare Script Suitable to Requirements of Trained Chimpanzees

LILLIAN BROWN LEIGHTON, character comedienne and scenario writer, and Ralph McComas, comedian, have become affiliated with the E. and R. Jungle Film Company, producers, of comedies featuring the chimpanzee team, Napoleon and Sally.

Miss Leighton has behind her several years of experience on the stock and vaudeville stage, while previous to her debut before the footlights she owned and published a weekly newspaper.

Miss Leighton's last motion picture engagement was with the Selig company, where she remained for five years, playing all varieties of parts from drama to comedy.

Some of her recent pictures with the E. and R. Jungle Film Company are "Stung," "Father's Baby" and "In Dutch."

Ralph McComas, who tips the scales at two hundred and ninety, is a true comedian in every sense. Business routine occupied the earlier years of his young life, but his astonishing rotundity soon earned him an offer from a vaudeville agency.

He spent six months on the road and then joined the Universal-Joker company under Allen Curtis' direction.

After a short period with Fred Mace he joined the Selig forces and appeared as Chubby Green in the series "The Chronicles of Bloom Center."

With the E. and R. Jungle Company he has also appeared in "Stung," "Father's Baby" and "In Dutch."

RAVER SHOWINGS SET FOR MARCH 17

The Raver Film Company will give a special screening of three of the features which it is now distributing, at Wurlitzer theatre, in West Forty-first street, New York, Friday, March 17.

These pictures are "Driftwood," produced by Marshall Farnum for the Ocean Film Company; "The Fortunate Youth," and "Austria at War."

BELMAR FINISHES FIVE-REEL MILITARY PICTURE

Henry Belmar has completed a five-reel feature entitled "Better Dead or Alive," which gives graphic pictures of United States troops in action in the United States and in Mexico.

"THE SOCIAL PIRATES"

(Kalem—First and Second Episodes)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE SOCIAL PIRATES" is a new sort of series—we say series, for chapters one and two are separate from each other as regards plot, and that is a great advantage.

This, however, is not that which ranks the pictures as new—it's the idea which calls for this remark and the idea is a corking good one.

George Bronson-Howard, author, has shaped his stories about two very pretty young women, well versed in every sort of badger and holdup game extant and endowed them with personalities like that of our old friend Robin Hood—that is they rob from the rich and undeserving and give to the poor and needy, who suffer by the other class.

It is a very fascinating theme to say the least. It results in exciting stories, that key the interest up to unusual heights as well as offering that which is subtle and humorous.

The stories presented in the first two chapters, "The Little Monte Carlo" and "The Corsican Sisters" are cleverly evolved—they are full of suprises and generally take the unexpected turn.

We have remarked before that assuring a serial's success is nobody's long suit, particularly not ours. But here are the facts of "The Social Pirates."

They have been written by an author of acknowledged ability who has proven that ability in these pictures even at this early start; they feature two actresses who are both talented and pretty, Marin Sais as Maria Hartley and Ollie Kirkby as Mary Davenport; they contain a spicy portion of situations that are handled inoffensively, and last but not least, the involved character of the stories has not prevented the director from presenting them in a clear and concise manner.

We do not know of any other merits of "The Social Pirates" except that the support is good and the photography some of the best that ever shrouded a Kalem picture.

That is about all there is to say about Kalem's series, and if that is not enough it might be well for you to see the pictures and determine for yourselves whether there are any more good points which we overlooked.

"The Little Monte Carlo" introduces the Social Pirates, so ably played by Miss Sais and Miss Kirkby and then dips immediately into a story.

There is a chorus girl (Jess Arnold) who has loved well but not wisely and when the Pirates come upon her she is contemplating a prolonged plunge in the bay. Her story told to the girls, they immediately set their trap for the man in the case.

By clever manipulation of wits and wiles they manage to procure quite a substantial check from this rounder, and then wake him up to a sense of thorough realization of his unmanly act.

Details of this story are omitted because justice could not be done in cold type to every twist and subtle situation.

"The Corsican Sisters" furnishes the girls the same inspiration, a wronged woman, to further their salamandering plans. They disguise themselves as wild, passionate young ladies from Corsica and set upon this second villain.

They speedily bring him to their feet by a very clever series of pitfalls which they place in his amazed path.

As said before, both these chapters contain some fine humorous moments. When a bunch of hardened exhibitors respond to such moments, their ability to bring laughter from an audience seeking amusement is positive.

The aforesaid exhibitors witnessed the first two numbers at Wurlitzer Hall, New York, where after a few explanatory words from a Kalem representative the pictures were shown first.

Miss Sais and Miss Kirkby deserve a little paragraph to themselves. Both of these leads are capable actresses and to date they have left none of the many opportunities furnished them by their parts slip by. They are young and pretty besides, and young and pretty leads count largely in the ultimate success of a picture.

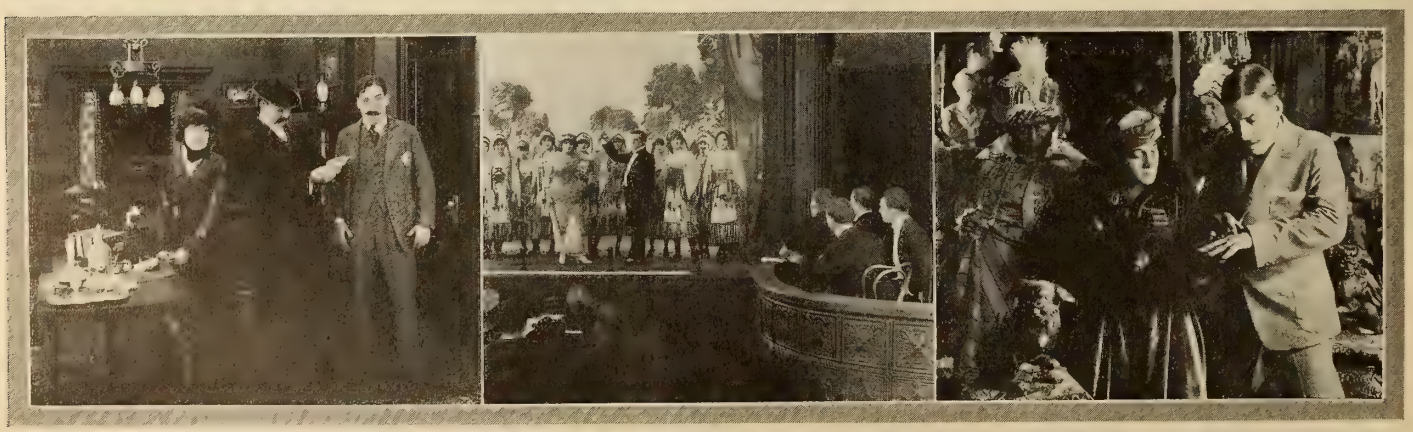
Others who contribute good performances to "The Little Monte Carlo" and "The Corsican Sisters" are True Boardman as Holbrooks, Frank Jonasson, Thomas Lingham, Paul C. Hurst as the aide of the Pirates, and Edward Clisbee.

The direction, which is so meritorious, is in charge (personally, thank goodness) of James W. Horne, and credit should go to him for staging the pictures adequately as well as producing them clearly and intelligently.

"The Little Monte Carlo," the first episode of the series, is released on March 27. It is in two reels and at intervals of one week thereafter until fifteen weeks have been consumed, another two reel chapter will be placed on the market.

"THE FLIRT"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)



(REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS version of Booth Tarkington's story, done by the Smalleys with Marie Walcamp in the title role, is bound to be enjoyed because of its originality and excellent treatment.

The outcome can hardly be surmised at any point in the story, but it is a logical conclusion even so, and perhaps the fact that it refuses to wind up happily is the cause for its unexpectedness.

Judged from the standards of rapid action, "The Flirt" contains surprisingly little, but this detracts only slightly from the picture. Delineation of character, thus creating the slow formulation of the plot, is the piece de resistance of the subject.

The story is slightly drawn out, particularly in the first two reels, in the manner of individual scenes. Some of these are lengthy for no obvious reason, and they might be cut for the benefit of the entire piece, although of course this would taboo "five reels."

Lois Weber, whose work needs no introduction, prepared the scenario and assisted Phillips Smalley in the direction. Their arrangement of scenes is most commendable. The action is not cluttered with closeups, although the general run of the scenes is staged close enough to the camera so that every detailed expression is caught.

ONE OF CORA'S VICTIMS INTERVENES

The settings, the majority of which are laid in the home of a middle class townsman, are realistic. They are not lavish and overdecorated, but plain and simple to a pleasing degree. The photography is excellent.

Cora, the flirt, has several men in the town at her feet, but after she has humbled them to this position she snubs them. Enter Valentine Corliss, swindler and very much of a flirt on his own account.

He interests Cora in a crooked business proposition, and she, by falsely employing her father's name in connection with the enterprise, secures money from her flock of worshippers.

Cora, however, at last falls in love with Corliss, but soon after she discovers his real character, and to save herself from further humiliation she persuades one of her old faithfuls to elope with her. Corliss is murdered by a half maddened suitor of the flirt's while her sister is comforted by the attentions of a third.

This counterplot of the sister's romance is quite touching, and adds a good deal of suspense to the picture. Likewise does Cora's impish younger brother, Hedrick, whose boyish interference in the affairs of his two sisters creates no end of trouble and not a little comedy.

Miss Walcamp gives an excellent performance as Cora, while Antrim Short takes second honors as Hedrick. Juan de la Cruz is inclined to over-do the swaggering swindler, but he manages to make his role convincing. Others are Grace Benham, Ogden Crane, Fred Church, Nannine Wright, Paul Byron and Robert Lawlor.

"WIFE AND AUTO TROUBLE"

(Triangle-Keystone—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

WILLIAM COLLIER, Blanche Payson, Joseph Belmont, Alice Davenport and Mae Busch have a lot of fun in this Keystone. Fortunately, the fun is the sort in which the spectator, forgetting that he has seen nearly all the stunts before, can join and does join whole-heartedly.

The plot is comical, and the players are comical, especially William Collier, who get fairly into the stride of Keystone merriment.

Much of the fun arises from the presence of Blanche Payson, a former policewoman, as we understand it. Miss Payson is about six feet and a half or three-quarters, and constructed on a massive scale.

Collier, as a meek husband, spends his time avoiding her, when he is not receiving various kinds of corporal punishment at her hands.

That is why he finds it so easy to cultivate his "speedy stenographer" (Mae Busch). Joseph Belmont appears as the inevitable effeminate brother, and Miss Davenport as the equally inevitable mother-in-law.

After meek husband and speedy typist arrive at the cafe via a third-rate Ford, which meek husband has bought, wife and mother-in-law start in pursuit, thinking somebody has stolen the car.

Husband escapes by crawling out on his hands and knees, and the typist by a more clever method. Then the chase starts, and it is a bona fide Keystone chase, with the police playing their acrobatic parts of course.

A lot of trick stuff is introduced in the course of the chase, which ends with the customary smash-up. Meek husband insists upon being arrested in preference to enduring further maltreatment by his wife.

The piece was directed by Del Henderson, who has given Collier a real chance to show what he can do, which is all Collier needed. Sets, lighting and photography are very good.

"THE HERO OF SUBMARINE D-2"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

IN this picture a timely subject gets clever treatment and the result is a photoplay which the exhibitor can book with absolute assurance that his patrons will be thoroughly satisfied.

The United States navy is used as the background for a thrilling story, with battleships, submarines, life at the Naval Academy and the Training School at Newport, furnishing the sort of realism which "gets over" on the screen as it "gets over" nowhere else.

Nobody who sees this picture can fail to be stirred; nobody can fail to be interested in its settings as in its story. It is a direct appeal to patriotic instincts.

The story was written by Cyrus Townsend Brady, picturized

"I WILL COMMAND THE D2 MYSELF"

by Jasper Ewing Brady, and produced by Paul Scardon, "with the co-operation of the United States Government," the Vitagraph publicity department tells us.

After seeing the picture, we can vouch for the truth of the Vitagraph statement. If the Government had set out to make a "recruiting" film, it could hardly have made a more effective one.

The action has two angles. The first concerns the struggle of a young "middie" to make good in the navy after his dismissal from the academy. The second shows a plot by a foreign ambassador, working through a newspaper man who is a traitor to his country, to destroy the Atlantic fleet.

The hero is Commander Colton, who, after being sent to the lowly position of commander of the collier Jupiter through political influence, saves the fleet from destruction by mines. There are two love themes and these are handled in such a way as to form an integral part of the whole.

SCENES FROM "THE BLINDNESS OF LOVE," WITH JULIUS STEGER, AND "LOVELY MARY," STARRING MARY MILES MINTER, METRO PHOTOPLAYS

Colton saves the fleet by having himself shot out of the torpedo tube of the D-2, swimming through the mine field, reaching the enemy ship, and exploding the mines just before the fleet passes over them.

Some people will wonder why the D-2 didn't torpedo the enemy ship, as that seemed the most natural way to dispose of it. This is about the weakest spot in a picture which, of its kind, has fewer weaknesses than any we have seen in a long time.

Charles Richman is a heroic and sympathetic figure as Commander Colton; James Morrison is perfectly cast as the unfortunate, but plucky, "middie"; Eleanor Woodruff is charming, and Zena Keefe pleasing, in their respective sweetheart roles. The ambassador is impersonated well by L. Rogers Lytton.

Thomas Mills appears as the traitor, Anders Randolf as a politician, and Charles Wellesley as Captain McMasters, U. S. N. Several naval officers take part in the action.

In a word, "The Hero of Submarine D-2" is a substantial picture, built out of interesting material.

"LOVELY MARY"

(Columbia-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

IT would take more than stupid direction to spoil lovely Mary Miles Minter. Lovely is the most expressive adjective which has yet been applied to the 110 pounds of sunshine masquerading under the name of Mary Miles Minter.

She is lovely and lovable all the way through this picture; author and producer need never worry over that great requisite, "Sympathy," when Lovely Mary is in the cast.

Moreover, in this case, she has a good story behind her. It is melodramatic, along the regular lines, but it has enough of a new touch, and enough new features to keep the interest well above the normal level.

Striking exterior scenes, made in Florida, where the scene of the story is laid, and views which are true to type in the life of a small community, are also an asset.

The appeal, however, is wide; it will not be confined to the South, or those who know the South—in fact, there is nothing sectional in it.

Lovely Mary Lane is the last female descendant of the Lanes. The only male descendant is her worthless cousin, Claiborne.

Upon these Lanes descend two land scouts from the North; one, Roland Manning, falls in love with Mary and attempts to get her a good price for the Lane lands, which he discovers are very valuable.

The other, Wade Dempster, attempts to get the property from Claiborne, after plying him with liquor. A citizen of the town discovers the plot and arrives in time to stop it, but Dempster grapples with him; into the scuffle runs Manning, who pulls Dempster away from his victim, but his action is futile.

Dempster shoots the local citizen, then cleverly turns the circumstances against Manning, who is arrested, convicted and sentenced to hard labor for life.

Lovely Mary rescues him through the old convict farming law, by which any citizen may lease a convict from the state. She leases Manning, and puts him to work in her garden.

There he learns of Dempster's attempts to grab the Lane property, and again foils the villain. Incidentally, Dempster is exposed as the real murderer, and Manning is freed.

Thomas Carrigan does some excellent juvenile work as Manning, and there is good character drawing by Frank De Vernon, Russell Simpson, Schuyler Ladd, Fred Tidmarsh, Myra Brooks and Harry Blakemore.

"TWO MEN OF SANDY BAR"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"TWO MEN OF SANDY BAR" is a very interesting feature presenting Hobart Bosworth and Jack Curtis in the title parts. The story is complicated, and a little confusion results at times, but on the whole the complications serve to hold the interest steadily.

The picture is based on one of Brete Harte's western stories laid in the days of the fourty-niners, and like many others of the same author's works it has its genial old Colonel Starbottle and its stolid Gambler Oakhurst.

The western Universal producing organization has given the story a true Harte atmosphere in all major respects. Correct costuming, realism of setting and scene and properties that in general conform with the required period have been furnished.

Hobart Bosworth carries the role of Oakhurst, the gambler, in fitting style. No part is too difficult for the versatile character actor it would seem, and his acting and appearance wholly convince in this subject.

The remainder of the cast, including Jack Curtis as the drunkard and Yona Landowska as the Mexican girl, render most acceptable performances.

Oakhurst, a gambler at Sandy bar, is loved by a married woman known as the Duchess. Her husband runs away after Oakhurst has saved him from a detective. The Duchess implores Oakhurst to marry her, but he refuses.

To spite him she fixes his deck of cards and this damns him as a crooked player. The Duchess then marries Oakhurst's partner, who believes her first husband to be dead.

Oakhurst drifts to a border town and there falls in love with a Mexican girl. His former partner having run away from the Duchess is serving as her footman.

The father of this young man is instituting a search for him, and just as he arrives in the border town following up a clue, the son is discharged.

Evidence seems to point to Oakhurst, as his son and the gambler, believing his partner dead, deceives the old man. Later the real son learns that someone is impersonating him and he goes to his father intent on revenge on the impostor.

But the fact that the impostor is none other than Oakhurst clears up all matters and the love affairs of both the young men end happily.

"DON'T LOOK AT YOUR FATHER"

With such a complicated plot there is little opportunity for dramatic situations of any strength, but "Two Men of Sandy Bar" manages to entertain at all times, despite and because of its involved story.

"MARTHA'S VINDICATION"

(Triangle-Fine Arts—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

TALENT of a high order has been gathered together in this picture. There are Tully Marshall, Norma Talmadge and Seena Owen, not to mention others who have earned the right to be called real screen players.

The story in which they move is dramatic, and builds up to a fine climax. Altogether, "Martha's Vindication" is an excellent Fine Arts offering.

MARTHA SHIELDS HER FRIEND

Martha (Norma Talmadge) swears eternal silence when her devoted girl friend Dorothea (Seena Owen) becomes a mother out of wedlock.

Unfortunately, she is seen with the baby, whom she is taking to her old nurse, by the unscrupulous Sell Hawkins (Tully Marshall).

Hawkins' wife runs a "baby farm," and when Martha later adopts another infant and leads a raid on the Hawkins establishment, Sell and his wife, now become church workers, accuse Martha of being the mother of the child seen by Sell.

Dorothea, now married, refuses to confess her guilt and Martha is tried before the church congregation.

Just as John, Martha's sweetheart, jumps to his feet and accuses Dorothea, the door bursts open, and Dorothea's child is brought in, injured. Dorothea's maternal instinct immediately asserts itself and betrays her guilt.

The dramatic qualities of such a plot are perfectly evident, and they have been realized in such a way as to keep the spectator at a high pitch of suspense.

Contrast is at hand throughout. This is supplied by the sub plot in which Tully Marshall is the bright and shining light. His portrayal of Hawkins is an extraordinary bit of character work and deserves the highest praise. As Jennie Hawkins, Josephine Crowell gives a fine rendition of middle aged unscrupulousness and hypocrisy. Miss Talmadge and Miss Owen are excellent in their parts.

Others in a well balanced cast are: Charles West, William Hinckley, Francis Carpenter, George Stone, Alice Knowland, Alberta Lee, Edwin Harley, George Pearce, and Porter Strong.

Directors C. M. and A. M. Franklin lavished close ups on the picture, and occasionally these retard the action, but nearly always they are effective.

It seemed to us also that there are too many subtitles—a disposition to explain everything a little too fully. In general, though, the direction is superior, and in the trial scene it is excellent.

"Martha's Vindication" will please your audiences not alone because of its acting. It also satirizes small town religious hypocrisy, and contains a gallery of characters, a lot of whom will be mirrors to many of your spectators.

"THE BLINDNESS OF LOVE"

(Rolfe-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

JULIUS STEGER has demonstrated his ability as an excellent screen actor in this picture. He has a difficult part, but he handles it in a finished and masterly manner all through.

In his pathos he is especially effective, and his careful work has resulted in a convincing characterization.

George Le Guere is unusually well cast. As the wayward son he is in a character which suits his type well, and he appears to have been in sympathy with his work.

Mr. Steger portrays a self-made man, highly esteemed by his friends and throughout the business world. He is a manufacturer of pianos, employer of many men, and owner of a bank in which his employes' savings, and those of others in moderate circumstances are held.

His son Bob, the apple of his eye, is at college. The old man is blinded by his love to his boy's many faults, and when Bob is expelled from school, and comes home, in company with a "social leech," the father starts them both in business as the heads of an investment department in his bank.

They soon get into trouble through speculation, and draw on the bank's resources to cover themselves. In a final desperate strait, Bob goes to Grace Maynard, his fiance, daughter of a banker, and induces her to take a package of bonds from her father's safe, for him to pledge as security.

But the crash comes, Bob's partner commits suicide, Bob's father is ruined, and closes out all his property in order to pay the small depositors.

Bob flees, leaving a note for his father and Grace, saying he will not return until he has become worthy of them both.

In five years he comes back. The father is living in abject poverty, and his daughter, who has married prosperously, has sought him in vain. She finds him just before Bob gets back, and there is a general all around reunion.

Grace Valentine is pleasing as Grace Maynard, and Maud Hill plays the daughter of the old piano manufacturer convincingly. Edgar L. Davenport, Walter Hitchcock, Charles F. Gotthold and Harry Neville all deserve commendation.

The story was written by Ruth Comfort Mitchell, and picturized by Harry O. Hoyt. The direction is by Charles Horan.

"MAN AND HIS ANGEL"

(Triumph-Equitable—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A STRONG cast, a capable director and a story possessing a series of gripping dramatic climaxes have made a most acceptable feature of "Man and His Angel." Together with the immediately previous Equitable release, "The Devil's Toy," it sets a fine standard for the company—a standard that will be difficult to surpass.

Jane Grey steps into Equitable stardom by way of this picture. Miss Grey is plainly a star—there is no denying that. She is expressive without being too emotional and the utmost significance marks her histrionic endeavors. She has mastered the art of pantomime and besides her prettiness and charm will undoubtedly arouse a feeling of admiration.

Stanley Dark has furnished an appropriate vehicle for the star. The picture presents a series of situations that maintain the intensity to a high degree. The fabric, taken as a whole, offers a convincing story in a realistic way.

Burton King directed and his work is consistently meritorious throughout. His elaborate settings peopled by many players are handled excellently and what is more, the close-ups interspersed with these scenes fit logically into them.

The good and bad alternately reigning in the heart of a man is the basis of the story. David Tryne, an old servant of Paul Dimitri, keeps the secret of his nobility from his daughter Sonia atfer the old man's death.

SONIA'S VOICE PLEASES THE CRITICS

Sonia becomes a great singer and accepts the proposal of Schuyler. Tryne not wanting to lose Sonia forges a note purporting to come from her father to the effect that her mother was never legally married to him.

Sonia allows this to come between her and Schuyler but Tryne suffers a change of heart and after a powerful scene he discloses the truth.

Henri Bergman as the deformed Tryne renders a compelling characterization of the role, while others are Willard Deshielle, Edward MacKay, Robert Lee Hill and Mayme Kelso.

"OVERALLS"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2ND

A TIME-HONORED theme has here been rejuvenated into an acceptable offering. There are occasional thrills, two romances free from gush, a well-balanced cast, good directing, well-chosen locations, and extra fine photography.

The story rambles along in leisurely fashion, with some superfluous feet of film here and there, and not a few improbabilities, but the interest is seldom slackened. There is very agreeable and well-timed comic relief, made possible mostly through the delicious Irish character created by Sylvia Ashton.

William Stowell is an upstanding hero, and Rhea Mitchell is a fair heroine. Estelle Allen, ingenue, and George Ahern, juvenile, are particularly good. Jack Prescott, George Bailey and Perry Banks do well with their lesser parts. The one jarring note in the cast is Warren Ellworth, the heavy, who is better adapted to the burlesque stage than to the screen.

Herbert Drew is the foreman of a construction camp that is doing work for Warren, a millionaire contractor. When Warren dies, Bettina, his daughter, accompanied by Daniels, her attorney, visit the construction camp.

Daniels at once becomes unpopular with the men, and he tries to discharge Drew, but Bettina will not allow it. Drew falls in love with Bettina, and she with him, but he thinks she is engaged to Daniels, while she thinks that he loves the camp belle.

To get rid of Drew, so that he may marry his ward for her millions, Daniels tries to have him murdered, but Bettina saves his life. There are many desperate fights between warring factions in the camps, but Drew settles them, and marries Bettina.

"THE MORAL FABRIC"

(Triangle—Kay-Bee—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

A POWERFUL satire on the "twin soul" theory of life is here screened with a cast composed of three persons. Others appear, but they are merely parts of a background, as, for example, idlers at Monte Carlo. Two men and a woman are the story.

The theme builds up to a genuine climax; after silly, frivolous Amy Winthrop is stolen from her husband by Mackley Stuart, in pursuance of the belief of the lovers that mere conventional ideas of marriage should not be allowed to stand in the way when two hearts call to each other, the three meet at Monte Carlo.

Amy and Mackley by this time are thoroughly disgusted with each other; and Scott Winthrop, in order to prove to them that their theory of life is wrong, makes Amy fall in love with him. In turn Scott steals Amy from Mackley, but very carefully leaves a note telling the latter where they are going.

Then comes what may be called in every sense of the word the big scene. Amy is perfectly willing to go away with her first husband, but as he tells her there is an obstacle in the way, he doesn't want her. He dismisses her with her weak fellow-believer.

Such a theme cannot be made effective without plenty of subtitles. Certainly the makers of this film have not overlooked any. But this is an instance when sub-titles are very effective.

They are written dramatically, and the acting is well timed, so that these two usually hostile parts of a picture dove-tail well.

"I DON'T WANT YOU"

Frank Mills, in the difficult role of Scott Winthrop, gives an impressive performance. His work is far superior to that of the other principals, Edith Reeves and Howard Hickman. For them it must be said, however, that they look their parts almost perfectly, and their renditions of folly and weakness are satisfactory.

The richness of background native to Ince productions, the ornamental titles, and some fine tinting make the picture a pleasure to look at. The lighting has been attended to in excellent style.

FANNY WARD IN AN APPEALING ROLE: SCENES FROM "FOR THE DEFENSE," LASKY-PARAMOUNT

"FOR THE DEFENSE"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS is an excellently constructed detective story in which everything seems to have been done just about right. It is unusual, both in conception and handling, for which we must thank Author Hector Turnbull and Director Frank Reicher. And it gives Fannie Ward opportunity to create a remarkably appealing character.

Detective stories are by no means a novelty on the screen. Usually they concern themselves with the exploits of a more or less stagey sleuth, who is endowed with supernatural powers.

Not so in "For the Defense." The detective-in-chief here is a slender, wistful little derelict of a girl, who happens to see the murder committed, and knows the Webster butler, not Jim Webster, committed it. Jim is lying drunk on a couch, and the butler and the maid find it easy to put the blame on him.

In making this girl the central figure of the story, Turnbull has pitched the whole theme on a plane of probability and sympathetic appeal, which Miss Ward realizes to a remarkable degree.

It is no easy matter to keep suspense alive when the spectator is fully acquainted with the facts of a murder, and it takes considerable ingenuity to sustain interest in such circumstances.

Turnbull has done it, and in doing so has built a scenario which must be considered one of the best the screen has seen.

He has been aided splendidly by direction which took full account of details. In no small degree, the dramatic quality of the scenes is due to the unusual lighting effects for which Lasky is celebrated. The sets also show care and intelligence in the making. Most of them are interiors.

Jack Dean has the role of Jim Webster, and does consistently good work. Others in the supporting cast are Paul Byron, Horace B. Carpenter, Camille Astor, James Neil and Gertrude Kellar.

"For the Defense" is an unusually good story which avoids hackneyed methods. In it you will see a dictograph and the third degree employed, and you will be pleased to find that they are employed in a novel way. The element of surprise is well handled.

The picture, as a whole, will grip your patrons and keep them gripped to the end. What few faults the picture has will not affect in the slightest its money-making abilities.

For its excellence, Reicher, Turnbull and Miss Ward deserve credit in about equal measure.

"THE REGENERATION OF JIM HALSEY"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2ND

HANDICAPPED by a mediocre scenario and aided by an intelligent and capable cast, the director has here worked out a realistic and forceful film.

The scenes of low water-front dives make admirable settings for Bessie Eyton's vivid portrayal of a dope-fiend. With very little make-up, she presents a ghastly and weirdly fascinating picture of a heroin victim. Her convulsed face and twitching body are nerve-wrecking in their realism.

Thomas Santschi engages in one of the best fights ever staged for the camera. Being attacked by seven or eight men at once, he kicks, bites, and uppercuts his assailants, knocking half a dozen of them off the deck of a ship into the water before he is himself thrown over. The close-ups of this mill show that it was not a polite affair.

Jim Halsey, an able sea captain, overwhelmed by his wife's unfaithfulness, loses his grip, and becomes a derelict. He is redeemed by the care of Meg, a dope-fiend.

NO MONEY TO PAY FOR DOPE

When he is re-instated as captain, she hides in the hold of the vessel, and when the crew mutiny and throw Halsey overboard, she dives after him, and drags him to the shore. Dying, she asks him to give her his first kiss, and this he does.

TOY ENTERS FIFTH WEEK WITH "BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" AND MERRILL MAKES RECORD WITH "PEGGY"

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Milwaukee, Wis., March 10.

TWO photoplay houses in this city have been enjoying unusually long runs with their respective attractions. The Toy theatre is entering upon its fifth consecutive week with "The Battle Cry of Peace," while the Merrill has just closed a record week run of Billie Burke in "Peggy."

It is the run at the Merrill that is probably the most remarkable ever witnessed in this city. The production was booked originally for a four-day run. It played to capacity from the start and Manager H. D. Graham immediately extended the booking for the full week.

In this time the production played to exactly 51,332 people and so great was the crowd on Saturday night that it was necessary to give a special performance at 11 o'clock to accommodate the crowd.

The run at the Toy is most unusual, as the house has heretofore been playing two changes a week at ten cents and "The Battle Cry of Peace" is in at twenty-five cents.

The Toy has a very limited capacity, however, only seating three hundred and sixy-three people.

"THE FLYING TORPEDO"

(Triangle-Fine Arts—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

A ROMANCE of the year 1921, when America, still undefended, is saved from conquest by a wonderful invention—the flying torpedo—this picture combines suspense and contrast to an unusual degree.

While it deals with a tremendously serious subject, its makers have not forgotten that the spectator cannot keep his brows knitted for five thousand feet of film, and they have therefore provided relief of a pleasing sort.

The burden of this falls on John Emerson, but he carries it without effort. His role is that of an eccentric writer of cheap detective stories, who puts up cash to enable his friend, the inventor, to perfect the flying torpedo.

THE NOVELIST TAKING EXERCISE

When the inventor is assassinated by a poisonous capsule secreted by a band of international crooks in his telephone, the novelist runs down the band of crooks, gets back the torpedo, and saves his country.

Emerson gives a sympathetic and finished impersonation, and adds a great deal to the conviction carried by the story.

Bessie Love, as a Swedish maid, is the novelist's chief aide, while Spottiswoode Aitken appears as the inventor; William Lawrence as his assistant; Viola Barry as his wife, and Fred J. Butler, Raymond Wells, Lucille Younge, and Erich von Stroheim as the crooks.

The plot is really in two parts, directed by John B. O'Brien. The first ends with the recovery of the torpedo. The second is occupied with an attack on the California coast by a foreign enemy, with its attendant battle scenes, flight of refugees and the like. The battle scenes, directed by William Christy Cabanne, are realistic, splendidly managed, and entirely convincing. The flying torpedo is shown in action. After seeing it work, we find it hard to believe that there is no such thing in existence.

When a picture is so ingenious as this one, and so meritorious, it is a thankless task to point out that its makers could have omitted a number of subtitles without injuring it in the slightest.

They might also have shortened a few scenes. But as it stands, "The Flying Torpedo" is an exceedingly clever offering.

Its timeliness, the ingenuity of its plot, and its stirring war scenes would be almost enough to make it popular if there were no John Emerson in the cast.

"THE UNPARDONABLE SIN"

(World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

OLD JOHN BARLEYCORN comes in for another backhanded wallop in this subject. In the eyes of Julia Landis, the unpardonable sin is partaking of the festive fire-water, and any man whose lips touch liquor simply has to take the count.

Although her stand is firmly taken, Julia is not a strong or convincing character, and her narrow-mindedness in this respect brings her great unhappiness.

A wide variety of life is shown, and aside from being a good entertainment, the picture should prove a fairly strong sermon against the wiles of the bartender.

The eminent actor, Holbrook Blinn, is easily the feature of the production. He shows us some finished work, and he is always sincere and convincing.

Julia Landis is played by Helen Fulton, and the fact that the character is unconvincing, as mentioned above, is in no way Miss Fulton's fault. Her work is uniformly good, but the author has given her a rather hastily worked out character.

First we have Walter Norman, wealthy man about town. His vice is drink, and through it he loses a girl of the fast set in which he moves, and of whom he was fond.

A friend takes him away from New York on a yacht, gets him sobered up, and puts him on the water wagon, "for good." Then he meets and falls in love with Julia, who is engaged to John Royce. Julia also falls in love, breaks her engagement, and prepares to marry Norman.

Royce gets Harker, the man who won the first girl away from Norman, to get the latter intoxicated at a dance, and then exhibit him to the women. The scheme works, and Julia casts Norman off, later marrying Royce.

Norman, in despair, takes up drink enthusiastically, begins gambling, loses his fortune, then goes to the dogs. While drinking in a low saloon, he overhears Harker and Royce talking, and learns of the plot which wrecked him.

He immediately decides to straighten up. He gets a job, begins to earn money—and then an immense fortune is left to him.

Norman uses the fortune to ruin Royce in Wall street. He succeeds, but prevents Royce from committing suicide, for Julia's sake.

Harker, who has been steadily blackmailing Royce, finds that Julia has learned of the plot, and he can get no more money from the ruined man. So he waylays him at his club and kills him.

Norman is arrested for the murder, convicted and sentenced to death. He is saved at the last moment through the discovery of the real murderer, and finds himself free to marry Julia.

The cast has been well chosen and the whole picture is excellently mounted. Lila Haywood Chester, William A. Norton, Charles D. Mackay and Walter D. Greeb all contribute a high-grade of work. The picture was directed by Barry O'Neil.

"THE CODE OF MARCIA GRAY

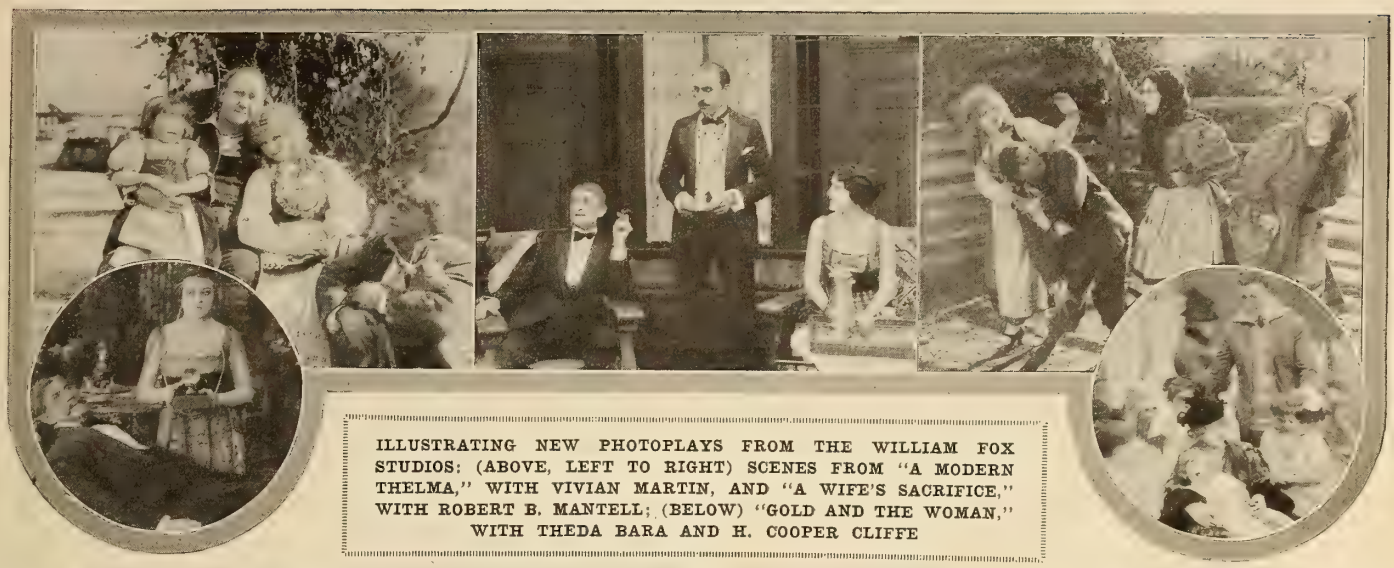
(Bosworth-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

CONSTANCE COLLIER gives us a really artistic piece of work as Marcia Gray. She has been surrounded by practically every aid such a resourceful producer as Bosworth can supply; capable support, elaborate settings, striking locations, splendid photography, and an understanding direction.

Everything tells in the production, and it should register as an unusually successful subject.

Miss Collier herself stands out, as such a star should, without there having been any apparent effect to focus the spot light on her merely because of her being the star.



Her personality shows itself capable of taking and holding the scenes, and she carries the main interest with her throughout the picture.

As Marcia Gray, she is the happy wife of Henry Gray, a wealthy financier. To marry him, she has been obliged to reject the love of Orlando Castle, a devoted admirer, who has remained a bachelor for her sake.

In the midst of her happiness, the bubble breaks. Her husband's bank is investigated, and he is found to have misappropriated the savings of hundreds of the poor who trusted him. Their freinds turn from them, and Marcia is unable even to raise the money for his bail bond.

With the veneer underneath which he stood before the world, scaled off, the real nature of Henry Gray asserts itself. He sneeringly suggests that Marcia go to Orlando Castle, and she does so. Castle not only advances money for Gray's bail, but offers to defend him.

No sooner is Gray released on bail than he buys two tickets for South America. Castle hears of this through a clerk, and unmediately realizes that Gray is about to play him false.

That evening Gray, finding Marcia and Castle together, furiously accuses Marcia of having purchased Castle's aid at the expense of honor.

He pounces upon Castle, who throws him off, and asks him why, if he thought that of his wife, he bought two tickets for South America.

Gray brazenly takes the tickets from his pocket, shakes them in Castle's face, and then offers one to Marcia, but her love has turned to disgust and she tears up the ticket.

Gray starts for the boat alone, but at the pier he runs across one of the depositors whom he ruined.

The man recognizes him, and they grapple, both falling into the water; the next morning they are found dead, locked in each other's arms. After the lapse of a few months, Castle and Marcia are married.

The work of Forrest Stanley as Castle, and Henry DeVere as Gray, is to be commended highly, and Helen Jerome Eddy gives an artistic piece of characterization as the daughter of the ruined depositor. Herbert Standing, Howard Davies and Frank Bonn are also excellent.

"GOLD AND THE WOMAN"

(William Fox—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THEDA BARA is called upon to enact her familiar role of vampire in this picture. It seems almost superfluous to say that she portrays it with the skill and appeal that have come to be associated with her very name. Miss Bara has excellent support in H. Cooper Cliffe, Alma Hanlon and Harry Hilliard.

The most striking scenes, of course, are those in which Miss Bara, as Juliette De Cordova, is exercising her wiles on Mr. Cliffe, who appears as Colonel Dent. This line of action does not come to light until late in the piece, and is preceded by a long introduction, designed chiefly to show that the ancestors of Colonel Dent's ward (Alma Hanlon) tricked the Indians out of a valuable tract of land; that the land really belongs to a young man who becomes the ward's protector, after Colonel Dent has dissipated himself to death with the vampire; and that Juliette fled from Mexico when her home was wrecked by revolutionists, to become Dent's private secretary and his ruin.

The preliminary action affords opportunity for striking effects, such as the dynamiting of the Indians' camp, and the Mexican revolution. The settings for these are very good also. In the Mexican battle scenes, the action is rapid, and well sustained, though Director James Vincent shows a tendency to overdo the short scene and the use of the cutback—which makes the effect at times a little choppy.

Mr. Cliffe gives a splendid portrayal of Colonel Dent, Miss Bara demonstrates again her unrivaled ability to make a screen vampire thoroughly convincing, and Miss Hanlon's portrayal of the blind ward is appealing.

The climax comes when Colonel Dent lies dead of dissipation, and Juliette enters the room, goes to a secret compartment, takes out a lot of gold coins and showers them on the Colonel's inert body. Then Juliette is transformed into a figure of the devil.

A large cast appears. It includes Caroline Harris, Ted Griffin, Louis Stern, James Sheehan, Carleton Macey, Frank Whitson, Pauline Barry and others.

"SOLDIER SONS"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

CARE in direction and in the selection of players has made an interesting three-reeler out of rather ordinary plot material. Wilbert Melville, who wrote and directed it, showed good judgment in selecting Helen Wolcott for the role of Nina, a Philippine girl, whose marriage to an American army officer brings about complications for the plot, and real human interest for the spectator.

Miss Wolcott is not only an excellent type for the role, but she also manages to create genuine sympathy. L. C. Shumway, as the army officer, appears to good advantage. The cast also includes Benjamin Hopkins and Melvin Mayo.

THE BOY IS SAVED FROM ARREST

The climax, in which the officer, after many years' absence, unexpectedly meets Nina, whom he thought dead, is effective. For the first time he learns that he has a son, and that his son is one of the insurrectos.

The father saves the boy from punishment at the hands of the American troops, resigns his command and takes up life again with Nina.

A good deal of footage is occupied with battle scenes, and while these are at no time extensive, they are well directed, and employ enough extras to make them quite realistic.

The locations are very good, and bring out the atmosphere of the story faithfully. Only a few sets are necessary, but they are creditable bits of workmanship.

NEW ORLEANS EXCHANGEMEN SETTLE DOWN TO LENTEN CONTRACTS; WATKINS, PARAMOUNT, A VISITOR

WITH the carnival and the races over, New Orleans exchange men on Ash Wednesday began to settle down to the sordid business of selling lenten contracts, after they had for two weeks entertained numerous prominent film visitors.

But carnival, the gay season in New Orleans, was not lost to the exchangemen, or the exhibitors, and proof of this is in the fact that every theatre in the district broke all attendance records during the past few weeks.

There is little wonder in this, as at least 25,000 visitors thronged the city.

Among the more prominent visitors was R. M. Watkins, president and general manager of the Southern Metro Pictures Corporation. Mr. Watkins went to New Orleans for both business and a vacation.

He said he was more than pleased with the way Metro affairs were going in New Orleans under the capable direction of K. A. Bugbee. A unique honor was accorded Mr. Watkins during his stay here.

He was permitted to be in the flotilla which accompanied the King of the Carnival on his triumphant voyage up the Mississippi River.

George L. Cox, director of the Child's Welfare Film, which is to be released shortly by the Woman's City Club of Chicago, accompanied by nine players, also is in the city, and is taking scenes which will be used in the forthcoming film. From this city Mr. Cox and his crew sail for Havana, Cuba.

Still more prominent visitors include E. J. Farrell, Southern Division manager of General; William Oldknow, general manager of the Consolidated Film and Supply Company, in Atlanta; and F. W. Swett, general sales manager of the Nicholas Power Company.

The two latter are guests of Albert G. Shear, and that gentleman's unrivaled hospitality makes it practically impossible to secure an interview from either one of them, so busy has he kept them enjoying his round of entertainments.

The offices of Southern Paramount have been shifted from Atlanta, Ga., to Asheville, N. C.

It is stated that S. A. Lynch will hereafter make his headquarters in Asheville, while C. E. Tandy will stay in Atlanta when he is not traveling.

Albert Durning, affectionately known around the Mutual office in New Orleans as "Uncle Al," and one of the best friends MOTION PICTURE NEWS has in that territory, returned last week from a selling trip through the Louisiana territory.

Every man in the dozen exchange managers in New Orleans were the subjects of photographic sketches in the New Orleans Times-Picayune recently. Although the comment in the main was kindly, nevertheless the editor of the Times photoplay pages delivered some sarcastic shots in describing their various business abilities.

GAUMONT BEGINS WORK ON "QUALITY OF FAITH," FEATURING GERTRUDE ROBINSON FOR MASTERPICTURE

WORK has been started at the Gaumont winter studios, Jacksonville, Fla., upon "The Quality of Faith," five-reel feature to be released as a Mutual Masterpiece, de Luxe Edition.

In this photoplay Alexander Gaden and Gertrude Robinson have the star roles. Prominent in their support are Richard Garrick, Henry W. Pemberton, John Reinhard and Lucille Taft.

The production is being directed by Richard Garrick, supervising director of the Gaumont companies at Jacksonville.

"The Quality of Faith" tells of a minister who is smugly pleased with his fashionable congregation, being also engaged to the daughter of a prominent factory owner.

The minister is jarred out of his calm acceptance of the pleasures of life by a strike at the factory.

While investigating conditions he meets Marna, a girl of the streets, who once was a factory employee. When he learns of the wrongs the strikers have endured, his eyes are opened and he openly fights against the owner of the plant who is also the staunchest pillar of his church, the father of the girl he loves.

The girl proving false to him, the minister loses his faith and becomes an atheist. It is the girl of the slums, who has become a Salvation Army worker, who finally brings about his redemption.

Miss Robinson plays Marna, the girl of the slums, and Mr. Gaden of course is the minister. The society butterfly is enacted by Miss Taft, who has a long line of such parts to her credit.

John Reinhard has another of his society idler roles, such as he portrayed in "As a Woman Sows."

Henry W. Pemberton plays the part of an atheist who exercises an evil influence upon the minister. "The Quality of Faith" is a Gaumont release as a Mutual Masterpicture.

Harry Palmer, the Gaumont animated cartoonist, has set to work to portray Charles Chaplin, the famous little Mutual comedian, in pen-and-ink lines that move.

The result of his efforts will be seen as a split-reel release, appearing on the same ribbon of film with Gaumont's "See America First" series.

This release promises to have widespread popularity, for it is likely to duplicate Gaumont's issue of the Mutual Weekly, which shows the actual signing of the contract of Mr. Chaplin and John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation.

As soon as it became known that these pictures of the signing would appear in the Mutual Weekly, telegrams began to pour in from exhibitors who wished to show the signing of the contract at the same time the announcement was made that Chaplin films would be shown as soon as released.

DECREASE IN ADMISSION PRICE HITS LEXINGTON, KY.

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Lexington, Ky., March 11.

DECREASE in the admission prices at two houses, the retirement of one house from business and a movement among the citizens for a "reform" of programs, have been the developments of the past week in this city.

The Colonial theatre has come down to the five-cent rate from its former ten-cent standard, carrying the same features with one less film. The Orpheum theatre made the change earlier, holding on to the same Mutual and Universal service.

The Star theatre, owned by the Colonial Amusement Company and operated for some time recently as a ten-cent house, using the same pictures as the Colonial theatre on the succeeding day, has been closed.

It is understood that there is a little war raging between the managers of the several houses in the city, and Manager Zahler of the Strand theatre, a newcomer in the field, alleges that he is being discriminated against by the other exhibitors.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR THE BUSY EXHIBITOR

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"His Mother's Scarf." (Biograph. Mon., Mar., 20.)—This is a reissue, telling an appealing story of Western life. A girl, who escapes the massacre of a caravan by Indians, is found by two brothers living in the wilds.

They adopt her and both fall in love with her. One, who thinks himself the more favored, mistakes her friendliness, and he is shocked on returning home one afternoon, to find her in his brother's arms.

He raises his gun to shoot both through the window, when his attention is drawn by a scarf the girl is wearing. It is a scarf left to his brother by their mother.

Overcome, he turns and goes away, leaving the two together. Wilfred Lucas, Charles H. West, Dorothy West, Kate Bruce and W. Chrystie Miller are in the cast.

"The Battle of Truth." (Biograph. Three reels. Wed., Mar. 22.)—This is an ingenious psychological study, with a story of unusual interest.

There has been a number of murders at the Cafe Epicure. A lawyer had seen a girl habitue of the place and her companion shot down by a young millionaire, but when the case came to trial, the witnesses failed to appear.

In the meantime, the murdered man and woman had been seen walking the streets together. The accused young man's father had almost proved that no murder had been committed.

Later the lawyer is engaged to prosecute Mrs. Bronson's suit for damages against the railroad company of which this same millionaire was the head. As before, the eye-witnesses cannot be found.

By clever detective work, the young lawyer finds that not only has the millionaire spirited away the witnesses, but with the aid of the police, has had the two murder victims impersonated so as to give the impression they were still alive.

Vera Sisson, Charles H. Mailes, Charles Perley, Jack Drumier, and Ivan Christy are in the cast.

"A Man's Work." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., March 11.)—Will be reviewed in next week's issue.

"Separating from Sarah." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., March 21.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Tom Dilley, through the aid of his wife, becomes a successful man. One day he sees the hired man kissing his wife, and in a rage he orders her from his house.

She refuses to go and he goes to his lawyer to get a divorce. The lawyer suggests that he ask his wife about the affair. When he does this, she explains that she had been starved for some romance, and had decided to try one kiss although it made her ill.

Tom asks her forgiveness and says that no divorce will separate them.

Harry Dunkinson and Florence Oberle appear in the leads.

"Canimated Nooz Pictorial, No. 7." (Essanay. Split reel, with scenic. Wed., March 22.)—Five hundred feet of animated cartoon burlesquing topics of the day, and 500 feet of cartoon depicting the further adventures of "Dreamy Dud."

"I Will Repay." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., March 25.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Shandon, a wealthy man of thirty-eight, is in love with Virginia, a young girl, but she loves Ralph, his nephew.

To rid himself of Ralph, Shandon changes some documents so that they show Ralph to be a possible victim of hereditary insanity. Ralph, when he sees this evidence, leaves for Alaska. Some time later Shandon repents of his act, and confesses to Virginia.

She goes in search of him, and finally finds him, but not before he has really become insane from brooding.

In the cast are Marguerite Clayton, Edward Arnold, and John Junior.

"For Sweet Charity." (Kalem. Tues., Mar. 21.)—While no praise can be extended toward the story presented here, as it is fragmentary, Ham and Bud, the chief comedians, get a lot of comedy out of their opportunities, and the laughs in the reel are more plentiful and genuine than in many of the recent Ham comedies.

"A Bachelor's Roost." (Kalem. Wed., Mar. 22.)—An Ethel Teare comedy. in which that young lady appears to her usual attractive advantage.

The story is averagely humorous and far better than the other comedies with the same lead. Gus Leonard, Jack MacDermott and Charles Mulgro are the support.

"The Detective's Peril." (Kalem. Sat., Mar. 25.)—One of the "Hazards of Helen," in which the railroad crooks again steal a sum of money. Helen and a detective bring them to bay after a series of very thrilling scenes.

Helen's featured scene is transferring herself from a handcar to a freight while both vehicles are in motion. James Davis, who directed, has done fair work.

"Some Boxer." (Lubin. One reel. Sat., Mar. 11.)—Written by Mark Swan, directed by Earl Metcalfe, this slapstick Billie Reeves number is entertaining.

It contains quite a few laughs, most of which arise from Reeves' farcical pugilistic attempts. The piece is well staged, and the photography is above the ordinary.

"The Butler." (Lubin. One reel. Mon., Mar. 13.)—D. L. Don performs as an eccentric waiter in this subject, and his efforts are nearly always amusing.

The plot is old, but careful direction and quite pretentious sets put it over in good style. Edwin McKim directed. The cast includes Florence Williams, Patsy DeForest, George Egan and Charles Leonard.

"Number 13, Westbound." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., March 20.)—Will be reviewed in next week's issue.

"Trilby's Love Disaster." (Selig. Sat., March 25.)—This Western comedy gets its few laughs by slapstick methods. The cast includes Victoria Forde, Joe Ryan, Ethylyn Chrisman, and Betty Keller.

Trilby is a ranch-hand in love with the cook. The cowboys and cowgirls discourage his amours by putting pepper in a bouquet tripping him, throwing a bale of hay at his horse, and similar subtle ways, until he gives up in disgust.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Rupert's Rube Relation." (Falstaff. Thurs., March 16.)—A comedy with a lot of real laughs in it. Rupert, an artist, is victimized by a party of his friends, who get from him the address of his Uncle Josh, up state, then write to the old man in his name, giving a hard luck story about a mortgage, and urging him to come to New York.

Uncle Josh arrives at the studio in Rupert's absence, and the friends take him out to a cabaret.

When Rupert returns he finds a note from Uncle Josh, and, fearing for the fate of the innocent old man, hurries to his rescue.

By the time he reaches the cafe Uncle Josh has won the hearts of all by an exhibition of dancing, and on account of having thrown out a troublesome bully, has been hired as bouncer.

"The Twin Trunk Mystery." (Cub. Fri., March 17.)—Billy Armstrong is featured as a detective in this comedy, which is a fast story of jewel thieves and mistaken identity.

The two detectives are engaged to meet a train on which E. Z. Marks and his wife are travelling, with a great quantity of jewels, and protect them from Slim Pete and his wife, international crooks, who are in pursuit.

The trunks of the two parties become mixed, and while the detectives are busy capturing the wrong man, the thieves steal the wrong trunk and carry it out into the desert.

The jewels are safe, but the detectives get small credit. In the cast are Tommy Hayes, J. A. Howe, Mme. D'Orcy, Allen Williams, Grace Gibson and Mlle. Ottawa.

"The Code of Honor." (American. Three reels. Tues., March 21.)—This story of diplomatic life and international intrigue is of the conventional type.

Frank Borzage acts the principal part, beside doing the directing. His work is exceedingly good, as is that of George Periolat, Alfred Vosburgh, and Vivian Rich. Although trite, and occasionally padded, the play is interesting.

Marvin and Chase are army draftsmen employed in the Ordnance Department. Marvin has perfected plans for an improved gun, and Valpar, a secret agent for a foreign government is anxious to obtain its specifications.

Valpar instructs Zena, his niece, to make love to Chase, and to get the plans from him. The girl does this and gets the drawings, but she falls in love with her victim.

Seeing that he has been duped, Chase is about to commit suicide to save the honor of the service, but Zena relents and returns the precious papers to him.

"Cupid at Cohen's." (Beauty. Wed., March 22.)—John Sheehan and Carol Halloway are not Yiddish names, and these players certainly are not Hebraic in appearance. In spite of this they put some laughs in this comedy of Jewish life.

The plot is not remarkable, but there are enough funny situations to save it. Others in the cast are Dixie Stuart, Rea Berger, and Dick Rosson.

Jeven, the proprietor of a Kosher restaurant, engages Cohen, a matrimonial agent, to marry off his unattractive daughter Yetta.

Abe Levee wants to marry Rose, the younger daughter, but Jeven insists that Yetta must be married first. Levee tells Cohen that he will marry Yetta, but at the last moment he elopes with Rose and Cohen must marry Yetta himself.

"Search Me." (Vogue. Thurs., March 23.)—This is one of the best releases put out by this company to date. The slapstick element has been softened by some excellent comedy material of a less strenuous kind.

There is no vulgarity, and the actors put their laughs over cleverly. In the cast are Patty McQuire, Arthur Moon, Puss Powell, Priscilla Dean, and Jack Ganes.

The plot has to do with the complications arising when a necklace is stolen and passed from one character to another in rapid succession. The complications are too involved to detail.

"The Bruiser." (American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe. Five reels. Thurs., March 23.)—Will be reviewed next week.

"The Ranger of Lonesome Gulch." (Mustang. Three reels. Fri., March 24.)—Considering how often the material of this release has been used, it is surprising how interesting it has been made. The acting is good, the directing competent, the locations beautiful, and the photography superb.

The excess footage that creeps in now and then can be excused in view of the good points of the drama.

Thomas Chatterton, Jack Richardson, Anna Little, and Al Fordyce are in the cast.

Frank, a ranger, loves Nell, the daughter of a retired professor living in the West. She promises to marry him when she has finished a novel she is writing, but the man who is engaged to illustrate her work fascinates her.

Frank tolerates this competition until he discovers that the artist is a fortune-hunter. The ranger then runs his rival out of town. Later a gang of tramps attack Nell, and Frank comes to her rescue.

When all his ammunition is gone, with the exception of one bullet, Frank uses this to kill Nell so that the tramps will not violate her. But just then help comes, and Nell is not killed, for the bullet struck a pendant at her throat.

"The Bubbles and the Barber." (Beauty. Sun., March 26.)—A favorite comedy plot is utilized here with fair results. Nothing remarkable is attempted in its presentation, but the acting, especially that of Orral Humphrey, is amusing.

Others in the cast are Gladys Kingsbury, Mary Talbot, Ward MacAllister, and John Gough.

The newly-rich Bubbles family want to marry their daughter to a real count, so the resourceful manager of a matrimonial bureau engages a barber to impersonate one. Many complexities occur before the imposition is exposed.

"Devilish Business." (Vogue. Sun., March 26.)—Not shown for review.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Graft." (Universal Special Feature. Two reels. Episode fifteen. Week of March 20.)—"The Patent Medicine Danger" deals with the frightful pitfalls that drugs represent in the paths of the so-called young innocents who are pictured as thronging the streets of any big city.

Robert Harding (Richard Stanton) gets to work and checks all attempts of this trust to do away with him. His featured stunt is to jump from the top of a high building into a pond of water.

The head of the trust is killed by an angry mob which Harding is unable to keep in check. All the Grafters are now disposed of except Stone.

"Drugged Waters." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., March 20.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of March 11.

"Love and Vaccination." (Nestor. Mon., March 20.)—Wendell Phillips prepared this scenario and Al Christie produced it with Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Betty Compson playing the leading roles. Though the whole plot is quite old, it has not been unearthed for some time and as produced it makes a very fair comedy.

"The Madcap Queen of Crona." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., March 21.)—This is a favorite plot and one which the followers of Francis Ford and Grace Cunard will enjoy because it sets the two leads off to advantage.

An American girl changes places with a foreign queen, and the story of romance and intrigue, generously smattered with comedy that follows is quite acceptable.

"Ain't He Grand?" (Imp. Tues., March 21.)—Roy Clements has extracted a good deal of fun from the incident of the bunk magician operating in a small town. Victor Potel, Jean Bernoudy and Eileen Sedwick are the leads.

"The Phantom Thief." (Rex. Tues., March 21.)—A novel though somewhat aimless drama, with Gretchen Lederer and Val Paul in the two principal parts.

The sleepwalking wife is the cause of much worry to her husband, and finally some valuables disappear and he is at a loss as to the thief.

It develops that his wife did the trick while sleepwalking, and subsequently she is cured by a physician.

"Scars and Stripes Forever." (L-Ko. Two reels. Wed., March 22.)—A Billie Ritchie comedy in which he shines to advantage. There is a great lot of business laid in a prison which is very funny—in fact, the entire release, save in the matter of photography, is one of the best of L-Kos. Gene Rogers and Peggy Pearce support Ritchie.

"The Desperado." (Laemmle. Wed., March 22.)—This time Rupert Julian has turned his attentions to a Western, and in his own particular and highly clever style he has produced an excellent picture.

Julian has already made a name for himself and much should be heard from him in the future. Frank MacQuarrie and Jack Holt appeared with the director-star in this. Calder Johnstone prepared the scenario.

"The Secret Foe." (Laemmle. Two reels. Thurs., March 23.)—One of Lynn Reynolds' productions, which he both wrote and directed.

His story though a little startling at times, that is, startling in an unreal way, smacks of many a dramatic moment and many a pleasant little touch of comedy.

In its entirety it is a commendable feature, while there is some fine night photographic work and a quantity of appropriate scenes. Myrtle Gonzalez, Fred Church, Jean Hathaway, Val Paul and Alfred Allen are the leads.

"On Dangerous Ground." (Big U. Thurs., March 23.)—Murdock MacQuarrie, the versatile character actor, appears in the title role of this reel, which depicts the hardships undergone by a Jew and his daughter after their arrival in this country.

The scenario was written by Mrs. Murdock MacQuarrie and produced by her husband, and, although it terminates somewhat abruptly, the work of MacQuarrie, whose makeup is convincingly characteristic, will certainly make an impression.

The scenes are exceptionally realistic and the various types that appear are strictly true to life. Rene Verne appears as the Jew's daughter.

"The Crimson Trail." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., March 24.)—An absorbing tale of the Northwest Mounted Police and the story of romance and adventure engaged in by one of its members.

The film contains some most unusual effects, such as the scene showing the raft and its passengers floating down a turbulent river.

While the story is of only a fair variety, its settings and good direction and acting will rank it high.

Edith Roberts, Clara Beyers and Stanley Walpole appeared under the direction of Winthrop Kelly, who also prepared the scenario.

"The Wrong Bird." (Nestor, Fri., March 24.)—This excellent comedy of Al Christie's concerning the laughable situations all centering around the cooking of Mrs. Newlywed was reviewed in a previous issue of "Motion Picture News."

The date given before is wrong, it being released on March 24. Billie Rhodes and Ray Gallagher are the leads.

"Monna Vanna." (Bison. Three reels. Sat., March 25.)—This production was made by the Ambrosio Company in Italy, and is an adaptation from the work of Maurice Maeterlinck. It presents a very engaging romance that took place during the siege of Pisa by the Florentines.

A number of realistically executed battle scenes, the participants clothed in armour, add considerable interest to the story. The scenes are very good while the photography conforms with the average foreign standard.

The picture affords a refreshing change from the American-made feature and should not be missed by any Universal exhibitor.

"It Nearly Happened." (Joker. Sat., March 25.)—Portraying the manner in which the country couple get swindled by a city pair.

Very funny as a whole, but Gale Henry's eccentric makeup causes her to appear slightly too ugly to create an attractive sight. Others in the cast are William Franey, Lillian Peacock and Milburn Moranti.

"A Social Outcast." (Rex. Three reels. Sun., March 26.)—This is a political melodrama with a peculiar love interest so interwoven that it is pleasing to a certain extent, but it hardly convinces, because its development is artificial.

The nominee for district attorney harbors a destitute girl in his house and the opposition paper misinterprets his motives. The lawyer withdraws from the campaign, is deserted by his fiancee and friends and later marries the girl just to spite them all.

They live apart for a time, but finally, when the man discovers his wife doing charity work, he realizes his love for her.

Samuel Greiner wrote the scenario and Ben Wilson directed, featuring himself and Dorothy Phillips.

"A Friend But a Star Boarder." (L-Ko. Sun., March 26.)—Skidding automobiles on wet streets make the chief attraction in this reel, and these scenes, which form the climax and the greater part of the last half of the reel, are hilariously funny.

The leads, Billie Ritchie, Peggy Pearce and Gene Rogers, do acceptable work.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"The Iron Claw." (Third instalment. Two reels.)—Not having seen the first instalments of this serial, we expected to flounder hopelessly through these reels, but were pleasantly disappointed.

"The Cognac Cask," as the third chapter is called, can stand on its own feet and, besides, it presents a highly exciting story from first to last.

The mysterious Laughing Mask rescues Pearl White, the heroine, from the clutches of the Iron Claw through a series of events that one by one send the interest up higher and higher.

The scenario is excellently constructed and the acting of Miss White, Creighton Hale and Sheldon Lewis merits praise.

Every exhibitor realizes that one of the best ways to increase box office receipts is to be able to offer a make of photoplay productions that always maintains a high standard of quality. The public comes to know such a make and the mere announcement that one of its releases is to be shown is sufficient to gain added patronage.

David Horsley productions are popular with exhibitors for this reason. Always high class in every respect they have established a reputation for consistent high quality much to the advantage of the exhibitors' receipts.

Among the coming releases of David Horsley productions are: "On the Rampage," a one-reel Cub Comedy featuring George Ovey, released March 24; "The Hidden Law," a five-part subject with Margaret Gibson and William Clifford, released March 25, and "The Love Liar," also a five-reel production, featuring Crane Wilbur, released March 27.

Book these David Horsley productions at your Mutual exchange and be assured of good pictures.

Everything for Theatre, Exchange and Studio

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

By J. H. Hallberg

69—What precautions must be taken in construcing a core for a choke coil?

Ans.—In the first place you must select the highest grade electrical steel or iron in sheets not to exceed about .01 inch in thickness, or, possibly, as thick as .015 inch, but as a general rule, the thinner the better, but within reason, of course.

After the proper material has been secured one side of it may be coated with a covering of Japan or other insulating paint or varnish.

In the absence of the paint or varnish a good scale of rust will answer the purpose of insulation. The iron sheet must then be cut into the proper form which depends upon the type or style of choke-coil it is desired to construct.

Care must be taken in cutting the iron, so that there will be no sharp projecting edges or "hang-over" which would incline to short-circuit the sheets, as they are laid on top of each other.

When the proper number of laminations (as the cut steel or iron sheets are called) have been obtained, it is generally well to remove the sharp edges, then the holes for the rivets should be punched clean without ragged edges or "hang-over."

If there is a tendency for the metal to pull, a countersink should be used to remove the projecting edge around the hole.

The laminations may then be assembled, one on top of the other and a rivet which has previously been japanned or painted with an insulating varnish, may be put through each hole and then under great pressure the sheets are to be forced together and the rivets headed over.

70—What happens if the core should not be rivetted together under sufficient pressure?

Ans.—Under this condition the laminations or individual sheets within the core will be loose relative to each other and when such a core is put within a magnet coil or solenoid (as a coil of insulated wire is called), the influence of the A. C. passing through the coil will magnetize the iron core, first in one direction, then in the other, and so on, the number of reversals depending upon the number of cycles at which the system operates.

The continued reversal of magnetism, which, during the fraction of a second, makes one end north and the other south, and at the next instant changes this condition so that the end which was the north becomes the south pole the next instant, creates a vibration within the core which, if the laminations are loose, will cause great noise, the pitch of which will depend upon the frequency or number of cycles at which the current is applied in the magnet coil.

71—Is an iron core when under the influence of an Alternating Current, subject to a mechanical change or stress?

Ans.—Judging by the foregoing answers to questions upon the subject of the iron core for a choke-coil, it appears that there is a mechanical change within the iron when the A. C. excites magnteism within it.

The molecules within the iron, undergo what you might imagine a complete mechanical reversal in relation to each other when the magnetism within the iron is changed, due to the reversal of the current in the coil surrounding the iron body or core.

Where there is a reversal of any body or thing you know that a movement is effected and whenever a movement is made, power is expended and there is friction retarding the movement which creates heat.

In view of this statement you will understand that the reversal of the molecules within the iron must be made as easy as possible to minimize the friction and the heat.

This is accomplished by using thin sheets of specially prepared annealed soft iron or electrical steel separated from each other as described.

Further, you evidence the presence of a mechanical stress due to the vibration of the core within the coil and you also have evidence of the mechanical tension or stress existing when the laminations are loose, relative to each other by the fact that they produce vibrations which set forth noise or "humming," as it is called, in most all kinds of apparatus used with A. C.

72—Is there any difference in the losses in the core due to different frequencies in the current supply?

Ans.—You know that the heat is generated by a reversal of the molecules in the iron. Therefore, you must understand that the greater the speed of reversal or, rather, the more frequent the reversals are made within a given time, the greater will be the friction and power required to overcome the resistance to the movement of the molecules.

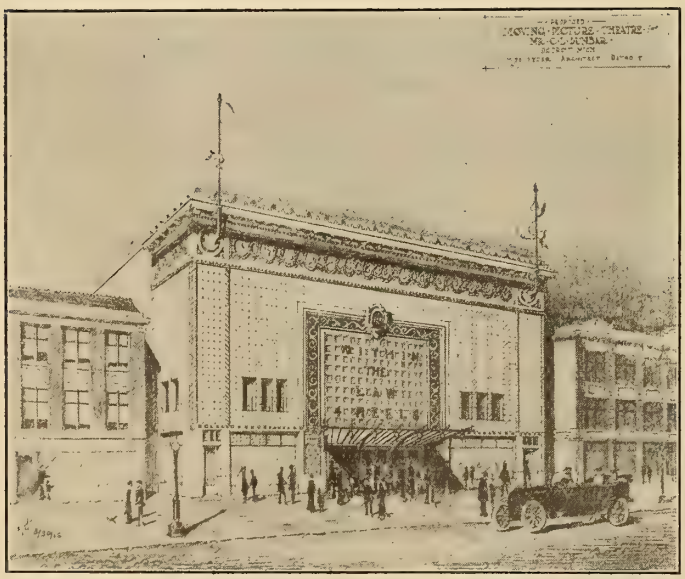
On that account it appears that the lower frequency of reversal due to a lower cycle current being applied to the device is the better, as it will create less heat in the core.

This statement, however, must be taken as a general one because for certain purposes and in certain classes of apparatus, the losses in the iron core when properly constructed, are so small compared to the entire output of the apparatus or machine, that they need not be considered as serious, whether the frequency is slightly higher or lower, but the reference is made so that you will understand that the molecule friction within the iron core increases with the higher frequencies or alterations or cycles of the current.

Novel Type of Theatre Plan Offered to Exhibitors

Vis-a-Vis Is Based on Axiom That Motion Picture Stories Should Be Shown in Sequence to Patron Regardless of Time He May Enter the Auditorium—Operation Is Same as Four Independent Theatres Arranged So That One Set of Films Can Be Used for All



A NOVELTY in theatre construction is offered for the consideration of exhibitors by C. L. Dunbar, 185 Canfield avenue, Detroit, Michigan, in a type of picture house he has designated the Vis-a-Vis.

It is based on the axiom that it is desirable to show a picture story in sequence from the beginning to the end and that the story be presented in this order of sequence to each patron, no matter at what time he or she may enter the theatre.

Sequence is of prime importance, an essential requisite to the proper enjoyment of any story, be it in printed form or displayed upon the screen.

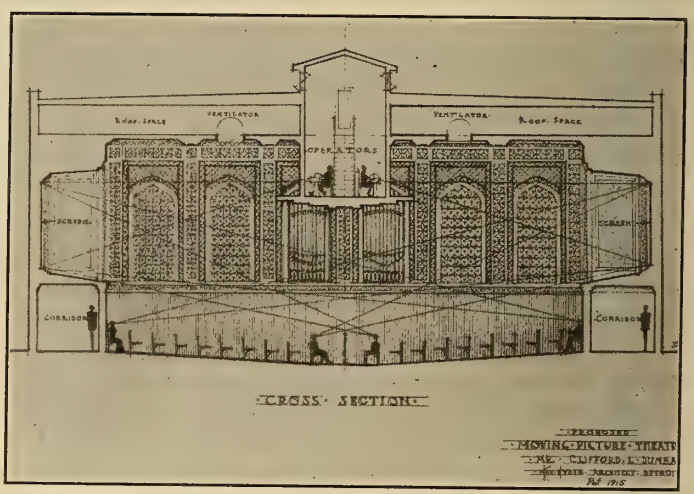
The operation is precisely the same as four independent theatres so arranged that one set of film may be used by all.

The novelty consists in the arrangement of the spectators, screens and projectors with respect to each other. This is made clear by an inspection of the section and the plan.

ARCHITECT'S DRAWING FOR PROPOSED MODEL THEATRE AT DETROIT

It is evident from the sectional diagram that patrons on one side of the spectorium observe a picture projected on a screen on the opposite wall over the entrance corridor and are shielded from looking directly into the faces of the people opposite by an intercepting screen.

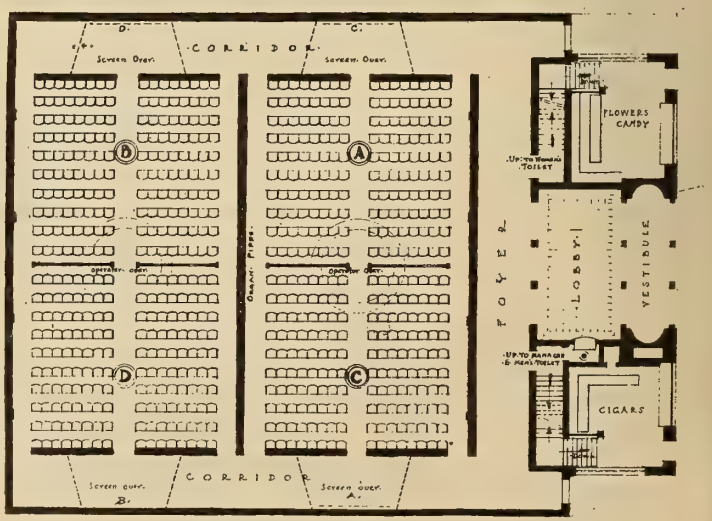
Everybody thus has a good seat at a comfortable distance from the picture. It will be noticed that the lines of sight are all good.



Plan Provides for Vis-a-Vis Seats

The plan provides for two halls, transversely of the building, and in parallel, each equipped with Vis-a-Vis or facing seats.

The operating booths are in the center above the line of sight. These two booths are connected with each other by a fire-proof passage, but otherwise each hall is an independent unit.



The time schedule gives the detail of the film operation, in the case where it is desired to show a four-reel feature with an introductory piece.

Each of the four sections is filled during the projection of the introductory piece and the first four minutes of the feature as shown on the screen of that particular section.

SEATING AND PROJECTION ARRANGEMENT FOR PROPOSED MODEL THEATRE

MAIN FLOOR PLAN OF PROPOSED DETROIT THEATRE

For instance, a patron arrives when section "A" is filling. He observes on screen "A," the introductory piece being shown. This is followed by the first reel of the feature film.

Directory of New Theatres

This department is designed to be a weekly guide to all sales, leases, construction and remodeling of photoplay theatres. If you are building, selling, leasing or renovating, kindly communicate it at once for publication.

ARIZONA

J. H. MAUK, manager of the Phoenix Amusement Company, which has eight houses in that vicinity, has been in Los Angeles making contracts for film service. He arranged with Manager Harry Lustig of the Metro, Los Angeles exchange, for eight days' service of each Metro subject.

Johan Johanson of Yuma, whose theatre, the Casino, was practically destroyed by recent floods which totally submerged all the seats, has been in Los Angeles buying new equipment.

Since the flood he has taken over the lease of the Yuma theatre, which he is remodeling. Both houses will run pictures with the exception of an occasional engagement of a road show attraction at the Yuma.

CALIFORNIA

The Family theatre at Fruitvale is to be reopened by the owner of the property.

The Cosy theatre in the Fillmore street district, San Francisco, is again in operation, this time under the direction of G. Berson.

The Star theatre at Fellows has been successfully removed to a new location and will be in operation again as soon as repairs have been completed.

The Star theatre at Vallejo, near the Mare Island Navy Yard, has been reopened by W. Maupin, who is conducting it in conjunction with the Bell. Business at the latter house has been such of late that it is believed that a success can be made with both theatres in operation.

The Sunset theatre at San Francisco, one of the leading houses in the outlying district, has been taken over by J. R. Bodin, after having been conducted for several months by Messrs. Stanley and Malm.

The Star theatre at Taft is again in operation and is now known as the Optic.

J. N. Rice, who conducts a theatre at Monterey, has taken over a house at Salinas and will open it at an early date.

It is currently reported that Emil Kehrlein, who conducts a moving picture house at Fresno, will shortly open a large house at Oakland.

The Theatre Tulare at Tulare was closed recently, but it is understood that this house will be reopened at once.

Work is to be commenced at once on the moving picture theatre to be erected at Stockton, for the Turner and Dahnken Circuit of San Francisco. Plans for this house are nearing completion.

The Berkeley theatre, Berkeley, is now being conducted by W. S. Roney, who was interested in the moving picture business in that city several years ago.

M. E. Beck has purchased the Photoplay theatre at Barstow from E. L. Stanfield, and was recently in Los Angeles making contracts for service.

Photoplay theatre No. Two at Thirtieth street and Vermont avenue, Los Angeles, which has been conducted for the past two years by Sam McIntyre, has been sold to B. Meyers. Mr. McIntyre expects to continue in the theatre business in California.

L. E. Liscome of Toronto, Ontario, who has a theatre in that city, has purchased the Palace theatre at Fifty-second street and Moneta avenue, Los Angeles.

H. S. Hoyt is building a new theatre on Ocean avenue, Long Beach, at a cost of eighty thousand dollars. Present plans are that this will be completed by April 15. The theatre will have a seating capacity of nine hundred, is modern in every respect, and the building will be occupied partially by several stores.

INDIANA

Muncie is to have a new motion picture theatre, according to reliable reports. The theatre is to be located in the Young Hardware Building, in Jackson street, just west of the Wysor Grand theatre, and will be in charge of Arthur Bennett, a well-known Muncie man, formerly connected with the Star and Columbia theatres. It is understood the plans provide for a scientifically set screen, large seating capacity, opera chairs, modern lighting facilities, fire protection, up-to-date stage equipment and a large pipe organ.

A. S. Bowers, of Bedford, has taken charge of the Family theatre at Covington. He purchased it a few weeks ago from Eugene Ford. Mr. Bowers is an experienced theatre man. The Sunday night shows will be discontinued. Mr. Ford, who owned the theatre for nearly two years, has not announced his future plans.

The Gennett theatre, at Richmond, which has been remodeled and redecorated, opened recently with "The Birth of a Nation."

Triangle features have been booked for the Orpheum theatre at Clinton.

Karl J. Flanders has resigned his position as manager of the Orpheum theatre at Elkhart.

H. C. Page has leased the Empress theatre, in Central avenue, Indianapolis, from the Peoples Amusement Company.

The Monument Realty Company, builders of the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, which is now under construction, has ordered the chairs for the photoplay theatre from the Pettis Dry Goods Company of Indianapolis.

The seats will cost more than $10,000. The chairs are to be of extra large size for theatre use and are to be of mahogany covered with rose-colored velvet to harmonize with the other interior decorations.

The chairs throughout the house will be uniform in size and from each seat an unobstructed view of the entire stage may be obtained. In all of its contracts for building and equipping and decorating the theatre, the company, which is made up of Indianapolis men, is restricting the bids to local business concerns that the theatre may be a "made-in-Indianapolis" enterprise.

KENTUCKY

The Ben Ali theatre, Lexington, built by the late James B. Haggin, one of the finest playhouses in the South, which had been turned into a motion picture theatre, has been partially destroyed by fire. The net loss was about $80,000. Reconstruction work has been going on since, and the Berryman Realty Company, owners, expected to have the house reopened in two months.

The decorations, which were done by Tiffany of New York, at a cost of $30,000 will be replaced entirely. The screen programs meanwhile are being shown at the Lexington Opera House, a legitimate theatre owned by the same company.

The old Register Building on Broadway, Paducah, has been converted into a modern motion picture theatre and opened as the Majestic. The house has a large seating capacity, containing besides the auditorium, a commodious balcony.

The Cinema theatre on Pike street, Cynthiana, was sold at public sale March 11. The building is of brick and has a seating capacity of 325.

LOUISIANA

Levy and Suddah, Natchitoches, have plans drawn up for a $15,000 theatre on the main street in that city. They control the Opera House, but the picture demand has outgrown the capacity of that house.

J. D. dePraslin, owner of the Princess theatre in Lake Charles, contemplates building another house in that city, and will also invade the Crowley amusement field within the next few weeks.

W. W. Black, at Winfield, is playing to capacity business, says Mr. Durning, while W. S. Franklin, in Leesville, is building a new $10,000 theatre in his town.

The Eugie theatre, New Orleans, thoroughly remodelled, opened up for business on March 8.

MARYLAND

The Victor motion picture theatre at 1900 Frederick avenue, Baltimore, has been bought by Carl W. Seibel. The property was bought from Mrs. Minnie A. Smith and Mrs. Sadie V. Talbott. The consideration was withheld. The theatre has a seating capacity of 175 and is to be greatly improved by the owner.

MASSACHUSETTS

C. H. Cowan of Westerly, R. I., who operates a chain of theatres in that section, has taken over the management of the Emond picture house in Plymouth.

Mr. Bragdon, new manager of the Market Street Opera House, Ipswich, has instituted a number of interior improvements and graduated the admission prices.

Louis C. Raifstanger has leased the Mahaiwe theatre, Great Barrington, for a term of five years. His son, Earl B. Raifstanger will manage the house. Features will be shown.

W. C. Howitt, former manager of the Mahaiwe, has gone to Pittsfield, where he has assumed management of the Grand theatre.

MICHIGAN

Graham Hoffman and Clare Hoffman, general managers of the Palace theatre, Detroit, and Mortimer Hoffman, who is general manager of the Hippodrome Amusement Company, which is building a theatre in Saginaw, have formed the Detroit Colonial Theatre Company, with a capital stock of $20,000. A new downtown theatre for Detroit is planned.

Jackson's new theatre, the Orpheum, was dedicated on February 24. It is devoted to vaudeville and motion pictures, and belongs to the chain of houses owned by Col. W. S. Butterfield.

The Garden theatre in Alma, seating 350 people, and the new theatre for A. Robbin in Grand Haven, will be ready for public opening about the first of April.

L. A. Galster, of Petoskey, will build a new business block on Howard street, a part of which will be used for a motion picture theatre.

The Whitehall Improvement Association, Whitehall, is raising money to erect a community theatre. Already $9,000 has been contributed.

Architect Christian W. Brandt, of Detroit, is receiving bids for the erection of the new Deltha theatre, to be built at Mack and Holcomb avenues. It will cost $40,000, exclusive of furnishings. The ground area is 60 by 100 feet. It will seat 1,000 people. The building will be of steel construction, and face brick on the front trimmed with cut stone. The Deltha Amusement Company, Fred DeLodder, general manager, will operate the theatre.

The Theatre De Luxe Company, Detroit, has filed articles of association. The capital stock is $100,000, and the original incorporators are Conrad M. Orth, Damon I. Butler and Emil Grode. A theatre with a seating capacity of 1,500 is to be erected at the corner of Kercheval and Parkview avenues. Mr. Orth will be manager. Stock will be offered for sale to those living in the territory. It will be known as the De Luxe Theatre.

Edward C. Beatty has resigned as manager of the Franklind theatre in Saginaw, to take charge of the general offices at Battle Creek, of the Butterfield circuit of theatres. He will be assistant to Mr. Butterfield.

George W. Trendle, legal advisor and secretary of the John H. Kunsky, Inc., operating eight theatres in Detroit, departed for Cuba on February 26 and expects to be gone about five weeks. Mrs. Trendle accompanied him.

Julius Kleist, Pontiac, has leased the Howland and will remodel it for a moving picture theatre. The alterations will cost $20,000. The house seats about 1,500.

E. J. Stanton, aged forty-eight years, who operated two theatres in Flint, died suddenly on March 7 of Bright's disease. He was also financially interested in theatres in Michigan City, Ind. He was well known throughout Michigan.

Fred G. Lauster, manager of the Orpheum theatre, Ionia, died on March 8 of heart disease. He established the Orpheum five years ago.

Walter Jacobsen, former manager of the Strand theatre in Lansing, has resigned and plans to open a theatre farther west.

MINNESOTA

A two-story brick theatre building, costing $15,000, will be erected on the north side of West Seventh street, between Daly and Toronto streets, St. Paul.

The contract has been awarded Ingemann & Company by the American Theatre Company. The structure will be of brick and concrete construction.

Gustave Marks has been granted a permit for a motion picture theatre on the east side of Dale street, between Lawson and Hatch streets, St. Paul, to cost $12,000.

Johnnie Salvatore, St. Paul boxer, was granted a license for a moving picture theatre at 2511 University avenue, on a transfer from Ray Copliovich.

MISSISSIPPI

Samuel Rosso has opened a new theatre in Woodville.

MISSOURI

After several months of straight dramatic plays, the Olympic theatre, Broadway and Walnut streets, St. Louis, opened on March 5, with a return engagement of "The Birth of a Nation." The Symphony Orchestra, used with the production in Chicago, accompanied the films to St. Louis, and will remain during the four weeks' engagement.

The Broadway theatre, Broadway and St. Charles street, St. Louis, opened on March 12, after being closed a few weeks, with an all-feature program. The Broadway is one of the Associated theatres, and is under the management of H. Schwartz, who also manages the St. Charles, on the opposite side of the street.

NEW YORK

George F. Johnson has leased to Sydney S. Cohen, owner of the Empire theatre, at 161st street and Westchester avenue, New York City, for a term of twenty-one years the plot facing 290 feet on Westchester avenue, 208 feet on Stebbin avenue, and 183 feet on Rogers Place, with an interior plot of 80 by 574 feet.

The property will be improved at once, with stores facing on Westchester avenue, and an open-air theatre, which will be used by the Empire theatre and known as the Empire Gardens.

Plans for the construction of a picture theatre on the east side of Aurora street, between Seneca and Buffalo streets, Ithaca, are now being drawn up by Gibb and Waltz, the architects. With a frontage of 52 feet on Aurora street, and a depth of 155 feet, the theatre will seat 1,500 persons; 1,000 of these will be accommodated on the ground floor.

The building will be narrow, tapering toward a specially constructed framelike stage, which will afford an ideal perspective for photoplays. The house is to be of fireproof construction, and a special feature of the interior of the building will be the absence of all posts and pillars which might obstruct the view of the stage.

The management of the Hudson theatre, Port Chester, has been taken over by Emil Rosenbaum, a New Yorker, who has been in the business for eight years.

PENNSYLVANIA

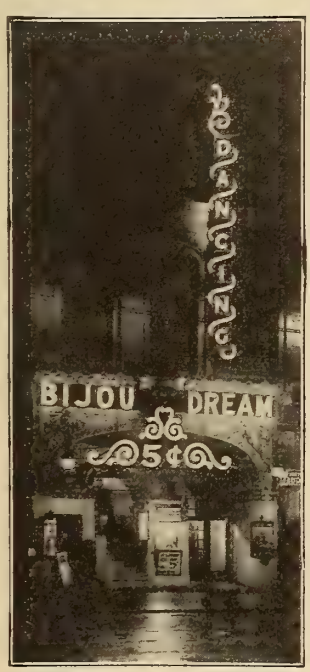
Architect James Calvin Young has prepared plans for the redecoration and enlargement of the Gem theatre, Reading, of which Julius G. Hansen is owner.

The Patriotic Order of Sons of America, Altoona, are erecting a three-story annex on Eighth avenue, near Twelfth street, included in which will be a motion picture theatre.

D. W. Burton, who was out of the business for several months, is again in the field. He has secured the Rex theatre at Washington and will make a few improvements.

M. A. Samuels is now manager of the Gem theatre in East Liberty, Pittsburgh. Mr. Samuels was formerly connected with the Bijou theatre in East Liberty.

Ambrose Lantzy, formerly manager of the Grand theatre at Barnesboro, has purchased the Grand theatre at Portage from Charles Baird and has taken charge of the theatre. Mr. Baird formerly conducted two theatres at Portage, but will devote all his time to the Pastime, which he still owns.

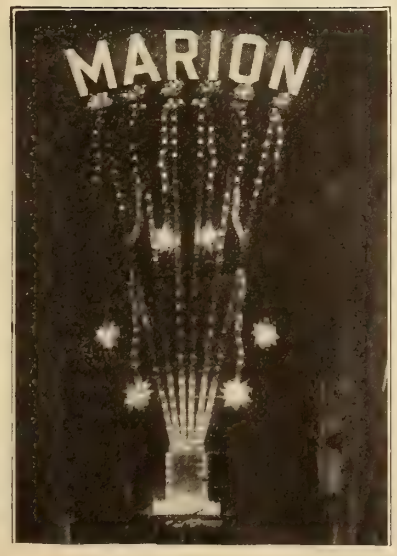


TENNESSEE

Work of excavating for the picture theatre at the corner of A and Ninth streets, Chattanooga, is well under way. The building to be erected will be thoroughly modern and fireproof and will be exclusively for colored people. The building will be of brick and concrete and the plans are to have it completed by April 1.

a FEDERAL sign on your theater means a crowd at your box office

Good programs and good advertising are the life of any motion picture theater. No need for us to argue that. You may be presenting good programs, but are you advertising them the way you should —the way you could if you had a FEDERAL Electric Sign over your door?



you will find FEDERAL signs on leading theaters everywhere

The most successful operators of motion picture theaters—men who control three, four and five theaters in a single city—place implicit confidence in the drawing power of FEDERAL Electric Signs. They know better than to hide their light under a bushel.

the sign outside represents the show inside to the public

The movie-going public has come to recognize that the best programs are to be found in the modern theaters which make use of effective, brilliant electric signs. The FEDERAL Electric Sign is the stamp of the alert motion picture theater proprietor, as well as a royal invitation of welcome to the passing public.

Mr. Reynard wrote us:

Mr. E. F. Reynard, President of the Marion Photoplay Company, writes us :

"On one of my trips West, I saw an unusually attractive theatrical display on the Majestic Theater in Cedar Rapids. The flashing operation was a stunner—positively the best I have ever seen. I made up my mind that a company that could build a sign like that could build one for me. So when I found you had manufactured that sign, I placed my order with you for one having a similar operation. That sign has been a winner for us in every way and your company has certainly treated us right."

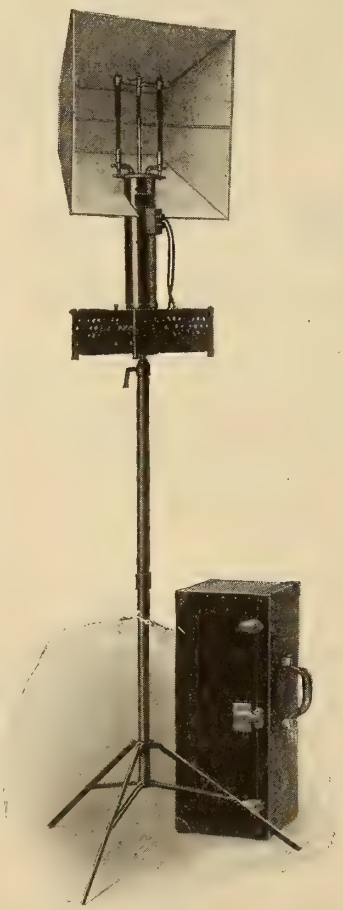
Ideal Light Values Obtained for Film Photography

Special Carbons, with Least Blue and Ultra Violet, Made to Broaden the Bands of Red, Yellow and Green in the Spectrum, Give Arc Lamps Power to Approximately Correct Separation of Colors on the Celluloid Without Necessity of Putting Filter Over the Lens



PRODUCERS of Motion Pictures and "Camera Men" in particular are familiar with the difficulties in securing a satisfactory illumination of the scene or objects to be reproduced upon the film.

Daylight is the standard by which the speed of photography is generally judged, and films which are taken in daylight generally portray the scene or object as we see them in real life.

In an open scene on a clear day it is easy to produce a good film, and this may also apply on a comparatively dull day when the illumination remains constant, but the camera man unfortunately does not always meet these ideal conditions.

For indoor photography the lighting problem is even more serious, due to the variations mentioned above, in addition to which one meets the problem of having the light properly distributed to give a natural appearance to the scene and the persons acting within the same.

Many different forms of artificial illumination have been used, and the illuminating equipment for a studio is one of the most important factors to be considered.

Color Filters for Light Abundance

When pictures are taken outdoors where there is a great abundance of light it is possible to use color filters on the lenses so as to compensate for the high-lights to a certain extent in order to secure details and color values in the shadows. For indoor photography, especially where the object is in motion and where the speed of the film is limited one must take every possible advantage of improvements in the lighting medium for a studio.

The color filter cannot be used for interior motion photography, as it would decrease the illumination to such an extent on the exposed film that the exposure necessary would be entirely too long to permit the true and proper recording of a moving object

The ideal illumination would, of course, be constant daylight of absolutely uniform color values. It is with pleasure that I call your attention to a comparatively new development in the illuminating equipment for motion picture studios, and I herewith give an outline of an interview which I had with J. W. Allison of Allison and Hadaway, Inc., who manufacture the new Panchroma Twin Arc Lamp.

"What I want to particularly call your attention to this light for is its enormous throwing power and the beautiful photographic quality obtained by films made under this light," said Mr. Allison. "In the first place, we have a special carbon to give a certain quality of light.

"I do not know whether you are acquainted with the photographic emulsions or not, but it is a well-known fact that all photographic emulsions are hypersensitive to blue, that is, if you should go to photograph a sign printed on a white card with blue letters, and photograph it with the ordinary films without a filter you will get no separation of color between the blue or the white. If you photograph the red letters on a black card you would get no separation of color because the plates are not sensitive to red or black, except to a very slight degree to the red, in certain cases.

Treat Carbons to Cut Out Blue and Ultra Violet

"Knowing these conditions when we started out to make our lamp for motion picture purposes, we decided, instead of using the ordinary carbons which have a greater excess of blue than daylight, to so treat the carbons that we would cut out some of the blue and most of the ultra violet and broaden the bands of red, yellow and green in the spectrum of the light, so that the result on the film would be approximately correct in the separation of colors, without the necessity of putting a filter over the lens (which always tends to increase the exposure) in order to get a properly timed negative.

"It is for this reason that we know our light is efficient for photographic work, and we believe that the producers of motion pictures are gradually coming to a realization of light values.

"The lamp and the rheostat is contained in a neat carrying case slightly thicker than a dress suitcase weighing complete about twenty pounds.

"It consumes only 15 amperes at 100-120 volts for the two arcs, and both arcs are fed from the same solenoid, thus insuring even feed for both arcs, a new oscillating device keeping the carbons in accurate contact at all time.

"As the two arcs work in series, having about 50 volts across the arc, very little current is wasted in resistance. The total candle power of the two arcs is 8,000, and the quality of the light is by far the richest in actinic value yet produced.

"The lamp works on alternating or direct current with equal efficiency. It can be used anywhere where electric current is available, and, because of its portability, uses will be found for it continuously throughout the year."

The foregoing description is brief, but those who have further interest will be advised on any point concerning which inquiry may be made about the application of this lamp.

It is stated that this system of lighting was used by Miss Bleecker, who took the motion pictures in the Auburn and Sing Sing prisons.

UNABLE TO LOCATE TROUBLE CAUSED BY BROKEN CARBON

W. H. S., Quincy, Ill.—We are using two Motiographs in our theatre, D. C., using a Ft. Wayne motor generator set of 50-ampere capacity.

We are using 5/8-inch cored carbon top, and 1/2-inch cored bottom. Results are very satisfactory except we have trouble with lower carbons breaking off during the show, and are unable to locate the trouble.

We have tried 5/8-inch cored bottom, but find that the spot is more irregular than when using 1/2-inch, and solid carbons in bottom are no good. Can you enlighten us in the matter?

ANS.—Your complaint about the 1/2-inch cored lower carbon breaking off during the show is unusual, and it is difficult to give you an answer.

If you had stated the make carbon you were using, and in what position relative to the point and the carbon clamp where you experienced the breakage, I might have offered a suggestion, but under the circumstances I cannot base an intelligent reply upon the information you have so far given.

I am glad to note that you have concurred with the suggestions given in this department that a solid carbon is not satisfactory under certain conditions in the lower holder with a D. C. arc.

If you will refer to "Hallberg Helps," page 148, Accessory News Section, in issue of October 9, 1915, you will find that I recommend 3/4-inch cored carbon in the upper or positive holder, and a 9/16-inch cored carbon for the lower or negative holder in amperages ranging between 40 and 50.

I mention also the 5/8-inch size, but 9/16-inch is correct diameter, and I would suggest that you provide yourself with a supply of 9/16-inch cored carbons and try the results.

In any case information from you as to the point where the carbon breaks during the performance would be of advantage to other operators who may have experienced similar trouble, as we could then give further study to your complaint.

ON February 13 the Tampa, Fla., M. P. M. O. Local Union of the I. A. T. S. E. held a meeting, at which the following officers were elected:

Augustine Crespo, president; Manuel Nosti, vice-president; David M. Brown, secretary-treasurer; W. Paleveda, business agent, and Ben Lance, guardian.

Regular meetings will be held the second and fourth Sunday night of every month.

The organization is one hundred per cent. strong and has as good a crowd as has ever been gathered together.

Mr. Nosti, the vice-president, can be reached at 205 La Salle street and Mr. Brown at 224 Hyde Park avenue.

VANCOUVER THEATRICAL FEDERATION ELECTS RUNDELL PRESIDENT AND MC CARTNEY VICE-PRESIDENT

THE Vancouver Theatrical Federation, comprising the Musicians, Stage Employees and Moving Picture Operators Unions of that city, has elected the following officers for the year 1916:

MINUSA CINE PRODUCTS COMPANY ESTABLISHES AGENCIES IN IRELAND AND SOUTH AMERICA

THE Minusa Cine Products Company, of St. Louis, now has a sales agency for Minusa Gold Fibre Screens in Ireland and one in South America.

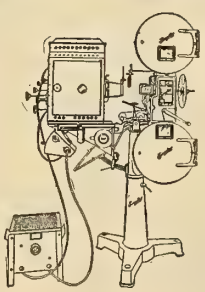
The company's business during the past year has been very encouraging, according to E. R. Anderson, and he says that orders have already begun to come in for screens for outdoor theatres.

Mr. Anderson says it is remarkable how many screens have been sold to clubs, schools, lodges, and other organizations in the last few months.

The Minusa Company is planning to get a larger building for a factory, as the one in use at present is fast becoming too small for the rapid growth of the business.

UNIVERSAL CAMERA COMPANY MOVES TO 557 WEST JACKSON BOULEVARD

THE Universal Camera Company, whose success has been marked by a most healthy and continual growth, has been forced to double its output because of an unprecedented demand for its services.

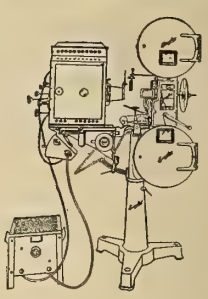


On March 15 it will be in its new quarters at 557 West Jackson boulevard. This location is particularly desirable as it is on one of Chicago's leading thoroughfares.

The display room will be particularly well equipped and all persons interested in photography are invited to call at their earliest convenience.

TECHNICAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY OPENS ENLARGED LABORATORIES

THE Technical Film Manufacturing Company, 345 West Fortieth street, New York City, announces the opening of its enlarged laboratories. It was made necessary by the rapid growth of the company's business to enlarge its plant and it is now occupying over 10,000 square feet of floor space.



L. Berger, general manager, has had over twenty-five years' practical experience in the photographic business, and has brought out several improvements in the film developing industry. In the new plant he has installed all modern improvements, and any kind of work can be done in the laboratories.

The Camera

A Department Devoted to Motion Picture Photography in All Its Phases, Studio and Laboratory Work.

Camera Articles for Exhibitor and Technical Man

Inquiries Received by Motion Picture News for Information on Developing, Printing and Laboratory Processes as Well as Studio Methods Result in the Establishment of a Department Devoted to These Subjects—Questions Will Be Answered by an Expert

WITH the growth of the motion picture industry has come the desire of exhibitors, operators and photographers, both amateur and professional, to use the motion picture camera.

How to take motion pictures, understand developing, printing and laboratory processes, as well as studio methods, is a topic of vital interest to those connected with motion picture enterprises of all kinds.

So great have become the number of inquiries along these lines received by the News that it has seemed advisable to make special provision for answering them.

It has, therefore, been arranged to institute as a regular and permanent feature of the Motion Picture News a Camera Department.

As the field of motion photography, studio and laboratory is a broad one, so will the camera department be broad in scope. It will not be confined to answering inquiries, which, however, can be sought at any time and on any subject within the province of the department.

It will also contain a series of articles which have been prepared for immediate publication, embracing the field of motion picture photography and the cameras, as well as devices used in all phases of the taking and making of motion picture films.

Suggestions for Exhibitors and Operators

These articles have been framed in such a way that the ambitious exhibitor or his operator can obtain the full value and benefit of the suggestions and instructions given.

On the other hand, the articles cannot fail to please the expert cameraman or laboratory technician, as the material contained therein is up-to-date information and occasionally things heretofore little heard or known will be treated.

It is the aim of this camera department to improve the standard of motion photography, which has failed in many instances to keep pace with the artistic development of the motion picture.

To that end inquiries and suggestions are sought from producers, cameramen, exhibitors, operators and all others who desire to learn, or desire to offer suggestions which will tend to make the photographic quality of motion pictures equal or surpass their dramatic quality, as well as keeping pace with the mechanical achievements along these lines.

The one all-important fact from the point of view of the exhibitor is that he shall learn how to choose and properly operate a camera in order that he may take local event films, such as parades, fires, local and gatherings.

In no way do we wish to instill in the minds of the exhibitor the idea that he can lay out a feature or single reel drama or comedy with any hope of its having a commercial value.

Local Events Limit of Exhibitor

At the present time on the shelves of practically every exchange in the country are pictures of more or less merit, which are not worthy of exploitation, though they have been taken by those who have had some experience and who are far more qualified, although their attempts have been flat failures, to put on a picture than are the exhibitors.

The only angle from which a theatre owner or operator should consider the use of a camera aside from home use is in taking pictures of local events to be shown in this theatre. This immediately stamps the exhibitor in question as being on the job and a live wire in every sense of the word. In showing these pictures he takes advantage of a human weakness. Every man, woman and child is anxious to see his or her name in print, as well as his face on the screen.

As a general rule, these local pictures have absolutely no value except in the town where they are taken, although occasionally a picture of this kind, if sent in promptly, is of value to a news weekly.

In the case of the professional photographer, the department will take up subjects of vital interest to him and endeavor to explain all of the latest and most intricate devices brought upon the market which will help him in his profession.

Opinions and questions, as well as articles which are received, will be answered or published in the department. In other words, we want every possible suggestion which will tend to help the photographic end of the business.

In the case of the laboratory and studio, a real attempt will be made to bring out all the newest and latest devices in order in every way to further the interest in this absolutely essential end of the industry.

All these various divisions are so closely allied as to be practically inseparable, and it is for this reason that we have combined them all under the head of The Camera.

NEARLY 3,000 PATRONIZE STRAND, SHELBYVILLE, IND., ON OPENING DAY

Cincinnati, O., March 11.

NEARLY 3,000 persons were entertained during the afternoon and evening at the opening of the Strand theatre, Shelbyville, Ind., March 4. The theatre is one of the handsomest in the state of Indiana and W. C. Meloy, the owner, has spared no expense to make it perfect in every detail.

It seats eight hundred and has a balcony which is nearly on a line with the curtain. Every seat in the house is a good one. Claude Williamson is manager.

A very unique and up-to-date ventilating system furnishes heat in winter and cool air in summer. The opening show was the Triangle release "Let Katy Do It," and Sam Bernard in the Keystone Comedy "The Great Pearl Tangle."

C. C. Hite, manager of the Triangle's Cincinnati office, in company with L. S. Muchmore, traveling representative of the company, attended the opening of the Strand.

A noteworthy incident of this opening was the fact that John Hooper, seventy-two years old, saw his first motion picture at the Strand.

FOUR THEATRES IN COLORADO TOWN CHANGE HANDS

THE four largest motion picture theatres in Victor, Col., have changed hands. Jesse Jones recently purchased the Fox theatre from L. L. Hall. W. C. LeMaster sold his old Fourth street Isis theatre to W. H. Palmer. The Victor opera house has been taken over and remodeled by Frank Hall. Victor is a prosperous mining town with a population of about 5,000.

NEW YORK'S BILTMORE IS WONDER PALACE OF FILM ART

ONE of the most imposing motion picture theatres in the city of New York is the Biltmore Theatre, at Lexington avenue and Fiftieth street. It is controlled by the Biltmore Theatre corporation, with F. M. McClintic, formerly of the Regent Theatre, as its manager.

Although the exterior is not in the style of architecture usually associated with motion picture theatres, its dignified and imposing limestone front has many qualities which place it above the average.

The building is of stone and brick construction, and was completed during the summer of 1914, opening as Hammerstein's Lexington Avenue Opera House.

It has a street frontage of about fifty feet, all of which on the street level is given over to entrance doors. This makes possible leaving the very spacious and attractive lobby entirely open to the street in good weather, which gives a very inviting aspect, as well as affording easy and quick handling of its large number of patrons.

In Italian Renaissance Style

The upper part of the front is in a vigorous Italian Renaissance style. Pilasters on pedestals extend through the two upper floors and are crowned with an adequate copper cornice.

The entrance lobby, the street end of which is divided by swinging doors into a twelve-foot vestibule, is about seventy by forty-five. At each side stairs with marble balustrades lead up to the balcony level in straight open runs. Between these flanking stairs at the end of the lobby are the doors into the theatre.

The walls are finished in imitation limestone and are lined with display panels. The floors are of hexagonal ceramic tile with a decorative border. Built in under the stairs to the right is the ticket window, as well as the manager's office. Tickets are collected at an opening lift on the brass railing which crosses the lobby at the end between the stairs.

This unusually large lobby for a motion picture theatre has afforded exceptional advantages to heat the entrance in a most attractive way.

Immediately inside the lobby a corridor twenty feet wide runs back of the house proper and connects to it by a series of doors.

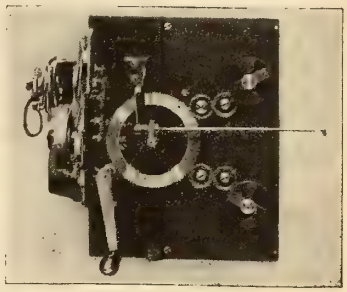
Corridor in Pompeian Style

From here also is reached the lavatories and a large basement smoking room. This corridor is artistically decorated in the Pompeian style. The lower parts of the walls are in painted panels of soft Pompeian red with Greek fret borders. The upper parts of the walls and ceilings are painted a soft ochre, with appropriate figures on this as a background in dull blues, reds and greens, producing a most satisfactory effect.

The theatre has a total seating capacity of 2,532 persons. There are 992 seats in the orchestra, 620 in the balcony, 600 in the gallery and 320 box seats.

The house proper is decorated in a color scheme of dull reds and yellows. The walls under the balcony, as well as above, are treated with a flat paint in a Pompeian red background.

Stenciled on this is brownish yellow or ochre is a conventionalized floral allover pattern. Under the gallery ceiling a border of brown is stenciled. The ceiling under the balcony is painted this same ochre color with a floral patterned border in red and brown framing it in.



Seats in Dark Mahogany with Upholstered Backs

The seats, furnished by the American Seating Company, are of a dark mahogany color, with upholstered backs and seats of a maroon color. The boxes, arranged in four tiers, are framed in paneled pilasters of cream white color, ornamented with delicate gilt hanging garlands and festoons. The front of the boxes and balcony, which is supported on marble Doric columns, are decorated with a low relief intertwining design finished in dull gold, with the red plush brought over the edge of the top.

A brass railing nine inches high is carried along the top of this. The boxes are separated from each other by a low wood partition painted a cream white, with the red recalled on the top, bringing out the graceful curve of these divisions.

The first three tiers of boxes are treated the same. Red portieres at each box entrance, silhouetted by the low light from the passage behind, add a touch of soft color to the darkened and subdued interior.

The lighting system used is United Electric, with direct current to the machines and alternating to the house.

Lighting Fixtures in Artistic Design

The fixtures are of an artistic design and well located, producing through the manager's carefully distributed amount of light a pleasing effect. The fixtures themselves are of the hanging inverted bowl alabaster finished type. One suspended over each box and evenly distributed under the balcony ceiling. A few double-light brackets are placed on the walls at intervals under the balcony.

The switchboard, an exceptionally fine one for producing the best lighting effects, was built by the Sprague Electric Company. It is in two halves, north and south operations. Each switch has its own dimmer, except for the stage pockets.

There are 185 switches, side action type, on the board, all lights being controlled from it, except exit and front lights. The switches are arranged for carriage control, that is, all can be operated by the main switch.

Westinghouse Transformers Used

The current comes in at 520 amperes and is changed to 300 amperes by Westinghouse transformers. It is a three-wire system at 110 and 240 volts.

The heating system is indirect steam. A blower operated by an electric motor forces the air over one set of coils up to the "mushrooms," or small iron discs, placed under each seat. In connection with this heating system an adequate system of ventilation is operated, which keeps the air well tempered and pure at all times.

The projection booth is of the finest built and equipped type, with two of the latest model arc-controller Simplex, Faester Norewind machines, under the management of the chief operator, Joseph Perlman, formerly of the Vitagraph theatre.

The length of throw is 165 feet upon a muslin screen. The projection is very fine and is on 100 ampere direct current.

About ten reels are given each show, with a daily change of program, including Paramount and Triangle Features, with the famous Keystone comedies. Also the Bray cartoons, Hearst-Vitagraph News, Selig Tribune and Universal Weekly.

Four Shows with Symphony Orchestra

Four shows are given daily, with music by a symphony orchestry of fourteen pieces at each one.

The admission price for matinees is 25 cents for box seats and 15 cents for the others. At evening performances box seats are 50 cents, entire orchestra 25 cents and the balcony 15 cents. Vaudeville on Sundays is a contemplated change.

By a recent campaign of advertising a mailing list of 1,400 names has been secured, which speaks well for the management and the attractiveness of the theatre in all respects.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

Do Gleanings from Old Masters Mean a Hodgepodge?

Present Arrangements, Regardless of Care Exercised by the Musician, Must From Their Nature Be Poor—All Kinds of Music Are Linked Into a Delightfully Incoherent Mixture—Wagner Hobnobs With Friml, Lincke and Barthelemy, and Andino Strolls Arm in Arm With Beethoven, Dvorak and Brahms

By J. T. HAMMOND, JR.

"BETTER MUSIC" is the slogan of exhibitors. We have passed the stage of the cheap pianist, passed the imitation period where cows moo perfectly, yet human beings wag their jaws without uttering a murmur, and we have arrived at last at the beginning of real music for the pictures.

At present this is accomplished in four ways, viz.: by means of cue sheets, arrangements, original composition, and a mixture of arranged and original music.

The cue sheet is simply a list of the names of appropriate music to use with the picture. The time of duration of each scene is printed, together with such cues as may be necessary in assisting the performer to follow the picture.

Such a list, when used for weekly news or comedies, answers the purpose admirably, but there its usefulness ends.

The present arrangements, however carefully they may be compiled, must from their very nature be musically poor.

The arranger selects different compositions which fit the sentiment and action of the picture, uniting them with either short, ineffective modulations, or no modulations at all.

Synchronizes the Arrangement with Film

He then synchronizes the arrangement with the film by timing the film and fitting his various selections to their respective portions of the time.

Now his arrangement is complete and correct, at least as regards length and appropriate accompaniment, but what is the net musical result?

He has succeeded in linking all classes of music into one delightfully incoherent mixture. Wagner hobnobs with Friml, Lincke and Barthelemy, and Andino stroll arm in arm with Beethoven, Dvorak and Brahms; whilst poor Tschaikowski is rammed and jammed into every conceivable corner and into all sorts of company.

Lest any of the modern composers whom I have mentioned think that I aim to discredit their work, let me here openly disavow any such intention.

They are all honest, sincere men for whom I have the highest regard, but I know that they will agree with me that their music is bound to suffer by comparison with that of an entirely different type of composer, who lived in a different period.

Likewise, the works of the acknowledged maestri are distorted by the associations incurred by such a conglomeration. I cannot and must not refrain from saying, however, that great credit is due to the arrangers.

In spite of the inarticulate result that such a form must necessarily yield, they have achieved a distinct success in giving to the motion picture a recognized form of photodramatic music.

Nor is my claim of inconsistency and reflection upon the ability of men who have worked hard to further the cause of "better music for the pictures." They were confronted with the necessity of doing their best with a clumsy form, and all things considered, their efforts deserve the heartiest approval of the

Photoplay Music in Evolution

Now, however, a new type of photodramatic music is in the process of evolution. Some composers are endeavoring to write entirely original music to the pictures. Backed by the producers and exhibitors, these composers are turning out some very creditable work and are doing away with one of the faults which I have previously stated are inherent to an arrangement, i. e., the inartistic conflict of different composers.

Thus we have another advance in the right direction. But, because they are apparently shackled to the arrangement form, the main fault of that form—its lack of coherence—persists.

One very good point is being developed, however. The leit-motif, or representative theme, is being called into play in a rather crude form, and this, when properly developed, I firmly believe to be the cornerstone of all future photodramatic music.

But the problem of a continuous, coherent composition for the picture still exists. Great possibilities lie before us.

With a leit-motif as our basis, and a complete, coherent, artistic whole as our creed, it is possible that the future photomusic drama may soar high above the present legitimate music drama.

EDITOR'S NOTE.—The frank manner in which the statements in this article are made is much to be admired. Knowing that Mr. Hammond is an enthusiast for better picture music, I hesitate to take issue with him on certain points, and would ask him to consider the following a pure statement of facts, not theory, as I have found them and as I feel every musician should like them to be.

The fact of possible modulations or no modulations at all in playing picture music set together to fit the picture action on the screen, has been in discussion for years.

My personal experiences have convinced me that they are certainly not practical unless used by a one-man instrument or a one-man orchestra player, and as a means of musical betterment, they are milestones hanging about the necks of a director or musician in trying to fit them, as well as other music, to screen action.

First of all, modulations in music must be worked out according to the rules of harmony and counterpoint to be musical, and screen action never waits for rules governing music.

It is true that pianists, one-man instrument or one-man orchestra players can modulate in as short or long a time as they please, but their modulations are no better, and not more pleasing to the audience, than if they had made direct segues into succeeding numbers regardless of the key relation. There is no reason for seguing from one number to another in picture playing, unless the action on the screen suggests a new interest in the picture story.

New Musical Interest Aroused by Segue

The idea of making a segue in your music at this point is to arouse a new musical interest or to create a new temperamental suggestion to the audience, which can be done much better by

PLAN FOR YOUR ORGAN

A certain theatre owner who built what has been called "the handsomest picture theatre in America," signed the contract for his Kimball Organ on the day the company operating that particular house was incorporated.

This man wanted the architect and the organ builder to consult together and make proper provision for the organ in the original plans, without costly and time-wasting alterations. He wanted—and got—the utmost in musical quality and architectural beauty.

The modern divided electric theatre organ is more intricate than the building which contains it. To wait until the house is nearly ready for occupancy and then to stick in a "stock" instrument of some sort is an unintelligent procedure, unworthy of the men who in so short a time have built up the second greatest industry in America, and is unprofitable.

Give the organ builder a chance!

Addressing Multigraphing Printing Typewriting playing an entirely new and different number, than by continuing in the same mood, keys or relative keys, which, to say the least, becomes very tiresome to the audience after hearing it twenty or more minutes.

I personally have set pictures as tests in which each number was relative to the succeeding one in key. The criticism was, Are they playing the same number through the entire picture? We must not forget the one fact, namely, that music and the picture today must be strictly commercial if we hope to have it become a musical art in the future. When commercial picture music has become a more universal fact, we may hope that after three or five years we will see music and the picture results that will favorably compare with grand opera, and modulations will play no part in its success.

I personally admire the highly temperamental musical student, and he can have my all, but at this very moment, picture music must be a strict business proposition to create the necessary patronage for obtaining all that is possible in "Music and the Picture."

I am very sorry that you should have made a comparison of composers, for your remark does not even do justice to yourself or what an enthusiast like you can really hope for in the future.

I might mention that while the compositions of all the composers you mention show a different style, yet were they all living today, they would enjoy each other's society immensely, as well as appreciate each other's music.

It might be interesting for you to know that not more than twenty years ago very few musicians understood Wagner enough to appreciate his music.

Many of us called him an erratic person who was trying to make our ears believe that his formation in setting together tones into harmony was pleasing, and few of us believe it theoretically correct.

Today Wagnerian music is positively melodious when compared to some of the works of our modern composers. Who can tell what the next twenty years may teach us? The average picture theatre patron who pays at the box-office, wherefrom the musician is recompensed, will enjoy Friml and Lineke as much or more than Wagner and Tschaikowski. Tschaikowski is extensively used in picture playing, not because it is a Tschaikowski composition, but because his compositions are of dramatic, as well as plaintive appeal.

Commercial Facts Applied to Picture Music

The above are not meant to be criticisms of musical compōsitions, but commercial facts, as necessarily applied to picture music. Some musicians never learn the value of compositions by modern composers, adhering too closely to "book learning."

Most of the compositions of the "old masters" have no copyright protection and are consequently issued in cheap album form, and are rightfully found in a musician's home.

A slight musical research will convince any musician that there are many modern compositions ranking favorably with the best of the "old masters," even if they are suggested more or less by works of the "old masters," which is necessarily true of modern compositions.

Just as the inventor places additional patents on the same invention, as new and improved ideas occur to him, so it is possible for the modern composer to place new conceptions and revise old compositions.

Let us not be like the heathen, and worship the fathers of our profession, as they worship idols. Putting together compositions by different composers with different styles, is positively essential in picture music.

Who would care to listen for one hour and a half to the same style of music? No musical program is ever set up in this manner. Consequently, it is a relief to hear Lincke after you have heard Wagner, and Lincke does not need to be ashamed of his compositions as they are all good, and 90 per cent. of theatre audiences appreciate them.

Any musician making musical researches will tell you that the making of entirely original compositions is today next to impossible. There is no such thing as inartistic conflict of different composers unless the compositions are in themselves inferior.

As musicians, artists or otherwise, it is our duty to give our best effort to that talent which is living, if we hope to perpetuate good music. The composers that will make music and the picture a great success are still to be heard from.

Notes.—This is a picture of political as well as social intrigue. The romantic and heavy numbers should be very serious and have plenty of depth.

No. 1 should be a waltz with eight or twelve bars introduction.

When two romantic numbers follow each other, it should be remembered that the second number must be more serious than the first.

Nos. 2, 3, 4, 6, 10, 12, 13, 15 and 17 must all be slow, serious numbers having positive romantic appeals. They should be played as legato as possible.

No. 4 should be a waltz movement.

Nos. 5 and 6 should be long numbers, the two covering about twelve minutes.

No. 7 is a 4/4 intermezzo, a light descriptive number.

No. 9 is a concert waltz with a heavy dramatic introduction.

No. 11 should be a slow waltz lento, played very legato.

No. 14 is an intermezzo trot as is used for dancing. It should not be a medley number of a popular song.

No. 16 is a light 2/4 number used as a relief number for 15 and 17.

Nos. 8, 18, 19, 20, 21 and 22 are short melodramatic numbers, as are suggested in the plot.

The picture is not spectacular and can be played very nicely throughout on the organ. When orchestra is used, the third, fifth and ending of the fourth reel should always be played by orchestra.

THREE PICTURE THEATRES OPEN IN ONE WEEK AT MONTREAL, THE ST. DENIS, THE REGENT AND THE WINDSOR PHOTO PLAYS

AN epoch has occurred in the motion picture world in Montreal, by the opening of three new houses in week. Up to now there has practically only been two houses of any importance in the centre of the city, and three medium-sized houses in the great outlying portions.

The leading house has hitherto been the Imperial, and the opening of that house was undoubtedly a revelation to Montrealers and to Quebec generally. The fine business done there induced the financiers behind the concern to open a similar house in the French section of the city—Montreal being, as is generally known, divided into two sections, English and French.

The new house, which was opened last week—called the St. Denis—is even larger than the Imperial, and contains improvements based on defects which were found on the opening and running of the senior house.

The seating capacity of the new theatre is 2,700, comfortably seated, and 3,000 at a fair crush. The building is a steel framed structure of the most modern type, absolutely fireproof.

The heating and ventilation are especially effective. Big furnaces and boilers in the basement furnish the heat. Air from the roof is brought down to the basement, where it is washed and sterilized and passed over highly heated coils into chambers under the floor of the auditorium, and up through conveyances to the gallery.

Through gratings in the floors this heated and sterilized air is delivered to the audience, and then it is drawn out and "restored to nature." In the summer the same process is used, except that instead of this selected and washed air being heated, the coils over which it is passed are cooled by ice.

In the auditorium itself the architects have used a free interpretation of the Adam style, depending chiefly upon a color scheme to emphasize the decorative effects, instead of using the familiar plaster figures. The result proved admirable, and was beautifully carried out by the lighting scheme, which embodied the latest ideas in the use of concealed lighting, both in the domes and around the proscenium arch.

The use of these lighting effects has proved valuable with the pictures. The theatres embodies all the new ideas in theatres. The organ is the most remarkable of the instruments yet set up in Montreal.

All electrically operated, it has keys that will represent sixty-four different musical instruments, and its touch is lighter than that of a piano. Unusual care has also been made for the comfort of the audience in the way of waiting rooms and other conveniences.

This is especially evident in provision for the comforts of ladies. There are well furnished waiting rooms on both floors, with every accessory the feminine toilet might need. For the men there are, of course, smoking rooms. The whole effect of the theatre is that of a modern amusement house with everything that an audience could call for, while the stage is equipped for a full theatrical production, being 38 by 80 feet.

The second house is the Regent theatre, built by the Independent Aumusement Company, Ltd., which operates two other theatres, one the Strand, being hitherto the second best in the city.

The Regent, built in one of the suburban parts of the city, embodies all the latest ideas in theatre construction. It has a seating capacity of 1,200 and the seats are all of the very newest and most comfortable design.

Special emphasis has been placed on the ventilation, the proprietors of the Regent believing in safeguarding the health as well as catering to the comfort of their patrons.

The balcony is ventilated independently of the main floor and a continuous circulation of air is maintained, all the air in the house being changed every two minutes, it is estimated.

For use during the summer months a modern cooling system has been installed, by which the air will pass through ice chambers of the most perfect construction.

The third house is the Windsor Photo Plays. This house is situated close to the big C. P. R. station, but is not a new building.

It is a church converted into a theatre, and holds over 1,000 seats. This is the second church in the city to be converted into a moving picture house.

The remodelling has been done so well, however, that there is very little except the Gothic part of the roof which conveys any idea as to the purpose for which the building was originally built.

Artistic decorations, palms and a very clever orchestra of several pieces make the Windsor Photo Plays a really most entertaining house.

One novelty has been put into force and that is the attiring of all the girl ushers in Puritan costumes. Entertainment to the press and their friends was given at the St. Denis, and at the Regent on the opening nights. These large houses should help to relieve the congestion that has been in evidence for sometime among the exchanges.

PALMER AMUSEMENT COMPANY TAKES OVER THE THEATO, WASHINGTON, INDIANA, AND WILL SHOW FEATURES

THE Palmer Amusement Company, owner and operator of the Grand Opera House, at Washington, Ind., has taken over the Theato, which was closed a few weeks ago when a trustee was appointed by the court to dispose of the holdings. The purchase price was not given.

Hereafter nothing but feature programs will be shown at the Theato. The Paramount program will be shown two nights each week; Pathé Gold Rooster, one; World, one; Equitable, one; Fox, one; and Metro, one.

The theatre was completely overhauled and redecorated before the opening, on Sunday March 6. The company has obtained a five-year lease on the building from Henry Backes, the owner. The ventilation system also has been rearranged. The admission price will be ten cents.

Since the Palmer company bought the Theato the policy of the Grand theatre has been changed materially. It will be turned into a five and ten-cent house. Varied programs of four reels will be shown and vaudeville will be carried as herebefore.

The company has filed a petition in the circuit court, asking the privilege of changing the name to the O'Donnell-Eskridge Amusement Company. L. Hugh O'Donnell was president of the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors League last year.

KAHN AND GREENFIELD ERECTING THEATRE NEAR MISSION DOLORES, SAN FRANCISCO

THE New Mission theatre, being erected in the Mission District of San Francisco, by the Kahn and Greenfield Circuit, and designed to be its finest house, will be ready for occupancy in April, according to the present plans.

The furnishings of this house will be of the highest order and it is stated that the operating room, where four machines will be installed, will be the finest in any house in the country.

This theatre takes its name from the old Mission Dolores, founded in 1776, and still standing a few blocks from this new house.

BOEHRINGER, OWNER OF COLUMBIA AMUSEMENT AND MANAGER OF TRIANGLE THEATRE AND EXCHANGE IN NEW ORLENAS, WILL ERECT $200,000 PICTURE THEATRE

New Orleans, La., March 11.

ERNST BOEHRINGER, owner of the Columbia Amusement Company, manager of the Triangle theatre and of the Triangle exchange, has leased property in Saint Charles street, now occupied by the Victoria Hotel, upon which will be erected a moving picture theatre to represent an investment of $200,000.

The lease is for fifteen years at a rental of $120,000. Thirty thousand dollars will be expended by the owners of the property and $50,000 by Mr. Boehringer.

The house will seat from 1,500 to 1,800, and will be the last word in motion picture palaces, embracing a number of ideas which Mr. Boehringer secured after a trip through European capitals. Work on construction probably will not begin until late fall

"Although the investment is considerable," said Mr. Boehringer, who controls two houses in New Orleans with a combined seating capacity of 2,500, "it is not too much, considering the big future that motion pictures have in the South. This is the era of big things in motion pictures.

"For the life of me, I cannot see why exhibitors in this territory, or any other, for that matter, can build little old three hundred or four hundred seat houses.

"At the best, they can't pack more than a couple of handfuls of people in their houses, and when a big feature is on, the patrons are discommoded. Any such small-minded exhibitor is bound to hurt himself."

Mr. Boehringer came here less than a year ago, and his activities have precipitated an unprecedented era of theatre construction in New Orleans.

As predicted in these columns, Mr. Boehringer is doing more for the good of the business in New Orleans than almost any other exhibitor, and his aggressive tactics in the face of opposition have aroused the admiration of even his rivals.

AUDITORIUM SEATING 2,500 IS PLANNED FOR PICTURES IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

ACCORDING to announcements from the Federal Amusement Company, a new motion picture house will soon be erected in the Capital City with a capacity of 2,500, to be located on Fourteenth and Irving streets, in the residential section of the city.

The agents for the company are G. L. Stabler and R. W. Power, and a large tract of land has been purchased for the purpose.

Plans for the building are in the hands of Horace W. Peaslee. The house will contain a balcony and will have all modern fire-proof improvements.

A unique feature of the building will be its roof garden, where open air shows will be given in the summer months. A moving stairway will lead to it. This will be built on the Spanish pergola style with lattices, garden effects and arbor structures artistically arranged. Here space will be provided for the serving of refreshments as well as a promenade for patrons.

It is stated that work will be begun next month and the house will be ready for occupation early in the fall. Big feature productions will compose the program with an admission of ten cents.

A CAMPAIGN FOR PROPER THEATRE LIGHTING IS INAUGURATED BY THE FEDERAL SIGN COMPANY

THE Federal Sign Company, Lake and Desplaines streets, Chicago, Illinois, has entered into a campaign to bring about proper exterior theatre lighting.

It is a known fact that the majority of the theatres throughout the country are poorly illuminated, whereas if this feature were properly taken care of, it would be one of the greatest assets which any house could possibly have.

Just as the exterior of a restaurant indicates to a large extent the quality of the food to be obtained within, so the exterior of a theatre gives a very good idea of the class of productions one is apt to see on the program.

LYRIC, CHATTANOOGA, TENN., WILL BE TORN DOWN AND $75,000 THEATRE ERECTED ON THE SITE

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 10.

PLANS are under consideration by the Signal Amusement Company for the erection at the corner of Sixth and Market streets of a motion picture theatre to cost approximately $75,000.

The Lyric theatre, which stands on the site of the proposed structure, will be torn down within a short while. The Lyric is Chattanooga's oldest amusement house. For some time it was used as a motion picture house, but was recently closed.

It is understood that work on the new theatre building will be begun by May 1. The theatre will probably be thrown open to the public by the first of the year.

It will be one of the most imposing as well as up-to-date houses in the South. The structure will be of steel. Paramount pictures will be shown at the new theatre, which will be known as the Empire.

Extensive improvements are planned by the same company, principal among which is the enlargement of the seating capacity of the company's theatres.

The Alcazar, which now seats seven hundred people, will be enlarged so that it will accommodate 1,600. The seating capacity of the Picto will be enlarged to seven hundred.

The name of this house will be changed to the Alhambra, and when the improvements are completed the Alhambra theatre will be closed.

The seating capacity of the Colonial will be enlarged to eight hundred. These proposed improvements will be completed as soon as possible.

Practically all the downtown motion picture theatres are now under the management of the Signal Amusement Company.

A high grade line of features is being shown at these houses. The company advertises extensively in the daily papers.

LINCOLN, IN MISHAWAKA, IND., WILL PUT ON TRIANGLE, PARAMOUNT AND METRO FEATURES

THE Lincoln theatre, formerly the Princess theatre, at Mishawaka, Ind., which has been remodeled and redecorated, reopened recently with "Pennington's Choice."

The theatre is owned by George Senger, of Mishawaka, and John J. Berscheit, of Aurora, Ill., who have expended considerable money in making the changes.

The house is one hundred feet long and twenty-five feet wide. The seating capacity has been enlarged to 410. The curtain has been moved back and an orchestra pit built, into which has been moved the Bartola from the Century theatre.

The operating room has been changed and is now of tile and brick, and is absolutely fireproof. Two new modern machines and a new curtain have been installed. Special attention has been paid to a new ventilating system, whereby fresh air in the right quantities is at all times assured.

The decorations include plaster composition relief in panels. The color scheme is in old ivory and Tiffany effects.

Appropriate to the name Lincoln, the colors on the canopy are red, white and blue. The electric sign is nine feet long, bearing the name Lincoln, which is studded with hundreds of lights in the national colors.

The Lincoln will show Triangle, Paramount and Metro features, and the admission prices have been raised to ten cents for adults and five cents for children.

The Century theatre will be closed four nights in the week, being open on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, with vaudeville and an orchestra. The other nights will be used for occasional road shows and stock.

When this feature has been showing for four minutes, that is to say, after section "A" has been filling for twenty minutes, incomers are diverted to section "B"; while the patron seated in "A" sees the picture story through to the end without interruption.

The introductory reel has during the four minutes above noted been transferred to the projector showing on screen "B" which patrons in section "B" now see as did the patrons in section "A," and so on for "C" and "D" and back to "A" again.

Seated Patrons Not Annoyed by Others Passing

It will be noted that after patrons are diverted from one section to the next, those in the first section will from that time on be entirely free from the usual annoyance of others passing in front of them and may thus concentrate their attention on the beauties of the play without distraction.

At the end of the picture story shown in section "A," for instance, that portion of the audience is requested by notice on the screen to exit, for which purpose four minutes is allowed.

That leaves section "A" free to fill again, enabling the proprietor to get the maximum earning out of each seat; since he eliminates all those who ordinarily sit through more than one performance.

The elimination of the proscenium arch and stage and the rendering unnecessary the usual convergence of the seats toward the stage allows a larger number of seats in a given floor area than is possible with the usual type of theatre, every one of which is as good as the best seats in other theatres.

Red dead-lights in the floor of aisles of any section are turned on when that section is being filled or emptied to facilitate movement and still not interfere with patrons' vision.

All sections are provided simultaneously with subdued music from an organ to cover the usual audience noises.

The absence of an orchestra will readily be accepted by the audience because of its evident impracticability, and the consequent saving of expense will not be unwelcome to the management.

This description presumes the use of reels of the self-rewinding type, with three operators and six projecting machines.

New Type of Reel Devised

A new type of reel has been devised which will reduce both the number of operators and machines. Since a patent has not yet been granted on this reel, further description at this time would be premature.

It is not contended that the Vis-a-Vis type of theatre is superior to all others under all conditions.

It is claimed, however, that for a down-town, drop-in house, nothing can approach it, and the fact that it is covered by a broad patent makes it controllable from a central authority.

This last point is by no means the least, since a certain standard for all Vis-a-Vis theatres throughout the country can be maintained and enforced to the great advantage of both the proprietors thereof and the general public.

THE IMMORTAL FLAME

An IVAN FILM Play presenting the celebrated artiste

Maude Fealy

with

PAULA SHAY (The Mary Garden of the Screen) and a Broadway Star Cast in a 5-act screen epic written and directed by Ivan Abramson, "Filmdom's Master Craftsman"

What the critics say of "The Immortal Flame"

Lynde Denig in "The Moving Picture World"—" 'The Immortal Flame,' in common with other pictures made by Mr. Abramson, possesses an emotional force and a sensational quality always effective with devotees of melodrama. . . . Profiting by a long screen experience, Miss Fealy acts every scene for all it is worth, and the last reel gives an astounding exhibition of physical daring."

Oscar Cooper in "Motion Picture News"—"We think Mr. Abramson deserves a good deal of credit for working out his story to its logical conclusion. . . . This has not a little to do with the final 'strong' effect of the picture. . . . We should say that Mr. Abramson's work and Miss Fealy's acting contribute about equally to the value of the picture."

George W. Graves in "Motography"—"The story is interesting and the settings and photography are good. Miss Fealy's acting is a prominent feature of the picture and it shows earnest and effective effort."

Released in March through the most thorough distributing system extant.

PICTURES WHICH CHALLENGE NATURE'S FIERCEST FORCES

SNOW-BOUND Washington!—country of blizzards and blockades!—mercury touching bottom!—small community!—country patronage!

What more difficult test of their drawing powers could moving pictures have? Yet witness the report of Big Four's showing in the town of Sequim.

> "Last night's film enthusiastically received by large-sized crowd. V-L-S-E features deserve all credit for bringing out people with weather conditions at their worst. Terrific cold, snow and wind. All irrigation systems frozen and country folk beside themselves as to how to water stock, yet came long distances to see your picture."—J. E. Musgrave, Mgr. Olympic Theatre, Sequim, Wash.

And then to parallel this achievement in Northwestern Minnesota, land of bitter gales and biting cold, with the thermometer ten below zero:

V. L. S. E., Inc.

Gentlemen:

Enjoyed fine business last Sunday in spite of the extremely bad weather. In the evening the thermometer registered 10 below zero and a stiff northwest gale whirled the fine snow that had fallen during the day into a raging blizzard.

In spite of this, however, four young ladies and their escort, all good picture judges, made the drive in a bob-sleigh from Glenville (eight miles south) to Albert Lea, just to see our show. When they reached the theater, they were too cold to remove their own wraps, but after seeing the picture, they said it was worth all the discomfort to which they had been subjected, and started on the home trip, vowing they would be willing to do the same thing over again for so enjoyable an evening.

I consider this the greatest compliment ever indirectly paid a picture in my house, and cannot refrain from passing it along to you.

Yours very truly,

Valleau

Instances of the drawing power of V-L-S-E releases in every clime and under all conditions, might be multiplied tiresomely. In Dayton, Wash., for instance the American Theatre reports that "with the mercury two below zero, doors opened at 7:00 o'clock. At 7:30 'S. R. O.' Admission twenty-five cents. Box office records broken at 8:40." Suffice it here, however, to suggest that if you seek attractions of proved profit-making value, you would do well to consult the nearest V-L-S-E exchange.

We are always ready to help you help yourself

ST. LOUIS, MO

V-L-S-E, Inc.

New York City.

Gentlemen:

I have been in the motion picture business in St. Louis eight years. I opened with the V-L-S-E service in the latter part of July--the first features shown at my house at advanced prices.

I have been using the service from the V-L-S-E regularly each week since, and find it satisfactory to myself and to my patrons--in fact after carefully reviewing all the features on the market at the present time, I consider the V-L-S-E ahead of the best of them.

The advanced prices which V-L-S-E bring, being very profitable, I am now considering a regular two a week V-L-S-E program--in this way using V-L-S-E's entire output.

It is also always a pleasure to me to be instrumental in securing new accounts for the V-L-S-E.

Very truly yours,

D. T. Williams

Gentlemen:

I take great pleasure in expressing my appreciation in regard to your wonderful pictures. I have used a number of them, and can frankly say that they are unquestionably the most popular pictures I show my patrons.

I am glad to say that V-L-S-E features have increased my business and show a big profit on the days that I have used them.

I am always glad at any time to give my assistance in helping to place the Big Four at the top.

We consider your productions in a class by themselves and feel that we cannot do business without them.

Yours very truly,

Rochester, Pa., February 17th

I have shown your picture, "THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" for three days and have done a tremendous business. I turned people away afternoon and evening for the admission of twenty-five, thirty-five and fifty cents. It is the greatest picture of the age.

I have also used your service over since the company has been in business in Pittsburgh, and have been absolutely satisfied with it in every respect.

I am sending, by the next mail, a photograph of the crowds waiting to get in for matinee performance.

Let Us Have Unity!

THE following expression of opinion is so timely and so fully in accord with the views of this publication that we give it without further comment.

We wish only to preface it with a news fact: The Board of trade has tendered to the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League an offer of twenty-five per cent. of the net proceeds of its trade show to be held in New York City May 6-13; also, the Board of Trade has given its unqualified endorsement of the national convention of the M. P. E. L. of America, to be held in Chicago July 11-16.

And now we let an exhibitor speak:

My Dear Mr. Johnston:

I am pleased to give you herewith my opinion why it is the best policy, good business, very urgent and necessary that every State Exhibitors' League, the National Exhibitors' League and the Motion Picture Board of Trade co-operate in every way. It seems to me, in view of past experiences, for the sake of doing a service for all, those little petty differences that come up should be eliminated. As long as we keep going to the mat there is no hope of any real progress. Very cordially yours,

(Signed) F. J. Rembusch,
Pres. Indiana Exhibitors' League, Exhibitors' Vice-Pres.
Motion Picture Board of Trade.

"ABOUT six years ago the first organization of motion picture interests on a national scale was brought about by the formation at that time, in Cleveland, Ohio, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America

"Those of us who were present were at once inspired with the wonderful possibilities of a national motion picture organization. We felt that the power, the profit, the betterment and uplift to ourselves and the entire moving picture industry, to be gained by an organization of exhibitors, would be well worth the necessary labor and sacrifice. We can still see all of this today, but in looking back we certainly must realize that we have failed to do many of the big things we then hoped for and anticipated doing.

"LET me say the motion picture industry owes a debt of gratitude to those who first worked for motion picture organization. The Lord only knows what might have happened without this pioneer work. These men spread the idea of organization; encouraged the thought of co-operation; laid the foundation which we should benefit by. Their work should never be forgotten, and it is for us to lend a helping hand and go on with it.

"WHY HAVE WE FAILED TO DO THE BIG THINGS? First, last, and always because that organization, and all other organizations of motion picture interests since, have been too clannish and narrow in their views.

"It is not practical or feasible that exhibitors shall dictate, nor manufacturers and exchanges command. Nothing but chaos can result in either event.

"If either proposition were possible when exhibitors had the upper hand they would arbitrarily ruin the film manufacturers and exchanges, and the manufacturers and exchanges would ruin the business of exhibiting if they had command of the situation.

"BUT, IT CAN'T BE DONE. It is as impossible for any branch of the industry to control itself completely, or other branches of the industry, by means of force or command, as it would be for one man to control the air we all breathe. The reason is this—it is so very, very easy to break into the business either as a producer or exhibitor.

"Look the fact straight in the face. Any hod-carrier, butcher, undertaker, high-brow or low-brow, can go into either end of the business without the least bit of previous experience and knowledge. Take a camera and go to it, and you are a producer—put up a machine and a screen and you are an exhibitor.

"Let me give you two concrete examples. A little over a year ago most of us ran regular service, and we believed that regular service companies had the business sewed up forever. Almost over-night there was enough multiple reel feature service to go around, and regular service went begging. Who can tell—six months from today feature service may be begging and regular service in great demand.

"Here is another instance that has happened a thousand times or more to my knowledge. Mr. Exhibitor has a nice business; making money; has hopes for the future rainy day. A new show shop opens in his town, and over-night he is deprived of a living and is digging in his pocket. There is no business in the world so easy to get into and so hard to get out of.

"OUR GREATEST EVIL IS SENSELESS COMPETITION IN EVERY BRANCH. Manufacturers of film are making less money, in fact it would be better stated by saying they are losing more money, than any time in the history of the business. And so are the exhibitors.

"On one hand the manufacturers are bidding for performers and elaborating on productions until they must raise the price of film service where it is prohibitive for the exhibitor to pay the price.

"On the other hand, the exhibitors are increasing in number; there are so many shows who run so many reels of film that the public is overfed with pictures. We are up against the most potent factor of any business, 'the law of supply and demand.'

"People spend as much money, and even more, for pictures than they did, but they don't spend enough to keep up with the prices for service, the much larger investments in the business everywhere, the increased number of theatres and seating capacity.

"THE CURE IS STOPPAGE OF WASTES AND HIGHER EFFICIENCY. If the terrific waste in the business could be eliminated millions and millions could be saved. If there were greater efficiency in handling and marketing film, and if exhibitors would run their shows with a view of good business policy, and to satisfy the natural demand of the people for pictures, and quit trying to put their competitor out of business—by running so many reels one day that the people don't want to see pictures for several days after—there would be more business and more money for everybody.

VOL. XIII April 1, 1916. No. 13

Let Us Have Unity!

"Can an organization of exhibitors do this alone? No. Neither can an organization of manufacturers alone accomplish much good for the business as a whole. Both must work together in perfect harmony.

"THE WAY TO WORK TOGETHER IS TO WORK TOGETHER. Now, inasmuch as it is impossible to control this business by force or command (a silly idea that should be forever thrown into the scrap heap), our only hope remains in education; in exchange of ideas; in organization on the very broadest lines.

"Our only hope to down censorship; to uplift and better the business; to cut out senseless competition; is for all parts of the industry to work together in harmony, but somehow motion picture interests are the hardest to organize and stay put after they are organized.

"Bakers, candle-stick makers, bill posters, all have organizations that are strong and work together. But we don't because we won't.

"We fail to see farther than the end of our own nose, when prosperity is within the reach of a fraternal hand clasp. If we could only get the idea that any and every kind of organization of motion picture interests is a stepping stone to the progress and best interest of all when working together, the big things we want to do would soon come about.

"THE big things we want to do can only be accomplished in one way—'BY THE MOTION PICTURE BOARD OF TRADE AND THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA WORKING TOGETHER.'

And why not? Give one reason why they shouldn't! There are a thousand reasons why they should. Look at the facts! Gaze on past history! Every time trouble comes up in the way of a censorship fight, on every occasion of the betterment and uplift of the business, every branch of the industry had to work together.

"Our interests are so identical that we can't solve any of the problems that ail us without all branches working together. We have been coming to it for years—why not go right up to it now?

"Being a member of both organizations (President of the Indiana State Exhibitors' League and Exhibitors' Vice-President of the Motion Picture Board of Trade), I know that both stand for the same thing—the betterment and good of the business. Why scatter our forces when we could, like a great army and navy branch of the same industry, defeat the outside enemy and quiet the inside turmoil?

"AT the hearing of the Federal Censorship bill before the Congressional Committee on Education and Labor, Mr. Fred J. Herrington, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and Mr. J. Stuart Blackton, president of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, stood shoulder to shoulder fighting this great evil.

"Here were two men, representing the two great branches of the industry, working together for the common good of all. If we had all been thoroughly organized, and every part of the industry worked together in harmony, I believe Federal censorship would now be a thing of the past.

"It seems that at least on censorship we should all see alike and I had begun to believe that at last we had found one common idea where the entire force of all motion picture interests could be united. But our dreams were shattered because on the last round some of the film companies who are new in the business, for some unaccountable reasons, came in with a counter proposition in favor of Federal censorship. Here we have real progress retarded by misapprehension.

"LEGALIZED CENSORSHIP IS MISUNDERSTOOD. Motion picture censorship at first glance seems to be all right, but the more you study it the more you see the danger and the evil of it. Going back over the years since the inception of pictures I find that every year the pictures have been raised to a higher standard of morals, ethics, and cleanliness, so that the pictures today are of such a high standard generally that there is absolutely no complaint from our best citizens or from moral welfare people who are really and truly sincere. This has not occurred through force or legalized censorship but entirely through the efforts of motion picture interests themselves.

"AT the Federal hearing I heard Dr. Craft say '75 per cent. of the pictures are bad and 25 per cent. are very bad.' He criticized pictures because they had smoking scenes in them, as if it was immoral to smoke. He said all motion pictures should be suppressed.

"He then slips right around and tells us that just as soon as the Federal censorship law is enacted he is going into the motion picture business. We will then have his kind of pictures and the pictures will be in the schools, the Y. M. C. A.'s and the churches on Sunday, and Dr. Craft will have everything to say, presumably, —what shall go over and what shall not. Only Craft pictures can be shown.

"The above is no exaggeration—it is a matter of record—then, why in the name of good business sense alone, can anyone connected with the business line up with Dr. Craft who tells you openly he is going into the film business at both ends? If he could have the power of controlling the film situation we had just as well all go out of business.

"I am not saying that this will come to pass because I am more optimistic in the good sense of people. I am positively in favor of no censorship. If there are any pictures unfit or unclean we must be the judge as we have been in the past.

"TO DO THE BIG THINGS WE NEED BROAD VISION ON THE PART OF EVERYONE. Individually and as organizations we must get away from our selfish, clannish ideas because individually we don't amount to a row of pins. Collectively, with all of the motion picture industry working together, we are the mightiest force in the universe. Collectively we can command, we can educate. We are more potent, powerful and influential than pulpit or press. Alone we are just five or six feet of dust, to be blown about and trampled on by every grafter or fanatic that comes along the line.

"It is time we are doing the big things and quit dreaming about them. Mr. Big Exhibitor, who won't take any part in organization work—you are the one that is holding us back. Mr. Manu-

Hearing on Towner Bill May be Held in Few Days

Judge Hughes, Not Favoring Measure Approved by Motion Picture Board of Trade, and Keeping an Eye on Necessity of Providing for Political Henchmen, Employs His Waking Moments in Framing Bill Designed to Give Needy Politicians $8,000 and $7,500 Salaries

Washington, D. C., March 18.

HEARINGS on the Towner bill amending Section 245 of the Federal Penal Code as suggested by Motion Picture News to place motion pictures plainly within the scope of the present law forbidding the mailing and interstate shipment of objectionable printed matter and pictures may be held within the next few days by the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives.

J. W. Binder, secretary of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, has conferred with the chairman of that committee and the author of the bill, and an effort will be made to have it reported to the House of Representatives with the recommendation that it be enacted into law.

Mr. Binder told these gentlemen that the film manufacturers of the United States are in favor of the Towner bill and will endorse the measure.

An effort is being made to substitute this bill for the Hughes measure which would establish a Government bureau of censorship.

As has often been pointed out, this would be far more desirable than the censorship of films and would readily bring about the same results that would be obtained by Congressman Adamson's proposed board.

Judge Hughes is hard at work getting his committee into line to favorably report within the next few days what is to be termed a "committee bill" providing for the appointment by the President of five men to serve as censors.

Censor Chairman at $8,000 a Year

One of these will be selected as chairman at $8,000 a year, while the others will receive compensation at the rate of $7,500 per annum.

These salaries are somewhat higher than those proposed in the original Hughes bill, which also provided for but three censors, and the change is to conform to the opinions advanced by the advocates of his measure.

The term of office of these men is to be for six years, except when the board is first constituted, one of them will serve the entire period, two will remain for four years and the other two will serve two years before being reappointed or their successors chosen.

To meet this and other expenses that will occur in the formation of the board, the sum of $90,000 is to be appropriated, but thereafter the board will be self-supporting for the manufacturers are to be charged at the rate of two dollars per thousand feet of film, with twenty-five cents for each copy of an original.

Probably to appease the manufacturers there is a clause that this fee may be reduced at the expiration of six months after the law gets into working order, if this is deemed desirable by the commission.

But if it is like the usual Government activities, the probability is that the cost will go up, regardless of the sum it may be paid.

Naturally, the members of the commission will not be allowed to engage in any other business—they will not have to with the salaries they are to receive—and they may be relieved from their duties if found unfit.

Washington is to be honored as the headquarters of the proposed commission for as a division of the Bureau of Education of the Department of the Interior, its main office will be in the National Capital.

But the commissioners may, in their discretion, establish branches in other cities, under the supervision of one of their number or of deputy commissioners. At each of these offices it will be possible to secure licences.

Objectional Methods Loom Up

The bill is to go into effect thirty days after being signed by the President and if application is made within a stated time thereafter, such films as are already in existence, probably subject to certain restrictions, will be licensed without charge.

Department store methods of an undesirable type are to be employed in the conduct of the business of the commission. Where there is a refusal to license a film the two dollars per one thousand fee which must accompany the application will not be returned to the depositor but a "due bill" will be granted cashable in connection with the next application.

The Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia will be greatly overworked with film cases should this bill be enacted into law, judging from the outcome in some of the states, for it is to that judicial body that appeals from the decisions of the commission are to be taken.

An appeal may be taken from the decision of a single commissioner to the full commission, the decision of a majority of the commission being final with respect to it, and then, finally, to the court designated.

Each film passed will be given a serial number and this must be shown as a part of the principle title of such film. No film or films will be allowed to be shipped in the District of Columbia or the territories of the United States or from one to the other, or from or to any state in interstate commerce unless the same shall first have been reviewed by the commission, except in the case of positives sent from one point to another by the manufacturer, probably for reprinting or to the commission for review, and failure to live up to this provision means fines and imprisonment for the guilty persons, and the confiscation of the films. The fines go up to as high as $1,000 and the prison term is a year.

Where a permit is refused, it may later be granted if it is made to conform to the ideas of the commission by the elimination of the part or parts to which objection has been raised.

Bull and prize fights are to be barred; no other mention is made of action that will be deemed to be objectionable, that being left to the commission in the formulation of rules and regulations.

The making of these latter will not be accomplished overnight and should the bill be passed chaos would result while the members of the commission were endeavoring to arrive at what would be "safe" to pass.

Of course, there is the provision that obscene, indecent, immoral, inhuman, or films that will incite to crime and lower the morals of the people shall be licensed.

Copies of the bill that the committee is working upon are not yet obtainable, but it is known that the above facts are covered therein.

There is a great deal of satisfaction in knowing that even this bill has slight chances of being enacted into law.

President Wilson, it is reported, has mapped out the course which he desires Congress to pursue and with several very important bills not yet acted upon, and a large number of other bills also pending, in all probability Congress will adjourn without giving more than a passing thought to this weighty matter with which Judge Hughes is so badly involved.

It is generally conceded that Judge Hughes is very earnest in his endeavors to cleanse the country of immorality insofar as motion pictures at least are concerned, but there are those of our people who have often wondered why the Judge voted against the passage of the child labor bill, which will have its effect largely in the South, they believing that the conservation of morals is more largely involved in this. Children in the mills is a blot on the South.

"H-V" WEEKLY SHOWS MURDERED AMERICANS AT COLUMBUS, NEW MEXICO

The Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial, No. 21, contains views of incidents in connection with the recent Villa raid on Columbus, N. M. A portion of the town is shown in flames, and the dead and wounded, as they lay in the streets, are disclosed.

The cameraman also obtained a view of the American troopers in pursuit of the enemy, and an engagement of the opposing forces.

OVEY PLAYS A CHINAMAN IN "THE SMUGGLERS"

The Horsley Cub Comedy Company is filming "The Smugglers," in which George Ovey appears in a new characterization—that of a Chinaman. In this disguise he aids the revenue officers to discover opium smugglers.

Harry Brown, formerly electrician at the Universal and Keystone studios, has been engaged in that capacity by David Horsley.

MABEL NORMAND WILL REMAIN WITH TRIANGLE

Mabel Normand will continue as one of the players producing pictures for the Triangle Film Corporation.

Miss Normand, March 17, affixed her signature to a contract with the New York Picture Corporation, one of the corporate factors of the Triangle Film Corporation.

For the present, Miss Normand will continue as a member of the Keystone company, producing this unique class of comedy at Fort Lee, N. J.

Whether or not Miss Normand's activities will take a larger field later in the season has not yet been determined.

There have been rumors to the effect that the popular comedienne would be found a member of another organization. Miss Normand has definitely set at rest these unauthorized rumors in the manner noted above.

Miss Normand will in all likelihood be seen with Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle in a new comedy the latter is preparing for in the Fort Lee studio.

LEON GAUMONT HERE TO CONFER WITH MUTUAL PRESIDENT

Desiring to confer with John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, and also to inspect his American properties, Leon Gaumont, head of the Societie des Etablissements Gaumont, Paris, France, arrived in New York March 15.

Before the war it was Mr. Gaumont's custom to visit America annually. This is his first visit since the beginning of hostilities.

As the Gaumont company has begun to release through the Mutual Film Corporation since Mr. Gaumont was last here, he wished to meet President Freuler and other officials of the company with which he is now affiliated.

When asked for an interview Mr. Gaumont replied that he preferred to make no statement until he had visited his winter studio at Jacksonville, Fla., and also had had the opportunity to acquaint himself with American conditions at first hand.

HUTCHINSON DIVIDES TIME BETWEEN STUDIOS IN SANTA BARBARA AND LOS ANGELES

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 17.

President S. S. Hutchinson of the American Company, who is now on the Coast, is dividing his time between the studios at Santa Barbara and Los Angeles.

A number of innovations and improvements are being introduced at both places, and the semi-weekly trips enable the president to keep in close touch with all producing organizations.

GAUMONT ASKING FOR THREE-REEL SCENARIOS

George D. Proctor, scenario editor of the Gaumont Company, announces that he will gladly consider strong three-reel scenarios. These must be modern in theme and with unusual dramatic interest. The scenario department is at the Gaumont headquarters, Flushing, N. Y.

Northwest Canadian Exhibitors Form Circuit

Each Theatre Manager Is Quoted Price for Franchise Covering His City and the Figure Is His Pro Rata Share of Total Expense Regardless of Revenue from the Service

Special to Motion Picture News

Vancouver, B. C., March 17.

W. P. DEWEES, manager of the Rex theatre in Vancouver, B.C., returned recently from a trip to Montreal, taken for the purpose of settling details with E. A. Fenton, Triangle distributor for Canada, regarding the distribution rights in the four Western provinces, which are now to be taken over by the National Film Service, in which Mr. Dewees is also interested.

Mr. Dewees outlined to the News correspondent the details of the plan on which the new exchange is to be conducted, and which are believed here to be unique in their application to the film business.

Mr. Dewees, Mr. Nichols, of the Globe theatre, in Vancouver, and Mr. Schuberg, of the Province, in Winnipeg, the three men forming the distributing company, have simply elected to form a circuit, conducted for the mutual benefit of all houses embraced by it, including, of course their own.

One house in each town is to be awarded the Triangle franchise, with the preference given to exhibitors who are now using V-L-S-E service, which is also being handled by the same agency.

Each exhibitor is to be quoted a price for the franchise covering his city, and this price will simply be his pro rata share of the total expense of handling the film throughout the territory without regard to the possible revenue to be derived from the service.

This, says Mr. Dewees, is not the object of the combination, and no effort will be made to induce one exhibitor to bid against another house in the same city.

If the house already associated with the National Film Service, through its V-L-S-E productions, desires to put in the Triangle program as well, it will receive the franchise, notwithstanding the fact that a competing manager might offer a much higher price for it.

The advantages to be gained from such a combination, condutced in such a manner as to bind the houses as closely together as possible, and as permanently as possible, will easily be seen.

The organization will be in a position to handle big productions and even other programs, in a big way, and on a definite cash basis, with at all times an exact knowledge of just what the circuit can afford to offer for anything it desires to use.

Mr. Dewees reports that exhibitors are quick to see the advantages to be gained through such a combination, and first-class houses in all the Western territory are being taken in.

The houses at present comprised in the circuit are as follows: Rex, in Vancouver; Globe, in Vancouver; Royal Victoria, in Victoria; Strand, in Calgary; Empress, in Edmonton; Province, in Winnipeg; Bijou, in Winnipeg; Rose, in Regina, Sask.; Savoy, in Moose Jaw, Sask; Daylight, in Saskatoon, Sask.; Empress, in Prince Albert, Sask.; Empress, in Kamloops, B. C.; Edison, in New Westminster B C.; Empire, in Brandon, Man.

Want Lower Freight Rates on Picture Machinery

Tariff on Shipments from the East Is from Two to Two and a Half Times Higher Than First Class Freight Rate for All Kinds of Other Machinery

Los Angeles, March 17.

PLANS for a nation-wide campaign to secure reduction in freight rates on motion picture machinery and accessories shipped from eastern cities to Pacific Coast points, were made at the regular bi-weekly meeting of the California committee of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, held Thursday evening, March 9, at the Stowell Hotel.

Reports submitted to the committee showed that the tariff on motion picture machinery to be from two to two and a half times higher than the first class freight rate, which applies to all kinds of machinery, and almost three times as high as that granted for phonographs and similar machines.

Thorough investigation of the discrimination and the gathering of data regarding rates is being taken care of by a committee composed of J. C. Jessen, representative, Motion Picture News; M. G. Jonas, publicity department Universal City; and Kenneth McGaffey, head of publicity department of the Lasky studio.

Reports will be made at the next meeting, then steps will be taken to induce the manufacturers to take part, and the matter will be turned over to the executive secretary J. W. Binder, who will then refer it to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Plans for a membership campaign were discussed and a contest will be participated in by the fifteen members of the California Committee, and a prize consisting of a fifty dollar loving cup will be awarded the member securing the greatest membership.

The committee also made plans for the protection of coast members of the board with regard to various solicitations for charity advertising, etc.

A committee was appointed composed of William E. Wing, Kenneth O'Hara, Kenneth, McGaffey, Bennie Ziedman, and Carlyle Robinson to act as censor on all propositions put up to members of the board that are referred to the committee.

This was the first meeting of the California Committee since it was enlarged from one of five members to one of fifteen. All the new members took an active part in the matters of the board, and the increase will materially benefit the organization.

Los Angeles Free From Danger of Censorship Menace

Five of the Nine Members of the City Council Go On Record in Favor of Abolishment of Censor Bugbear—This Practically Means Passage of Ordinance Giving Relief Sought by Film Interests—Arguments by Ministers Make Men of the Cloth Ridiculous

Los Angeles, March 17.

FIVE of the nine members of the Los Angeles City Council publicly went on record as being in favor of the abolishment of censorship of motion pictures Tuesday, March 7, when the entire regular session was devoted to a public hearing on the subject of censorship.

Those for and against censorship were given two hours by the council to voice their sentiments regarding the pending ordinance recommended by the Public Welfare Committee of the council, which provides for the annullment of the present ordinance establishing a board of censorship of seven members, and substitutes an officer to be known as a film commissioner, whose duty it will be to see that eliminations recommended by the National Board of Censorship are taken from the film shown in Los Angeles, and that only pictures passed by this board be permitted to be shown.

The council chamber of the city hall was crowded to the doors and fully ninety per cent. of those in attendance were people connected with either the producing, renting or exhibition of films.

The pro-censorship representatives with but one exception, were men of the cloth, while the anti forces were represented principally by the Reverend Thomas Dixon, chosen as speaker for the Producers' Association and others of the industry.

Ministers Display Ignorance of Films

After the reading of the proposed ordinance by the city attorney, the arguments against the passage of this were given by the several ministers.

The principal argument was that a censor board would be beneficial to the police department in preventing the showing of pictures that were in violation of the penal code, and thus would serve to prevent unnecessary prosecution.

The speakers in more ways than one displayed the fact that they were not familiar with any phase of the making, marketing, or showing of pictures, or for that matter, acquainted with the provisions of the censorship ordinance now effective, which gives the board of censors the power to prevent the showing of any picture and the confiscation of the picture if it is shown.

They displayed a dislike for depending upon a censor board of another city, and repeatedly claimed that there were people in Los Angeles fully as competent to censor pictures as those of New York, who are members of the National Board.

The claim on which special stress was laid was that it would be impossible to bring proof to court after the picture is shown, citing the fact that any citizen or officer could take a newspaper, book or photograph to court, but none could take the shadow that is projected on the screen, they evidently believing that once a film was projected it went out of existence when the last shadows appeared on the screen.

The rebuttal by Reverend Thomas H. Dixon was a masterly address, which convincingly answered every argument presented by the opposition. He flayed the clergyman unmercifully by pointing out that they were of a censoring birth reared in an atmosphere of censorship, and censoring was inherent in the clergy since the early ages.

His illustrations were taken from the pages of history and pertained to the coming of pilgrims and persecuted worshippers of Europe to America.

He explained that the National Board was a creature of the film industry, organized originally by the producers for the protection of the better element against wild-cat and unscrupulous manufacturers.

Los Angeles Fight Only the Beginning

The fight in Los Angeles, Mr. Dixon told, is merely the beginning of a national campaign for the eradication of censorship from the nation, and he made it clear that inasmuch as Los Angeles is the hub of the industry, it likewise sets precedent for other cities.

Replying to the claim that motion pictures create criminals, Mr. Dixon said that crime must be shown in every successful play as well as in stories, and if there is no crime or the portrayal of sin there is no play or story.

He made the claim that more than fifty per cent. of the news of the daily papers consisted of details of crime or sin. The speaker was very frequently interrupted by applause, participated in occasionally by members of the opposition.

Frank E. Garbutt, president of the Pallas Pictures Corporation, cited numerous instances where films had been censored here, and the censoring was of the nature of a judgment which compelled the exchange to eliminate certain sections of the film before it was shown, thus showing that those who argued for censorship were in error when they claim that the censor board was purely an advisory organization.

Jesse L. Lasky, of the Paramount producing organization, which bears his name, briefly enumerated the troubles caused producers by the elimination of scenes by the censors, the cuts destroying the continuity of the photoplays' plots.

Three of the city councilmen voiced their sentiments in stating that municipal censorship had proved wholly unsuccessful, as in every instance in the history of censoring films in Los Angeles where a subject was condemned by the censors, this condemnation had been overruled by the court.

Improved Pictures Need No Censorship

One speaker repeated the remarks of a former chairman of the municipal board who resigned because she believed the quality of motion pictures had been so greatly improved that censorship was unnecessary.

The chairman of the meeting, Estelle Lindsay, scoffed at the argument of one minister, that he could make criminals of any high school boys if permitted to show them pictures for six months, the claim by the chairman being that the criminal instinct is inherent.

Eight of the nine councilmen composing the board were present. Two declined to express their opinion until a further reading of the proposed ordinance, and five were warmly in favor of the ordinance, which literally means that it will be passed at the second reading in the near future.

HILLER WILL SAIL FOR SOUTH AMERICA FOR CLARIDGE FILMS

L. L. Hiller, president of the Claridge Films, Inc., is planning to leave within two weeks for South America, with a view to establishing a branch of his company in the South American metropolis, Buenos Ayres.

Many inquiries for rights to the Claridge Films productions have come to their office, and, instead of having the films handled through the customary channels, Mr. Hiller thinks it best to look over the ground, with a view toward establishing a South American office for the Claridge Films.

Although she planned on leaving several weeks ago, Mrs. Agnes Egan Cobb, general manager of the Claridge Films, just left Monday on her trip, as far west as St. Louis.

Because of the many western and foreign buyers in town, Mrs. Cobb has been delayed in starting from time to time. She will visit the various exchanges which have bought the state rights of the Claridge Films' first two releases, Robert Haines in "The Heart of New York," and the William Courtleigh production, "The Birth of Character." The Claridge Company reports gratifying results in these features, and within a few days the third release of Claridge Films will be announced.

CHICAGO PRESS CLUB INVITES SELIG STARS TO BANQUET

The Chicago Press Writers' Club, on Saturday, March 25, in the Gray Room of the Hotel Sherman, will entertain motion picture stars and others at a banquet.

Headed by Mrs. Maude Moore Clement, a well known Chicago literary worker, the entertainment committee has issued invitations to Colin Campbell, Thomas Santschi, Bessie Eyton, Eugenie Besserer and other Selig directors and stars, who are at present in Chicago working on "The Crisis."

Gilson Willets, scenario writer, has also been invited to attend and speak. It is said that the Press Writers' Club has issued over a hundred invitations.

The club is composed of all classes of workers in the Chicago literary field.

Viola Dana Is Added to Galaxy of Metro Stars

Actress Who Made Hit on Speaking Stage in "The Poor Little Rich Girl," Belasco, Was Starred in "The Blind Fiddler," "The Slavey Student" and Other Screen Successes

Viola Dana, one of the most winsome and accomplished young actresses in motion pictures, has signed a long-time contract with the Metro Pictures Corporation, to be starred exclusively in Metro plays.

She has already begun work on her first production which is as yet unnamed.

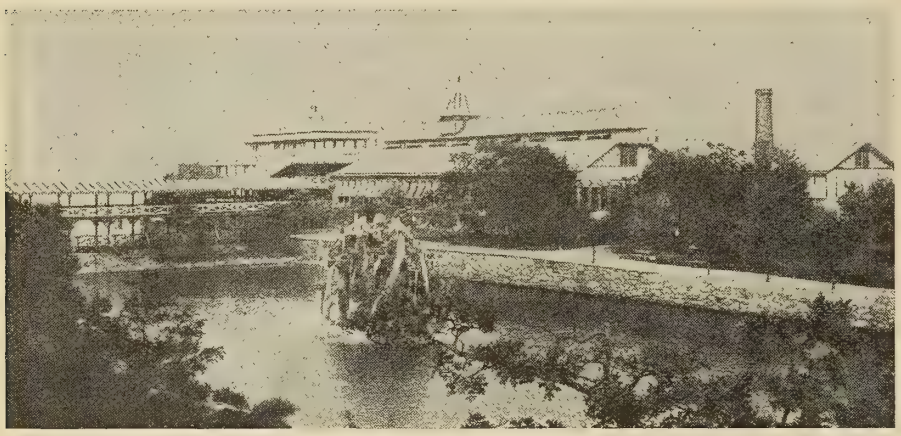
Until recently Miss Dana was the principal star of the Edison Film Company. She had the principal role in "The Poor Little Rich Girl," produced by David Belasco. This play had a successful run on Broadway and was presented in every city of any prominence in the United States and Canada.

After receiving an attractive offer from the Edison Company Miss Dana decided to make one feature production as a personal experiment. This was "Molly, the Drummer Boy." It proved such a success that she was induced to sign a contract for other features.

Miss Dana was then starred in "The Blind Fiddler," "The Slavey Student," "The Stone Heart," "The Stoning," and the role of Thelma in "The Portrait in the Attic," and "The Innocence of Ruth."

While Miss Dana usually essays the role of a child or young girl, she is capable of playing other parts, as was evidenced in her artistic delineation of the role of the young mother in "Gladiola." She is a tiny mite of a girl but a powerful actress for one measuring but four feet eleven inches.

VIOLA DANA



Miss Dana made her professional debut when she was but five years old, doing a solo dance at a theatrical entertainment given by a well known New York club. In several motion pictures Miss Dana has danced before the camera, adding an interesting feature to the production.

Miss Dana had the important role of Little Hendrick in "Rip Van Winkle," playing with Thomas Jefferson for three seasons.

Miss Dana was also a member of "The Squaw Man" company, in which Robert Edeson was starred. She was also a member of the Union Hill Stock company with Jane Cowl. Miss Dana also played in "The Littlest Rebel," the successful play which brought into fame little Mary Miles Minter, another Metro star.

She next appeared in "The Model," attracting the attention of Mr. Belasco, who engaged her for her first real starring role in "The Poor Little Rich Girl."

Glen Island Sold to Peerless for Studio Location

PANORAMA OF GLEN ISLAND, BOUGHT AS A STUDIO SITE BY PEERLESS

GLEN ISLAND, which for a quarter of a century, has entertained pleasure seekers of New York and vicinity, has been purchased for motion picture purposes by the Peerless Pictures Corporation, of New York, at a price which, together with the personal property and exhibits on the Islands, is said to have involved one million dollars.

A complete studio and laboratory will be built by the Peerless Corporation on Island Wild, the most southerly of the group, while the other four islands will be continued as an amusement park.

There are more than a hundred acres in the five islands, which are located about four hundred feet off the New Rochelle shore and are completely surrounded by the waters of Long Island Sound.

The parked grounds, with their spacious lawns, shade trees, flower beds, lakes and grottoes, furnish excellent settings for motion picture photography.

The group contains a number of picturesque buildings in the amusement concessions, which can be used as backgrounds in photoplays requiring foreign atmosphere. Chief among these are "Little Germany," "Nippon" and Morro Castle and fort.

Just adjacent to Glen Island is Traver's Island, the summer home of the New York Athletic Club, and on David's Island, is Fort Slocum, the United States Army reservation, so that the adjacent surroundings provide athletic and military settings for picturization.

The officers of the Peerless Pictures Corporation are Albert Clark Case, president; Howard C. Griffiths, vice-president and general manager; Emil Offeman, treasurer, and Temple Scott, secretary.

The British Isles have been organized by Albert Blinkhorn, of London, in conjunction with Kineco, Limited, of Cardiff, and the foreign market will be handled by the Anglo-Peerless Pictures Corporation, of which Mr. Blinkhorn is vice-president and foreign manager.

"Tangled Hearts" Is First Bluebird for April

FOR the third month of Bluebird Photoplays the April showings arranged by General Manager M. H. Hoffman promise to easily maintain the standard that has thus far marked the progress of the newly-established program of features.

Louise Lovely, in "Tangled Hearts," will start the month with a society problem play in which she is supported by Agnes Vernon and Marjorie Ellison, Lon Chaney, Haywood Mack and Jay Belasco.

Tyrone Power, in "John Needham's Double," makes his debut as a Bluebird star, April. The play was used to first introduce the late E. S. Willard to American theatregoers. The Smalleys directed.

Violet Mersereau joins the Bluebird family to appear as star in the release for April 17—"The Great Experiment." Rex Ingram furnished the scenario and has directed the production of a psychological problem play which approaches criminology from a new angle.

The feature released April 24 will be "The Gay Lord Waring" with J. Warren Kerrigan the star. This is from the story of Houghton Townley, the scenario by F. McGrew Willis. Otis Turner directed.

William Fox Pictures Take Sydney by Storm

His First Exhibition of Pictures in the Antipodes at the Tivoli, Sydney, February 4-5, Brings Out 1,200 to See "Carmen," and "Samson" the First Day—Prominent Editors and Civic Dignitaries at Banquet Given by Anderson at the Hotel Australia.

Special to Motion Picture News

Sydney, N. S. W., Feb. 10.

AN important event for motion picture interests in Australia and New Zealand was the first exhibition of William Fox films at the Tivoli theatre, Sydney, on Thursday and Friday afternoons, February 4 and 5.

Invitations, with admittance cards, were despatched to the motion picture exhibitors of the country, theatrical managers, the press, all members of Parliament, the Lord Mayor, and other political dignitaries.

On Thursday afternoon an audience of about 1,200 people gathered in the Tivoli theatre and witnessed a program consisting of the Fox production of "Carmen," featuring Theda Bara, and the Fox production of "Samson," featuring William Farnum.

In the intermission between these two pictures "The Toreador" song from Bizet's opera "Carmen" was rendered by Monsieur Goosens, accompanied by the Belgian String Quartette of Brussels, while tea and refreshments were served to the guests.

On Friday the productions shown were "The Kreutzer Sonata," with Nance O'Neil, Theda Bara and William Shay, and "The Plunderer," featuring William Farnum.

A special orchestral accompaniment to the pictures was arranged and selected by Will Quintrell of the Tivoli Theatre Symphony Orchestra, who, by the way, is a brother to one of the leading conductors of New York City, Fred Quintrell, conductor at William Fox's Academy of Music, New York.

Public Crowds Theatre

A tremendous ovation was given Fox films by the public later, and the effect upon the audience was so great that the Tivoli theatre was swamped by the huge crowds attempting to see the two other Fox subjects.

All three foyers of the theatre were crowded, and many hundreds of standees endured the crowded conditions, wrapped up in the photoplays.

The most conservative newspapers in Australia, the Daily Telegraph, Sydney Morning Herald, Sun and News, together with the Sunday Sun and the Sunday Times, were enthusiastic in their praise of Fox films, devoting as much as half a column each, gratuitous with glowing tribute to the quality of the productions and to the enterprise of the Fox Film Corporation in maintaining its own organization so far away from its headquarters.

On Friday evening, February 4, in the banquet hall of the Hotel Australia, Lieutenant Jim P. Anderson and Carey Wilson, respectively, the Australian manager and foreign agent of the Fox Film Corporation, tendered a banquet to the leading theatrical lights, and the proprietors and editors of the newspaper publications of Australia gathering together one of the most representative bodies of men ever crowded around a table.

An elaborate dinner was served, and specially designed menus, bearing photographs of William Fox, Theda Bara and William Farnum, were placed at each place.

Among those in attendance were: Hugh J. Ward, representing J. C. Williamson, Limited, the premier theatrical organization of Australia; Hugh D. McIntosh, governing director of Harry Rickards' Tivoli Theatres, Limited; George Marlow, proprietor of the Adelphi and Palace theatres, Sydney, and a prominent Australian producer; R. L. (Snowy) Baker, the father of the boxing and sporting interests in Australia; J. D. Williams, who was probably responsible for the entire growth of the picture business in Australia, together with the editors of the following newspapers:

Daily Telegraph, Sydney Morning Herald, Sun, Sunday Sun, Sunday Times, Evening News, Times, Referee, Bulletin, Mirror, Worker, Theatre, Newsletter, Greenroom, Variety, Footlights, Bystander.

At the conclusion of the dinner Hugh J. Ward, who acted as toastmaster, called upon several members of the party for toasts, and later made a lengthy speech. Mr. Ward paid many compliments to the Fox Film Corporation for their productions. Hugh D. McIntosh complimented the Fox Film Corporation on the achievement in being established here in the short space of five weeks. All other speakers, including the representatives of the press, at some point in their remarks spoke of the sensation caused by the Fox Film Corporation's trade show, the superlative compliments shown to Fox films such as had been witnessed here.

Anderson Responds to Toasts

Lieutenant Jim P. Anderson, the Australian manager of the Fox Film Corporation, and Carey Wilson, foreign agent, in responding to toasts, laid great emphasis on the splendid hospitality with which they had been received, and were explicit in their denial of the many published statements in America to the effect that Americans were unpopular in Australia.

The J. C. Williamson, Limited, closed the Theatre Royal for alteration and remodeling, and will open it on February 19 as a picture house, with the William Fox "Carmen." It will be a revelation to Australian picture goers.

A magnificent stage setting is being prepared in the Williamson scene shops, and there are to be many electrical effects ,including several fountains and a huge waterfall.

The Williamson Company carried half-page advertisements in the Sunday papers of February 6, and has started a campaign in newspapers and billboards, so that there is little doubt that the opening of the Theatre Royal as a photoplay theatre will mark a new epic in the theatrical industry of Australia.

The Fox Film Corporation has opened up beautifully appointed offices, occupying the fourth and fifth floors of the Symonds Building, 194 Pitt street, Sydney, in the heart of the city. The two floors include private and general offices, stock rooms, and a nicely appointed projection room.

A furore has been created in local picture circles by the securing of the Williamson houses by the Fox Film Corporation.

VIOLET MERSEREAU SWAMPED BY LETTERS FROM MARRIAGE ASPIRANTS

Since the Universal started its Handsomest-Man-in-America contest, Violet Mersereau has seen her daily mail grow to considerable proportions.

It all started when she promised she would add a little interest to the contest by proposing to the winner of the competition.

VIOLET MERSEREAU

Now, it is said, she can scarcely read all the communications she receives from aspirants for her hand.

The contest started on January 1 and closes on April 15. The winner will be announced at the Motion Picture Exposition in Madison Square Garden on May 12, and the lucky man will be present.

MYLES MAKES DEBUT WITH SIGNAL IN GRAFT PLAY

Norbert Myles made his debut with the Signal Film Corporation's feature company in the Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, "In the Web of the Grafters," a five-reel drama of politics and graft.

In the role of Bruce Kerrigan, a brave police officer, Mr. Myles undergoes some exciting and dangerous adventures.

Mr. Myles, who recently was a star with the Universal, will be seen in many forthcoming Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, from the Signal Company directed by Murdock MacQuarrie.

STEINER OFF TO JACKSONVILLE FOR 16 EPISODE SERIAL IN 2 REELS EACH

William Steiner, general manager of the Serial Film Corporation, left New York March 8 for Jacksonville, Fla., with a company of seventy-five people to begin, under the directorship of A. M. Kennedy, the production of a serial containing sixteen episodes of two reels each.

The Photo Drama Company, which will market the serial, announces that eight reels will be ready for screening within thirty days.

Spoor Is Host to 500 Advertising Club Members

President of Essanay Marks Opening of His New Studio in Chicago with Luncheon, Followed by Inspection of the Plant on St. Patrick's Day

PRESIDENT GEORGE K. SPOOR, of Essanay, marked the opening of his large new studio, the third in Chicago, by entertaining five hundred members of the Advertising Association of Chicago at a luncheon, followed by an inspection of the plant, on St. Patrick's Day.

It is the custom for the advertising men to make visits at regular intervals to the centers of various industries of the city, and this trip was "Little Journey No. 4" of the itinerary.

The club members marched from their rooms on Clark street in Chicago to the Green Mill Gardens, where luncheon was served.

Mr. Spoor gave a talk, saying it was his faith in Chicago which prompted him to increase his studio space there.

He said that Chicago now had the largest artificially lighted studio space given over to pictures in the business.

At another point in his remarks he discussed the possibilities of pictures in their relation to advertising.

He is confident that pictures will ultimately be the greatest moulders of public opinion ever conceived.

President Dewitt Clough, of the advertising men, responded. The association quartette gave several numbers.

The party then proceeded to the studios and inspected the three big floors. All were particularly impressed by the massiveness of the latest studio, which is large enough in itself to permit of a dozen average sets being erected at once.

Mr. Spoor and his aides explained "how the movies are made," and when the inspection was ended, a film showing the parade and luncheon was projected before the guests left the plant. It was then presented to the association.

George Ovey in Four Cub Comedies for April

"Winning Punch" Is First—Director Fahrney Puts Spectacular Effects in the Subjects—"Leopard's Bride" Is Horsley 5-Reeler for 15th

THE output of David Horsley productions to be released through the Mutual Film Corporation exchanges during the month of April comprises four one-reel Cub Comedy subjects and two five-reel Mutual Masterpictures, de Luxe Edition.

The Cub Comedies are scheduled for release April 7, 14, 21 and 28 and feature George Ovey in each case.

Director Milton Fahrney, in charge of production of this brand, has lately been introducing an element of the spectacular and thrill in the Cubs.

The first of the Cubs of this nature to come along in April is called "The Winning Punch."

Of the two five-reel subjects the first to be offered is "The Leopard's Bride," the release date of which is April 15.

Margaret Gibson and William Clifford have the leading roles and feature positions. Their supporting company is made up of Brooklyn Keller, Nan Christy, Frederick Montague, Fred Goodwins, Edward Gordon and Paul Machette. Several trained leopards of the Bostock animal collection appear.

"The Conscience of John David" is the title of the month's second five-reel feature. The release date is April 24.

Crane Wilbur is featured in "The Conscience of John David," which is said to be in every way as big a photoplay as his preceding subject, "The Love Liar." The star is also the author of the play.

In the leading role of a spendthrift millionaire later reduced to a menial position and then rising above his first failure, Wilbur appears and has in his cast such players as Mae Gaston, Alice Rinaldo, Frederick Montague, John Oaker, Louis Durham and Francis Raymond.

Selznick Will Film "War on War" Pictures

Series Is Planned in Connection with National Peace Forum's Campaign—President of Clara Kimball Young Company Intends to Pose Relatives in Subject

Cleveland, O., March 18.

LEWIS J. SELZNICK, president and general manager of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, has paid a flying visit to Cleveland to make preliminary arrangements for the filming of a series of "War on War" pictures here in the summer in connection with the National Peace Forum's peace campaign.

Cleveland is Mr. Selznick's old home, and he intends to use his two young sisters, Rose and Lottie, and Mrs. Phil. Selznick, wife of his brother, in the pictures.

The series, Mr. Selznick stated, will cost several thousands of dollars to produce. Old lake ships are to be refitted and used as warships. All the water scenes are to be taken on Lake Erie.

Employment will be given to hundreds of extra people in the ensemble scenes. Already there has been a rush of Cleveland amateurs anxious to get into pictures to take part in these scenes.

While in Cleveland Mr. Selznick took the opportunity to express his belief that motion picture balls and popularity contests for screen actors have had their day. He also stated that it was not good business for producers to permit stars to appear at motion picture theatres.

It is stated, however, that Mr. Selznick has requested that Clara Kimball Young lead the procession at a motion picture ball exhibitors are planning to hold in Cleveland in the near future. The date is yet to be decided upon.

Brisbane's Tirade Shown to Be Based on Ignorance

Manufacturers Controvert Statements Made by Evening Journal Editor at Board of Trade Dinner to the Press—Had He Taken the Trouble to Investigate He Would Not Have Made Wild Statements Unfounded on Fact, Blackton and Freuler Point Out

THE attack on the motion picture industry delivered by Arthur Brisbane, editor of the New York Evening Journal, at the recent dinner given at the Hotel Astor, New York, by the Motion Picture Board of Trade to the press, has called forth a broadside of replies from persons prominent in the industry.

Mr. Brisbane, it will be remembered, admitted that he had seen but three pictures in his life. He assigned the astonishing vogue of the photoplay to the "stupidity and lack of intellectual development of the human race," and declared his indifference to the menace of legalized censorship.

Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitagraph Company, in a speech made at the dinner, declared that Mr. Brisbane's remarks "showed a profound and appalling ignorance of the subject upon which he discoursed so learnedly."

"'The greatest editor in the world,'" said Mr. Blackton, "would probably never have coined that epigram, 'the success of the modern moving picture is based upon the stupidity and lack of intellectual development of the human race,' if he had taken the trouble to investigate, in even the most cursory manner.

"He would have found that every play that Shakespeare wrote, all the great works of the world's greatest writers—Dickens, Thackeray, Moliere, Hugo, Dumas, and from them down to the modern, such as Rex Beach, Jack London, Robert W. Chambers, Hall Caine, and hundreds of others, had all been translated into picture form and presented on the screen in a manner far outshining any dramatic production on the speaking stage.

Facts Contradict Brisbane

"He would have discovered that the 'stupid movies which just exploit man's lack of brains' possess sufficient intellectual charm to cause the greatest theatrical stars to forsake the stage to devote their time and talents and to give their names to this art so despised by 'the greatest editor in the world.'

"Sarah Bernhardt, E. H. Sothern, William Gillette, Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, Forbes-Robertson, Wilton Lackaye, Robert Edeson, and others have committed the indiscretion of appearing in the photo drama."

John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, points out that Mr. Brisbane is in the position of a woman who appeared before the House Committee on Education during the Federal Censorship hearings in Washington.

"This dear lady," says Mr. Freuler, "after uttering a long tirade against motion pictures, was asked if she had ever seen a motion picture.

"'No,' she answered, 'but I have heard about them and I know they're awful.'"

Mr. Freuler also reminds Mr. Brisbane that "the same people for whom he (Brisbane) is writing advice on every subject from baby food to war are patrons of motion pictures.

"Probably it is true that the motion picture is the greatest amusement and exerts the greatest influence in the lives of the people who read Mr. Brisbane's editorials.

"He owes it to himself, and to the millions of persons for whom he writes, to find out something about motion pictures.

Brisbane a Member of Human Race

"He said, among other things, 'I don't care in the least whether the motion picture is censored or not,'" continues Mr. Freuler.

"It is painful to be forced to believe that Mr. Brisbane is so wholly indifferent on so vital an issue, and one which concerns so deeply the fundamental rights of the human race, of which he is a member, and in which he professes to be so much interested.

"If Mr. Brisbane would or could recognize without a biased and distorted view the identity of the rights of the motion picture and the newspaper he would probably be more interested in the menace of censorship.

"Among other amusing things, he indicated that he felt the motion picture industry ought to produce such matter as the life of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, and similar subjects.

"Since Mr. Brisbane has seen only three pictures, he has probably overlooked the fact that all these, and scores more, were produced and released in 1906, 1907 and 1908."

Leon J. Rubinstein, publicity director of the Thanhouser Film Corporation, also takes out a bill of exceptions to the Brisbane speech, as follows:

"In his opening remarks he expressed his surprise at discovering that the film men about him did not readily give him a list of six big film works of which they could boast.

"He indicated that they could not agree on six, and, therefore, he assumed that six great works do not exist.

"Remarkable logic! Let him name his own exemplary eight-foot book shelf and I will show him thousands of scholars who will not agree with him.

"Is it because there are so few good books—or so many?

"Even on the printed page of Mr. Brisbane's own publications the most conspicuous appeals to the understanding of the reader are made through cartoons and photographs and not type.

"The daily for which he writes is famous for the wealth of pictures with which it catches the reader's eye on every occasion, going even out of the range of reality in picturing the progress of tragedies by means of series of pen sketches.

"The editorial page over which his facile pen spreads itself is seldom less than sixty per cent. picture matter. How, then, in all consistency, can Mr. Brisbane so decry picture appeal?

"If it is only to the ignorant that the screen holds attraction, then Mr. Brisbane may thank the screen for inspiring enough imagination in these people for them to be able to read his writings later."

"Doesn't Believe His Own Words"

Arthur James, Chairman Publication Committee Motion Picture Board of Trade, said concerning Mr. Brisbane's speech:

"The Publication Committee of the Motion Picture Board of Trade owes a debt to Mr. Arthur Brisbane for giving to its Hotel Astor dinner more publicity than was anticipated and for attracting extraordinary attention to the question of motion picture censorship.

"When Mr. Brisbane said that motion pictures owe their success to the stupidity and lack of intellectual development of the human race he spoke as an editor whose success has been builded on precisely that foundation. I fancy, therefore, he intended to compliment the motion picture makers for being as wise as himself, and Mr. Brisbane could not imagine a higher compliment.

"It must have been that Mr. Brisbane, feeling as he himself said the years coming upon him, spoke his valedictory and bequeathed his mantle as the greatest editor in the world to his younger successor, the motion picture.

"Treat Him Kindly, Boys"

"We younger men must not be too harsh with this great editorial figure, for on Sunday evening he was not in the best of health and it was for this reason, and at his own request, that he was called upon first on the program instead of last, as was the schedule.

"All his life Mr. Brisbane has been a brilliant performer. Experience and self-training have brought his remarkable powers so sensitive to command that they operate instantly, even at the impetus of a whim. Mr. Brisbane has for many years been a highly organized mental machine that operated from a switchboard. He could turn on the current at will and the result has always been brilliant.

"It is not fair to expect that with such development and such brilliancy there should also be profound conviction or deep sincerity.

"The effect of Mr. Brisbane's speech upon his hearers was similar to the effect produced by Mr. Brisbane's editorials upon those who are intelligent among his readers. Those who heard it appreciated the charm and skill of the performance, but they didn't believe what he said and they didn't believe that he believed it.

"It is not necessary to discuss Mr. Brisbane's abysmal un-information of motion pictures. He himself admits it and his words proved that this particular part of his speech was entirely sincere.

"The only fear was that Mr. Brisbane might used his great editorial powers to give aid to the enemy—the censor. This fear has since been dissipated by the sound editorial spanking administered by Mr. Hearst's direction (no other could have ordered it) in the New York American the second day after the dinner."

Aitken Returns to New York from West Coast

"Capacities for the Preparation of the Highest Class Motion Picture Play Are Unsurpassed," Declares Triangle President—Ince Moves Studios to Culver City

H. E. AITKEN, president of the Triangle Film Corporation, has just returned from an extended visit to the Pacific Coast studios of that organization.

Mr. Aitken's tour extended over a period of five weeks, during which time he made a most careful investigation into the corporation's facilities for the production of its plays. In commenting upon his survey, Mr. Aitken said:

"I believe our capacities for the preparation of the highest class motion picture play to be unsurpassed, and I have found the situation in Los Angeles most satisfactory in every respect.

"The three directors, Messrs. Griffith, Ince and Sennett, are in frequent conference with a view to the improvement of plays. I found them most enthusiastic over the outlook.

"Thomas H. Ince, when I left, was busy superintending the removal from his former studios at Inceville, just outside Santa Monica, to the new $250,000 plant at Culver City.

"Mr. Ince is making this transfer without any loss of time. It is being done gradually and the Santa Monica studios will probably be vacant within the next three weeks.

"The new Culver City studios were used for the first time about three weeks ago and today all companies are working there. The Inceville plant is being used for special work to which it is adapted.

"Under Mr. Ince's guidance H. B. Warner, the well known dramatic star, has enacted the principal role in several plays.

"At the Keystone plant on Allessandro avenue I found greater activity than at any time in the history of the Keystone product.

"Mr. Sennett is now working thirteen companies in Los Angeles, and these, with the company under the direction of Roscoe Arbuckle at Fort Lee, N. J., will be able to turn out the Keystone comedies at a rate never before equaled.

"The Keystone plant has also been enlarged and now occupies two square blocks. A new steel and concrete administration building has been erected and added facilities for stage and field work supplied.

"At the Fine Arts studio I found affairs in a most satisfactory condition. There, too, additional facilities have been supplied.

"The activity of Mr. Griffith in supervising the product of this studio in unquestionable. I found his energy manifest everywhere in speeding up production.

"Just before I left, Mr. Griffith, with his aids, had been doing some big battle scenes in which 2,500 people were employed.

"The Fine Arts studio has in preparation some excellent material and Mr. Fairbanks' new picture, 'The Good Bad-Man,' is a play distinctly different in character from anything this new picture star has attempted.

"At the present time I consider the whole production end of the Triangle Film Corporation is in a most satisfactory condition.

"I do not believe that any organization is better prepared to furnish the highest class material and this I think is a conservative statement in the light of what I have witnessed in Los Angeles during my recent trip.

"The task of having had to supply nearly 1,500 separate and individual theatres with Triangle plays has been no small one, and when it is considered that the list is growing at a rate that makes it reasonably certain that we will be supplying 10,000 within the year, I feel that we have indeed reached a most satisfactory situation."

MANILA NEWSPAPER MAN REPORTS DEMAND FOR "U" FILMS IN PHILIPPINES

William H. Lee Howard, formerly of New York, who has been living for seventeen years in the Philippines, and who for the past six years has been associated with the Manila Times, visited Universal City with Mrs. Howard this week. Howard is on his way to Washington, where he will act as the correspondent of the Times.

"Universal films have become very popular in Manila and other cities in the islands," said Mr. Howard to Vice-President and General Manager Davis.

"The demand seems to be growing constantly among the exhibitors for the films of your company, and wherever they are shown they attract crowded houses."

"Unwritten Law" Gets Trade Showing in Chicago

Beyfuss Makes Quick Jump from New York with the Film for Special Exhibition of California Motion—Beatriz Michelena Subject to Western State Rights Buyers

"THE UNWRITTEN LAW," with Beatriz Michelena, first of the California Motion Picture Corporation's "Better-than-program" pictures was given its Chicago trade showing at the Ziegfeld Theatre, Chicago, last week.

General Manager Alexander Beyfuss left New York with the print, and, after having personally directed the show at the Ziegfeld, took an afternoon train the next day for New York City, arriving at his headquarters at the Ritz-Carlton on the evening of the third day.

The exhibition in Chicago, Mr. Beyfuss explains, was given solely for the purpose of playing fair with the states right buyers of the Middle West. On the strength of the New York showing at Wurlitzer Hall some weeks ago, offers, Mr. Beyfuss says, for practically all of the United States were made.

However, a number of big buyers who make Chicago their centre of operations were unable to attend the showing in New York, and yet insisted that they be given the privilege of seeing the picture and bidding on it before the territories in which they are interested were sold.

All of the well-known Chicago buyers, representatives of Chicago daily newspapers, and prospective buyers from St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha and points even farther west were in attendance at the Ziegfeld trade showing.

Palm Beach Watches Billie Burke Act Before Camera

Society Leaders Crowd Around the "Locations" Daily to See the Winsome Star Play in Scenes for Hughes Film Novel for Kleine Release

THE curiosity of crowds anxious to watch the making of a motion picture has been satisfied at Palm Beach, Florida, where George Kleine's company of players, headed by Billie Burke, is working on a number of society scenes for the forthcoming film novel by Rupert Hughes.

Society leaders have crowded about the "locations" daily, to watch Billie Burke play before the camera. Billie Burke is delighted with the place. Almost every day she can be found bathing in the surf or attending a social function.

Mr. Kleine, who was in Chicago recently, said: "The Billie Burke company will remain at Palm Beach for about ten days, when I think we will have secured all of the necessary material for the new picture.

"We have obtained some wonderful scenes on the Seminole Indian Reservation, in which full-blooded Indians play natural parts.

"You can imagine that these scenes will be effective when you think of Miss Burke's beauty set against a background such as is found among the Seminoles.

"We will use these scenes in order to carry out the plot of the story, which provides for a great variety of appeal. We have made only a few scenes in which the Indians play a part, as most of the time of the company has been devoted to the making of scenes showing the fashionable society environment of Palm Beach.

"Mr. Hughes has laid out a number of interesting incidents, particularly suited to the locations and I am confident that this novel will strike a new note in serial productions."

STUDIO DIRECTORY NUMBER GIVES HIM FUND OF FILM INFORMATION

Lynchburg, Va., March 11.
Motion Picture News,
New York.
Gentlemen:—

At this late hour, permit me to offer my congratulation on the excellent example of your enterprise in preparing such a work as the Studio Edition of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

It is a valuable reference book and I have already found it handy in supplying information to photoplay fans who come to me, thinking that I know each player personally!

Very truly yours,

Universal Masque Ball Brings Out Five Thousand

Grand Central Palace, New York, Shines with Brilliant Costumes in All Conceivable Designs—Violet Mersereau, Perched on a White Horse, Leads the Grand March and Later Wins First Prize for Most Attractive Costume—Betty Lawson, Thanhouser, Captures Second Prize and Edith Roberts Gets Third

"MY, how you've grown," remarked the fond parent to his youngster as he returned to the home door mat after a year's absence.

Carl Laemmle, he who guides the course of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, was heard to mutter just such a sentiment at the annual Universal ball, given at Grand Central Palace, New York City, Saturday, March 18.

When last seen around these parts, the Universal ball was younger by three hundred and sixty-five days and it was given at the twin Gardens, Palm and Terrace.

Rumors are now afloat to the effect that Mr. Laemmle, Joe Brandt, Nat Rothstein and R. H. Cochrane are figuring as to whether Madison Square Garden can accommodate the ball when next it makes its appearance.

Mr. Rothstein believes that the overflow will fit in the park outside, but the others have been unable to reach a conclusion.

The most conspicuous thing about this 1916 ball, aside from its monstrous proportions, is the fact that it was a masque and costume affair.

The costumes in turn were spectacular, pretty, funny, incongruous, breath taking and eye opening. Imagine Mr. Laemmle masquerading as an old woman with a baby! Instead of Little Father he was Little Mother.

Variety of Costume

Nat Rothstein as a ring master cracked his whip somewhat after the fashion in which he whips up those cracking advertisements of his.

Joe Brandt was last seen as a cavorting cossack, although he played foul and doubled for Pat Powers once or twice.

And there was Herbert H. Van Loan, trying to deceive people into thinking he was Count Dun Dorsay or something like that. Perhaps Count is not good enough for Van, for he has been known to insist that H. H. stands for His Highness.

Paul Gulick in powdered wig and silks and satins went Van a few centuries better and Bob Doman, Disciple of Peace and Henry Ford, was a shriek.

But Carl, Nat, Joe, Herbert, Paul and Bob all sink into oblivion when the costumes of the feminine portion of the attendance come into notice.

Mrs. Rothstein might have escaped from a Harem, that is judging from her costume, unless we have slipped up on our knowledge of Haremology.

Mrs. Van Loan, or rather Gertrude Cameron, had peacock feathers in her hair and wore a ravishing costume, patterned after Gaby Desly's "Stop, Look and Listen" gown.

After the grand march which Violet Mersereau led, perched on a white horse, came the prize contest for the twelve best costumes worn.

The judges, who were members of the trade papers and the Morning Telegraph, excluded male entrants from the contest, thus incurring the undying enmity of the gentleman who pranced about in a Bluebird costume.

This gentleman claimed that the race was fixed, but then there was a prize of thirty dollars for the best costume and his motives were suspected.

Violet Mersereau Captures Honors

Miss Mersereau as Little Lord Fauntelroy walked off with highest honors.

It will be remembered that Violet has promised to propose to the winner of the Universal Handsome man contest, so Tracey Lewis and Lynde Denig thought they'd put one over on the contestants and subsequently attempted to inveigle a proposal from the prize winner.

Miss Mersereau, however, acting on the advice of a MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative, turned them both down.

Betty Lawson, a Thanhouser beauty, who was conveyed to the ball by someone called Leon J. Rubenstein, gathered unto herself second prize, fifteen dollars in cold gold. Miss Lawson was a Pocohontas which in the language of the Universal means Indian girl.

Little black-eyed Edith Roberts, Universal star, blushingly accepted the third prize of ten dollars. Miss Roberts was seen as a page and there never was a prettier one.

The remaining nine winners, Gertrude Cameron, Helen Adams, Violet Mack, Mrs. Rothstein, Clarice Drexler, Laura Gately, Florence Roberts, little Lois Alexander and Dorothy Hirsch were awarded a prize of five dollars each.

Opera Dance Adds to Gaiety

There were other notable events besides, including a spritely toe dance by Helen Coyne of the Metropolitan Opera House, which received great attention. Ida Schnall was introduced in her role of Undine and created something of a sensation.

Those present included everyone in the home office of the Universal from President Laemmle down. The costumes worn by these Universal boosters were enough to start a separate ball. One office boy came as Billie Ritchie or Charlie Chaplin or Ray Griffith or H. Pathe Lehreman.

Jack Animated Weekly Cohn was there to film views of the Grand March and judging from the number of feet he exposed this week's Weekly will run about three reels.

Pat Sullivan, Universal cartoonist, was seen to sketch violently at one time of the evening, getting local color for a coming "Sammie Johnsin" picture.

Another Organization Trip Is Herrington Plan

President of National League Will Arrive in Cleveland on March 28; Detroit, March 29; Chicago, March 30; Indianapolis, March 31; and Washington, April 4

FRED J. HERRINGTON, president of the M. P. E. L. of America, starts next week upon another organization trip in the interests of the national body of exhibitors.

He arrives in Cleveland on March 28 and thereafter his itinerary will follow as closely as possibly these dates:

Detroit, March 29; Chicago, March 30; Indianapolis March 31; North Carolina (State League Headquarters) April 2; Baltimore April 3; Washington, D. C., April 4.

From Washington President Herrington strikes into New England and will meet the organizations of each of these states. He will also attend the convention and exposition of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of the Northwest to be held in Minneapolis May 2-5, the week preceding the big National Exposition to be held by the Board of Trade in New York May 6-13.

Through MOTION PICTURE NEWS President Herrington calls attention to the dates of his itinerary and asks that preparations be made in advance by the different state leagues to meet him.

"The National League," says President Herrington, "has never been so strong in membership and so undivided in purpose as it is today. New charters have been granted to the State League of Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York, Oklahoma.

"Maryland's application for National membership has been received and Wisconsin's is expected. The total membership of the National organization," says President Herrington, "is now between 4,500 and 5,000."

NEW YORK LEAGUE ELECTS OFFICERS

At the regular meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, Local No. 1, held March 14 at the Wurlitzer Theatre building, election of officers was held and the following were elected:

Lee A. Ochs, president; M. Oestreicher, first vice-president; I. Hartstall, second vice-president; Benjamin Lyons, secretary and financial secretary; Louis F. Blumenthal, treasurer, and August Koenigswald, sergeant-at-arms.

Finance Committee: Charles Haring, chairman; William Hilkemeier, Otto Lederer, Charles Steiner, S. Rhonheimer.

The League has leased for a term of years the fourth floor of the Candler Theatre building annex, at 218 West Forty-second street, where it is fitting up meeting rooms, seats now being installed by the American Seating Company. There will also be executive chambers and private offices for the various committees.

BLACKWELL SIGNS LONG CONTRACT WITH WORLD FILM

Carlyle Blackwell, recently seen in a visualization of Samuel Hopkins Adams' "The Clarion," whose future was rather undetermined owing to the rumors that after his short-term agreement with Equitable expired he would join another concern, set at rest all rumors this week when he signed a three-year contract with the World Film Corporation for appearance in features of that concern and its ally, the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Blackwell's contracting with the Equitable-World concerns is attributable to his experience while working in "The Clarion."

CARLYLE BLACKWELL

Mr. Blackwell completed his second World-Equitable feature, "The Shadow of a Doubt," last week, and left immediately for Saranac Lake, N. Y., where he will begin work at once on "The Woman Of It," in which Ethel Clayton and Paul McAllister will appear with him.

Another important engagement entered into by the World Film Corporation was the securing of Arthur Ashley for a long period. Arthur Ashley, like Carlyle Blackwell, is of and from the screen. He has appeared in no less than eighty film productions, including "Sealed Lips," in which his work stamped him as a heavy man of more than ordinary ability, and his work in "The Struggle," another Ince picture, procured his World contract. Arthur Ashley will be seen next in "The Grubstaker" opposite Alice Brady.

OMAHA PLANS BALL FOR FIRST WEEK AFTER LENT

Special to Motion Picture News

Omaha, Neb., March 18.

While no officers have been elected and no formal organization formed, the exhibitors and exchange people of Omaha have united to form a Screen club, and will give their first annual ball during the first week after the close of Lent.

Regular meetings, with an occasional banquet or other affair, will be held.

"Molly Make-Believe" for Famous Players

Story Selected for Marguerite Clark Starring Vehicle Appeared in Prominent Magazine and Later in Book Form—Picture Is Set for Release Through Paramount in April

"MOLLY MAKE-BELIEVE," by Eleanor Hallowel Abbott, which first appeared in one of the national magazines, and later was published in book form, is being adapted to the motion picture screen by the Famous Players Film Company, with Marguerite Clark in the stellar role. It will be released on the Paramount program in April.

Though the details of the story cannot yet be divulged, it can be said that the obvious method of visualizing the letters forming the basis of the story has been carefully avoided and that the scenario, while preserving the spirit of the book, is a good example of the producer's art.

Miss Clark, herself, is delighted with the prospect of presenting little Molly on the screen. In support of the star there will appear J. W. Johnston, Clarence Handysides, Mahlon Hamilton, Helen Dahl, Gertrude Norman, Master Dick Gray and several others who are well known on the stage.

Then there is Merry, the dog, "whose first name is the same as Molly's last name." Merry is admirably portrayed by Mike, who in private life, as they say of his biped contemporaries, is the boon companion of J. W. Johnston.

"Molly Make-Believe," though it is adaptable to the purposes of the screen, has never been presented on the stage.

This is largely due perhaps to the fact that, in order to weave the story into dramatic form, the characters must of necessity be transported to many different points.

This would require too many changes of scenes on the stage, but can be very easily managed on the screen by means of the flash-back and the short scene.

J. Searle Dawley, who has directed Miss Clark's more recent appearances, is in charge of the production.

Spoor Tests Innovation in Essanay Studio

Construction of the Building Gives Sufficient Floor Space to "Make Entrances and Exits Match"—Two Cameras Are Required, but Effect Is a Revelation

THE new studio just opened by Essanay has given President George K. Spoor the opportunity to test an idea which he has long desired to put into effect as a permanent method.

There is now sufficient floor space to make entrances and exists match. No longer will there be any bursting out of a door in one set one day and taking the relative entrance into the adjoining room perhaps a week later.

The plan was tested with pleasing results in the filming of "The Havoc," five-reel feature released through the V-L-S-E. A complete suite of offices, a duplicate of a general manager's headquarters of one of the Chicago railroads, was constructed in full detail on the floor of the studio.

Six private offices and the large main office with its dozens of clerks were constructed at once.

So it was later in the same piece when the scenes in a home were taken. A complete seven-room apartment was constructed on the floor.

Naturally two cameras are required when making the exits match the entrances, but the effect is a revelation. So successful was the test that it has been ordered adopted as a fixed rule of Essanay.

The great floor space now permits of close attention to these details and this is only one of the advances which have been contemplated.

Variety Is Promised in "Sis Hopkins" Comedies

Plots of "When Things Go Wrong," for Release on 24th, "Almost a Heroine," 31st, and "The Fickle Fiddler's Finish," April 7th, Make Laughable Stories

KALEM'S plans to work far in advance of release date on the "Sis Hopkins" comedies to avoid hurried productions are now bearing fruit.

Titles and release dates for productions over a month in advance are now ready to be announced, and many other subjects are in shape for release, awaiting the selection of a permanent title.

Plenty of variety is evidenced in the plots for the productions announced for the next three weeks, which include "When Things Go Wrong," issued on March 24; "Almost a Heroine," on March 31, and "The Fickle Fiddler's Finish" on April 7.

Kalem executives, who were pleased at the remarkable number of advance bookings on the "Sis Hopkins" subjects, are more than enthusiastic over the increase in bookings that has followed the early releases.

"It shows that we have the real thing," said one Kalem official last week.

"While the advance bookings caused even experienced exchange men to marvel, they might have been attributed solely to the big drawing power of the star, famous throughout the country.

"The fact that the bookings are soaring still higher after the early releases shows that the pictures themselves have convinced even the skeptics."

RAILROAD PRESIDENT CALLS SIGNAL PLAYERS GENIUSES

Helen Holmes and J. P. McGowan are being showered with letters these days from railroad men all over the country, who have been to see the succeeding chapters of the great Mutual railroad feature, "The Girl and the Game."

"We give you credit for being geniuses, both of you," writes the president of a prominent western railroad. "No one who did not know the railroad and its system thoroughly could do what you are doing."

DAUGHTER OF ARAB SHEIK IS CHIEF DANCER IN KELLERMANN SUBJECT

Zubaydah Zourna, a young woman whose career as a globe trotter has included appearances in music halls and theatres in practically every part of the world, will be seen as the chief dancing girl in William Fox's Annette Kellermann spectacle now nearing completion in Jamaica.

Miss Zourna comes naturally by her skill in depicting the wild, langorous dances of the desert, having been born at Beja, Tunis. Her father was of a tribe of wandering sheiks, and her early associates were people of the desert.

She was educated in Paris, became an artist's model there, and subsequently a stage and screen actress.

When Director-General Brenon was canvassing the Fox forces in Jamaica for some one who could interpret the mystic dances of the East, he discovered Miss Zourna's ability, and entrusted to her the task of drilling and rehearsing the other dancers, as well as leading them in performances before the camera.

TEN REEL FEATURE PRODUCTION IS PLAN OF GREAT SOUTHERN, IN NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, March 18.

The Great Southern Film Company, a concern that will produce pictures in New Orleans, has been incorporated under the laws of Louisiana with an authorized capital stock of $150,000, and has rented a suite of offices in the Audubon Building, New Orleans.

George J. Sailer, until recently with the Thanhouser Film Company, is president, George Walters, vice-president, and B. D. Agnew, secretary-treasurer.

According to a statement by Sailer, the company will not erect a studio, but will produce pictures in natural settings.

Mr. Sailer says that several other new wrinkles will be inaugurated, among them a musical time sheet which allows the orchestra to play a picture correctly without glancing at the film.

The productions of the company are to be marketed by the state rights method about May 15. They will be in ten reels.

Clara Kimball Young to Head Own Company in July

Selznick Makes Denial of Rumored Vaudeville or Stage Engagements for Star—Plans Perfected for Maintenance of Completely Equipped Studio

IN order to clarify the situation as to the plans of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, the following statement is issued this week over the signatures of Miss Young and Lewis J. Selznick, president and general manager of the organization:

"So many misleading statements and rumors have been circulated that we desire to call the attention of all exhibitors and others interested in the motion picture industry to these incontestable proofs.

"Miss Young's contract with the World Film Corporation will terminate on the 15th of July. Immediately upon the conclusion of her services with that organization Miss Young will begin work in her own studio on the first production, in which she is to be presented by the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation. This will be released in October.

"Our plans have been perfected for the maintenance of a completely equipped studio of our own, and the production of our pictures will be pursued without reference to or connection with any other organization in the film business.

"The studio will be a modern structure in every detail, embodying all the latest innovations in equipment that have proved themselves of value and will include also numerous new features.

"We wish it distinctly understood that any persons or organizations desiring to do business with Miss Young or our organization should communicate directly with Lewis J. Selznick.

"The Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation is not affiliated with any other film organization, and we urge all our friends in the business to pay no heed to any utterances or announcements concerning Miss Young and the activities in which she will be engaged subsequent to July 15, except those statements having their source in the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation offices.

"Miss Young desires further to make it clear that she has no intention of accepting any of the numerous and flattering vaudeville or theatrical offers which she has received.

"She feels that her entire duty is toward the millions of devoted admirers she has won through her various screen presentations.

"Her public is essentially the motion picture public, and she intends to devote her energies and talents solely in the direction of offering herself to that public in the finest pictures that money and brains can produce.

"Each of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation productions will present Miss Young in a distinct characterization and a story of an original theme written by the most brilliant scenario creators in the country.

"We wish to emphasize the fact that our output will be marketed and controlled exclusively by our organization and that exhibitors desiring to avail themselves of our service should make immediate application.

"We are extremely gratified by the tremendous response our previous announcements have aroused, and wish to express our thanks for the many evidences of goodwill and friendship that have poured in from all parts of the country.

(Signed) Clara Kimball Young.

THOUGHT-DOMES OF CENSORS IN OHIO ("NOBODY HOME!") EVOLVE WONDERFUL "SPLIT" DECISION

The Ohio censors have set a precedent in their attitude toward "Race Suicide," the state rights to which are owned in Cleveland.

After ordering numerous eliminations, the censors still declined to give the new Farnham picture their ordinary certificate of approval.

Instead they gave it a kind of qualified approval and reserved to themselves the right to recall the picture if there is a public outcry against the film.

"Race Suicide" is the "motherhood" picture in which Ormi Hawley and Earle Metcalfe are starred.

"WOMAN'S LAW" GIVES MISS REED EMOTIONAL OPPORTUNITIES

In "The Woman's Law," the first Gold Rooster play made by the Arrow Company for the Pathé program, Florence Reed, the star, has a role which calls for the fullest exercise of her emotional powers.

FLORENCE REED

Her part is an exacting one. She must play the unhappy wife, whose husband is of fickle temperament and whose ways are such to cause her constant worry and sorrow. Only at the end, after her husband is dead, a victim of his own folly, is she enabled to come into her rightful heritage.

"The Woman's Law" was adapted for the screen by Harvey F. Thew and Albert S. LeVino, and staged by Director McGill.

KEENAN PICTURE SET FOR RELEASE IN APRIL FOR TRIANGLE

Frank Keenan's absence from the Triangle screen is soon to come to an end.

A Keenan feature is scheduled for release in April on the Triangle program, and the actor, after a vacation of six weeks, is at work on a new picture at the Ince studios.

MARY BOLAND, FRANK KEENAN, AND ROBERT McKIM IN "THE STEPPING STONE"
(Triangle-Kay-Bee)

He has a long contract, and "The Stepping Stone" is the first of a new series of frequent releases of the Ince-supervised variety.

"The Stepping Stone" presents as Keenan's leading woman Mary Boland, who served John Drew in the same capacity for many years. Reginald Barker directed the picture from a scenario by C. Gardner Sullivan.

More Time to Lesser for His Other Interests

Film Magnate Who Was Compelled to Make Releasing Arrangements with V-L-S-E to Fill Orders Quickly for "Ne'er-Do-Well," Gets Foreign Rights to Big Productions

IN an interview, discussing his reasons for releasing "The Ne'er-Do-Well" through V-L-S-E, Sol. L. Lesser, who two months ago purchased this picture from Colonel W. N. Selig for $150,000, said to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"After six weeks' campaign the offers for bookings on 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' came in so fast that I was compelled to seek the assistance of a national organization for distribution.

"While my plan of marketing direct to the exhibitor would have been a success, and brought big results, I was here afforded an opportunity for quick returns of my investment through V-L-S-E, as I feel that its policies are the right policies and the lasting ones, and its system of booking is the most wonderful it has been my experience to observe.

"Then, besides, the deal takes a great deal of work from my shoulders, and releases me for other activities I now have in progress. Had I handled 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' by direct booking it would have been months before I could have turned to my other propositions.

"From the inquiries received, and the enthusiasm shown in 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' in the past two months, I can unselfishly say that the production will make a record wherever it plays, and I do not consider it second to any motion picture on the market today.

"I had opportunities to market 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' through the various programs, but during my two weeks' negotiations with General Manager Irwin, of the V-L-S-E, I became thoroughly conversant with its practical policies and fair manner of treatment of the exhibitor, and decided with its open market policy and eighty live wire representatives in the field, and fifty prints in immediate action, that the exhibitor would have the opportunity of getting 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' for his theatre more quickly.

"Then besides, with its open booking policy, every exhibitor, regardless of his connections, will have an equal opportunity of securing the attraction.

"I still have my interests in the film business, including my exchanges in California, and interests in other pictures that are playing in various territories throughout this country.

"Besides, I have just acquired foreign rights on some big productions, which, together with other propositions which I now have pending, will take up most of my time."

MARY CHARLESON PLAYS OPPOSITE CHERRY IN "PASSERS BY"

Mary Charleson, who has been seen in a number of photoplays since she left the "legitimate" several years ago, has the part of Mary Summers in the Equitable's production of "Passers By," in which she co-stars with Charles Cherry.

Miss Charleson has been featured with and starred opposite some of the best known of screen actors, Maurice Costello and John

William Fox Makes Entry Into British Markets

General Manager Sheehan Opens Offices in England and Scotland—Corporation Also Operating in Australia, Canada, Brazil, Argentine, with Other Countries Under Consideration

THE arrival of Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, in England this week and the immediate opening under his direction of a chain of offices in England and Scotland, means that this film company attains a new stage of its expansion into the world markets.

Entry into the British market makes the sixth country to be invaded by William Fox in less than twenty-four months. His big corporation is now operating in Australia, England, Scotland, Canada, Brazil, Argentine and is reaching out in other directions.

Two years ago William Fox was operating the Box Office Attraction Company and the Greater New York Film Rental Company. The latter concern was not a film manufacturer in any sense.

It bought film wherever it could find it and marketed it through its own small chain of exchanges. His success with the Greater New York organization resulted in the production of his own films through his Box Office Attraction Company.

Last September the Fox Film Corporation inaugurated a regular contract service of a five-reel feature each week, and the few exchanges that had been marketing his product expanded into a chain of thirty domestic branches and sub-offices dotted all over the North American continent. Entry into foreign lands followed soon thereafter.

It is noteworthy that the expansion of the Fox interests has been marked by no alliances of any sort. The Fox Film Corporation owns its entire producing and marketing structure, shares quarters with no other concerns and employs no men jointly with other organizations.

General Manager Sheehan will be in England for several months.

Antipodes Take Kindly to Metro Pictures

"Notwithstanding Feature Oversupply Metro Is Going Strong in Australian Centers," Is Cablegram Received by President Rowland from Agents There

SINCE Metro invaded Australia and New Zealand, a few weeks ago, nothing but commendatory reports have been received from the antipodes by President Richard A. Rowland of the Metro Pictures Corporation. The first Metro plays have just been shown there, and Metro has received a cablegram from Vogel and Howells, its distributors for that section of the world, which reads:

"Notwithstanding feature oversupply, Metro is going strong in Australian centres."

Benjamin F. Howells, the New York representative of Vogel and Howells, when seen in the Metro offices, in the Longacre building, made some observations on motion picture conditions in Australia.

"Australia is a wonderful motion picture field," he said, "and the evident belief of some American manufacturers, that it can be used successfully as a dumping ground, is absolutely erroneous.

"Our audiences are made up of as discerning and discriminating people as may be found anywhere, and they are more like Americans than any other nationality Consequently, they have the same tastes in many matters.

"Although we are seemingly located in a far and out of the way place, still we are not behind the times, as some persons are inclined to think.

"For example, it might surprise many people that we have theatres down there, erected and devoted exclusively to the presentation of motion pictures, on a far more elaborate and luxurious plan even than your Strand theatre on Broadway.

"And more than that, we have had them several years before you had them in this country.

"We have the best class of people there for our patrons. It is not unusual to find most of the parquet filled with people in evening clothes. The Australians are good motion picture fans.

"We do not have the many counter attractions there as you have in the states. For instance, we do not know anything of your modern cabaret. The Australians like, above everything else, a good clean feature.

"They thoroughly enjoy a good story. Then, too, they know all your American stars. For these reasons I am sure that Metro plays are going to storm the country, for they have in them all the elements that the Australian appreciates.

"It is true the field for feature productions is crowded in Australia, but like anything else, there is always room for the best. And that is why we came to America to get the Metro productions.

"Our first contract calls for twenty of Metro's first features, and the others will be used as fast as the demand is created.

"Our advertising in Australia is pretty much the same as in America, only it is probably carried out on a more extensive plan, not being quite so costly as here.

"Of course it goes without saying that we like American pictures better than any other. In fact, any American commodity has the preference there.

"The average Australian considers it a compliment to tell him he is doing anything 'like the Yankees.' I understand there is a system in America considered illegal and unethical, which concerns a double or triple distribution of pictures by a combination of theatres.

"That is where three theatres, for instance, have each rented a different film for the night and arrange to exchange them with each other—'bicyling' I think you call it here. I know you regard it as quite dishonest.

"In our country this is considered quite legitimate and fair, only we call them 'the motorcycle squad.'

"The admission prices in our various motion picture theatres range from six to twelve and twenty cents, according to location, etc."

HUTCHINSON MAKES BRIEF VISIT TO SAN FRANCISCO

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, March 17.

S. S. Hutchinson, of the American Film Manufacturing Company, was in San Francisco this week for a brief visit at the local branch of the Mutual Film Corporation.

Splendid weather is now being experienced at Santa Barbara, as well as at San Francisco, and the various producing companies are very busy.

STARS SEE "MAN AND HIS ANGEL" AT LOEW'S

A large gathering of film stars assembled at Loew's New York theatre last Thursday night, when Gail Kane, Robert Warwick, Alice Brady, Carlyle Blackwell, Frances Nelson, Gerda Holmes, Arthur Ashley, Mary Charleson, Mollie King, Holbrook Blinn, Doris Kenyon, and Chester Barnett witnessed a performance of "Man and His Angel." Jane Grey was hostess.

"Yo' Pays Yo' Money and Takes Yo' Choice"

Pallas Pictures Company, Introducing an Innovation, Offers a "Happy Ending" and a "Tragic Ending" for "The Heart of Paula," with Lenore Ulrich

FOR the first time in the history of motion pictures, a photoplay with both a happy and a tragic ending will be supplied to exhibitors on April 3, when Pallas Pictures will release on the Paramount Program, Lenore Ulrich in "The Heart of Paula."

In producing "The Heart of Paula," the novelty of putting out a photoplay with two endings to meet the requirements of the exhibitor according to the liking of his patrons, was conceived purely by accident.

Upon preparing the final scenes of the production, Lenore Ulrich, the Morosco film star, who was "loaned" to Pallas Pictures for this subject, stated that she was not in favor of the climax as called for by the scenario.

On the other hand, upon consultation on the matter, George Broadhurst, the author who has become associated with Pallas Pictures, agreed that the ending of the photoplay was a logical and desirable conclusion to the story.

Other authorities were consulted, and the expressions varied to such an extent that it was thought best to produce both endings and then decide which would prove the most effective.

Upon completion of "The Heart of Paula" with two endings, the decision was made all the more difficult because of the excellence of both, in the eyes of the company's officials. One, presenting the tragic death of the heroine, offered an exceptionally dramatic finis, they thought, while the other displayed the happy conclusion, preceded by a fight in the moonlight, in addition to qualities they considered dramatically artistic.

It was then decided to exploit the production with the original ending, together with additional film presenting the other.

Thus each exhibitor may either have the opportunity of selecting the ending which he feels his patrons like the best, according to the tastes of his locality, or he may exhibit both endings and leave it up to his audiences to decide for themselves which they think the most appropriate as a denouement.

Several exhibitors who have been consulted on the matter have received the information of the two endings with enthusiasm, and are planning contests among their patrons in connection with the showing of this photoplay.

In addition, Pallas Pictures have cooperated with the Picture Play Magazine, the Street & Smith publication, in the presentation of an article on "The Happy Ending Vs. The Tragic Climax," which will allow its readers to decide which is the most desirable.

Autographed photographs of Miss Ulrich will be awarded for the most intelligent replies on the subject.

A comprehensive publicity campaign has been arranged for the presentation of "The Heart of Paula," including the exploitation of a song "Paula," taken from the music score especially prepared for the release. Special slides, newspaper cuts, cut-outs and other publicity material are at the disposal of the live exhibitor using Paramount service.

Supporting Miss Ulrich in her latest film are such players as Forrest Stanley, Howard Davies, Herbert Standing, Jack Livingstone and Velma Lefler.

LOUISE HUFF IN FIRST PEARSON-FOX RELEASE

Louise Huff, who has played in a number of Lubin, Famous Players and other feature films, has been engaged by William Fox as one of the supporting players in the first Fox release starring Virginia Pearson.

She is widely known as one of the prettiest of screen ingenues, and has an attractive role in "Blazing Love," which is the title of the first Pearson picture. Louise Huff is a Georgia girl, having been born in Columbus.

E-K-O FORMED BY WOMAN TO EXPLOIT EDUCATIONAL, "INVISIBLE ENEMY"

The E-K-O Film Company, 729 Seventh avenue, New York, was recently organized by Emma K. Oswald of Los Angeles, for the direct distribution of a five-reel feature film, entitled "The Invisible Enemy," which was produced by her some time ago in California.

The picture presents in story form the supreme combat of man against tuberculosis. The motion picture play has received the endorsement of the highest medical authorities, and it is going to be presented throughout the country under the auspices of several national organizations engaged in social welfare work.

The general manager of the E-K-O Film Company, George Szirmay, will inaugurate an entirely new policy of distribution, either on a rental or state right basis, which will insure the exhibitor effective co-operation. While Mr. Szirmay is practically a newcomer in the motion picture field, his long and varied experience as press and publicity man here and abroad give promise of achievements in the field of educational photoplays in the near future.

"The Invisible Enemy" is the first release of a series planned by Mr. Szirmay.

CHICAGO PLANS $100,000 FOR ACTORS' FUND

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chicago, Ill., March 18.

Of the $500,000 the motion picture industry has sent out to contribute to the million dollar fund for actors, Chicago hopes to match New York's $100,000 pledge with another $100,000.

On May 15, which is set for Actors' Day, some 118 houses already have volunteered to contribute a portion of their receipts to the fund.

Every motion picture interest is joining hands. Those serving actively on committees being William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company; George K. Spoor, of the Essanay Company, and others.

"Ramona" Date in New York Set for April 5 or 6

Fourteen Reel Feature Based on the Helen Hunt Jackson Classic of Californian Life in the Early Days Will Open Almost Simultaneously in Other Cities

PLANS are rapidly being completed by Clune and Brown for the presentation of their fourteen-reel feature, "Ramona," in the principal cities of the United States.

The picture will first be presented in the east at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, New York, on April 5 or 6, for an indefinite run, and almost simultaneously will open at the Auditorium in Chicago, the Hippodrame in Cleveland, and at one of the largest Boston theatres.

"We have leased the Forty-fourth Street Theatre from April 2," said W. H. Clune this week, "but so elaborate are the lighting effects required that it will take several days to get them installed and working to our satisfaction. This work will be done under the personal direction of Lloyd Brown, general manager of the production.

"'Ramona' will combine the picture and stage setting; it represents three different episodes, and these are divided by stage settings on which great care and expense have been lavished.

"For this reason we call our production a cinema-drama, as it combines the highest type of cinema features with strong dramatic effects.

"The picture has been playing to capacity in Los Angeles for the last six weeks—that is, if you call a business of $12,000 to $13,000 a week 'capacity.'

"We are now negotiating for theatres in the largest cities, and our opening will be practically simultaneous. Theatres at Brighton Beach and Atlantic City also want the feature for summer runs, but we have not decided as yet just what will be done in this direction.

"The picture was produced at the Clune studios in California by our own company, under the direction of Donald Crisp. We have broken all records for picture runs out there already, and expect to do the same in the East and Middle West.

"Our next picture, 'The Eyes of the World,' is now nearly completed. We plan to put it before the public in the same manner as 'Ramona,' and expect to have it ready about September 1."

First April Release from Gaumont Is Set for Third

"The Haunted Manor," a Mutual Masterpicture, Features Ivy Shepard, Supported by Schenck and Pemberton—Second Subject Is "Quality of Faith"

THE Gaumont Company has announced that its first April release of a Mutual Masterpicture will be on the third. On this date "The Haunted Manor" will be given to the screen. Ivy Shepard is starring in this production.

Prominent parts are taken by Earl O. Schenck and Henry W. Pemberton. It is a story of an American adventuress who fascinates an East Indian Rajah.

Miss Shepard, who appeared to advantage in a similar role in Gaumont's "The Drifter," will have the part of the adventuress.

The second Mutual Masterpicture of the month which Gaumont will release is "The Quality of Faith." The co-stars in this are Gertrude Robinson and Alexander Gaden.

They have not appeared together in a Gaumont photodrama since they played "As a Woman Sows," "The Quality of Faith" will be released by Mutual April 17.

It was previously announced that Marguerite Courtot would be seen on the screen in April in "Feathertop," the unusual photoplay being filmed at the Gaumont winter quarters, Jacksonville, Fla., under the direction of Henry J. Vernot. The rearrangement of releases brings "Feathertop" to the screen the first of May.

FLASHES FROM "MARIA ROSA": GERALDINE FARRAR'S THIRD PHOTOPLAY FOR LASKY

KALEM SIGNS NORMA NICHOLLS FOR COMEDY ROLES

Norma Nicholls, a pretty comedienne, well known in West Coast circles, is the latest addition to the Kalem comedy forces.

Miss Nicholls will be seen in the "Ham" comedy subjects, her beauty and bewitching personality making her an able successor for Ethel Teare, who has now reached the heights of stardom at the head of her own Kalem company.

The comedienne makes her Kalem debut in "For Sweet Charity," a "Ham" single-reeler, released on March 21.

Other "Ham" productions in which she will be seen soon are "Ham and the Hermit's Daughter" and "From Altar to Halter," another "Ham" burlesque.

VILLA MURDER SCENES OBTAINED BY GRANVILLE FOR UNIVERSAL

The Universal announces that Frederic Granville, the cameraman who accompanied the Steffanson Arctic Expedition and brought back a collection of motion pictures of life within the Arctic Circle, has expressed back to New York. scenes showing the massacre at Columbus, N. M., by Francisco Villa, the Mexican bandit.

These views will be shown in the Universal Animated Weekly.

Geraldine Farrar Soon Seen in Her Third Lasky

"Maria Rosa" Is a Story of Spanish Peasant Life, Directed by Cecil B. De Mille—Wallace Reid Is Leading Support of Diva

GERALDINE FARRAR will appear soon in her third Lasky production entitled "Maria Rosa," according to announcement made this week by the producing company.

This is the third of the photoplays Miss Farrar made for the Lasky company when she was at the studios at Hollywood last summer. In the order of their release the productions are "Carmen," which created international interest; "Temptation," something of an expose of grand opera conditions in America, and "Maria Rosa," founded on the successful stage play of the same name by Guido Marburg and Wallace Gillpatrick.

There is a point of exceptional interest about the release of "Maria Rosa," coming soon after Miss Farrar's marriage to Mr. Lou-Tellegen.

It was while Miss Marrar under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille, was making this production at the Lasky studios that she first met Mr. Lou-Tellegen.

Curiously enough, Lou-Tellegen, who was also at the Lasky studios appearing in "The Explorer" and "The Unknown," had made his English-speaking debut on the American stage two years ago in a dramatic version of "Maria Rosa."

In the conference between the star and producers which prefaced the making of this picture, Lou-Tellegen joined the discussions and gave to Miss Farrar and Mr. De Mille the benefit of his experience with the dramatic version.

The friendship between Miss Farrar and Mr. Lou-Tellegen began with these discussions.

"Maria Rosa" is a tragedy of Spanish peasant life. The leading role in support of the star will be played by Wallace Reid, who has come rapidly to the front as one of the leading younger men in the photoplay world.

The supporting cast also includes Pedro de Cordoba, Ernest Joy, Anita King, Horace B. Carpenter and James Neil.

Maria Rosa, the Spanish peasant girl, loves Andres. Ramon, a rival for her affections, one day kills a fishmonger to avenge an insult to Maria Rosa.

He flees and Andres is accused of the crime and sentenced to life imprisonment. Then Ramon lays siege to Maria Rosa's heart, and brings her a letter alleged to have been written by the prison authorities, announcing Andres' death.

Even then Maria Rosa refuses to wed Ramon until he compromises her by gaining admittance to her home at night, and leaving just as several townspeople pass the door.

The wedding is then arranged. Andres, pardoned, reaches Maria Rosa's house a few minutes before the wedding party returns from the church. Realizing that a terrible mistake had been made, she persuades Andres to leave with all haste and bring the village priest.

Then she wins an admission from Ramon that it was he who killed the fishmonger and allowed Andres to suffer. Enraged, she kills him and as he dies members of her family rush in to learn from Ramon that his mortal injury was caused by himself as the result of an accident.

Maria Rosa and Andres are at last freed from the evil machinations of Ramon.

Four Widely Dissimilar Plays from Fox in April

Vivian Martin Will Be Seen in "A Modern Thelma," 3d; Doris Pawn in "Blue Blood and Red," 10th; Virginia Pearson in "Blazing Love," 17th

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by William Fox that during the month of April the Fox Film Corporation will release four widely dissimilar productions in which will be seen stars and supporting players well-known to photoplay audiences. The stars, productions and dates of releases are:

Vivian Martin in "A Modern Thelma," April 3; George Walsh and Doris Pawn in "Blue Blood and Red," April 10; Virginia Pearson in "Blazing Love," April 17, and William Farnum in "A Man of Sorrow," April 24.

"Blue Blood and Red," written and directed by Raoul Walsh, the first real outdoor Western play produced by Fox, is redolent of the prairies and the round up. The scenes of "A Modern Thelma" are laid in Norway.

"Blazing Love" presents Miss Pearson in the first William Fox photoplay, a society drama, while the William Farnum subject, based on the stage success, "Hoodman Blind." This deals with the drink problem and mistaken identity.

KALEM'S NEWSPAPER MATS FOR "HAZARDS" MAKE EFFECTIVE PUBLICITY AIDS

Some of the most popular of Kalem publicity aids are the two-column newspaper mats supplied each week with the single reel "Hazards of Helen."

The mats are not a general publicity feature in the sense that they are sent to all newspapers on a chance of their being used.

Instead the "Hazards" mats are a direct aid because they are supplied only to those newspapers and exhibitors who have requested them. At present, close to five hundred newspapers are on the list, and under the advance request" plan the percentage of returns is unusually high.

The success of the "Hazards" mats is attributed to the fact that in each episode of the railroad series there is at least one big thrill, thus supplying a striking and unusual photograph, welcomed by any newspaper. A two hundred and fifty word news story is built around the illustration and the particular release.

LESSER AT WORK ON ANOTHER BIG DEAL

Sol. Lesser, who recently completed a deal by which the Selig production, "The Ne'er-do-Well," will be handled by V-L-S-E, slipped into Chicago last week and then slipped out again, leaving motion picture circles conjecturing as to what will be his next move.

Mr. Lesser was non-committal regarding his future plans, but urged his friends to keep "their eyes peeled," as he expressed it.

It can be stated that Mr. Lesser is working on another motion picture transaction which will create interest when the details of the deal are divulged.

MacQUARRIE CAST FOR OLD MAN CHARACTER ROLE IN FILM FOR SIGNAL

Murdock MacQuarrie, the actor-director, is at present playing in a typical "MacQuarried" part—the type of role which has made him famous. He is cast for Bill Jenkins, an old man character in a Western drama, which has not yet been titled.

The picture is being produced by the Signal Film Corporation, to be released as a Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition.

Ethel Clayton Is Now a World-Equitable Star

Actress Who Will Play Opposite Blackwell and McAllister Has Sixteen Feature Productions to Her Credit, Following a Stage Career Including Many Successes

ETHEL CLAYTON, for the past four years one of the leading feature stars with the Lubin Company, with sixteen feature productions to her credit, has become a permanent member of the World-Equitable Corporations, and within one hour of signing was allotted the principal female role in "The Woman Of It."

Carlyle Blackwell and Paul McAllister will appear opposite her, and it will be staged at a point somewhat distant from Saranac, in the Adirondacks.

Miss Clayton's contract with World and Equitable was signed twenty minutes after she arrived in New York.

ETHEL CLAYTON

When Henry B. Harris was in the height of his dramatic triumph, and "The Lion and the Mouse," "The Traveling Salesman," "The Chorus Lady" and "Children of Destiny" were running on Broadway, Ethel Clayton was creating her first impression as a dramatic actress in "The Lion and the Mouse."

Later Mr. Harris assigned Miss Clayton to the principal role opposite Wallace Eddinger in "The Making of Bobby Burnitt." She made an excellent personal hit, although the show itself was not a financial success.

Later when "The Country Boy" was produced, Miss Clayton was taken from the cast of "Bobby Burnitt" by Mr. Harris and Mr. Selwyn, the author, and given one of the most important roles in what proved to be one of the biggest hits of the season, "The Country Boy" showing to big patronage both in New York and on the road.

It was while Miss Clayton was playing in "The Country Boy" that she attracted the attention of the film makers. A short while after "The Country Boy" completed its engagement in New York Miss Clayton made her appearance in the first three-reel production ever made, entitled "When the Earth Trembled."

Miss Clayton appeared in no less than sixteen features during the past three years, the more important ones of which include "The Lion and the Mouse," "The Gamblers," "The House Next Door," "The Fortune Hunter" and "The Wolf," and recently completed her final appearance for her former company in "The Great Divide."

Miss Clayton left the screen two years ago to play the leading role in William A. Brady's production of "The Brute," and returned to the screen later, preferring the silent to the spoken drama.

World and Equitable have an ambitious program arranged for the screen player. Her appearance in "The Woman Of It" will introduce her to her great following on the World program.

Afterwards she will be seen about every ten weeks in either a World or Equitable production. "The Woman Of It" is now in the course of construction at the Premo studios.

HELEN HOLMES BACK IN LOS ANGELES FROM DESERT

Helen Holmes and J. P. McGowan, the heroine-star and the director of the Mutual Film Corporation's spectacular railroad feature, "The Girl and the Game," have returned to Los Angeles from Los Vegas, Nevada, where they have been at work on some of the scenes for the coming chapter in the serial.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

CHILDREN'S PERFORMANCES, AND A CERTAIN DUTY THE EXHIBITOR OWES THE INDUSTRY

IN the "Timetable" of the Empress theatre, Owensboro, Ky., we find this note in an advertisement of a photoplay:

"Children will hardly appreciate the extreme quality of this great picture, and it is not recommended for them."

It is gratifying to note this evidence of common sense on the part of an exhibitor. There is no reason on earth why every exhibitor should not do likewise. In fact, it is his duty to do so. He owes it to his patrons; he owes it to himself; he owes it to the industry of which he is so important a part.

Your patrons cannot know in advance precisely what is in the pictures you are to show each day, unless you tell them. This doesn't mean that you must reveal every single thing the picture contains. But it does mean that you ought to let them know, for instance, that certain pictures are not suitable for children.

Mind you, this is nothing against the pictures. Many books, many plays, many facts of life, are not suitable for children either. They are, however, entirely fit for mature minds. You should refuse to take any stock in the allegation of the reformers that the picture theatres are patronized largely by children. This is nothing more nor less than a misstatement. The best statistics aavilable indicate that children constitute about fifteen per cent of motion picture audiences. Can you afford to let the censor advocates hold the fifteen per cent over your head as a club?

This is exactly what the censor advocates are doing. They are attempting to reduce the standard of motion pictures to the level of children. They are attempting to set up the child's mind as a criterion. Of course this is a rank injustice. But what are you doing to counteract it?

You do not have to lose the child's patronage entirely. On the other hand you should cultivate it by setting aside a certain day each week for special children's performances, at which you show pictures of special appeal to the young.

In this way you will be doing your share toward removing the menace of the particular kind of censorship with which we are threatened at present. And let us remind you of this fact: If the censorship movement gets a stranglehold on the industry you will find that your own business will suffer, because the manufacturer will be forced to offer you pictures which will not command the patronage you are now enjoying.

BRIEF HINTS TO BUSY EXHIBITORS

The best trademark for any theatre is good pictures. When you have established your house as the home of good pictures, you have trademarked it in the most effective way possible.

Don't overemphasize stars in your advertising. Rather emphasize the appeal of the story, or the picture's wealth of natural settings, or some other of the hundred and one things that go to make up a picture.

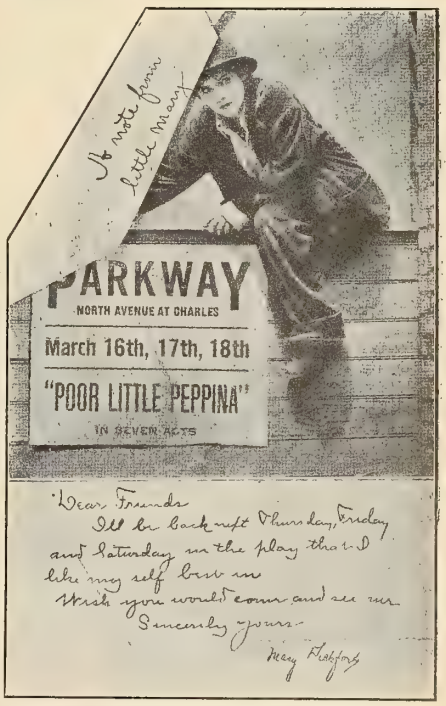
See if you can't get your newspaper to set your ads. in a modern, lightface type. Keep away from heavy type. And, above all, you should avoid crowding your ads. with a mass of words.

BANNERS ON STREET CARS HERALD "BATTLE CRY OF PEACE"

In advertising "The Battle Cry of Peace," Manager Dan L. Sharits, of the Star theatre, Medford, Ore., placed banners on all street cars in his city. He also got permission to hang an eighteen-foot flag across the street, a new departure for Medford. He made liberal use of newspaper space, and decorated the theatre front in military style.

Sharits, in a letter to Manager Tom North, of the Seattle V-L-S-E, reports that he gave the picture more publicity than any he has ever exhibited and the result was splendid patronage.

DONATES 1,000 TICKETS TO AID PATRIOTIC CAUSE



In line with many patriotic actions by Canadian theatre managers during the war, Manager H. L. Gage, of the Rex theatre at Regina, Sask., has presented to the Regina chapter of the Daughters of the Empire one thousand tickets to the theatre, good at any time until September 1.

These tickets will be sold by members of the society, and the entire proceeds devoted to their patriotic work.

A NOVEL IDEA FOR A "PEPPINA" HERALD

Here is something quite novel in the shape of a herald. Folded, it looks like a personal note from "Little Mary" to the recipient. When he opens it, he finds that the note idea is carried out also in the letter beginning "Dear Friends."

The personal appeal in a herald of this sort exceeds that of the stereotyped kind. The cut also adds to its attractiveness.

ISSUED BY THE PARKWAY THEATRE, BALTIMORE

Note how the theatre banner gives the appearance of having been tacked on the fence over which "Little Mary" is climbing, attired in one of the costumes she wears in "Poor Little Peppina."

The whole idea is novel, and shows originality, of which there is none too much in exhibitor advertising.

POSTAL CARD STRIP ADVERTISES GEORGIA THEATRE

A neat postal card strip, carrying cuts of the theatre exterior, lobby, auditorium and stage setting, is issued by the Dreamland Theatre, Augusta, Ga. This is an attractive form of advertising, which seems to be gaining favor among exhibitors.

CLASSIFY YOUR MAILING LIST, AND USE IT SYSTEMATICALLY

Paramount Progress for March 16 contains an excellent suggestion with regard to mailing lists, which we pass along.

"How Many Names Have You on Your Mailing List?" the article asks, and continues:

"Are these names classified as to what sort of pictures these people are interested in? Do you list them under Travel, Educational, Drama, Comedy?

"One picture, for instance, will have something of especial interest to musicians; another will be laid in a section of the country that is of particular geographical value; another will be written around the Civil War; another filmed in the Far North.

"Then there are the stars. Every man, woman, or child has an individual preference for some one star. Get these preferences and let them know especially when he or she is to appear."

It is suggested also that schools or other educational institutions are a big field for mailing list development. When the exhibitor is showing a film of especial interest in a historical or scientific way he can circularize the classes studying those subjects.

"Study your individual conditions and adapt your promotion schemes to these conditions."

HYMAN BELIEVES IN LIBERAL ADVERTISING FOR HIS THEATRE

Manager Edward L. Hyman, of the New Victoria theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., is a firm believer in advertising, and although the New Victoria is a neighboring house, Mr. Hyman is placing good-sized advertisements in the local newspapers.

He believes in letting patrons know what is being shown, and does not believe in letting people "guess" whether the show is a good one or not.

Mr. Hyman also gets out an elaborate program, which is presented in an attractive make-up.

William Rosenthal, former assistant of the Palace theatre, is assistant manager of the New Victoria. Mr. Rosenthal is a veteran theatre man, and knows every "inch of the way" in the operating end of the house.

NO MUNICIPAL COMPETITION FOR EXHIBITORS TO MEET IN ST. LOUIS

St. Louis motion picture exhibitors with theatres and airdromes near the parks and playgrounds where free motion pictures were shown last summer, have learned that no appropriation had been made for free pictures this year, from an announcement made by Mayor Kiel last week at a public hearing of the board of estimate.

A delegation of motion picture exhibitors appeared before the mayor last summer and protested against the unfair competition with the city which they were compelled to meet, the high license for a show for which they could only charge five cents admission.

After looking into the matter the mayor decided that the competition should be eliminated for the future, although the contract for the free entertainments was not broken last summer.

A SMALL NOTE BOOK HELPS HIM BUILD PATRONAGE

F. Joseph Kohlberg's theatre, The Farnam, in Omaha, is not only in the downtown district, but it is between two of the city's largest hotels. Mr. Kohlberg noticed many of his patrons were from the traveling men who stopped over the hotels over night.

He struck up a speaking acquaintance with many of them. When he heard their names he jotted it down in a little red book. Now, when they come to Omaha and stop in at The Farnam, there is Kohlberg, ready to call them by name. They show their appreciation by always paying him a visit.

Kohlberg believes in efficiency, and the little red book is a part of his equipment. He has the names of many patrons who pay him regular visits.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF STARS PRESENTED TO BERKELEY PATRONS

The patrons of the T. & D. theatre at Berkeley, Cal., are being presented with real photographs of leading stars from time to time and many are attempting to secure complete collections of these. The first of the series was of Anna Held.

This theatre is proving to be one of the best attended of any in the circuit conducted by Turner & Dahnken.

BLIND MAN AND DOG FIGURE IN LIVE WIRE STUNT

When up in northern Iowa recently (he doesn't remember the town), W. D. Mitchell, on the road for the General Film Co. out of Omaha, saw a unique advertising stunt that he thinks is the best ever.

A blind man led by a dog, was going up the street. A blind man naturally attracts more or less attention, especially when led by a dog.

But on this man's coat was a sign which, instead of saying "Please Help the Blind," said:

"I would give $25 to see 'The Strange Case of Mary Page' at the ——— theatre tonight."

The exhibitor, according to Mitchell, declared it was a big paying stunt, besides being some needed financial help for the blind man.

POSTAL CARDS IN COLOR A NOVEL EXHIBITOR STUNT

The Rowland and Clark theatres, which include the Regent, The Belmar, The Arsenal, The Strand, The Oakland, and The Bellevue, in Pittsburgh, Pa., have recently sent Paramount Pictures Corporation postal cards reproducing various portions of their theatres. These theatres are among the most attractively decorated houses we have ever seen.

The advertising value of sending out high-grade colored postal cards such as these are, is undoubtedly great.

OMAHA BEE STARTS A PHOTOPLAY DEPARTMENT

The Omaha Bee is a new addition to the Omaha newspapers giving space to motion picture amusements. "Flashes from Filmland" the page is called. It runs more pictures of actors and actresses from filmland than any other Omaha paper.

While the Bee devotes only one page to this department, however, the World-Herald, which entered the field first, gives two pages every Sunday and a two-column department every Tuesday and Thursday.

FULL PAGE NEWSPAPER SPACE FOR THIS THEATRE

There is nothing small about the advertising plans of the Orpheum, Huntington, W. Va. It goes in for full page newspaper space in two newspapers—The Herald-Dispatch and The Advertiser, in announcement of its opening.

The house doesn't open until March 20, but it began right by advertising the opening date and house policy in the papers of the 13th.

KALAMAZOO MERCHANTS AID FREE TICKET PLAN

Twenty-one merchants in Kalamazoo, Mich., are co-operating with the management of the Fuller theatre, giving free admission tickets to their patrons. The free distribution lasts until April 3.

It is for the purpose of popularizing the Fuller and incidentally is a good thing for the retail merchants, who get the tickets at reduced prices.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

FIVE STARS IN THREE LASKY OFFERINGS FOR APRIL; "THE RACE" A MOTOR CAR THRILLER

FIVE popular stars in three big productions is what the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company announces for release in the month of April.

The stars in the three plays will be Wallace Reid and Cleo Ridgely in "The Love Mask"; Victor Moore, supported by Anita King, in an automobile thriller entitled "The Race," and Marie Doro in her first appearance as a Lasky star in a photoplay entitled "The Heart of Nora Flynn."

"The Love Mask" will be the first of these releases. The date is April 6, and the appearance of Cleo Ridgely and Wallace Reid as co-stars is their second stellar attempt.

One of the scenes depicted in this play shows Miss Ridgely standing on top of a stage coach which is drawn by four frightened horses.

The horses and coach dash down a hill, and the camera reveals Miss Ridgely, reins in hand, bringing them into check.

Wallace Reid, who made his debut with the Lasky company as Don Jose in support of Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen," was seen recently at the Strand Theatre with Mae Murray in "To Have and To Hold."

"The Love Mask" was written by Cecil B. De Mille and Jeanie MacPherson, and is the first De Mille play not produced under his own personal direction. Frank Reicher was the producer.

"The Race," which will be released April 13, and in which Victor Moore appears as the star, supported by Anita King, was founded in part upon Miss King's transcontinental tour of last autumn, during which she crossed the continent from Pacific to Atlantic by automobile unattended. Clinton H. Stagg, and was directed by

"The Race" is by Hector Turnbull and George Melford. Victor Moore as a comedian is well known to motion picture fans by reason of his three previous Lasky successes, "Snobs," "Chimmie Fadden" and "Chimmie Fadden Out West."

Following a series of successes in production of the Famous Players Film Company, among them "The Morals of Marcus," "The White Pearl" and "Diplomacy," and a production by the Fine Arts Studio, "The Wood Nymph," Marie Doro, on April 24, will make her debut as a Lasky star in a photoplay produced by Cecil B. De Mille, entitled "The Heart of Nora Flynn."

As Miss Doro has signed a contract for a long term with the Lasky company, the former Frohman star's first production will be looked forward to with exceptional interest.

She recently left New York to remain for some time at the Lasky Studio at Hollywood, California, and the production "The Heart of Nora Flynn" will be followed by a number of other big feature photoplays.

Hector Turnbull is the author of the story and Jeanie MacPherson of the scenario.

The cast of Miss Doro's photoplay includes Elliott Dexter as her leading man, Ernest Joy and Mabel Van Buren. All of these players are familiar to motion picture audiences.

SEA PICTURE FROM APFEL-FOX COMPANY BY WELL KNOWN DRAMATIST FOR FARNUM

THE Oscar Apfel-Fox Company on the West Coast, which is headed by William Farnum, as star, upon advice from William Fox have postponed the making of scenes on a subject just started and will next film a sea story, scenario for which was written by a well-known dramatist especially for Mr. Farnum, and secured by Mr. Fox on condition that the author's name be kept secret until he saw the production on the screen.

Last week the company went to the Santa Cruz Islands, about one hundred miles north of Los Angeles, where they will spend two weeks filming exteriors. Director Apfel took approximately seventy-five people.

A fishing village similar to those seen on islands off the coast of Maine or Newfoundland will be built in Los Angeles and transported to the islands.

During the making of scenes members of the party will enjoy all the pleasures of a camping outing, as they will be accompanied by chefs and a number of aides who will conduct and improvise primitive boarding houses.

Aside from Mr. Farnum the only ones engaged are William Burress, Willard Lewis and Wheeler Oakman, who recently severed his connection with the Selig Company.

Dorothy Bernard, who played feminine leads opposite Mr. Farnum, has been recalled to the Eastern Fox studios and it is not known who will be her successor.

The R. A. Walsh-Fox company has practically completed the first subject, which is of a decidedly Western style, and this will be released under the title of "Blue Blood and Red." Most of the exteriors were made at the Western town of Newhall, Cal.

TERRISS COMPLETES "MY COUNTRY FIRST"

Tom Terriss has just completed a five-reeler entitled "My Country First." It is a most timely story, as it deals principally with the operations in this country of pernicious foreigners who are endeavoring to create disturbances here and foment trouble between the United States Government and foreign powers.

It deals with preparedness in a novel manner, coupled with a heart interest of a man and two women, together with some wholesome and patriotic action.

Mr. Terriss, who has both written and produced the picture, plays the principal role himself, that of a young American inventor. He is supported by a very excellently chosen cast, consisting of Helen Ziegfeld, a well-known theatrical name; Jill Woodward, a late Triangle star; Harold Vosburgh, who took the leading role in "Kick-In"; Jack Hopkins and Alfred Heming.

Frank Kugler the cameraman, who has been associated until recently with William Fox, had charge of the photographic department, and also assisted as technical director.

KALEM WILL CONSTRUCT RAILWAY TOWN

The Kalem "Hazards of Helen" company, in Glendale, Cal., is making "When Duty Calls." This is a single reel subject with the usual cast headed by Helen Gibson.

Plans are being made for the construction of a small town railway station, duplicating that along the Salt Lake Railway tracks at Slauson Junction, Cal.

This will be erected on railway property at Glendale, and will be known as Kalem station. The interior will be finished so that it can serve for both locations.

A property room will be built adjoining where the company may leave all props. This will greatly facilitate this organization in the making of future subjects.

Other improvements are being made at the Hollywood Kalem studio which will include the building of an 18 x 30 property building and the installation of a stage that may be raised or lowered by hydraulic pressure.

NANCE O'NEIL PLAY FOR LUBIN STAGED IN OIL REGIONS

Nance O'Neil has been engaged for the stellar role in a new five-reel photoplay from the pen of Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, which Edgar Lewis will direct for the Lubin Company.

Dr. Goodman describes the theme as an adventure of love, oil and money in approximately equal parts. The action will be staged amid the oil regions.

"DOLLARS AND THE WOMAN," FROM LUBIN FILM MINT, IS COMPLETED

"Dollars and the Woman" is the photoplay title given to Albert Payson Terhune's story "Dollars and Cents," which has been made into a six-reel feature by the Lubin Company of Philadelphia.

The cast includes Ethel Clayton, Tom Moore, Craufurd Kent, Bartley McCullum and Herbert Fortier, under the direction of Joseph Kaufman.

VITAGRAPH WILL RELEASE IN WEEK OF MARCH 20 FIVE SUBJECTS DIVERSIFIED IN THEME

HEADING the list of Vitagraph releases for the week of March 20 is a five-part Blue Ribbon Feature entitled "The Supreme Temptation."

The four other subjects, "Mr. Jack Trifles," a one-part Daniels picture, another of "The Escapades of Mr. Jack"; "A Squared Account," produced by Vitagraph's Western division, is a single-reeler; "Freddy Versus Hamlet," the latest of the "Freddy Series" of comedies, and "Husks," a three-part Broadway Star Feature, make up the balance of a program that contains eleven thousand feet of photoplays.

"Mr. Jack Trifles," also listed for March 20, Number 5 of "The Escapades of Mr. Jack," shows Frank Daniels as his funny self.

Kate Price plays the part of the wife and Betty Howe is seen in the role of the maid. C. Jay Williams, well-known Vitagraph director, is responsible for its direction.

Director William Wolbert, with an all-star cast of coast members, headed by Otto Lederer, George Kunkel, Anna Schaefer and Jack Mower, photographed "A Squared Account," on the General Film program of March 20.

Another of the "Freddy Series" on Friday, March 24, "Freddy Versus Hamlet," taken at the Vitagraph Bay Shore Studio under the supervision of Frank Currier, features William Dangman, Tod Talford, William Lytell, Jr., and Daisy DeVere.

"Husks," from the pen of James Oliver Curwood, is a Broadway Star Feature announced for Saturday, March 25. Besides playing one of the leading parts, William Humphrey guided the action of this three-part dramatic subject, and was supported by Harry Northrup, Rose Talpey, Nellie Anderson and Carolyn Birch.

"DRIFTWOOD," "FORTUNATE YOUTH" AND "AUSTRIA AT WAR," RAVER, SHOWN TO TRADE

THREE forthcoming features from the Raver Film Corporation were given their trade showing in New York on March 17 at Wurlitzer Fine Arts Hall before a large audience of screen stars, state right buyers and exhibitors.

The first of these, "Driftwood," from the play by Owen Davis, presents Vera Michelena in the stellar role, supported by Charles Graham, Clarissa Selwynn and others.

William J. Locke's book, "The Fortunate Youth," was offered for the first time in picture form, with Wilmuth Merkyl, Lily Leslie, Charles Graham and John Smilev as principals. Five hundred people in all appear in the play, which is elaborately mounted.

"Austria At War," said to be the official Austrian war pictures taken by a staff officer with the sanction of the Emperor, was given in two parts.

The two reels which comprise this production are selected from the first ten thousand feet which reached this country.

Another subject, gleaned from twenty-five thousand feet of negative now nearing completion in the war zone, will follow.

The Raver Film Corporation is acting as sales agent for the Ocean Film Company in the marketing of "Life Without Soul," "The Fortunate Youth" and "Driftwood," besides marketing pictures of its own brand made from the plays of Augustus Thomas, and is also marketing the Austrian war pictures for the Austrian Government.

"DEVIL, SERVANT AND THE MAN" FROM SELIG THROUGH GENERAL ON APRIL 3

THE Selig Polyscope Company announces some interesting releases through General Film Company in the near future. "The Devil, the Servant and the Man" will be a multiple reel feature released on Monday, April 3.

This drama features Kathlyn Williams, supported by Guy Oliver and Lillian Hayward. Some scenes are laid in the snow-bound Northland.

"Wives of the Rich" will be released on Monday, April 10, and features Harry Mestayer, supported by Lillian Hayward and an all-star cast of players.

On Saturday, April 15, there will be released by the Selig company through General Film service "The Beauty Hunters," which the Selig company claims is one of the best short length comedies released in a long time. James Bradbury, who has won fame in the spoken drama in comedy roles, enacts the leading part.

The Selig company announces for release through General Film service on Monday, April 17, the multiple reel feature, "The Three Wise Men." This production was directed by Colin Campbell, and features Thomas Santschi and Miss Bessie Eyton.

There is a strain in this drama which will recall Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" to the minds of the spectators, but the story is in no way founded upon the Dickens' classic. Mr. Santschi and Miss Eyton are supported by Edith Johnson and other Selig stars.

LUBIN AND SELIG FEATURES FOR V-L-S-E

Bessie Eyton and Edith Johnson, supported by Al Filson and a strong cast, are starred in the next Selig feature "The Cycle of Fate," scheduled for release through V-L-S-E April 3. This is a five-reel drama of which Marshal Neilan is the author.

A new Lubin five-part feature, entitled "The Golden Highway," the release date for which has not yet been set, is now in course of preparation, and will shortly appear on the regular program.

Daniel Carson Goodman, author of "Souls in Bondage," "The Gods of Fate" and "Life's Toll" is responsible for the new drama.

STRIKING SCENES FROM "IN THE SHUFFLE" AND "THE CODE OF HONOR," AMERICAN-MUTUAL PRODUCTIONS

LE VINESS BEGINS "THE LESSON" BY KARL COOLIDGE FOR AMERICAN-MUTUAL

ACTIVITIES at the studios of the American-Mutual Company in Santa Barbara are concentrated on the production of some excellent Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition, shorter dramas and "Beauty" comedies.

Having just completed a three-reel drama by Karl Coolidge, entitled "Four Months," Director Carl LeViness has started upon another play by the same author.

This is entitled "The Lesson," and shows the remoulding influence of love upon a young butterfly girl, who marries a man simply to inherit money she could not have otherwise. Vivian Rich, Alfred Vosburgh and George Perilat are in the leading roles.

Director Thomas Ricketts is busy in the production of "The Pendulum of Chance," a story by Anthony Coldeway. The drama pictures the fact that the business efficiency which completely overlooks the personal element may be carried so far that it defeats its own ends.

A financial crash brings about a deeper understanding between a hard working husband and a frivolous wife. Lizette Throne and Edward Coxen have the leading roles, while George Field has the rather thankless task of playing the heavy.

Helene Rosson, E. Forrest Taylor, Harry Von Meter, Louis Lester and Harry McCabe are still working on the Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, "April," a story of mountain folk, which is being produced under the direction of Donald Macdonald.

Good contrast in characterization is obtained by placing a young man of the "blue grass" region in the half primitive mountain country among the mountain folk, where he loses his heart to "April," a wild flower of the district. Helene Rosson has an opportunity for charming work in the role of the maid.

William Russell is directing, as well as playing the leading role, in a five-reel feature entitled "The Secret Mating," a picture in which the "Eternal Triangle" gives way to a four-cornered affair. Hylda Hollis, Charlotte Burton and Harry Keenan support Mr. Russell.

Art Acord, Nita Davis, Dick Le Reno and Lawrence Peyton are being featured in a three-reel drama which Director William Bertram is producing at the American-Mutual studios, entitled "Under Azure Skies."

At the same time, Jack Halloway is under way with J. Edward Hungerford's five-reel drama, "The Man From Manhattan," which will be released as a Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition. Director Edward Sloman is at work on his first picture for the American-Mutual entitled "None So Blind," a drama of modern feminism, and Frank Borzage is producing "Two Bits," a Western drama, featuring Mr. Borzage and Anna Little.

The "Beauty" comedies, "Pedigree, Pups and Pussies," an amusing comparison giving scope to Orral Humphry's eccentric abilities, and "Adjusting His Claim," a one-reel funny picture, featuring Carol Halloway, John Sheehan and John Steppling, are being produced at present. Archer McMackin is directing the latter picture.

BURTON HOLMES MAKES EVERDAY SCENES FARCE COMEDIES BY USE OF "SPEEDO" CAMERA

THE Paramount-Burton Holmes seventh release on March 20 is different from any Paramount travel picture ever shown, for, by using his peculiar "Speedo" camera, Mr. Holmes has made every-day scenes into farce comedies. The informative element is still present, however.

For instance the antics of a canal boat jumping up and down through a series of locks is shown, but the spectator also sees every detail of the opening and closing of the lock gates, the boat entering each lock, the flooding of the next lock and all the other details of how a boat "comes downstairs."

"Speedoing" across San Francisco Bay, Mr. Holmes lands at the foot of Market street, and from there goes to the Cliff House, Chinatown, up and down hill all over the town, finally reaching the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

In the eighth Paramount-Burton Holmes release for March 27 Mr. Holmes has written a near-drama, showing forest fire-fighting as it is.

The hero of the drama is a forest ranger who lives with his wife, the heroine, in a little camp in the Arizona forest.

The comedian, an Indian ranger, is his assistant, and the villains are the careless campers, who set the fire. Out of these elements Mr. Holmes has woven the thread of his story.

An actual forest fire, with its dangers and exciting incidents, is screened.

MACY, BELASCO LEAD, WITH IVAN

Carleton Macy, former Belasco leading man, will be seen in "The City of Illusion," a new Ivan feature now in course of production.

Mr. Macy's most recent screen work was the principal male role in "Destruction," opposite Theda Bara. The cast for "The City of Illusion" also includes Mignon Anderson, Bradley Barker, Paula Shay, Joseph Burke, Maxine Brown, Willard Case and Guido Colucci and several others.

The picture will probably be released as a special production in several thousand feet more than the usual photoplay feature length.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

WITH "The Woman's Law," the first production of the Arrow Film Corporation, completed and out of the way, work at the Arrow studio in Yonkers, N. Y., is being concentrated on the new serial which Arrow is producing for Pathe: "Who's Guilty?"

The first and second episodes, "The Tight Rein," and "The Stroke of the Scalpel," have already been completed under the direction of Howell Hansel and "Larry" McGill, and work on the third is already under way.

"Tom" Moore and Anna Q. Nilsson are playing the leads in this series. Each episode is a complete story, of two reels length, and with the exception of the two leads, a new cast is being made up for each one.

There will be fourteen episodes in all. W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow film, is giving his personal attention to the selection of the stories, and is spending a great deal of his time at the Yonkers studio.

Clifford Bruce has finished his first picture for Metro. It is "Souls of Flame," produced by Popular Plays and Players, at the Colonial studio in West Thirty-fifth street, New York, under the direction of Burton King.

Mr. Bruce has a sort of "fighting part"; he is called upon for a lot of strong work, and in several scenes he was obliged to handle Dorothy Green, who is playing opposite him, in a manner too rough to please anybody but the director.

It is rumored that Mr. Bruce will remain with Metro, and will begin work immediately on a new picture at the Rolfe studio.

Grandon Presented with Watch by Mme. Petrova

Francis J. Grandon, who has been directing Mme. Petrova in features for Popular Plays and Players, on the Metro, will take an extended vacation on the completion of his present picture. Mme. Petrova showed her appreciation of her director's work by presenting him with a handsome watch, this week.

The theatre scored a decided victory over the church this week when a large portion of "The Ziegfeld Follies" chorus invaded the Famous Players Film Company's studio at the moment that another group of players were doing a very solemn church scene in the Paramount picture "Audrey," in which Pauline Frederick is being starred.

With the chorus came an orchestra which tuned up and burst forth into the blatant strains of "Bom-Bom-Bay"—whatever that is—while Miss Frederick and her fellow parishioners were attempting to sing a hymn.

There was a deafening confusion of sound for a moment and then Church capitulated to Stage and the little paint-and-canvas chapel was emptied as the "congregation" rushed out to see what the noise was all about.

When the resplendent ladies of the chorus paraded across the temporary stage in the glare of the Cooper-Hewitts, still chanting blithely of "Bom-Bom-Bay," all thought of convening the meeting in the church was permanently dispelled and Director Vignola ordered the lights extinguished, while his solemn-visaged minister tangoed behind the scenes with one of the most prominent members of his congregation.

"The Saleslady," in which Hazel Dawn is to be starred, was the occasion for the appearance of the chorus girls in the studio. In the story Miss Dawn, after losing her position in a department store, joins the chorus and makes a hit in musical comedy.

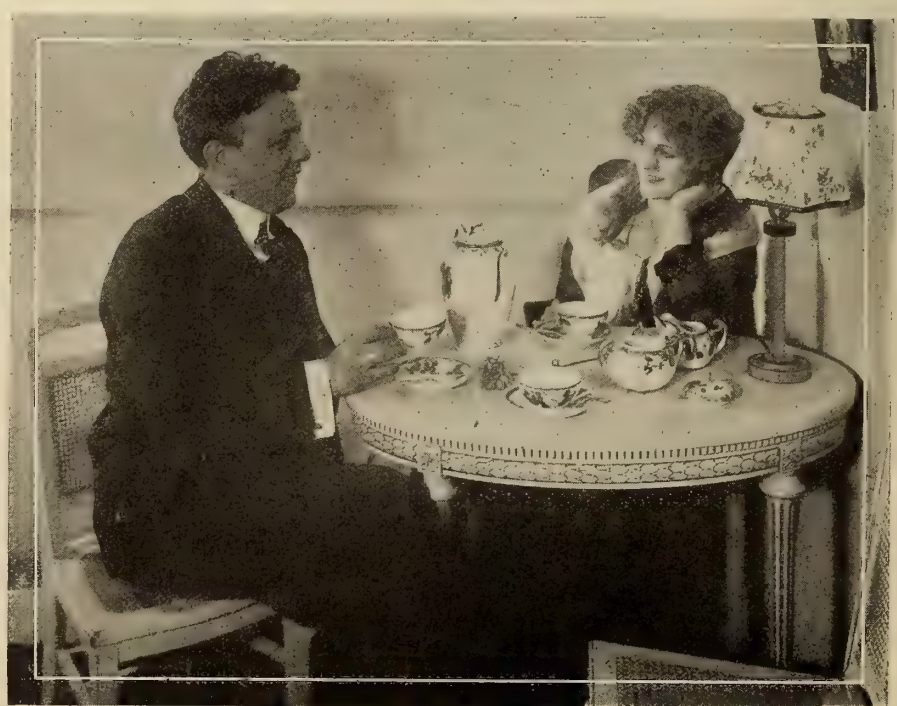
Work on "The Surrender," a five-part feature to be released through Equitable, has just been finished at the Triumph studios. Jane Grey is being featured in the production, assisted by a large cast of people well-known on the screen. The subject will be released early in June.

Wear Genuine Whiskers for a Metro

In order to obtain real types attired in their native clothes and wearing genuine whiskers, William Nigh, the Metro director, who has just finished "The Kiss of Hate," a story of Russian romance and intrigue, with Ethel Barrymore in the stellar role, went to the Russian quarter in lower New York with four large automobiles and loaded them down with more than thirty Russians.

For the most part they were elderly men and women, and few of them had ever been north of Chambers street before.

The automobiles carried more than thirty persons and they made a strange appearing caravan as they whirled up the principal thoroughfares to the Rolfe-Metro studio at Central Park West and Sixty-first street.



Everywhere pedestrians stopped to look after them and look on in wonderment. But it was in the studio that they created the greatest sensation.

None of the members of the party had any idea of just why they were there and what they were going to do. All they knew with certainty was that they were being paid five dollars each.

Mr. Nigh and his ssistant, David Thompson, put the final touches on them, making soldiers of a few and a plain mob of the others. The greatest difficulty came in directing them.

Mr. Nigh was obliged to employ an interpreter, and through him he gave his final directions. Some of them were quick to catch the pantomime. They became especially excited when they were working on the studio floor and saw a murder committed before their very eyes.

A hasty explanation on the part of the interpreter is all that kept them from stampeding and leaving the studio in disorder.

Lose Clothes in Fire

After losing all their clothing and luggage, when their hotel in northern Maine was destroyed by fire, Director Fred J. Balshofer, Harold Lockwood, Ray Allison and twenty other members of the Quality-Metro Company returned to New York in rough logging costumes which they wore while making the picture.

In their quaint costumes the players attracted no end of attention when they arrived at the Grand Central station and made their way to their hotels.

Mr. Balshofer piloted the company to a picturesque locale in the Maine woods, eight miles from Carabassett. They worked there for four weeks. While engaged in making what they thought would be the last dozen scenes in the woods, their hotel, the Lodge House, caught fire and was completely destroyed.

More than two thousand feet of film was also lost in the fire, which necessitated the company remaining over for re-takes.

Considerable raw material was also destroyed by the flames and the company's wardrobe was practically wiped out, save what they had on their backs. Mr. Lockwood lost three trunks full of clothing, and Miss Allison a like number.

Mitchell Lewis, one of the players, lost among other things a gold watch presented to him several years ago at the Players Club.

Mr. Balshofer declared that the company's loss was compensated for by the fact that he obtained some wonderful effects, and that they all came back in perfect health.

Mr. Balshofer said he intends to go back into Maine again for his next picture.

Tired Stars Back to City

A happy, tired and tanned bunch of stars got back to the offices of the Mirror Films, Inc., on East Forty-second street this week, headed by Nat C. Goodwin. In his wake were Flora Finch, Estelle Mardo, Mildred Manning, Lina D'Avril, Augustus Phillips, Charles Brandt, Eddie O'Connor and Billy Quirk, president of the Screen Club.

The company was in the South three weeks. During that time a record was made in the production of comedy films.

All but a few interiors of a five-part farce comedy had been made around a former stage success of Mr. Goodwin's.

McNamara has always had the happy faculty for putting out good comedy scenarious and he set forth to outdo himself in the Goodwin story.

DIXIE FILM COMPANY LOCATES IN JACKSONVILLE

Special to Motion Picture News

Jacksonville, March 14.

The latest resident company to locate here is the Dixie Film Company, who have taken over a building near the Gaumont studios in South Jacksonville. J. H. Harlow is president of the company and at present it has offices in Chicago, but expects to close them shortly and carry on all business at the studio.

FLORENCE REED, STAR, MRS. MARAVENE THOMPSON, AUTHOR, DUNCAN McRAE, SUPPORTING LEAD, AND DIRECTOR McGILL, OF "THE WOMAN'S LAW" (Pathé)

Carlton King, who has been connected with the Edison Company the past four years, is the director of the new company and is busy at present filming the popular old book "Tempest and Sunshine."

Besides directing this picture, Mr. King plays the part of Dr. Lacy, which is the most difficult portrayal in the book. Evelyn Greeley plays the part of Sunshine and Claudia Kornick plays Tempest.

Warren Hughes is Joe Dunne, and is making a decided success in the part. Patrick Carson, the well-known producer, lately with Selig, plays Uncle Juber. Mrs. Carson plays Mrs. Middleton. Wilmut and Miller, two popular parts in the book, have been combined into one and is being played by Earnest Ottke. Lou Foley, the original Gibson man, is also in the cast.

The photography is being done by Harry Keepers, who took the Vitagraph tour of the world series.

The company came to Jacksonville to make just the one picture and were so pleased with conditions here that they decided to locate permanently.

One of the local studios will be used for interiors while their new plant is being built. The first production will be in five reels and will be released on state rights.

The Vim Company is busy as usual and has been spending several days down at the beaches making some comedies with Elsie McLeod, Babe Hardy and Billy Rouge, under the direction of Mr. Louis.

Burns and Stull, creators of "Pokes and Jabbs," are working on a special entitled "Hired and Fired."

A new club is being formed by the motion picture people and newspaper men here in the city and will open within the next week or so. With the increasing number of players now in the city, a club of this kind is considered a real necessity.

Edwin Middleton, who will direct "The Isle of Love" at Gaumont's winter studio here, has selected the principals who will support Gertrude McCoy in this five-rell feature.

Earl O. Schenck will have the role of a young sea captain. Robert Clugston will enact a wealthy man of the world. Iva Shepard will portray the belle of a fishing village who is scorned by the sea captain.

Charles W. Travis will have a chance to show how theatrical managers once treated him, since he is cast for the part of a manager.

W. J. Butler has a part that smells of the sea, that of the captain of a schooner.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 18.

THE greatest scenes yet made for D. W. Griffith's next subject known under the working title of "The Mother and The Law," were filmed during the past week when on alternate days approximately three thousand extra people were used.

Director Griffith had as his lieutenants in the making of these scenes, twenty-eight experienced directors, photoplayers, and nine cameras were in operation practically all of the time.

The mammoth sets built on the vacant lots opposite the Fine Arts studio were used for these.

The warriors occupied positions at the foot of and on top of the walls, which stand about ninety feet in height.

During the making of the battle scenes, several men leaped from the top of the walls into a fire net below.

Approximately one thousand men defended the walls of Babylon using instruments of warfare appropriate to that period.

Below were approximately two thousand on foot and in chariots that assailed the city with storms of arrows and paper mache boulders.

During one day the ambulance made more than sixty trips to the company's hospital in charge of Dr. R. K. Hackett, and more than one hundred people were said to have been injured.

All were given the first aid. None of the injuries were of a serious matter and consisted mostly of scratches and bruises due to parties being hit with arrows. On another day about 75 were injured.

One day upwards of fifteen thousand feet of negative was exposed which ultimately will be trimmed to a few hundred. It was declared to be the most successful day in the history of the studio from the standpoint of securing good results in the making of mob scenes.

Biograph to Hold Auto Race

The first annual automobile road race given by the Biograph Company and members of its producing staff will held on Sunday, March 19, and the route selected is between the studio at Girrard and Georgia streets, Los Angeles, and Glenwood Inn, Riverside, a distance of approximately sixty miles.

The prize is a silver loving cup donated by William Grey, vice-president of the Biograph Company.

The race is the outcome of a number of claims made by auto owners of this studio, and is being arranged by Lee McDaugherty, general manager of the studio, J. A. Waldron, business manager, and Tom Walsh, employment agent. The first car is scheduled to leave the studio at nine o'clock, and following this at intervals of one minute, the others will be given their get-away.

Danny Grey will be judge of the race. The Motion Picture News' movable office has been engaged as the official press car for the race, and by a secret route known only to the press men, it will be possible for the car to leave the studio after all other cars have departed, and be the first to finish.

Those who have entered cars are L. E. Dougherty, J. A. Waldron, J. F. Macdonald, Charles H. Mailes, Walter V. Coyle, Bill Smart, Spike Robinson, Joe Kramer, Lew Kramer, Percy Higginson, Jack Drumier, Jack McKenzie, Jack Mulhall, Vola Smith, Claire McDowell, Vera Sisson and Gretchen Hartman, and the machines include practically every make from a Stutz and Packard to a Maxwell and Ford.

The filming of two five-reel subjects were taken up at the Horsley studio last week. One is "Nadje's Sacrifice," from a scenario by Theodosia Harris, with William Clifford as the lieutenant at a British army post in India, and Marguerite Gibson appearing in the name role, that of a native girl of the jungle regions.

Brooklyn Keller as the major of the army post is the heavy, and because an English girl, played by Nan Christie, shows a preference for his lieutenant, the major causes him to be sent to a distant point where the natives are suffering with an incurable fever.

In the jungle the lieutenant succeeds in preventing a fanatic priest from offering up Nadje as a sacrifice, and later when he becomes ill she nurses him back to health.

His letters to the English girl back at the army post fall into the possession of the major, and the lieutenant not receiving answer, accepts Nadje as his morganatic wife. Later when she learns her husband loves another, she offers herself in sacrifice as prescribed by her religion.

Gordon, Machette in Cast

Others taking part in this subject are Edwin Gordon, Paul Machette, Fred Montague, and Fred Goodwins. Many of the Bostock animals will be used in this subject, and the opening scenes depicting a ball at the army post are being filmed in Bush Gardens at Pasadena.

The other multiple reel subject is "The Conscience of John David." The principals of this are Crane Wilbur, who is the author of the story, and Mae Gaston, who appears in the part of a simple western girl.

The other members of the cast are Alice Rinaldo as the vampire, Francis Raymond, a crippled child; Fred Montague, the libertine; and John Oaker, juvenile.

An automobile trip from coast to coast carrying a message from the Fine Arts studio to the principals at the Triangle Film Corporation office in New York City, has been arranged by Mrs. Ella Woods, wife of Frank E. Woods, manager for D. W. Griffith, and she will leave some time during the coming week accompanied by Mrs. W. E. Wing, wife of the photoplaywright.

GLIMPSES OF UNIVERSAL OFFERINGS: "A FOOL'S GOLD," "LADY RAFFLES RETURNS," "DRUGGED WATERS," "A SERPENT IN THE HOUSE," AND "THE MADCAP QUEEN OF CRONA"

The women will travel under the auspices of the Southern California Automobile Association, going over the southern route across the mountains.

En route they will visit Triangle exchanges of the principal cities. Both women are successful photoplay authors, and have a number of subjects to their credit.

The sixth episode of "The Social Pirates" is being made by Kalem Director James W. Horne. The title of this episode of the series is "Mona Vanna." Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby continue in the name parts, and the supporting cast includes Barney Furey, Thomas Lingham, Frank Jonasson, Ed. Clisbee and Paul C. Hurst.

The plot of this pertains to the duping of a famous Raphael painting, the ultimate substituting of the duplicate for the original, and the theft and sale of the original.

The story has a number of surprising anti-climaxes, in that duplicates are made by two parties, and it is a question who secures the valuable original painting until the last few feet of the firm. The "Social Pirates" escape after selling the picture.

Auto Thrill in "The Race"

The big thrill for the Lasky subject "The Race," which pertains to an across-the-continent dash between drivers for rival firms, was successfully filmed when a car driven by Anita King ran off a broken bridge, and after sailing seventy-two feet through the air, alighted on debris consisting of brush, logs, and sand washed by the waters onto the broken section of the bridge.

When the machine alighted it struck a portion of the camera stand on which George Melford and Percy Hilburn were standing, crushing a 2x8 into splinters. The machine was badly damaged, but Miss King escaped without injury.

Three motion picture and several Graflex cameras were used in the making of this. The scene depicts the result of the heavy of the story removing a "road closed" sign so that the heroine took the wrong route.

The company in making numerous country road speed runs was continually harassed by country constables who insisted upon arresting the drivers regardless of the fact that they carried permits from the county authorities.

Director George Melford has made the last scenes for this photoplay in which Victor Moore is starred.

Settings are being completed for "The Heart of Nora Flynn," which will be the first Lasky photoplay starring Marie Doro, supported by Elliott Dexter as her leading man. Cecil B. deMille will personally direct this subject.

"The Sowers," the drama of Russian life filmed by William C. deMille, was completed early last week, and two days later shipped East.

The opportune interference of the employment agent at the Lasky studio prevented a possible riot Friday, when a Mexican greatly resembling General Villa, passed out of the studio.

This occurred the day following the troubles at Columbus, New Mexico, and a number of Mexicans in front of the studio started to attack the man.

It became necessary for the employment agent to partially destroy the make-up in order to prove the man's real identity.

DeWolf Hopper has found that work at the Fine Arts studio is just one thrill after another. He no sooner completed the scenes with a lion for his coming release known at the studio as "The Philanthropist," until he was introduced to the thrills to be made by the aid of automobiles and motorcycles.

One seven-passenger machine is totally destroyed by fire for the film, and there are a number of automobiles and motorcycle races of a thrilling nature.

"The Good Bad Man" is the title decided upon for the Douglas Fairbanks picture which has just been completed by Director Alan Dwan.

It is very probable that Fairbanks will be cast for a similar role, that of a young westerner, in future productions, because of the success he has made of the part in this subject.

It is his first appearance in a western role. Bessie Love plays opposite, and the other principals of the cast are Sam DeGrasse, Mary Alden, George Barringer, and Joseph E. Singleton.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS AND BESSIE LOVE IN A SCENE FROM A COMING FINE ARTS-TRIANGLE

A number of scenes were made by a Fine Arts company at Santa Barbara for the coming production, "The Children of the House," which stars Norma Talmadge.

The eight-day trip was made to secure scenes of a fairy tale style, which served as a retrospect for the lover who tells the children of the woman he admired, and who happened to be their mother.

Principals of the party besides Miss Talmadge were William Hickley, Jewel Carmen, and Eugene Palette. A principal portion of the play is laid in the slums of San Francisco, settings having been reproduced to show a number of locations in the Bay City.

"Sold in Marriage"

Another Fine Arts subject finished during the past week is that made under the direction of Paul Powell entitled "Sold for

THE KALEM "HAM" COMPANY STUDYING A SCRIPT—HELEN GIBSON, OF KALEM'S "HAZARDS OF HELEN," AFTER A RECENT ACCIDENT

Marriage," by William E. Wing, which stars Lillian Gish.

Those who have seen the subject at the cutting rooms say the star does the best work of her career in this subject.

Miss Gish will next work under the direction of Alan Dwan, who has staged a number of Fine Arts plays, including three with Douglas Fairbanks.

"All Over a Stocking," is the title of a one-reel comedy by "Sheriff" Arthur Mackley, being filmed by Al. E. Christie with Eddie Lyons, the husband, Betty Compson, the stenographer, and Ethel Lynn, the wife. A near domestic feud arises when husband does not agree that wifey shall attend a hosiery sale. Then he relents and buys a pair of hose and wife sees him do it. The climax of the domestic war is reached when the Mistress sees the stenographer wearing a pair of the same style and shade.

Lee Moran is again doing a female impersonation stunt in "Her Hero Maid," a Christie Nestor comedy being directed by Horace Davey.

Lee, as an actor, first makes a hit with the girl, and then in order to gain her acquaintance, answers a want-ad and secures a position as maid in her home.

Billie Rhodes plays the feminine lead, and others in the cast are Stella Adams, Neil Burns, Harry Rattenberry, and Gus Alexander.

At the Vogue comedy shop, Director Jack Dillon has made "The Little Blonde Lady," in which the secretary of a spinster gives a prophesy in a story she writes of what might have happened had the maid been successful in the love affair she attempted by correspondence and counterfeit photographs.

The company will next film "A Seminary Elopement." The cast for each includes Rena Rogers, Arthur Moon, Paddy Maguire, and others.

The L-Ko has leased the balance of the old Universal studio at Gower and Sunset boulevard, and moved the offices to the buildings formerly occupied by the Universal Company, prior to moving to Universal City. The organization has four directors, and as three and five-reel productions are to be made additional space was needed. Work has started on one of these, and a big punch will be a flight by aeroplane over the business section of Los Angeles.

Harry Pollard, who has been in the East for the past several months accompanied by Marguerite Fisher, has returned to the West Coast, and will make subjects for the World Film Corporation.

It is the intention to locate at San Diego where the city organizations have made very acceptable offers. He is now organizing a producing company and will begin work on first subject within a few days.

HENRY P. CAULFIELD, SYD CHAPLIN, AND CHARLES CHAPLIN ARRIVING IN CHICAGO ON THEIR WAY TO THE COAST

The Ford-Cunard Company has completed the first and second episodes of "Peg o' The Ring," the coming Universal serial, and are now working on the third.

Italian Types in "Purple Shadows"

Circus equipment is daily being added to the props of the company, and managers of production say that within a short time the Universal Company will be practically the sole owners of all equipment necessary for a circus.

"Purple Shadows" continues to call the attention of the Jacques Jaccard Universal Company, and the director has selected a number of exceptional types from the Italian quarter of Los Angeles to appear in this picture, which deals with the Italian society known as the Komarra. The subject will be in two reels.

"The Gambling Instinct" is a one-reel drama being made by the Lynn Reynolds Company, with Myrtle Gonzales and Fred Church in the principal parts, and Val Paul and Alfred Allen make up the cast.

The story is of a young woman attempting to reform the man she loves who has become a gambler. In this attempt she fails dismally.

He, after almost breaking his father financially, disappears and remains absent for years, returning on the day that his wife is to wed another. Realizing that he will destroy her future happiness he again disappears.

Directress Cleo Madison is engaged in filming a one-reel subject, entitled "Virginia," in which she plays the name part, supported by Marguerite Whistler, William Mong, Ed. Hearne and Ray Hanford. The story shows that there is opportunity for every girl, no matter to what class her parents belong.

The last picture for the Universal company in which Hobart Bosworth will appear, has been completed. This is the five-reeler "The Day of Atonement," in which Hobart Bosworth plays the role of the president and largest stockholder of a water company, who is a big man, morally, mentally, and financially.

One of his assistants when told to produce results, goes the limit in giving bribes, and in order to increase the dividends, cuts off the filtration system, which results in a typhoid epidemic.

The president's son and hundreds of others are stricken, and the owner's life is saved from the hands of the mob by the interference of the police.

Fully appreciating that he was responsible for the death of many, he seeks to atone by giving the water plant, which comprises practically all his wealth, to the city. Later, during a stormy season when attempting to prevent the walls of the reservoir from giving away, the former water company owner is swept away and drowned by the flood waters.

The supporting company includes Dorathy Davenport, as the daughter of the water company president; Emory Johnson as the doctor who discovers the cause of the epidemic; and others are Harry Mann, Alfred Allen and Mark Fenton.

Small School Taken to "U" City

An entire school was transported to Universal City several days last week from Monte Bello, a small village about fifteen miles distant, that the children could take part in the school room scenes for "A Lonesome House," a two-reel subject being made by George Cochran from scenario by Calder Johnstone.

This features Thomas Jefferson as an aged school master, who, by taking one of his pupils home when she is injured at the school playgrounds, finds his sweetheart from whom he was separated many years before.

MAMMOTH PLASTER OF PARIS SET BUILT AT INCEVILLE FOR A SIXTEENTH CENTURY SUBJECT STARRING WILLIAM S. HART

LOOKING AT "THE PARASITE," EPISODE 3 OF KALEM'S "THE SOCIAL PIRATES," WITH MARIEN SAIS AND OLLIE KIRKBY

Supporting Mr. Jefferson in the pri role is little Zoe Beck, Julia Jackson as the sweetheart, and Bessie Arnold ast the village gossip.

Director Robert Leonard and David Kirkland are filming "Their Wedding Night," a single-reel subject showing the dream of the groom, which gives sufficient theme for a thrilling melodrama.

Ernie Shields and Marcia Moore are the principals in this, while Gladys Brockwell appears as the heavy, and Juan de la Cruz, her lover.

The Richard Stanton "Graft" company is filming the seventeenth episode, the last scenes of which required a number of Oriental settings with such atmospheric qualities that none but the producing company were permitted to remain in the artificial light studio while the scenes were being filmed. Scenario for number eighteen is now ready, and the title for this is "The Hidden City of Crime," being written by Walter Wood. The story concerns the underworld.

A scenario, entitled "A Live One," is being adapted by Ben Cohn from a story by Edgar Franklyn, which recently appeared in a national magazine. This will be filmed by the William Worthington Universal company, with Herbert Rawlinson in the principal part.

Alice M. Otten, half-breed Pequot Indian who played in "Ramona," has been engaged by the Universal company, and is now working under the Smalleys in scenes for "The Eye of God." Miss Otten is a remarkable type of Indian beauty.

Mlle. Anna Pavlowa, Tamaki Miura, Japanese grand opera prima donna, and Mme. Rabinoff, together with practically all of the principals of the Boston Opera Company, playing in Los Angeles, were guests of the Universal company at Universal City, Saturday, March 11.

P. A. Powers, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, arrived in Los Angeles during the past week to spend some time at Universal City.

This is Mr. Powers' first trip to the Coast since the opening of Universal City in March last year, and since that time improvements costing $250,000 have been made.

Discussing the film market, Mr. Powers said:

"I am almost inclined to take a trip to the Orient because the Asiatic countries have taken an unusual interest in the photoplays, and the demand in that part of the world for our productions has increased fourfold.

"It is practically new territory for most of the film companies, although the Universal pictures have been going well in Japan and the Philippines for the past two years.

"China, also, is waking up in this connection, and Hongkong, Canton, Pekin and all the other large cities of the land of our Celestial friends are using a largely increased amount of American films in their theatres.

"It has greatly surprised me to note the popularity of the feature photoplays and the serials in the Orient. This popularity has helped the American companies wonderfully during these war times, the market in Europe naturally having suffered to a considerable extent since the beginning of the conflict."

"Gypsy Joe" for Jackson

"Gypsy Joe" is the title selected for the Joe Jackson Keystone comedy for the Triangle which was shipped east last week.

Jackson plays the part of a tramp in this who joins a gypsy band, proves the hero of several melodramatic incidents, including the lassoing of a barrel containing a kidnapped child which is in a blazing wagon being drawn by a runaway team.

The child is rescued, and the evil guardian is dashed over a cliff. The cast includes Baby Betty Marsh, Dora Rogers, Shorty Hamilton, Louise Morrison, Elizabeth Dewitt, and Marion Delaporel.

John S. Groarty, California poet and author of the "Mission Play," paid his first visit to Universal City during the past week, and while there was engaged to write photoplay stories.

The Signal Film Company, directed by Murdock MacQuarrie, will within the next few days complete the filming of "Nancy's Birthright" in five reels for the Mutual de Luxe program.

The theme of this photoplay differs widely from the usual underworld story, as it contains a philosophy of the nature of new thought.

The principals are Edythe Sterling, Norbert A. Myles, Millard K. Wilson, Belle Hutchinson, Francis McDonald, Walter Rogers and others.

"The Girl and the Game" Signal Company series under the direction of J. P. McGowan, is now working on the fourteenth episode, which in all probability will be finished by the first of the week.

The cast for this is the same as previous releases, and includes Helen Holmes as the star, Leo D. Maloney, George McDaniels, J. L. Farley, J. E. Perkins, Wm. Bruntin and others.

Upon the completion of this serial Director McGowan, with the same cast, will take up the filming of a screen adaptation of "Whispering Smith."

Preparations for the filming of this subject are under way. A big street scene to represent "Medicine Bend" is now under construction, a number of saddle horses have been purchased, and changes about the Signal station in the Los Angeles yards of the Salt Lake railway are being made.

Helen Holmes will be the featured player in this subject.

Negotiations for motion picture rights on novels and books published by Bobbs-Merrill, Scribners, Harper Brothers and others were begun last week by the Signal Film Corporation.

Only late stories will be bought, and these will be filmed immediately following the making of "Whispering Smith."

Several Hundred Extras as Aztecs

Several hundred extras were taken to Chatsworth, fifty miles out of Los Angeles, last week, where for several days they worked as Aztec Indians in the filming of the last scenes for the Triangle Kay-Bee production with William S. Hart as star of the film.

The time of this is the sixteenth century, and Hart plays the part of a Castilian. The extras represented the marching armies of Indians. With the completion of this subject, Hart will next take up the filming of a Kentucky feud story in which he takes the role of a young clergyman who brings hostilities to an end after much gun play and numerous thrillers.

All of the mountain scenes needed for this story by Monty Katterjohn will be made on the eighteen hundred acre NYMP ranch.

Garbed only in a breech cloth, sandals and a smile, to appear in the role of a down-and-outer suffering all the torments of a delirium, Willie Collier has been getting a continuous laugh at the Ince studio

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

J. C. JESSEN, our genial and popular Los Angeles correspondent, got into the Keystone studio on a borrowed pass last week. He arrived at the same time as did Adam Kessel, who was making a visit of inspection from the East. Mack Sennett had fitted up a luxurious office for Mr. Kessel to occupy during his stay, and Mr. Jessen, who writes very fair shorthand, when he has fresh cuffs on, reports this dialogue:

Kessel (After giving the new office a searching glance)—"Well—what—whose forgoshsake office is this?"

Sennett—"Why, Mr. Kessel, we had this office especially prepared for you."

Kessel—"Yes ya did? Waddaya giving me?"

Sennett—"We did, indeed."

Kessel (Glancing around the assembled group)—"Well, who's looking for a raise now?"

Virginia Pearson, actress, author, adviser to young girls, and amateur champion cream-bather, occupies her spare time delving into palmistry, the history and theory of silhouette-making, the causes of the decline of the Roman Empire, critical researches among the ruins of Baalbeck, the ethnology of the lower Tremadoc period, translations of the sixteenth satire of Juvenal and critiques on the works of the earlier poets of Greenland. She is on the Fox payroll.

Under the heading, "Use Will Be Appreciated by Pete Schmid, Pallas Pictures," we read this: "Director William Taylor had a too efficient actor when he 'shot' the castle gates in 'Davy Crockett.' He instructed the player, who was especially adapted for the part, to dash out of the castle with the maiden in his arms and to break his way through the men-at-arms to liberty. The player appeared in his black armor with the girl, all right, but immediately began to slaughter the poor supers, even the ones at the edge of the scene, and would have trimmed the whole crowd but for the imperiously shouted commands to stop. When brought back he mumbled something that sounded like 'I was just putting a little action into the scene.'" All right, Pete; we used it.

On the right of the curio hall we have some half reel of local color. This local color was obtained in large pails at Ellis Island by the Equitable studios for "The Other Sister," in which Gail Kane is appearing under Frank Powell's direction. We have here what hirsute experts pronounce seven almost perfect specimens of barberophobia, which are described as follows: No. 1, counting from the upper left, is the Hirsutus Radius, commonly known as the Burst o' Flame; it grows wild and is greatly prized in many regions on account of making possible great economy in neckwear. No. 2 is the ordinary mine-sweeper, used chiefly in temperate latitudes to clear croutons from cream of asparagus soup. No. 3 does not figure. No. 4 is the feather duster type, born of a hatred for King C. Gillette and all his works. No. 5 is known as the Dismal Swamp; it is the terror of mosquitos, rabbits and field mice. No. 6 is the most convenient and generally useful brush known to science, as it permits the face to be worn either side up with equal facility. No. 7 is the genus Election Bettorum; it is composed of small wisps of wire-grass, radiating from a common center, each home with an ungovernable tendency to point at the dying moon. No. 8 is the Bleached Portiere, useful for many things, especially sifting sand for the manufacture of the finer grades of stucco.

All these types, we are promised, will appear in unison on the screen when the new picture is released.

"Yes," said Arthur Brisbane, "I never saw Mary Pickford, or Charlie Chaplin, or Theda Bara. I know nothing of motion pictures. They probably should be censored." Upon such profound remarks is the censorship propaganda built.

Or as Lewis Carroll might have had it:

"The time has come," the Brisbane said;
"To pump some heated air,
On censorships and Charlie Chaps.,
And wicked Theda Bar.
And what the thing is all about
I little know—nor care."

Ella Hall, of Universal, is the original "harp" of Ta-ra-ra's halls. She was born on March 17, 1897, and has stuck to the same birthday ever since. She celebrated in a bower of green at the Hollywood studios last week.

Last week, while the two houses of Congress were joining hands over the armed merchantman proposition, and thousands of patriotic Americans were joining the army, E. Richard Schayer up and joined the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation. He suddenly severed his connection with the publicity department of Equitable, and a careful examination of the premises leads the police to believe some blunt instrument was used. Details of how it happened have not reached the public. Everything was quiet around the Equitable offices, until Frances Nelson, who was taking her just-about-lunch-time stroll up and down the north corridor, heard a sudden outburst of voices to the left, followed by a chorus of "God bless you!" "God bless you!" Being familiar with cabinet methods at Washington, she immediately exclaimed: "Somebody has resigned!" The alarm was quickly given, but by the time the police reached the publicity offices, there was no trace of E. Richard. The left sleeve of a coat and a part of the rim of a derby hat were the only signs of life.

Mr. Schayer, who has been known in the New York newspaper world as "Dick" for many years, is now in charge of advertising and publicity for Lewis J. Selznick, president of the Clara Kimball Young company.

"Pop" Lubin has one actor whom he is paying at the rate of $7,200,000 a year. This makes the chink of Charlie Chaplin's money sound like three ripe grapes in a coal bunker. The actor in question was used in one scene of the Sudermann play, "The Fires of St. John," in which Nance O'Neil is appearing. His sole duty was to herald the dawn. As a matter of fact, he is a rooster, and to train him to crow when wanted in a "close-up" cost $25. It took thirty seconds to do the scene, so Mr. Lubin, or some of his bright young men have figured out that this comes to $7,200,000 a year. Well, a rooster who can crow for a year steadily ought to be worth something.

Two echoes of yearnings from Americans, exiled by the film business in far-off Australia, were wafted to us from across the Pacific this week. One is from J. D. Williams, with Crick and Jones, in Sydney. He says:

"Dear Mr. Johnston: I received your most beautiful card with the Christmas greetings, and certainly thank you very much for remembering me. I expect to be in New York again within the next four or five months, and hope to see a great deal of you while there. I receive your paper regularly every week, and notice with pleasure the progress and advancement you are making with same."

The other is from Carey Wilson, representing the Fox Film Corporation at Sydney. He enclosed a photograph of himself amid tropic surroundings, and writes:

"Dear Mr. Johnston: If you want foreign views, here we have the first 'still' from our Australian office. It shows Lieut. Jim Anderson, manager of our Australian office, and myself, gleefully contemplating the film forests of Sydney."

The talk about Germany being in desperate straits for food is 92.67 per cent. bosh. We have just received a post card, with an attractive picture of a cluster of apples from Albert K. Dawson, of the American Corresponding Film Company, in Berlin, which bears the inscription: "Starving? Not while we have eats like this. Got some wonderful film this trip." On the obverse side is this message:

"Schadowstr., 2, Berlin, Feb. 16, '16. Greetings, M. P. N. Life would not be livable over here without you. You know me, I think; I have just come back to civilization after a two months' campaign with the Bulgars down in Servia, dodging bullets in the daytime, and bugs in the night. I don't mind the bullets, but the bugs are——.* So long."

Thus we see what is the greatest supporter of life in the war stricken interior of Europe.

Miss Holmes Still Athletic in Railroad Films

Chapter Seven of "The Girl and the Game" Series, Signal, Enables Her to Continue to Display Her Physical Activities—Other Players in Strenuous Stunts

HELEN HOLMES, J. P. McGowan, Jack Dillon, William Russell, Helene Rosson, Madge Kirby, Charlotte Burton, Winnifred Greenwood, and Millard Wilson, of the American and Signal forces, are among those prominent in the making of recent attractions for the Mutual Program.

Miss Holmes, the star of "The Girl and the Game," continues to display her recognized athletic abilities in Chapter Seven of the Signal Serial.

Like her husband, J. P. McGowan, who is directing the serial as well as playing a prominent part in it, Miss Holmes numbers, among other accomplishments, cleverness with boxing gloves.

Jack Dillon, Vogue Comedy director, conceived the idea of showing the public just how a picture is produced, and the result is "More Truth Than Poetry," an instructive as well as an amusing reel, featuring Russ Powell, Priscilla Dean and Arthur Moon.

William Russell, lead in "The Craving," a Masterpicture de Luxe, recently accepted severe punishment at the hands of a bar room mob during the filming of the picture.

A poorly controlled blow from one of the ruffians landed squarely on Russell's mouth, causing it to bleed profusely.

Director Charles Bartlett was entirely satisfied in his efforts to stage a realistic fight.

Charlotte Burton has the lead opposite Mr. Russell in "The Craving." The cast also includes Helene Rosson.

In "Flooded With Trouble," a Vogue, directed by Rube Miller, Madge Kirby is seen as a quick-tempered housewife, with Miller as the husband.

"The Happy Masquerader" presents Winnifred Greenwood and Edward Coxen in the leading roles, while Millard Wilson, a recent recruit from Universal, will be seen, with Edythe Sterling and Norbet A. Myles in "The Web of the Grafters," an underworld story, directed by Murdock MacQuarrie.

"GIRL AND GAME" COMPANY NEAR COMPLETION OF MUTUAL SERIAL

"The Girl and the Game" company is going steadily on to the completion of the fifteen chapters of the Mutual's railroad special feature. The company has been at Los Vegas, Nevada, for the past two months, where the hilly, unsettled region makes a splendid background for the thrills of railroad building.

After the completion of "The Girl and the Game," the same company will produce two Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, taken from the story "Whispering Smith," by Frank H. Spearman, the author of "The Girl and the Game." Helen Holmes will continue to play the leading role, and J. P. McGowan to direct.

during the past week, and were it not for the hot rays of the sun these warm days, he would appreciate this type of wearing apparel.

Collier in this subject imagines himself carried back to the early days, and elaborate settings to show this are being built. A large number of extra people will play in this subject.

Frank Keenan has been cast to play the part of a Southern colonel, and other leads of this Kay-Bee subject will be Louise Glaum and Charles Ray, with George Fisher, Joseph J. Dowling, and Mary McKivor being the principals of the cast.

The latter is a protege of Bessie Barriscale, and this is her first important part in any film.

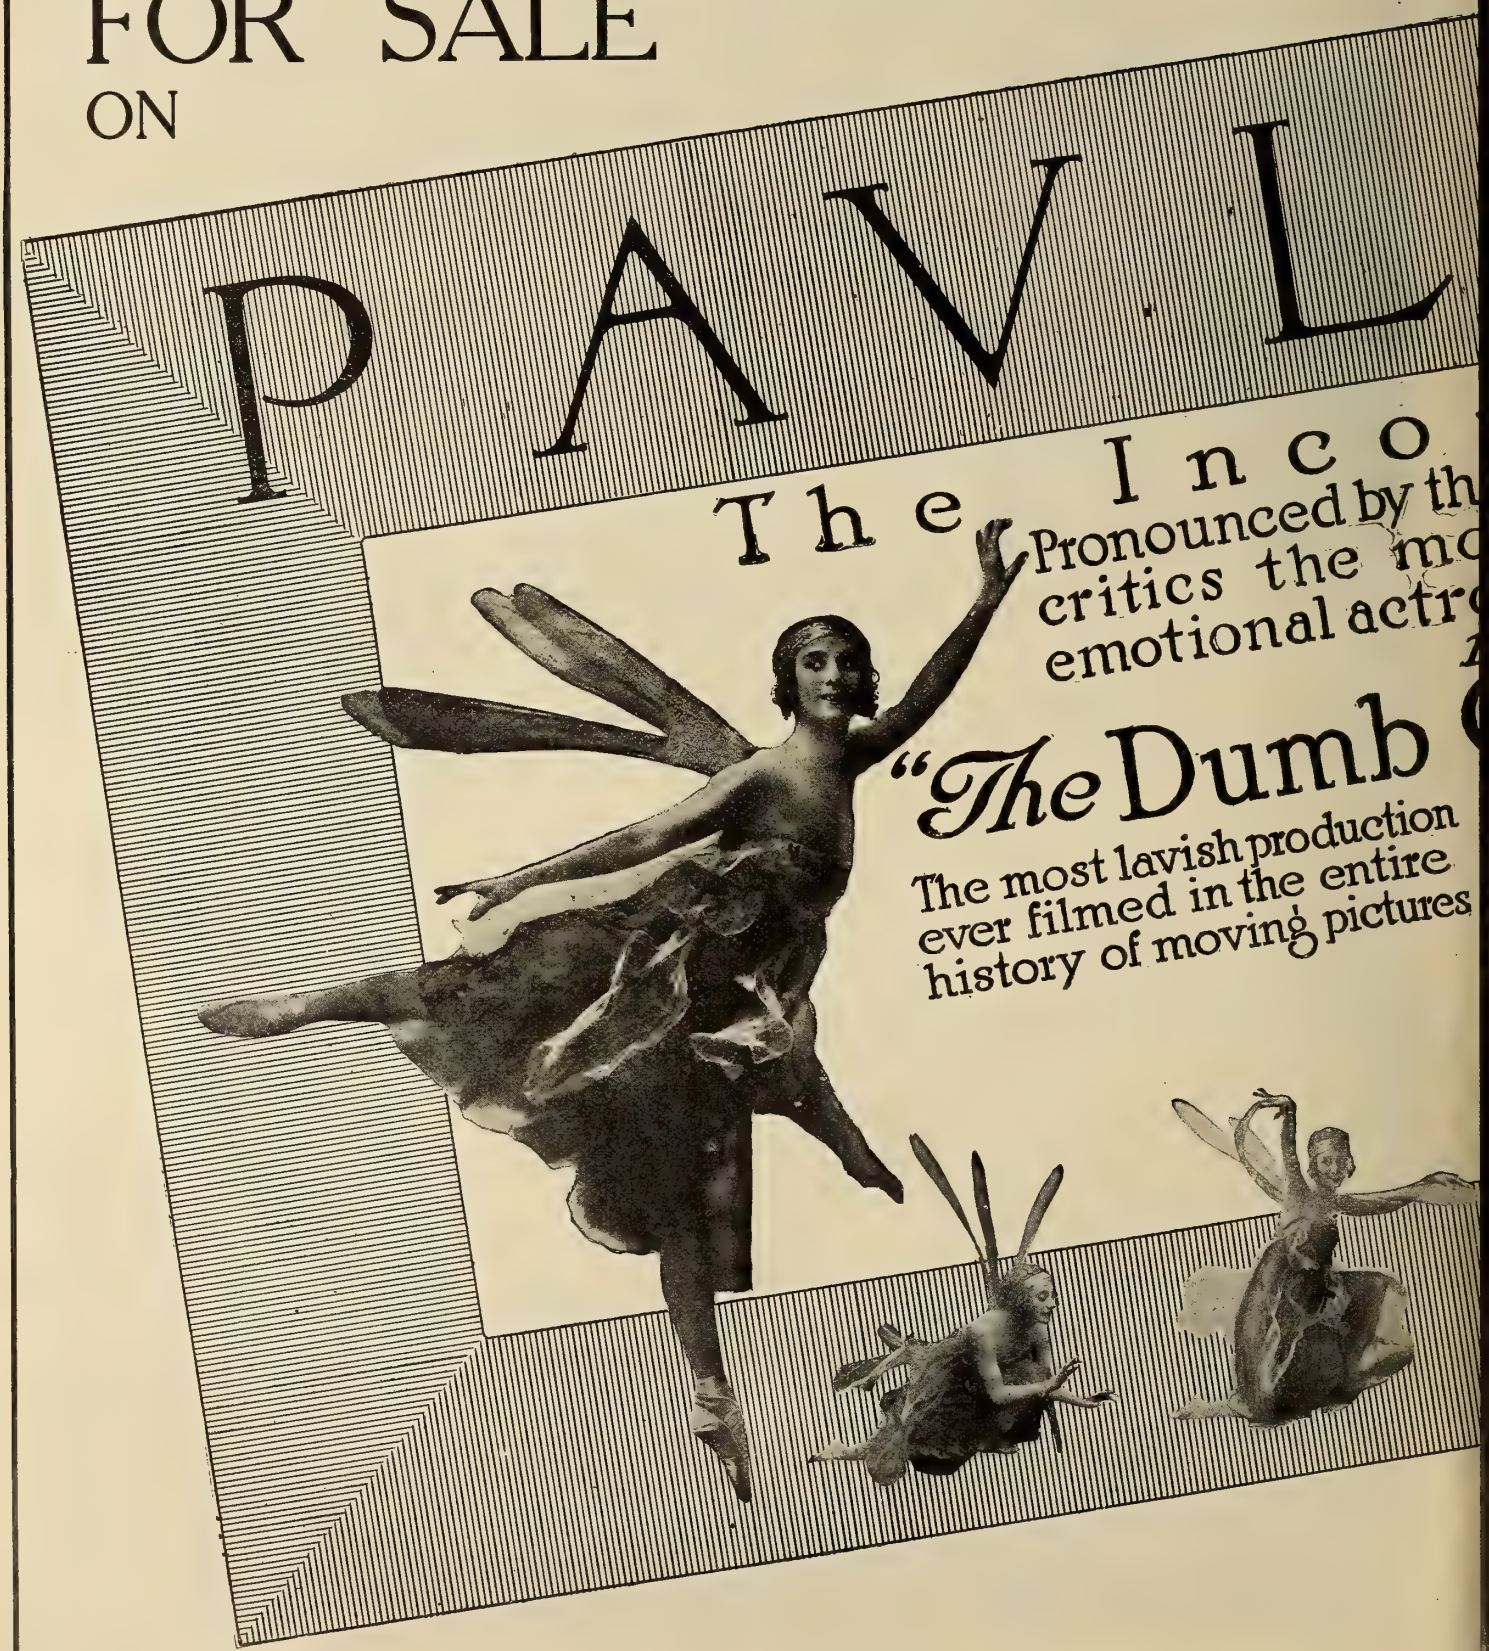
A photoplay dealing with the spy system, and having many scenes of modern warfare, has been selected as the next Ince-Kay Bee vehicle for H. B. Warner, and sets are being built for this under the direction of Reginald Barker, who will be director of the production.

Many local automobile dealers came to the aid of the Kalem "Hazards of Helen" Company last week in the loaning of new automobile tires which were used in a story dealing with the theft of such accessories. This film will show a greater number of tires than perhaps ever photographed at one time before. One of the thrillers is a leap from a fast moving box car to a runaway engine which was successfully performed by Helen Gibson.

To serve as part of a target for the guns of a warship was the nerve-racking experience of members of the Kalem "Ham" Comedy company who went several miles out to see off the shore of Coronado during the past week, using a twenty-foot raft.

It was while they were on the raft that the gunboat spotted it and turned the guns upon them. This story deals with "Preparedness," and is the first made under the direction of Harry Edwards.

The title has not been selected for this subject. The principals are Lloyd Hamilton, Bud Duncan, Norma Nichols and Al. Edmundson.



The filming of "Crippled Hands," five-reel Universal subject, has been completed, and titles are being made here which indicates the subject will have a trade showing on the Coast.

The Universal company filming "The Three Godfathers" in five reels has returned from spending ten days on the Mojave Desert where a great many exteriors were filmed.

Emory Johnson and Dorathy Davenport will take the principal parts in a two-reel subject entitled "Heart Aches" being filmed by Lloyd B. Carleton.

Among the interested visitors at Universal City this week were two representatives of the New York Central Lines—W. B. Jerome, general western passenger agent of the company at Chicago, and E. M. Byron, general agent of the passenger department at Los Angeles.

FRANK SPURRIER ADDS MARX S. NATHAN TO V-L-S-E FORCE IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

FRANK SPURRIER, Washington, D. C., V-L-S-E exchange, has added Marx S. Nathan to his force. It will be Mr. Nathan's province to assist in the placing of the films in Washington as well as on the road.

Mr. Nathan hails from Wilmington, N. C., and saw service with the Kleine-Edison people before going to the V-L-S-E. His association with the present exchange promises to bring about a better understanding between the exhibitors and the V-L-S-E exchange in the Capital City.

Mr. Spurrier has formally announced to all exhibitors his broad policy of open booking—open booking in the broadest sense—in which the exhibitor picks and chooses what he wants, when he wants it, makes a bargain in price for what he is booking, and knows what he is getting.

In other words, the exhibitor picks his goods instead of having them shoved at him and being told that he must take only what is offered him.

"I have always been opposed to the iron-bound contract practices, and especially this pay-in-advance proposition. It has not seemed quite fair to the exhibitor," commented Mr. Spurrier.

"I am glad to break away from it, though it takes courage to do something so radically different from the other fellow who is making good in another way.

"We make no contracts except when the exhibitor desires it. We insist upon no special days of service, no special list of productions.

"The exhibitor is buying what he knows he can make good with, for it is his business he is managing and he ought to know what is best for it.

"In this way he is not obliged to pay for or inflict upon his patrons poor plays or ones which will not draw. Standards and demands of patrons differ in different parts of the country, and what is meat for one may be poison for the other.

"This sort of policy calls upon the judgment of the exhibitor. I am ready and willing to give all the advice possible, but we will not insist upon the exhibitor taking our entire program if he does not wish it.

"Another thing this will do is to show up the most popular, and therefore the best productions of the manufacturers.

"It will make them see who is giving the best productions. This policy will work good all around.

"It is working good right now, too. It has thoroughly pleased the exhibitors and has helped us in quarters where we had least expected it. The unsolicited letters of gratification and commendation have demonstrated that we are on the right track."

So impressed was the photoplay editor of the Times, Gardner Mack, that he devoted nearly a column on this sensible innovation. In fact, it was Mr Mack who set forth such a policy more than a year ago, but was told it was utterly impracticable.

EASTERN BOOKING OFFICE ADDED TO PHILADELPHIA EXCHANGES

THERE is to be a competitor to the Stanley Booking Company of Philadelphia. The Eastern Booking Office, which has just moved to a large building at 1225 Vine street, has decided to establish a booking company of its own.

This firm, composed of Jean Marcus and Louis Newman, who have always been known for their push and enterprise in the state rights plan, are now taking a new departure, in which they are backed by large film interests outside of Philadelphia.

The members of the firm declare they are on the friendliest terms with the Stanley Company, but realizing that another booking company was in the natural sequence of events bound to appear they determined to take time by the forelock.

Already twenty-five exhibitors have signed up for the new booking policy, some of whom have heretofore been independent buyers. The name of the Eastern Booking Office will be retained.

The territory which will be handled by the concern includes all of Pennsylvania, besides the circuit from New York to Virginia. The films heretofore controlled by the company will be retained and others added.

The first release of the Author's Film Company, Inc., will appear on March 27. The Eastern will represent the Authors company in East Pennsylvania, South New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Besides the state rights program the company will book all of the big programs now on the market. It is claimed that Philadelphia is the only city in the country that has had a regularly constituted booking office.

SLATER IS NOW WITH WORLD AT DALLAS

George Slater, formerly with the Mutual at Oklahoma City, is now with the World at Dallas, Tex., as assistant manager to Max Graf.

C. L. KENDALL JOINS V-L-S-E FORCES IN CINCINNATI

C. L. Kendall, formerly of the Universal booking service, Cincinnati, has joined the V-L-S-E forces of that city in a similar capacity. Mr. Kendall's experience in the booking department extends over a period of ten years.

Announcement is also made of the promotion of L. H. Watrous of the Toronto sales forces to the position of manager of the Montreal sub-office, succeeding Mr. McCullum.

Manager W. C. Gookin has named R. O. Caveness to cover the territory over which Mr. Watrous formerly held jurisdiction.

J. A. Conant has been transferred from the Cincinnati sales department to that of the Cleveland office, and Marx S. Nathan, formerly of the Kleine feature service, is now a member of the Washington sub-office of Philadelphia.

George T. Pardy has joined the publicity staff of the V-L-S-E at the New York headquarters. Mr. Pardy is well known in the journalistic world, having worked in an editorial capacity on leading newspapers of Chicago, New Orleans, New York and other cities.

COOPER, KLEINE MANAGER IN TORONTO, VISITS NEW YORK

W. D. Cooper, manager in Toronto for George Kleine, spent two days in New York last week. He declares that Canadians these days are hunting for entertainment, as a leavening to the war news which of necessity they are so deeply and vitally interested in.

In "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer," the Kleine comedy, Mr. Cooper says they have found just what they were looking for, and as a consequence he is booking heavily just now.

Mr. Cooper also reports a noticeable revival of interest in the classics such as "Quo Vadis?", "The Last Days of Pompeii," "The Lion of Venice" and similar productions.

BUTTERFIELD PLANS STATES RIGHT CAMPAIGN IN MICHIGAN

Plans are being made by W. S. Butterfield, of Battle Creek, Mich., for a big office to handle feature pictures for Michigan on the states right plan.

It is understood that the office will be established as soon as Butterfield finds a capable man to take charge.

The office will have a good outlet for its features, as fifteen vaudeville and picture theatres in Michigan are under the management of Butterfield at the present time, being controlled from his main office at Battle Creek.

MANAGER HUNTER INSPECTS PHILADELPHIA MUTUAL EXCHANGE; KRAUPA ADDS 14 THEATRES TO LIST

HUNTER BENNETT, sales manager of the executive offices of the New York branch of the Mutual Film Corporation, spent several days in Philadelphia last week.

Mr. Bennett's visit was particularly in connection with the Charlie Chaplin releases which will begin to move in May.

Ever since the acquisition of Chaplin has been announced exhibitors throughout the state are anxious to get in Mutual contracts. Such is the report of Messrs. Pierce and Safron, roadmen for the Mutual, who have just returned from successful trips in their respective territories.

C. G. Powell, Mutual manager, was absent from his office several days last week with grip.

Edward Kraupa, proprietor of the Monarch Film Company, has in the past week added fourteen new theatres to the large list of those already using Monarch daily service.

E. Kahnweiler, manager of the Empire Film Company, has just purchased twenty new five and six-reel features for his stock of states right releases, besides contracting for two new pictures each month to be added to his output.

The following theatres have contracted for Paramount services through the Philadelphia Famous Players Exchange, Oscar Bower, manager, within the past two weeks:

Holmes Theatre, Holmesburg, Philadelphia, Zisak and Bulterman, proprietors; Starlight Theatre, Fifth street and Tabor road, Philadelphia, H. Jennings, owner; Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa.; Crawford Theatre, Canton, Pa.; Royersford Opera House, Royersford, Pa.; Green's Opera House, Woodbury, N. J.; Strand Theatre, Hightstown, N. J., Robbins and Norton, proprietors.

M. S. Nathan, ex-newspaper man and former representative of the Kleine-Edison Company, has been appointed roadman for V-L-S-E through the Philadelphia exchange, making Washington his headquarters.

C. V. Carrick, the district manager of the Interstate Film Company, has just taken a trip to Washington, Scranton, Wilkes-Barre and New York in the interests of his firm.

Twenty-five new Bluebird contracts have flown into the Fairmount Feature exchange during the past week.

Those from the Interstate, Fairmount, Universal and Philadelphia exchanges who planned to attend the big Universal ball in New York were: C. V. Carrick, G. C. Bennethum, Robert Lynch, Joseph Speiro, M. Lessy, managers, besides others of the office force.

ALL NEW ORLEANS EXCHANGES REPORT EXCELLENT BUSINESS; TRIANGLE ESTABLISHES BRANCH

AROUND of the Crescent City exchanges finds them all busy. This is the season of sharp competition but so far every exchange seems to be operating on a fairly profitable basis.

Here is a story of Bluebird prosperity as handed in by Manager Maurice F. Barr, who has floated a flock of Bluebird films on the following theatres during a recent trip:

The Saenger interests, for their houses in Texarkana, Monroe, Shreveport and Alexandria; the Pearce interests for their Arcade theatre in Lake Charles; G. F. McCormick, Laurel, Miss.; Dave Greer, Bonita Theatre, Marion, Ala.; J. G. Crouch, Princess Theatre, Troy, Ala.; Mrs. Z. D. Studstill, Pickford Theatre, Andalusia, Ala.; J. C. Dennis, Blunt's Opera House, Greensboro, Ala.; Elks Theatre, Baton Rouge, La.

In New Orleans Mr. Barr has closed a second run franchise with Jac Miller, for his new Empire Theatre in Canal Street. Bluebirds also have been placed in the following New Orleans houses:

J. B. Couvetiere, Gaiety Theatre, Royal and Dumaine streets; Theodore Beckley, People's Theatre; Robert Ragas, Sardonyx Theatre; Vic Howard, Arcade Theatre.

Mr. Barr's offices are swamped on return engagements for "Undine."

"Damaged Goods," a Mutual release, was booked at the Columbia Theatre last week for four days. This return engagement makes nineteen days in all that the film has played in New Orleans.

L. L. Pennybaker is a new member of the office force of Mutual.

R. E. Barron, manager of the Fox lair, is absent on a trip throughout the state.

Arthur Lucas, manager of the Triangle Film Corporation in New York, is in New Orleans to open a Triangle exchange there.

There is a new film man in New Orleans. He is only a few weeks old but his aggressiveness shown so far proves beyond a doubt that it will stand him in good cause a little later. He is a youngster who arrived last week at the home of R. Tracy Beckham, popular attache of the General Film Company.

L. V. Nicholson, assistant manager of the Crescent Theatre, has branched out as a musical publisher The new firm bears the name of Nicholson and Ruben, with offices at 704 Title Guarantee Building.

The firm has been formed to exploit the songs of Mr. Ruben, and the first "release" is a sentimental ballad, "Let's Cross the Bridge of Yesterday."

Besides his duties at the Crescent Theatre, Mr. Nicholson is southern states representative of the Burt Levy circuit.

HULL GOES TO BLUEBIRD EXCHANGE IN KANSAS CITY

Arthur G. Hull, formerly of the United Exchange in Oklahoma City, has gone to Kansas City as manager of the Bluebird Photo Play, Inc., at that point.

Jack Lewis, who has been manager of the Famous Players Film Service (J. D. Wheelan Company), in Oklahoma City, has accepted service with the United Film Company as manager for Oklahoma.

STREAMER OFF FOR NEW ENGLAND TRIP WITH E. & R. JUNGLE COMEDIES

Charlie Streamer, the representative of Greene's Feature Photo Plays, Inc., has left New York for upper New York State and New England, to offer exchange men the E. & R. Jungle Comedies; "Life Without Soul," and the new five-part drama in which Gertrude Bondhill, the star of "Sweet Clover" is featured, "The Awakening of Bess Morton.

The last named feature was purchased from Joseph W. Farnham, who is handling the distribution of the Bondhill Films, and is the first of a series of one a month to be handled by Green's company, starring Gertrude Bondhill.

The Greene's Feature Photo Plays have also contracted for Bondhill Films for the territory of Northern New Jersey.

ROWLAND AND CLARK OFFICES IN PITTSBURGH MOVED TO LARGER QUARTERS

The Rowland and Clark offices, now located on the tenth floor of the Empire Building, Pittsburgh, will be moved on April 1 to the third floor of the Westinghouse Building at Penn avenue and Ninth street. The new quarters will consist of a suite of five room and will give the firm ample room for its rapidly growing business.

The force of the company has been increased from time to time and the rooms now occupied by the company have already proved too small for the amount of work performed.

SCOTT OPTIMISTIC OVER BUSINESS OUTLOOK

Harry Scott, manager of the George Kleine branch, Philadelphia, was in New York last week.

He was in a particularly optimistic mood, and expressed himself as thoroughly satisfied with present business and the outlook for the future in his field.

He reports heavy bookings on the Kleine comedy, "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer," featuring Harry Watson.

Mr. Scott says this new film comedy certainly made a hit in his territory, and that he is deluged with inquiries

VAN HUSAN, OMAHA, HELPS IN PUBLIC MOVEMENT WITH SLIDE DONATION

F. A. Van Husan, manager of the Universal exchange at Omaha, has cooperated with the leading society women of his city to wage an anti-expectoration campaign of education. Mr. Van Husan offered to distribute slides showing the evils of thoughtless spitting, to the theatres of the city, if those in charge of the campaign would furnish them.

Realizing this was the best way to reach the greatest number the women gladly accepted his offer. The exhibitors of the city gladly joined in the public-spirited move and are showing the slides regularly, free of charge.

Film News From Foreign Parts

Theatre Tax in British Isles Only Question of Time

Special to Motion Picture News

London, March 1.

THE two questions which are commanding the attention of film men in England concern (1) the contemplated amusement tax and (2) the much talked-of embargo on imported film.

Reports of the likelihood of the former have since my last letter to Motion Picture News become very persistent, and there seems little doubt that provision for such tax will be made in the next budget to be presented to Parliament.

The precise details of the scheme are not yet available, and there are very conflicting opinions as to the methods of collection, should the tax be levied, but in some quarters there is a decided leaning toward the system in vogue in France.

As yet it is premature to give expression to the various statements which have been made relative to the subject, but one can say that, although the matter will not be received with open arms, generally it will be accepted as a war time expediency.

If, as is expected, a pro rata tax of one penny (minimum) on every sixpenny seat is levied, public support at the cinemas will not be interfered with to any great extent in the larger towns and cities, where the people can well afford to pay the increase, but it might have an adverse effect on many of the ill-equipped and old-fashioned houses in the rural, and perhaps in the suburban, neighborhoods.

Of the five thousand odd places of amusement in the British Isles, 4,200 are picture houses, and it has been computed that in London alone the yield of the tax will run, on the basis stated, well into five figures per week.

Outcry from Press

The outcry against the importation of foreign films has not been given expression by any responsible official or authority, but by that cheap, but powerful, press, always on the alert to create a sensation.

American film men, while appreciating the power which these journals wield, would be well advised not to accept their statements as being authoritative, or even representing the attitude of either the trade or the public.

For instance, one newspaper emanating from a leading publishing house said: "American Film Importers should remember that we don't want their advertisements."

The sheer fatuity of such a statement coming from the source it did strikes one immediately, particularly when it is remembered that in another journal coming from the same establishment only a short time ago there was published a full-page advertisement of a film (which is quite an unusual thing here) coming from a foreign house. Consult any British trade journal and it will be seen that the vast majority of the advertisements they contain are of American films.

To precipitately exclude all foreign films would spell disaster for many cinema concerns, for it must not be forgotten that nearly eighty-five per cent. of the films exhibited in England come from abroad, and the remainder, which are manufactured here, are printed on imported film base.

If this prohibition is seriously contemplated it is bound to be most strenuously contested by every responsible member of the trade.

The embargo would unquestionably be like a knife plunged right to the heart of the industry, and would inflict a wound from which it would take a great many years to recover, even to the present standard.

"Purple Iris" Boomed

The Trans-Atlantic Company is now booming its sixth serial, "The Purple Iris," and such a unique film is sure to command a very good following, especially after the success achieved by "The Broken Coin."

A most gratifying reception has been given the Williamson submarine pictures which made their debut at the Philharmonic Hall, London.

The subject is controlled by the same company, and has been hailed with delight by the press throughout the country.

An interesting announcement was made at a luncheon given under the auspices of J. D. Tippett, managing director of the Trans-Atlantic Co., to which some of the leading members of the Society of Authors were invited.

On behalf of the company it was mentioned that Mr. Tippett had entered into an arrangement with the British Society of Authors by which authors would be paid royalties on their work instead of a lump sum, as heretofore, and that the company would further agree to having the work on license for a definite period, after which the rights would revert again to the author.

The announcement was received with considerable favor, and drew forth some interesting comment. The well-known novelist, W. L. George, said that authors working for the screen would have to change their ideas considerably as most of them seemed to be working on the theme, "Why am I what I am, and if I am not what I am, why should I not be that?"

A pressman, G. W. Faulkner, was of opinion that film plays ought to be based on the ten commandments. What the public wanted was the sweet domestic type of story.

One of the trade papers, the Cinema, commenting on the new move, says that the British film industry has long shown a decided weakness for things American, and expresses itself with concern at the gradual Americanization of the British film studio.

Acting Strength 50 Per Cent. British

It draws attention to the fact that quite fifty per cent., if not more, of the acting strength of American producing companies is of British origin; the amazing extent of the use in the states of works of British dramatists and authors and the enormous trade in copyrights of British plays and novels.

Mr. Tippett's reply is a plea for the elevating of the cinema to a higher and still better plane. He felt that a movement should be made to enter into closer relationship with British authors of standing, especially as a dearth of good stories was beginning to make itself felt.

He ventured to think that the craze for the handling of subjects dangerous to youthful morality and bristling with subjects of insidious appeal, is only sporadic and he points out that his company and the powerful group it stands for has always made a stand for high class pictures and pictures of unexceptional morality.

"The future of the film art depends very much upon our authors breaking away from the conventional trammels of the novel, the play, or the short story hitherto written."

Speaking generally, lately there has been a lack of variety and incident in most of the comedies one sees at the cinemas, and without being hypercritical, the same may be alleged against some of the short reel dramas. Most of the lengthier productions, however, particularly those produced by renowned and established companies, leave nothing to be desired.

Gaumont Gets Bluebird Rights

The Gaumont Film Hire Service has purchased from the Trans-Atlantic Company the exclusive rights for Great Britain of the Bluebird photo plays. Some of the best comedies I have seen in the last few days have been those from the Essanay Company, the Globe Company (British), featuring Billy Merson; and the Trans-Atlantic British films showing the latest acquisition to their ranks, Louie Freear, the noted comedienne, whose drolleries are sublimely funny.

Big things are expected from the Ambrosio and Cæsar Multi reels, which are being rented for certain areas by the Urban Trading Company.

During the year some important big reel features are expected from Italy, and among the works enumerated are versions of well-known novels.

Some of the principal ones are "Temporal Power" (Marie Corelli), "Diana and Destiny" (Garvice), "Ivan the Terrible" (Gunsburg), "Madame Tazline" and "The Wandering Jew."

Pathé Freres announce another important serial entitled "The Girl of Lost Island," which will contain not more than fourteen episodes of two reels each.

The advertising scheme will include a campaign which will cost up to £50,000, and doubtless will be undertaken with the same thoroughness as was "The Exploits of Elaine."

The story is to be published in the journal of the Cinegoer, a publication which only made its debut a few days ago.

The detective drama has escaped the limelight lately, probably on account of the lack of suitable themes.

But a revived interest will no doubt be stimulated by the new series of journalist-detective adventures to be issued by the Gaumont Company from April tenth onwards.

They will centre around the exploits of Charles de la Rue, crime investigator, and the title of the first of the series is "On the Track of the Vampires," a four-reeler.

"Battle Cry of Peace" Makes Hit

Considerable enthusiasm has been manifested in the startling Vitagraph film, "An American Home" (in America known as "The Battle Cry of Peace," which the London Daily Mail says "is really a lurid version of "An Englishman's Home," produced with that eye for effect which the Americans possess."

The film has been regarded as one of the great films of the week and there can be no gainsaying that after the big publicity that has been given it, it will be in big demand.

A film of this description put on the market twelve months ago would have been an almost unheard-of success, but today interest in war subjects is not so acute, apart from films of topical interest, unless the film be of outstanding merit.

The film versions of the novels by E. W. Hornung, produced by the Kalem Company strike a popular note, and the two-reel "Stingaree" subjects will be the ideal film for the picture house which makes a specialty of short films.

The author is well known, his stories are well known, and the films will be equally so. Stories of the Australian Bush with all their romance, always have a peculiar fascination.

Other films of the week worthy of mention are "Alsace" (Jury's), "Salvation Nell" (California Motion Picture Corporation), "Sweet Alyssum" (Selig Red Seal), "The Pretenders" (Kalem), "The Foundling" (Famous Players), and "My Madonna" (Metro).

Four new war pictures, taken under official auspices, have been received, and the first of them will be released next week. They are the best and the most vivid yet issued, and inspire one with the spirit of the war-stricken area.

The titles are "Destruction of a German Blockhouse," "Ypres," "H. R. H. the Prince of Wales with the Guards in the Front Line," and "In Action with Our Canadian Troops."

Among the audience invited to witness Sir George Alexander's play, a scene in the filming of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," was Sir A. W. Pinero, whose fourth play, "Trelawney of the Wells," is now announced for a trade showing to be held in March or April.

The occasion of Sir A. Pinero's visit to the studio was a scene of an opera at Covent Garden being staged, complete with stage scenery, actors and actresses, orchestra, and the boxes and stalls full of people. Sir John Hare, who played in "Caste," was also an interested spectator.

Emphatic Statement About Vesta

It is stated on very good authority that "Miss Vesta Tilley has at last consented to play in pictures, but she is not going to America to do it. She is playing in an all-British company with an all-British caste, under English management."

Among the leading British productions just exhibited are: "The Taylor of Bond Street," Barker film. A superb film featuring the well-known "Potash and Perlmutter." The Hebrew story is cleverly told with delightful freshness and there are some revelations of the choice traits of human character. "Sally in Our Alley." Ideal film, 4,500 feet. The leading British film of the week. The story is written around an old English ballad and is played by a strong cast, including Hilda Trevelyan.

Among comedies are H. A. Browne and Company, Ltd., "Pimples, Arm of the Law," 970 feet; Davidson's "Some Snuff," 500 feet; "Vice Versa," 684 feet; Hepworth's "I Do Like a Joke," 425 feet; Kineto "Too Much Sausage," 475 feet; Hepworth's are releasing a charming scenic entitled "A Ramble Through Surrey," 625 feet," and Kineto, Ltd., a subject of interest being third of the series on "British Sports and Pastimes."

Action in 9 Rooms Shown at Once in Film by Director Tourneur of World-Equitable

SET BUILT BY DIRECTOR MAURICE TOURNEUR FOR "THE HAND OF PERIL," WORLD-EQUITABLE

WHAT promises to rival the "cut-back" in film productions, is the experiment by Maurice Tourneur with a scene in "The Hand of Peril," in which nine rooms of a house are shown, with action occurring in each room simultaneously.

The house is constructed with three rooms and a hallway on each floor, each room connecting and leading by doors from the main entrance on the lower floor to the last room on the upper floor.

The action of the piece shows the flight of characters from room to room and the action occurring in one room, that would have to be "flashed back," were the nine rooms not shown.

The experiment is quite novel and attractive and fits in admirably in the story, but whether it will prove of general worth cannot be told as yet. Mr. Tourneur, who created "Trilby," "Alias Jimmy Valentine," and "The Pawn of Fate," is also responsible for many innovations in camera work and lighting effects.

HERALD SELLS RIGHTS FOR CANADIAN TERRITORY

Fox and Pathe Win Victory Over Keystone Censors

THE Fox Film Corporation and the Pathe Exchange, Inc., won a victory March 17 over the Pennsylvania Board of Censors in the Court of Common Pleas, No. 2, Philadelphia. Three Fox pictures, "The Serpent," "The Fool's Revenge," and "The Kreutzer Sonata" had been condemned entirely by the censors; the Pathe releases, which comprised the first and second episodes of "The Iron Claw," and "New York," had been so badly mutilated as to entail monetary loss to the company.

With regard to "The Serpent," the Court ruled that if one-fifth of a picture were bad, the other four-fifths should not be thrown out. "The Fool's Revenge" was also sustained by the Court, the censors losing out on every count.

"The Iron Claw," with a single elimination, was also passed by the Court.

The cases were tried before Judge H. N. Wessels and Judge N. S. Barratt. Deputy Attorney-General Kun had charge of the case for the Board of Censors, while Congressman John R. K. Scott appeared for the Fox and Pathe interests.

"The Serpent" was the first case on the list and the courtroom was for the time being turned into a projection room. The large audience of interested spectators saw the film thrown on the screen reel by reel with intervals of quibbling and questioning by the attorneys on both sides, while the judges asked many questions and indulged in several witticisms at the expense of all parties.

Deputy Kun objected to the time set for the hearing as not giving him enough notice for the case and objected to every question put by the opposing counsel.

He objected to showing the picture before taking testimony—in fact objected to everything done by his opponents; his objections were not sustained by the Court.

Lloyd D. Willis, assistant general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, in his testimony told that "The Serpent" had passed not only the National Board of Censors but all other censors throughout the country with the possible exception of Portland, Oregon.

The fact that the picture cost about $50,000 to produce and the further fact that the loss to the company would total $100,000, and to exhibitors a large amount were the film banned in Pennsylvania, were points in Mr. Willis' evidence.

The fact that J. E. Hennessy, former manager of the Fox Film Company, had predicted to George Dembow, Philadelphia manager for Fox, that "The Serpent" would never pass in Pennsylvania before it was shown to the censors was denied by Hennessy but affirmed by Dembow on the witness stand.

Attorney Scott brought out that Fox had no pictures condemned while they were friendly with the so-called "trust," but since the break had come condemnations followed closely on each other's heels.

Chief Censor Breitinger in his testimony declared the picture shown the Court was not the one he had condemned, but that eliminations had been since made. This was denied by the Fox people.

Mr. Breitinger insisted that the board's objections were based on Section 6 of the Code which barred anything indecent, obscene or immoral.

In the opinion of Judge Wessels and Judge Barratt this contention was not proved by the picture shown, so the appeal of the Fox Film Corporation was sustained.

Deputy Attorney Kun at once announced that at the instance of Attorney-General Francis Shunk Brown who had been in court during part of the showing, an appeal would be taken to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

Attorney Scott brought next to the attention of the Court, Pathe's "The Iron Claw." After two reels of this had been shown, George H. Smith, the general serial director of Pathe, told on the stand the makeshifts, trouble and expense to which his company had been put after nine hundred feet of the first and second episodes had been condemned by the censors just a few days prior to its announced date of release.

Exhibitors who had seen these reels before their mutilation were dissatisfied with the censored product and cancellations had resulted with consequent loss of money and prestige to the company.

Dr. Oberholtzer, secretary of the Board of Censors, tried to prove in his testimony that the word "wanton" was the chief objection in one reel.

Judge Wessels contended that as Dr. Oberholtzer was a historian he must come across this word often in history and the Judge could not see that it was debasing more on the screen than in a book. The Court ruled that with one exception, namely, the mutilating of the villain's hand in a vise and his branding, the eliminations need not been made.

LAFAYETTE, IND., SUNDAY OPENING CASE ATTRACTS ATTENTION OF WHOLE CITY

LAFAYETTE'S Sunday theatre case, which probably will decide whether Lafayette is to have Sunday shows, closed when the case was given to the jury, March 15.

The closing argument for the defense was made by George P. Haywood, who was followed by Clyde H. Jones, for the state.

Mr. Haywood contended that motion pictures should rightfully be exhibited on Sunday because of their educational and cultural value.

The state contended that the courts in many states have upheld the idea of one day's rest in seven and that moving picture theatres have no more right to operate on Sunday than have business places or factories.

Mr. Jones pleaded for an observance of the Sabbath and said there was nothing to justify the present move for Sunday shows in Lafayette except the desire of picture show proprietors for gain.

He denied an assertion of the defense that Sunday shows are a necessity.

Richard P. DeHart, eighty-five years old, former judge and civil war general, spoke March 10 in behalf of the defendant, Misha Rubinoff, a Russian Jew, who is charged with Sabbath law violation.

Mr. DeHart asserted that motion pictures were the greatest sermons and that they ought to be permitted on Sundays. They conveyed a message, he said, that was more forceful than any spoken utterance.

He declared that those who opposed them were permitting themselves to be guided by traditions. Rochester Baird argued for the defense and several attorneys also were heard.

No trial in years has been so bitterly contested and few cases have attracted more attention in the city. The ministers of Lafayette are backing the prosecution and money has been raised to continue the fight against Sunday shows.

CHICAGO CENSORS PASS "FORBIDDEN FRUIT"

The Ivan Film Production, "Forbidden Fruit," has been passed by the Chicago Board of Censors. The General Feature Film Company of Chicago, which distributes Ivan productions throughout Illinois, has been awaiting the license to exhibit this picture in Chicago.

In Cincinnati, Safety Director Friedlander announced, there would be no interference with "Forbidden Fruit," against which a complaint had been made by Rev. John Herget.

Mr. Friedlander announced that the eliminations made by the State Board of Moving Picture Censors had been made.

V-L-S-E Exhibitor Outwits Keystone Censors

Patch of Pitt Theatre, Pittsburgh, Lately in New York Arranging for "Ne'er-Do-Well," Puts on Playlet Replica of Scene Ordered Cut Out by Board

WILLIAM MOORE PATCH, managing-director of the Pitt Theatre in Pittsburgh, spent most of last week at the V-L-S-E offices in New York, securing new pictures for his theatre and arranging details for the forthcoming production in the Smoky City of "The Ne'er-Do-Well," which has just been secured from Sol Lesser by the Big Four.

Mr. Patch is now running the V-L-S-E "Battle Cry of Peace," which is in its fifth week in the Pitt Theatre, playing to capacity at every performance of the pictures, with no end of the engagement yet in sight.

Undoubtedly, one of the reasons for the success of "The Battle Cry of Peace" in Pittsburgh has been Mr. Patch's astute action in outwitting the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors.

These learned gentlemen, for no sound reason whatsoever, cut out the big scene in the climax of the third act of "The Battle Cry of Peace," where the mother murders her own daughters to prevent them from falling into the hands of the drunken officers of a foreign enemy.

Rather than have the lesson of the picture completely ruined, Mr. Patch engaged players—three girls who looked exactly like the characters on the screen—and had the entire scene acted on the stage of the Pitt Theatre in all its detail.

In fact, its forcefulness was accentuated by means of the shadowgraph effects employed in its presentation.

In Pittsburgh, where the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors is regarded as a joke, this little playlet has caused a veritable sensation.

Mr. Patch's action has not been regarded very favorably by the members of the censor board, but they are powerless to prevent him, as they have no authority over the legitimate stage whatsoever.

Mr. Patch does not deny that he is after the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors with a knife.

"When the press, the drama, art and literature are muzzled, it will be time to admit the fairness of a censorship for pictures," said he the other day.

"The people of Pennsylvania are not going to stand it much longer. By their absurd action in eliminating the climacteric scene of 'The Battle Cry of Peace,' and thereby ruining a lesson that is sorely needed at this particular time, they have done more to hurt themselves than words can possibly describe."

Furthermore, Mr. Patch declares, that in every instance where he considers a film has been unjustly mutilated by the censors he will substitute like characters and have the censored scene played on the stage as if it were a legitimate production.

Farnham and Boone Open Film Service Bureau

Firm Will Act in Advisory Capacity on All Problems Whether Pertaining to the Laboratory, Finance, Production, Material or Exploitation End of the Industry

WITH the idea of acting in an advisory capacity to manufacturers and as business managers for directors, players and writers, and incidentally exploiting a high grade of photoplays, Joseph W. Farnham and J. Allen Boone have started a motion picture service bureau and opened a suite of offices in the Candler Building, 220 West Forty-second street, New York.

Messrs. Farnham and Boone announce that they have secured the services of a number of experts in every department of the industry, and plans have been so systematized that the bureau can render intelligent service to the producer, whether it be a laboratory problem, one of finance, or one of production, material or exploitation.

They have also started a system of co-operation between manufacturers and directors, players and writers.

Mr. Farnham, formerly on the staff of the New York Morning Telegraph and the Billboard, was general manager of the All-Star Feature Corporation, and acted in an advisory capacity for a number of film companies.

Shortly after war was declared in Europe he went "somewhere in France," and secured a series of war pictures in the interests of the Carnegie Peace Foundation. He was at one time advertising and publicity manager of the Lubin Company.

Mr. Boone is an experienced newspaper and magazine writer, who has also made an extensive study of motion pictures, especially from the exploitation and scenario ends. He was formerly director of publicity and advertising for Lubin.

Among some of the well-known players Farnham and Boone are acting as managers for are the following:

NEW YORK LEAGUE PLANS SHOW FOR MAY 1-7

The Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, New York branch, has announced a trade show at Grand Central Palace, New York, from May 1 to 7.

All World Players Specialists in Their Lines

Roster of Permanent Actors and Actresses Is Practically Complete—Warwick Is at Work in "Sudden Riches"—Gail Kane Will Be Seen 5 Times in the Year

THE roster of permanent players, male and female, as it now stands, has been definitely settled upon by the World Film Corporation and the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation—of course, allowing for future activities and the consummation of negotiations now pending. The World players are specialists in their lines.

Robert Warwick, whose work for years as a stage player established him as a star is a permanent World Film player.

At present Mr. Warwick is engaged in the visualization of "Sudden Riches," and recently completed "Human Driftwood."

Gail Kane, who appeared in 'The Labyrinth," and who recently completed her second Equitable picture, "Her God," will be seen about five times a year on the program.

Following the release of "Her God" she will be seen in "The Other Sister," which is now in work under the direction of Frank Powell.

Alice Brady, daughter of William A. Brady, and well established on the spoken stage and the screen, last seen in "The Woman in 47," will appear on the World program about every three months. Her next work will be in "The Grubstaker," in which she is now engaged.

Mollie King, seen in "A Woman's Power," is at work on "The Call of Love," and will feature the World film program about every four months.

Carlyle Blackwell is permanently allied with Equitable, and will feature the releasing program about five times a year.

Muriel Ostriche, who created parts in "Mortmain," "A Daughter of the Sea" and "A Circus Romance," is the Equitable ingenue piece-de-resistance. Miss Ostriche, one of the first Equitable players, was featured on the program within a month of the concern's beginning, and is now working with Edna Wallace Hopper and Charles J. Ross in "Who Killed Simon Baird."

Ethel Clayton, engaged this week by World Film, will probably appear from six to eight weeks apart on both World and Equitable.

Arthur Ashley is the "heavy man" of the Equitable concern, and is now playing opposite Alice Brady in "The Grubstaker."

Clara Kimball Young, one of the World Film Corporation's principal stars for the past eighteen months, will be seen next in "The Feast of Life," and following in "Cloisette" and four other elaborate stories now in preparation for her.

Edwin August is permanently associated with World and Equitable, both as star and director. His work at present is confined to playing the leading role and staging "The Social Highwayman."

Clara Whipple, recently seen in "The Question," "Daughter of the Sea," is at present appearing opposite John Mason in "The Reapers."

Frances Nelson, who was featured in "Love's Crucible," and who is now playing opposite Robert Warwick in "Human Driftwood" as a featured player, is a long-term member of the World Film roster.

Holbrook Blinn without the shadow of a doubt, the foremost actor of his type on the American stage, continues with World Film, and will be seen shortly in "The Unpardonable Sin." Mr. Blinn will appear on the World program about every ten weeks.

Among the permanent players who work opposite stars are Doris Kenyon, who was recently in "The Pawn of Fate" opposite George Beban, and in "The Feast of Life," with Miss Young, Mary Charleson, June Elvidge, Chester Barnett, Lillian Cook and Claire Nagel.

In addition to the regular players, John Mason, Kitty Gordon William Courtenay, Henry Kolker, Jane Grey, Edna Wallace Hopper, Charles J. Ross, Bruce McRae, Frank Sheridan, Charles Cherry and Adele Blood are to be seen in one or more feature productions.

BUFFALO, N. Y., THEATRES RAISE PRICES

Buffalo, N. Y., March 18.

The Elmwood theatre is the second large house to raise its admission price in this city. On Monday evening, March 13, this house opened with Paramount plays at fifteen cents, and balcony seats at ten cents. An augmented orchestra, complete redecorations, both inside and out, new stage setting and carpets are some of the features noticed under the new policy.

The first week's program has Mary Pickford in "Poor Little Peppina," George Beban in "The Alien" and Marguerite Clark in "Out of the Drifts."

The Strand theatre, which recently raised its prices, is making "a howling success of the affair." It was a question in this city of either getting higher admissions or cutting the quality of the shows. Manager Edel decided to do the former and had the co-operation of the local newspapers in doing so.

Film and Daily Co-operate for Preparedness Plea

Collins of Public Service Company Pointed Out to Officials of Tribune Quickest Way to Raise Money for the Marjorie Sterrett Battleship Fund

THE Public Service Film Company, producers of "Defense or Tribute?" the motion picture advocate of preparedness, are at present in the midst of a vigorous publicity campaign. Largely responsible for this is the co-operation which the New York Tribune is extending to the picture company.

It was only a short time ago that the Tribune launched the Dime for a Battleship Fund as a result of a letter from Marjorie Sterrett, a thirteen-year old girl living in Brooklyn.

Contributions towards this cause were then received from many persons, young and old, of New York City and environs.

But it was purely a local proposition until General Manager Joseph P. Collins of the Public Service Film Company visited the Tribune office.

"My proposition was a simple one," said Mr. Collins to a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. "I called the attention of Tribune officials to the fact that it would be years and years before they raised ten million dollars, the sum necessary to build a modern battleship, if they relied only upon New York City and outlying districts for contributions.

"I told them of our picture, Defense or Tribute? and the timely topic of Preparedness, embodied in the theme of the drama, of the 20,000 picture theatres in the United States, and that co-operation between the Tribune and the Public Service Company would be of undoubted benefit to both.

"And as I expected, we met with wonderful success. The Tribune furnished the company with a list of at least a thousand newspapers throughout the United States that would be glad to take up the campaign.

"The newspapers have in every instance adopted the Dimes for a Battleship proposition and in conjunction they boost 'Defense or Tribute?'

"As a consequence the picture practically books itself. Exhibitors are quick to see the value of the publicity as a rule and if not the newspapers soon make them see it.

"In some instances newspapers have given us page and half page advertisements, urging its readers to go to such and such a theatre to see 'Defense or Tribute?' and calling them to bear in mind the fact that a certain portion of the box office receipts go to Marjorie Sterrett's Battleship Fund. This is the catch-line of the whole thing.

"We are selling states right on the feature," continued Mr. Collins, "and the buyer is expected to take over the publicity campaign in every case.

"It is no trouble, however, as the newspapers in cities where the picture has not yet been exhibited are vying with one another for the privilege of carrying on the fight.

"One paper even enclosed our herald in its sheets and stamped it as a supplement to the regular edition.

"City governments are, too, offering co-operation. In New Haven, for instance, where the picture was screened at Poli's theatre, William Howard Taft spoke in behalf of Preparedness.

"Congressmen, mayors, city councilmen and other men in public life are taking up the cause all over the country.

CALIFORNIA EXHIBITOR COULD NOT DO WITHOUT THE "NEWS"

Motion Picture News,
New York City.
Gentlemen:—
I could not do without the "News." I consider it one of the best trade journals published.
Here is hoping that the "News" keeps on progressing as it has in the past.

Yours very truly,
J. N. RICE,
Proprietor, Monterey Theatre,
Monterey, California.

PITTSBURGH MANAGER DONATES 10,000 TICKETS FOR ACTORS' FUND

Special to Motion Picture News

Pittsburgh, March 18.

A number of men prominent in the film world of Pittsburgh have been selected for the committee in charge of raising the fund in that district for the Actors' Benefit.

The committee held its first meeting last Friday in the office of Al W. Cross, chairman, at 212 Fourth avenue.

Manager Antonopolis of the Olympic theatre in Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, proposed the donation of 10,000 tickets to be sold in any way the committee might think best.

SOUTH'S FIRST TRADE EXPOSITION IN ATLANTA, MARCH 30-APRIL 1

The South's first Motion Picture Trades Exposition will be held at Atlanta, Georgia, March 30-31 and April 1. The City Auditorium will house the exposition, and it is expected every branch of the industry will be represented.

Nicholas Power, Consolidated Film and Supply Company, Mutual Film Corporation, Lucas Theatre Supply Company and the Minusa Cine Screen Company have already selected floor space and places in the official program.

Exhibitors from every state in the South will be in attendance, it is expected.

Beyfuss Satisfied with Sale of "Unwritten Law"

Vice-President of California Motion Returns to San Francisco After Month's Stay in New York, Marketing Initial Release of "Better Than Program" Pictures

ALEXANDER BEYFUSS, vice-president and general manager of the California Motion Picture Corporation, has returned to San Francisco, after a month's stay in New York looking after his company's initial release of its Better-Than-Program pictures. Before taking his departure Mr. Beyfuss concluded the sale of the various territorial rights throughout the United States for "The Unwritten Law," in which Beatriz Michelena is starred, and gave out the following statement:

"We are convinced that the state rights method of distributing is the big and absolutely the only way for our policy, that of producing five or six pictures a year superior to those released by the programs.

"In this connection we note with interest a resolution adopted at the fourth annual convention of the New York State Motion Picture Exhibitors League, in session at Albany a week ago, as follows: 'That the Motion Picture Exhibitors League is opposed to the program system now enforced by a majority of the producers, and we favor a system of open booking.'

"We want to make impressive once more that we have had no quarrel with the programs but merely wish to go on record that the state rights or open distributing policy is the only way for a concern like ours, with a policy of producing but a few exceptionally good pictures a year, and that we could not release our product on the program basis and exist.

"In disposing of 'The Unwritten Law' by state rights, we have conducted our negotiations strictly on a business basis, and right here we might cite but a brief paragraph from one of the many unsolicitated letters received from state rights buyers:

" 'It is our pleasure to extend to you our cordial congratulations, not only for your achievement in producing such a splendid feature as 'The Unwritten Law,' but also for your courteous attention, prompt action and painstaking endeavor to aid us in making our investment in your notable release a complete success.'

" 'Our journey half way across the continent for the purpose of viewing 'The Unwriten Law' has already been more than repaid. Your first release under your new policy sets a remarkably high standard which we know will also be evident in your future releases. We will certainly want them.'

"Our state rights facts and figures," continued Mr. Beyfuss, "were not the result of hasty conclusions, but were based on careful investigations conducted for the past year.

"In certain territories our prices we found, after a thorough examination of present existing conditions, to be too high, a condition which we were readily willing to admit and adjust by lower quotations in order that the buyer might still enjoy his reasonable profit.

"During our investigations we found that at this time, because of the great number of feature pictures purchased each month, conditions were at the lowest ebb as far as prices are concerned, this condition making, however, a keener demand for the really good pictures, for which good prices can always be obtained.

"Another feature which the state rights buyers appreciated was the fact that we did not use offers submitted to us as a leverage to bid the price up on other prospective buyers.

"Wherever two purchasers in the same territory offered a similar price the sale was made to the one whom we considered the most responsible financially as well for his ability to place our pictures in the best theatres where prices could be obtained which we believe our features demand.

"Our method of eliminating from our advertisements any falsity or impressions of ego created a most favorable impression among the buyers.

"Our exploitation of Beatriz Michelena, with her 'Talks to Screen-Struck Girls,' has been most highly commended by newspaper editors throughout the country. The publications in which these talks appear already reach a reading public of upwards of ten million people.

"We are more than satisfied with the results attending the first release by state rights of our Better-Than-Program pictures," said Mr. Beyfuss in conclusion.

Rockville Centre, L. I., Studio Site for Raver

Structure Is Finished With Exception of Light Installation—Buildings Located on Five-Acre Plot—Outside Stage Is in Course of Construction

ALL future Raver Film Corporation productions, such as "The Witching Hour," "Alabama," "The Hoosier Doctor," "As a Man Thinks," "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," and the many other Augustus Thomas plays, will be made in the new Raver studios at Rockville Centre, Long Island.

The studio is but a few short blocks out of the city of Rockville Centre, with every necessary natural bit of scenery within easy distance of it.

The studio proper is completely finished with the exception of the installation of lights. The ordinary line of props and scenery is being built and laboratory facilities are being installed.

The studio will consist of several buildings and include a plot of ground covering about five acres.

Beside the indoor studio, a large outside stage is being constructed adjacent to the property room for use in good weather.

In the construction of the studio the buildings have been arranged with a view of securing the greatest efficiency. Adjoining and connecting with the studio proper is the property building

On the other side of the property room is the large outdoor stage. On the opposite side of the group is the laboratory, with its tanks, dry rooms, printers' and assembling rooms.

Over this is the carpenter's shop and scenic department. In addition to this group of buildings there is an extra store room and garage of considerable size which will accommodate five automobiles.

The fourteen-room house which is standing on this site will not be razed, as there is plenty of space to erect a studio that will accommodate the largest sets that might be called for.

When the entire studio building is finished, there will be ample space to set from fourteen to twenty sets at one time.

At present, things are being rushed, and only about half that space will be available for the first few pictures.

The house will be converted into a clubhouse for the players and directors, with a library, lounging room, pool and billiard room, a swimming pool, shower baths and lockers.

The library will be constructive in its makeup. The majority of the books will be on subjects relating to motion pictures and their making, such as photography and acting.

There will be a complete file of the various trade and dramatic papers. Besides these publications there will be fiction of the better kind.

"Public on Lookout for New Themes"—Wright

Reception of "Social Pirates" Indicates Quick Recognition of Fresh Material Told in Novel Manner, Is Declaration of Kalem Official

WILLIAM WRIGHT of the Kalem Company greeted MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative with an "I told you so" smile. He had just completed the reading of the trade reviews on the initial episodes of "The Social Pirates," exhibited at Wurlitzer Hall.

"Unanimous," he chuckled. "Have you ever seen any production received more unqualified praise, such eulogies for every branch of the production?

"And just to show you newspaper fellows that you are right, here are a few of the letters we have received from exhibitors who were present at the different advance exhibitions throughout the country.

"It is interesting to note that the first point made in all the reviews and letters concerns the novel theme of 'The Social Pirates' and the originality of the stories.

"The public is tired of rehashed mystery plots, adaptations of time-worn thrillers and mediocre stories boasting prominent authors' names.

"George Bronson-Howard's name will be remembered for the fact that he is the first author of prominence to really give the screen the best material that is in him.

"When Kalem decided to get an author so well known for a series of two-reel subjects we determined that we would search until we had found an author willing to really give an original idea and develop his plots solely with the screen in mind.

"The reception accorded 'The Social Pirates' is the answer to our search. Watch the trend of picture development in the coming year and you will find that producers will awaken to the fact that it isn't sufficient to say that 'we need good stories.' 'Good stories' doesn't cover the need.

"We need really original, fresh themes that are not pulled and twisted to make them suitable for screen use, but which are planned primarily for the screen.

"Too many authors seem to think that the picture is only good enough for the ideas they have tossed aside or the plots they have worked over and over in their printed stories.

"They are due for a shock, for the public and producers will soon see that so long as they are paying the top prices they should get the best work of an author's brain."

"War-Torn Poland" Shows Woes of Devastated Zone

Six Thousand Feet Production, for Exhibition Under Auspices of Polish Newspapers, Also Contains Scenes Along Italian and Other Battle Fronts

ARRANGEMENTS have been practically completed for the exhibition of "War-torn Poland." The production is over six thousand feet in length. While a majority of the scenes are laid in devastated Poland, yet the feature shows the general war conditions in Europe in graphic fashion.

"War-torn Poland" presents scenes along the Italian battle front; at Saloniki, Greece, now occupied by the Allies; news pictorials from the French, Belgian, Turkish and Russian firing lines.

Many of the rulers of the countries at war, together with world-famous generals and others now in the public eye are presented in their varied fields of activity.

The King of the Belgians, the President of France, Emperor William, General von Hindenberg, and General Joffre posed for this film, as did King George of England and numerous commanding and staff officers at the battle front.

There are also close-up intimate views of Paderewski, the great Pole, who has labored for so long in the service of his unfortunate countrymen across the sea in the old world.

Paderewski is seen together with Governor Dunne, of Illinois. Paderewski is also shown appealing to forty thousand of his fellow-countrymen and others in the United States to aid in relief work for the starving in Poland.

While the film will no doubt be released through a regular service, arrangements are nearing completion for its showing under the auspices of the largest Polish newspapers in the United States.

Many requests for exclusive territorial rights are also being received and are carefully considered.

A large percentage of the proceeds from the exhibition of "War-torn Poland" will be devoted to the Polish Relief Fund, which is utilized for furnishing the necessities of life and comforts to the unfortunates of a war-stricken country.

Sturgeon Ships "God's Country and the Woman"

Eight Reel Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Contains 411 Scenes, Each Taken on an Average of Three Times—Many Hours Required to Reach Many Locations

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, March 11.

MANAGING Director Rollin S. Sturgeon of the Hollywood Vitagraph studios has shipped his eight-reel Blue Ribbon subject, "God's Country—and the Woman," and has been notified that this will be released April 3 on the V-L-S-E program.

This subject contains four hundred and eleven scenes, each of which was taken on an average of three times.

Many of the locations, especially those in Bear Lake Valley, required several hours' travel to reach. In spite of this the company made good time on the picture.

In all, there are more than one hundred exterior locations used, giving the production great scenic variety. The northern costumes used in this were made to order and of full weight material.

Mr. Sturgeon's next production will have French atmosphere. The title has not been announced, but it is known that Webster Campbell will play the juvenile lead, Mary Anderson, ingenue, and Corrine Griffith will have an important part.

A large yacht has been chartered for several months by the Vitagraph company producing the fifteen episode serial, "Hearts of Three."

A greater portion of the scenes for the first nine episodes will be made aboard the yacht and on Pacific Ocean islands.

Director Walbert and his cast, headed by William Duncan, George Holt and Carmen Phillips, have left the studio for an indefinite stay aboard the yacht.

Sothern Is Keen on Picture Work for Vitagraph

Shakespeare Interpreter Who Refused Several Offers Before Accepting Commodore Blackton's, Is Impressed with the Acting of Stars Cast for His Company

WHEN the Vitagraph company announced that it had succeeded in gaining the consent of E. H. Sothern to appear in motion pictures, the theatrical world was interested in the news.

In all his years as a joint interpreter with Julia Marlowe of Shakespearean roles, Mr. Sothern had never expressed his opinion of the motion picture field as one worthy of serious reflection.

It was a well-known fact among those of the dramatic profession that Mr. Sothern had turned down several offers for his services.

The surprise caused by Mr. Sothern's decision to enter motion pictures was heightened when Commodore Blackton of the Vitagraph company announceed that Mr. Sothern would not appear in Shakespearean roles, but that he would appear opposite Anita Stewart, Edith Storey and Lillian Walker in three features dealing with modern life.

"Several things made it impracticable to use Shakespearean plays as vehicles," Mr. Sothern declares. "To me the most important reason was that Julia Marlowe was physically unable to appear with me in my motion picture work, and if I should be placed opposite a different creator of Shakespeare's roles I would not be able to accomplish my best efforts.

"When I told Mr. Blackton this he informed me that he had not intended to star me in Shakespeare, but that he had contracted for three photoplays in which I would appear opposite Miss Stewart, Miss Storey and Miss Walker.

"As I had seen Miss Stewart in 'The Goddess,' and had been impressed by Miss Storey's acting in 'The Island of Regeneration,' and knew the interest Miss Walker had created in 'Green Stockings,' I was glad to be cast with these stars.

"The range of these plays will extend all the way from tragedy to comedy. Commodore Blackton is having the situations adapted to fit my particular qualifications, and I believe I shall be able to display my qualities that have won me the generous praise of the American public as an humble interpreter of Shakespeare.

"As Commodore Blackton and Albert E. Smith will personally direct my work in motion pictures, I feel assured the three subjects will please the public."

LOUISE LOVELY STAR IN "TANGLED HEARTS," FROM "U," APRIL 2

The Bluebird release for April 2 will again advance Louise Lovely as a star in that popular brand, presenting "Tangled Hearts," a five-part problem play, directed by Joseph De Grasse and written by Ida May Park. Lon Chaney will be Miss Lovely's principal male support, with Hayward Mack and Jay Belasco in important roles.

There will be two strong characters besides Miss Lovely's star part, engaging the talents of Agnes Vernon and Marjorie Ellison.

The part played by little Georgie French will be the pivotal point in the plot, as the parentage of the child and her adoption into her own mother's home create the complications that give the play its title.

Miss Lovely's success in "The Grip of Jealousy" not alone warranted her elevation to stardom in Bluebirds, but secured her a permanent place in the lead of Bluebird players for two years to come.

Youth, beauty and talent have combined to assure Miss Lovely a place among the popular women of picturedom, for everybody agrees that she is all that her stage cognomen implies.

DIRECTOR CRISP ARRIVES IN NEW YORK TO STAGE "RAMONA"

Donald Crisp, sole director of 'Ramona," the cinema-theatrical entertainment adapted from Helen Hunt Jackson's famous novel, which W. H. Clune and his associate, Lloyd Brown, will present at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre beginning the first week in April, arrived in New York last week from Los Angeles to take charge of the work of staging this elaborate picture

Accompanying him were his scenic and mechanical staffs. Two seventy-foot baggage cars of scenery and effects necessary in the presentation of "Ramona" have been transported across the continent.

Fifty-two people are employed in this production, which is announced as one of the most pretentious offerings in the history of the motion picture industry.

"THE BRUISER"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

MOST of us are inclined to be envious when plutocratic possessions are flaunted in our faces, and on that account this socialistic melodrama will find favor with many.

Since the working class is glorified, and the wealthy made to appear as criminal parasites, this feature will be best received in houses that do not cater to a capitalistic clientele.

The most spectacular incident of the play is the boxing match between Al Kaufman, the professional pugilist, and William Russell, the hero of the piece.

This bout will interest all ring fans, for although Russell's science does not equal Kaufman's, he is far from being inept with the gloves. The punches exchanged are real smashes.

WILL POWER CONQUERS INTELLECT

Russell has an ideal part for him—that of an unassuming, two-handed leader of men. The requirements of the scenario force him to exaggerate at times, but in the main his work is brilliant.

Roy Stewart is a convincing, plausible heavy—George Ferguson is the other kind. Charlotte Burton is an adequate heroine, and Lizette Thorne's interpretation of the "villainess," though overdone, is effective.

The directing is at times unusually good, and the photography is remarkable.

Bill Brawley is a longshoreman employed by the Kenwick Shipping Company. His proficiency in boxing and his honesty have made him popular with the other employees, so he is chosen to present their demands for higher wages.

Manson Kenwick and his sister Norma, who have inherited the business, wish to sell it, but the impending labor trouble scares purchasers away. On this account Kenwick hires Dorgan, another longshoreman, to secretly discredit Brawley with the men, and to get their signatures on a "joker" agreement.

Norma, too, takes a hand, and under the pretense of teaching him, gives the workingmen the impression that he has deserted their cause. But Brawley has not been duped, and he succeeds in making Kenwick sign an agreement to pay higher wages, and in the deciding bout for the championship of the waterfront, he knocks out his opponent and regains the love of his sweetheart.

"DRIFTWOOD"

(Ocean Film Corporation—Five Reels.)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE various elements which experts tell us a picture must have to be a complete and artistic work, this one has. But even greater than the assembled elements is the manner in which they have been assembled.

The direction shows in every yard the touch of the artist's hand—in this case the hand is the hand of Marshal Farnum.

Small things are big when handled with intelligent feeling. A hand, shown in a close-up at the proper moment, is more expressive than a full set, or a whole reel of titles.

And here the most telling methods of expressing an idea or an emotion have been used to the exclusion of words, and even actions.

One peep through the crack of a door, with a close-up glimpse of two trim ankles, serve to tell one man's whole character so that no one can misunderstand.

The director has shown an excellent understanding of lighting and camera possibilities. Most of the interior sets are works of art from a lighting standpoint, and would arouse admiration even as still pictures.

The dramatic situations are all acutely drawn, and all of dramatic value that they contain has been extracted and visualized for the audience. We do not recall having seen a better picture this year.

ALICE IS WELCOMED TO THE CITY

The scenario, which is an excellent one, was made by Tony Kelly, from Owen Davis' well-known melodrama. The story is that of a girl who ran away from her country home to marry a rich young man, became separated from him through an automobile accident, and believing he had deserted her, started out to make her own living.

She found herself employed by a lawyer, who, all unknown to her, was her sister's husband.

This man made advances, which she repelled for a time, then finally accepted, only a few days before her sweetheart, who had been seeking her for two years, found her.

Overwhelmed by the situation in which he found himself, the lawyer determined to do what he could to right the wrong; the girl considering herself unworthy, refused to accept her sweetheart's love, until the lawyer, now her brother-in-law, threatened suicide; then she changed her mind and found happiness.

Vera Michelena plays the girl convincingly and presents an attractive figure on the screen. She is ably supported by Clarissa Selwynne as the sister, Harry Spingler as the sweetheart, and Charles Graham as the lawyer.

Other members of a capable cast are Dora Heritage, Leslie Stowe, Joseph Daly, Vida Johnson and David McCauley.

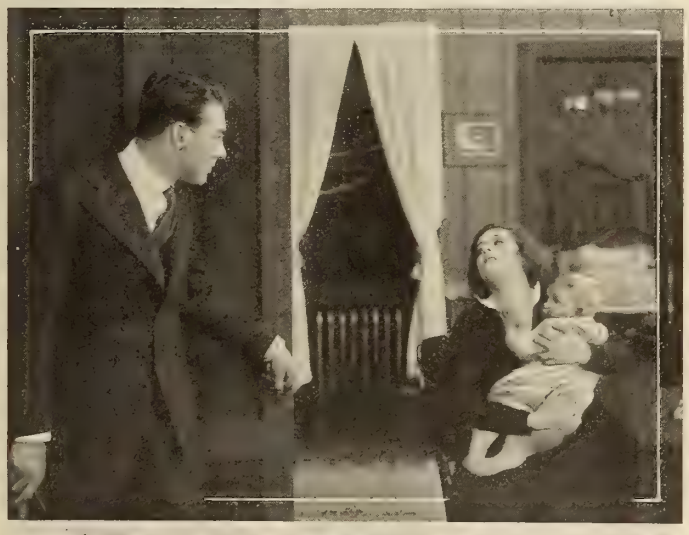
"DOLLARS AND THE WOMAN"

(Lubin-V-L-S-E—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE.

HERE is a picture which disappoints one very pleasantly at almost every turn. The reason for this is embodied in Arthur Crewe, a character in the story. Crewe is the third angle of the eternal triangle—in this case he is the suitor who has loved and lost.

It is natural to assume that Crewe will turn out to be a villain, but surprising enough, he practices no heinous tactics. He causes slight trouble, it is true, but his intentions are the best in the world. "Dollars and the Woman" is an unusual picture for this reason, if for no other.



But there are plenty of other things which stamp the feature as truly extraordinary. It has in it some of the cleverest psychology and some of the best character development seen on the screen for a long time.

Of smashing physical fights there are none, but there is fighting a-plenty in the minds of the three principal characters. To our notion a tumult of conflicting passions is more interesting to descry any day in the week than a fisticuff combat.

That is another reason why "Dollars and the Woman" will make a distinct impression.

Thirdly, the cast of this feature is head and shoulders above the average. Tom Moore, Ethel Clayton and Craufurd Kent are the leads—the order in which they are named is no sign of graduated ability.

Miss Clayton as Madge Hiyler gives one of the best performances of her career. Her delicate shades of expression that signify so clearly each point which she desires to register, are executed with skill.

Mr. Moore as Hiyler is a most convincing struggling husband, and Craufurd Kent as Crewe renders a difficult part in polished fashion.

The story, the originality of which is suggested in the first paragraph, is based on "Dollars and Cents," by Albert Payson Terhune. Another of its assets is its detail.

Detail is observed with a most pleasant effect. This factor of the production also results in its sentimental element, which is satisfying and not mawkish.

The plot shows, after quite an introduction, Hiyler, a struggling inventor and his wife, who wants to help him along. Business takes the inventor and about the entire contents of the family exchequer to San Francisco.

Madge gives birth to a son, and Crewe, with the most honorable intentions, sees that she has every care. Afterwards misfortunes which lead to poverty transform Madge into a miser.

The return of her husband, who has been successful, works no effect on her—she is still the miser. Hiyler learns of what Crewe has done, and accuses Madge of being unfaithful, but Crewe's statement as to the true worth of the woman brings the subject to a happy close.

Joseph Kaufman, who directed, has directed with care. There is no fault to be found with his work, either as regards settings or the timing of every scene in the picture.

A six-reel picture, however, usually calls for a bromidic criticism. Regrettably it is applicable here. Why six reels?

Despite all its good points, "Dollars and the Woman" does drag at times. With careful trimming the story would fit its footage to better advantage. And it can be done.

"MY PARTNER"

(Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels.)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW.

SOME years ago Bartley Campbell wrote a play named "The White Slave." He thereby created the phrase which since has made considerable copy for the newspapers, and introduced to the public the famous line: "Rags are royal raiment when worn for virtue's sake."

About the same time he wrote a play which he called "My

"BE MY PARD"

Partner." This play has now been screened, and is offered by the Mutual Film Corporation as a Masterpicture.

These facts of history are recalled in order that it may be understood that "My Partner" is a melodrama of the "old school."

Nevertheless, Bartley Campbell's melodramas made him a lot of money. They were popular, and for the same reason this picture should prove popular in the regions which know Bartley Campbell's work so well.

It has all the elements which made melodrama a paying proposition, and the good old lines have been retained in the shape of titles.

Burr McIntosh, in the leading part, is another attractive feature. He plays the part of the miner and favorite citizen of the town, who makes a partner of a young traveler, and then sees the young man win the heart of the girl he has long loved.

When he finds that his partner has wronged the girl, he attempts to force him to marry her, while he himself packs up and goes away.

Then a local character steps in and murders the young partner, and the miner is accused. There is a trial, in the midst of which the miner marries the girl which his partner's death has left desolate.

The miner is convicted, but is cleared afterward through a piece of circumstantial evidence furnished by a Chinese servant. The couple "live happy ever afterward."

We are not told who produced the picture. It was purchased by Mutual, and will be released on the regular program. Mary Mantell, James Ryan, Mary Edith Ellis, Curtis Cooksy, Goldwin Paton and John Leach are also in the cast.

"THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH"

(Triangle-Keystone—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

NEARLY all the time-honored methods of slapstick—kicks, falls, fights, furniture smashing, dangling from a tower in midair, and the like—have their innings in this Keystone, which, despite the fact that it offers nothing particularly novel, is funny.

Hank Mann is the announced star, but Tom Kennedy, he of the burly frame, fights his way through the picture to a position of commanding importance.

Kennedy is the village blacksmith, and he is an impressive one. In physique, he resembles a mountain. His abilities as a sparring partner for several pugilistic celebrities have been put to good use in the picture.

THE LAWYER PROPOSES

But he meets his Waterloo when his sweetheart (Polly Moran) invades a fashionable dinner party, and persuades the blacksmith, by the use of various kinds of physical violence, that he doesn't want to marry the society girl (Vivian Edwards) at all.

The dinner party is a riot. As the guest of honor, the blacksmith reveals entire ignorance of table manners. He does not hesitate to seize each article of food as it is brought on.

He slyly cuts off large slices of his father's beard, and deposits them in the soup. Then Hank Mann (in character) perfumes the air with pepper, and the blacksmith sneezes squarely into the punch bowl, with what results may better be imagined than described. Then follows a regular Keystone battle royal.

This is typical of the entire piece; it is simply unblushing slapstick throughout. As is customary in Keystones, the action is so rapid that there is not the slightest danger of anybody's dropping off to sleep.

Occasionally the plot comes to the surface. It concerns the machinations of a disreputable lawyer (Mann) who blackmails the girl's guardian (Glen Cavender) into favoring his suit.

These two conspirators imprison the girl's lover (Reece Gardner) in a secret room, after a violent fight, which at times looks a little too serious to be altogether humorous.

The girl falls in love with the blacksmith, or thinks she does until she sees him perform at table.

Nothing has been left undone to make the settings complete, and the direction by Mann is entirely adequate.

"THE CAPITAL PRIZE"

(Imp-Universal—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

EDWIN STEVENS, whose maiden efforts at picture direction are responsible for "The Capital Prize," has produced therein a two-reeler that almost attains the height of perfection.

It is evident that long years of experience on the legitimate stage, coupled with the knowledge gleaned of the picture field from the two subjects in which he has acted, have served Mr. Stevens in excellent stead. "The Capital Prize" shows it.

The story tells of an inventor of a valuable explosive who is spied upon by an agent of a foreign power masking as his friend. Then there is the daughter of the laundress who in a lottery at the country fair, draws the lucky number and wins the inventor as her beau for a week.

The suspicious actions of the spy arouse her curiosity and she finally captures him and saves the day for the inventor. Not until then does she reveal herself as a secret service agent.

The one fault with the production is this surprise at the finale. The girl is introduced as the daughter or the servant of the laundress and it is unconvincing when it is announced that she belongs to the secret service.

There are two ways out of this bit of unrealism. Either show the girl tampering with the lottery box, adjusting the cards so that she will win, or leave the secret service out of it entirely. This done, we would be willing to stake "The Capital Prize" against any two-reeler on the market.

Mr. Stevens' direction is excellent. The suspense is admirably well sustained and there are not a few novel touches that contribute to the good of the picture.

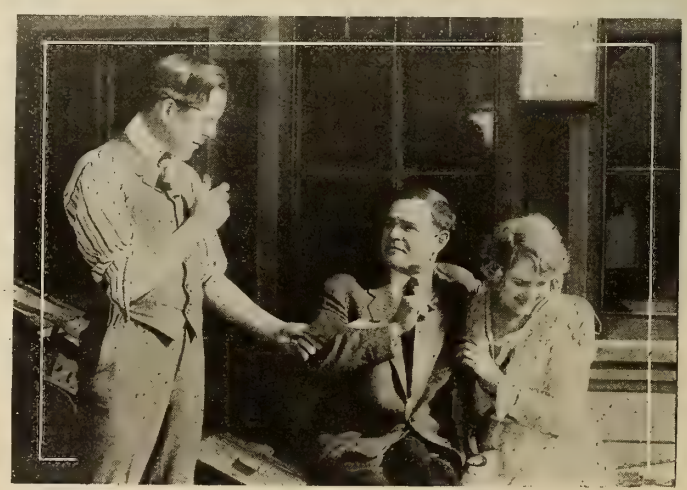
The story, though simple in theme, is of original construction and contains besides its sustaining elements just the right portion of comedy.

Harry Benham as the inventor and Joseph Granby as the spy give good performances. Tina Marshall lends a bright personality and varied capabilities to the role of the secret service girl. The photography is very good.

"NUMBER 13, WESTBOUND"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd



WHILE this release is nominally a railroad story, the actual footage of railway scenes is not very large. Kathlyn Williams might have performed more dare-devil feats.

Certainly Miss Williams is qualified, if anyone, to risk the breath-taking stunts that involve real danger. Since this is the initial try of the Selig company at railroad drama, further attempts will doubtless bring forth more hazardous feats.

Kathlyn Williams in the role of a maltreated orphan is appealing, and the work of Guy Oliver in her support is excellent. Fred Hearn and Lillian Hayward present their usual good character delineations in minor parts.

While Fred Beal, the director, can be taken to task for the recurring flaws of amplified material, his stewardship is otherwise praiseworthy. The writer understands that some of this extra footage is to be amputated before the release of the picture.

Daniel Culmer, a crusty old farmer, is very harsh with Marion, his niece. One day Orson, the telegraph operator, discovers that the block system is out of order, and that the express train will crash into a local if it is not flagged before reaching the next station.

A TELEGRAM OF CONGRATULATION

He telephones to Marion, who flags the train and then faints. She is carried to the nearest station, and the telegraph operator offers to take her home.

But Culmer, noting her absence, instructs the sheriff to arrest her. Orson is locked up in the jail, but she releases him, and they decide to go to the city to be married. Before they leave, they receive a message of congratulation from the superintendent.

"A MAN'S WORK"

(Essanay—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THERE would be nothing unusual in the plot of this release were it not developed in the "On Trial" style that is becoming so popular among the screen authors.

This device, which the Essanay company is also using in its "Mary Page" serial, consists in showing the climax first, and then working back through the events leading up to it, until the audience sees the relationship of the disconnected episodes.

This scheme has given the picture a good mystery element, well-sustained suspense, and a hard final punch. To obtain these desirable effects, probability was strained to some extent.

The players keep to the well-worn paths, and usually register in just the manner one expects. The film depends little on characters or acting for its interest, relying for the most part on the intensity of its situations.

THE ACCOMPLICE CONFESSES

Prominent in the cast are Richardson Cotton, John Junior, Elizabeth Burbridge, and Grant Foreman.

Tom Wilberton, son of the wealthy James Wilberton, becomes secretly engaged to Ellen Barth. Ellen's sister Mary comes under the influence of Pete Gillon, a released criminal. Gillon recognizes Wilberton, Sr., as being an escaped convict, and sends Mary to blackmail him.

Mary is later found dead in a hotel room, and circumstantial evidence points to Tom. But the chief of detectives does a little sleuthing, and by giving Gillon's accomplice the third degree, finds that Gillon was the slayer.

Wilberton, Sr., confesses that he escaped from prison, but is overjoyed to learn that his innocence was proven shortly after his break from the jail.

"THE SUPREME SACRIFICE"

(Premo-World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

CONVENTIONAL in theme and in practically every major situation, "The Supreme Sacrifice" will, we believe, register, because its conventionalities are popular.

We have long harped on the subject that popularity is the cause of conventionality, more directly even than the inability of some producers to obtain original material and to a certain extent our case is aptly demonstrated in this picture.

There is one thing, however, that we have too much of in "The Supreme Sacrifice" and that is a superfluity of scenes. A little judicious editing would improve the picture. For instance, there is too much of David's search for work in which he meets with the usual rebuffs and insults of the ex-convict.

We might also add that David, when delirious, goes over his years in prison, to no purpose other than to consume excessive footage.

The picture remains, as we remarked in the opening, an appealing and acceptable feature by sheer reason of its theme and situations. It is treated here in a very sentimental style and the star sentimental character is Tom, David's faithful pal.

Tom and David breaking down and weeping together, embracing and swearing eternal brotherhood will perhaps cause the easily emotional to weep themselves.

David to save the honor of his dead friend assumes the blame of an embezzlement. After four years in Sing Sing he comes out and starts a long search for work.

Finally he is rewarded, but not until he has been refused so often that he was on the verge of turning crook. Lillian Drew, the woman who was the cause of the dead friend's downfall, at last turns to David for funds, threatening to tell his secret.

An ardent feminine admirer of David overhears the news and goes to his sweetheart with the tale, thus clearing up the matter.

Robert Warwick makes an heroic figure as David and once more has journeyed to Sing Sing in the cause of realism. Dion Titherage acts well as Tom while Christine Mayo is the usual voluptuous seductress. Anna Q. Nilsson is David's fiancee and Jessie Lewis his admirer.

"CHIP'S ELOPEMENT"

(Juvenile Film Corporation—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE spirit of childhood runs rife throughout this subject. James A. Fitz-Patrick, the author and director, has used the same juvenile players as he has in his other comedies, with the same delightful result.

Chip in this case is a newsboy. He has met Little Nell, and has lingered so long with her that he is late in returning to the newsboys' home. That night he dreams of eloping with Nell.

He dreams that he is Chaplin, and arrives before her home in an automobile. While he is assisting her in her flight from the window, by means of a rope made of sheets, the villain appears and places a bomb in the engine of the auto.

THE PROPOSAL

Papa gives chase, and the villain himself hangs onto the rear of the auto. He falls off, and is picked up by policemen, who join with Papa and him in the chase.

At the church Cupid meets Nell and Chip and escort them inside. The ceremony has been performed when Papa arrives, and his anger is appeased by Cupid, who asks the "old man" to recall what he (Cupid) did for him years ago.

The bomb explodes and a shower of confetti falls around the happy pair. Then Chip awakes to find that the confetti is feathers, with which the room is filled, and that the other boys are in the throes of a pillow fight. He joins it, and is caught by the matron, who spanks him into quiet.

"A BIRD OF PREY"

(Thanhouser-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels.)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS picture is an excellent example of what can be done with striking locations, elaborate sets, brilliant photography, and a breadth of atmosphere, all of which have a great appeal.

There are plenty of dramatic situations, and the story is told in a straightforward manner, and there is nothing obscure or objectionable in the telling.

It is a story of a great wrong, and the revenge which followed the guilty man. There are many deft and dainty touches, and the great outdoors, from the snow-clad mountain tops to the summertime valleys, is brought down to the spectator.

There are a number of pretty girls, chief of which is little Madeline Fairbanks, and they are presented in a way which any audience will like.

THE THIEF ARRIVES

All these elements are of great value to the exhibitor. The producer has handled them well, and has made each point tell strongly as a part in a salable picture.

The story begins in the West. A miner and his wife are living unhappily in a small cabin. The woman longs for a better life, and her husband is devotedly working night and day to strike pay dirt and make it possible.

Then the Easterner comes. He wins the affections of the wife, and being made a partner in the prospecting with the husband, steals a rich mine as soon as it is discovered, registers it under his own name, sells it for cash and flees East with the wife.

Eight years later the miner also comes East. He gets on the trail of the thief, follows him to the Adirondacks, and there steals his little daughter, who is the light of his life.

The little girl falls victim to a fever, and the miner brings her out of it, to find that she remembers nothing of her past life. So she grows up as his daughter.

In the meantime, the Easterner is detected in robbing the depositors in his bank, and goes to the penitentiary. His wife, driven to seek work, obtains a position as housekeeper in the home of her former husband. She recognizes the girl as her lost daughter, but is forbidden to acquaint the child with the fact.

The banker escapes, and comes to her for money. The man he has wronged finds them together in his library, and is about to call the police, but is restrained by the woman's prayers.

He gives the fugitive money, and lets him out of the house, but on the lawn he is overtaken by officers, and killed.

Kathryn Adams and Robert Whittier do some fairly convincing work, and John Lehnberg as the miner is an excellent type.

"PASSERS BY"

(Equitable—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

C. HADDON CHAMBERS' play has here been converted into a picture and Stanner E. V. Taylor took charge of both the scenario work and the direction.

The picture will interest because of its novelty and because there are many scenes in which some excellent comedy is registered by the tramp, who was also the mainspring of the humorous action in the play.

To our recollection, however, Mr. Chambers' play has been tampered with in its migration to the screen. The tramp, whose mission it is to bring laughter from his audience, has been killed in the end for no obvious purpose other than to create a situation of some power that could have been evolved in a murderless manner.

The most powerful passage in the play fails, not unexpectedly, to be the most powerful in the picture. In the stage scene where Beatrice Dainton, the fiancee of Waverton, and Margaret Summers, his former love, who has borne him an unnamed child, meet and are left alone, the repartee was very intense.

On the screen the series of scenes in which the same action transpires are somewhat trite. The full meaning has not been properly brought out.

And so Mr. Taylor has substituted the killing of the poor tramp and Waverton's stirring rescue of his child. The substitution would have been good if the tramp had come out with a whole skin, but as it is it displeases.

Mr. Taylor's direction smacks strongly of the stage. His exteriors are of studio construction but their falsity will be hardly discernible because most of the action occurs in the night.

There are some few real exteriors and in these the action runs naturally but in the others there are too many obvious attempts to remain within camera range.

As for the light effects, they are very good. The fact that the action does occur chiefly in the night has furnished many a fine opportunity to procure good effects along this line and the opportunities have been utilized to good purpose.

WAVERTON RESCUES HIS SON

Charles Cherry makes a pleasing if not impressionable figure of Waverton. Mary Charleson does some strong work as Margaret Summers and Marguerite Skirvin is a good Beatrice Dainton.

Kate Sarjeanston and Master Donald Kite complete the named cast. Our stumbling block, the tramp, is not named, but the actor gives a fair characterization of this part and is assisted immensely by the business of his role.

HUMAN SIDE OF PUBLIC MEN DIRECTING DESTINIES OF EUROPE SHOWN IN HIPPODROME FILM

THE men who are responsible for the struggle in Europe are revealed in all their humanness and fallibility in the new war series "At the Front With the Allies," which the Hippodrome Film Company of New York is now releasing to the exhibitor on the states rights plan.

Among the historical scenes which Cameraman Bleecker Hall secured for this series during his recent trip to Europe, are those showing King George reviewing the English troops; the Hon. David Lloyd-George, minister of munitions in the British cabinet, looking over territorial recruits in London; General Joffre and Lord Kitchener inspecting the trenches "somewhere in France"; the Czar of Russia reviewing the Imperial army in Petrograd, and King Peter's flight.

"LITTLE MEENA'S ROMANCE"

(Triangle-Fine Arts—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS is a pretty story built around an innocent little Pennsylvania Dutch girl and a Count; that is to say, Dorothy Gish and Owen Moore, respectively.

It is entirely off the beaten path of hackneyed themes and uninspired acting, and is, in every sense, a thoroughly good, a thoroughly human picture.

Excellent effects are gained not alone through the Class A acting of Miss Gish and Moore, but also through the very human quality of the theme.

The earlier background is the rural life of the Pennsylvania Dutch. Their quaint ways—particularly their brilliant stupidity—are utilized for purposes of subtle comedy, with a vein of pathos just beneath.

LITTLE MEENA GIVES A LESSON IN HOUSEKEEPING

Here the subtitles get in their work. Many of these are phrased in such a way as to bring laughs; others to bring quiet smiles of appreciation.

When Little Meena, who is, of course, Miss Gish, goes to live with her city relatives, after the death of her father, her real romance begins.

The Count is officially scheduled to marry Meena's cousin, but Meena's arrival upsets that. Meena is unaware of the Count's identity, as the Count is of hers.

When she met him in Pennsylvania, he was selling clothes wringers.

When she meets him in the city, she thinks he has become a book agent. He thinks her the servant girl of her rich relatives. Their identities do not become known to each other until after they are married.

The element of surprise and suspense also adds to the appeal of the picture, especially near the end. The Count, in an evil mood, takes Little Meena to a road house with rather sinister purposes.

When the two are shown entering the Count's apartments a few hours later, the spectator naturally wonders what has happened in the meantime.

Not until Meena's anxious relatives arrive at the apartment, does the spectator learn that the Count, his better nature asserting itself, has taken Meena to a nearby minister's house and married her.

There are numerous touches, both of comedy and pathos, which enrich the whole, and make its appeal to any kind of audience absolutely certain.

The supporting cast is fully competent, and includes Fred J. Butler, Robert Lawler, Alberta Lee, Mazie Radford, George Pierce, Fred A. Turner, Kate Toncray, Margaret Marsh, James O'Shea, and William H. Brown.

Some fine types are introduced. Settings and photography are excellent. Director Paul Powell and Author F. M. Pierson deserve credit for their superior work.

"HER GREAT PRICE"

(Rolfe-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

A STORY with a "new twist" is offered in this picture. It is cleverly presented, and the element of surprise is strong enough to make the subject something well off the beaten track of photoplays.

If any fault is to be found in the mounting it might be the lack of exterior scenes, but the story is of such absorbing interest that the fact of its being told mostly indors will escape general attention.

Mabel Taliaferro is a dainty screen figure, such as the Metro people seem to know well how to select and present. She has a sympathetic appeal, and is an excellent type for the part in which she is cast.

This part is Agnes Lambert, a young writer, who has become discouraged and despondent through failure to place her manuscripts. Three artists and writers, "pals" of hers, try to cheer her up on New Year's eve, and tell her she must write a story with a "new twist."

In the absence of the artists, Leighton, a wealthy young friend, calls; he finds Agnes about to commit suicide, and gets her story from her.

He proposes that she defer the suicide for one year, meantime insuring her life in his favor for $50,000. He is to give her $30,000 and she will live in luxury for the year. She accepts and the bargain is closed.

Agnes has a great year of it. She falls in love with Leighton, only to find that he is engaged to another girl. She is broken hearted, until Leighton discovers he is in love with her, and breaks with his fiance.

This makes it all the harder for her to carry out her contract to commit suicide at the end of the year. She faces her duty bravely, however, and returns to the old studio to end her life by poison.

Then come the three artists and Leighton, the scene fades away, and it develops that the experiences of the last year are only the story with a "new twist" that Agnes has been writing on her typewriter while her "pals" were out celebrating the advent of the New Year.

The direction, that of Edwin Carewe, is artistic and has resulted in a clear and orderly presentation of a story which is unusually difficult to tell.

Miss Taliaferro is ably assisted by Henry Mortimer, Richard Barbee, George Fauncefort, William Cahill, Jeannette Horton and Ruth Chester.

"THE JUDGE"

(Triangle-Keystone—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THE ability of the Sennett forces to make what would otherwise be a crudely suggestive situation into a cause for fun-making is well illustrated in this subject.

The judge referred to in the title clandestinely goes to interview a pretty manicurist, and his agile movements result in a rather serious accident to his trousers.

When the manicurist's sweetheart discovers him there, sans trousers, a fight ensues, of course, and the judge, badly battered, is thrown out on the street in light attire.

After a terriffic Keystone chase, in which Charles Murray, in the person of a motorcycle policeman, overhauls the manicurist's sweetheart, the Judge is about to get his revenge in court when the manicurist enters with the trousers, which she has mended. As Mrs. Judge is there, the action that follows cannot be called altogether slow. Some of the cleverest "business" in the picture is introduced here.

All of which, as performed by Harry Booker, as the Judge; Phyllis Allen as his wife; Louise Fazenda as the manicurist, and the aforesaid Mr. Murray, is undeniably comical. The acting, as well as the situations themselves makes it so.

Comparatively few sets and locations are necessary as backgrounds for this farce, but they are entirely satisfying to the eye. The manicurist's shop, a courtroom, and a long road about make up the list.

Dick Jones directed the picture and attended to all details in a very capable manner. The photography is of the usual Keystone quality.

"THE HABIT OF HAPPINESS"

(Triangle-Fine Arts—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER.

Of the success of this picture with audiences there is no doubt whatever. It is comedy of an original sort, or perhaps we should say comedy drama.

We have seen an audience survey the picture, and we therefore feel justified in making that positive first statement with which this review begins.

The piece is manifestly a vehicle for the astonishing ability of Douglas Fairbanks. His contagious good nature is here occupied with making people laugh—people in the picture, and people in the audience.

SUNNY AS HOST TO THE BUMS

He succeeds in both instances, particularly in the latter instance, so well that he must be regarded as in a class by himself in the kind of comedy which only the Fine Arts people seem to know how to make.

One reason Fairbanks registers so effectively is that he is equally good in serious moments. And this picture has a few of those—just enough to make its comedy stand out in sharp relief.

Fairbanks as Sunny Wiggins, gets into a terrific fight with a lot of ruffians who are sent to the home of Millionaire Jonathan Pepper, and ends by being seriously wounded. Of course, he recovers, but not until Old Pepper has registered his first laugh.

Pepper's home is the House of Gloom, and Sunny Wiggins goes there to replace the gloom with laughs. He does, but he has to resort to the heroic method of starving old Pepper into an appreciation of a good meal before he succeeds. Incidentally, he wins the girl.

Sunny, previous to this, goes down into the slums and becomes laugh maker to the bums. He certainly has splendid material upon which to work, for a more convincing collection of human derelicts was never before assembled in a photoplay. They are wonderful types, and a study in themselves.

To tell you all the angles of cleverness in this picture would be impossible. There is no such thing as putting down accurately in words the fine points of such refreshing situations as these and such refreshing acting as that of Fairbanks, George Fawcett as Pepper, Macy Harlan as the villain, Dorothy West as the girl, George Bakus as Wiggins, Sr., Grace Rankin, and William Jefferson.

Snappy subtitles help the action along. The direction by Allan Dwan is excellent.

The story is improbable, considered in the cold light of reason, but nobody, except the higher critics and the confirmed grouches, will bother their heads about that.

The great mass of picturegoers will be delighted with "The Habit of Happiness."

"THE BOOB WEEKLY"

(Pathé—Seven Hundred Feet)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

READERS of the papers throughout the country, in which the eccentric cartoons of R. L. Goldberg are featured will need no introduction to "The Boob Weekly" for this enlightening newsfilm was made by the cartoonist himself.

At an advance showing given to the trade press in Pathé's projecting room, no less than five emotionless reviewers fairly split their several sides when the weird creations of Mr. Goldberg were shown. This ought to be proof enough of the sidesplitting contents of "The Boob Weekly."

The first event is garnered from Soupbone, Minnesota, and shows Olaf T. Ivory dedicating a monument to something-or-other. Mr. T. Ivory's technique in delivering his address is quite the embodiment of the majority of dedicators' actions.

Cheesecake, N. Y., next holds the center of the film and here John T. Scraphead reviews the young lads of the A. D. T. service. Exhibit C, in which the juvenile eighty-year-olders march, shows still another point where Mr. Goldberg has put his finger on the funniest thing in the A. D. T. organization and burlesqued it to a most laughable degree.

Besides we are initiated into the educational sight of the harvesting of umbrella handles, which ought to please the legion of persons who have that extraordinary craving for the nether portion of the collapsing canopies. Trapping wild collar buttons in Umslopogus (if the spelling isn't correct, look it up in the book of Noah) will undoubtedly interest its beholders and the latest fashions from Hoboken, N. J., have an appeal directed specially to the ladies.

It is quite useless to delve into the mysteries of Mr. Goldberg's art or whatever the individual wants to term it. His cartoons, however, have increased the circulation of a lot of papers all over the United States and to say the least it is natural to assume that "The Boob Weekly" and the other cartoons to follow will be in unusual demand.

The cartoons are, of course, in animation and while we have seen sketches on the screen that have run easier and with less jerk than Goldberg's, these things will be forgotten in the shouts of mirth that will greet his peculiar figures and the unimaginable antics they perform.

"The Boob Weekly" is not for release until the middle of April but by all odds watch out for it when it comes along.

ARTISTS AND AUTHORS ARE SEEN AS ACTORS IN GILBERT SILHOUETTE SHOWN AT ILLUSTRATORS' SMOKER

C. ALLAN GILBERT, the artist, at the Illustrators' Smoker, the other evening, to which there were a number of motion picture men invited, showed his latest silhouette motion picture work. The actors in the picture were Charles Dana Gibson and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. James Montgomery Flagg, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Johnson, Irvin Cobb, James Forbes, Mr. Gilbert himself, Margaret Mayo and her husband, Edgar Selwyn.

The pictures were taken at the Gilbert Bray studios the evening after the Illustrators' Ball, a month ago, and the showing was the first the members of "the lodge" had had.

Portions of the pictures shown in the "burlesque release" at the smoker are included in the release of the Paramount Pictographs, under the title "Dizzie Joe Goes to Heaven" and "Inbad the Sailor," two other Paramount pictures of the silhouette form.

"THE WAIFS"

(Triangle-Kay-Bee—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THE spectacle of a minister sinking to degradation is not a thing new to the screen. But the theme is one which naturally commands sympathy, if it is handled with intelligence by author, director and players. In this case, intelligence is at hand, and an appealing photoplay is the result.

To the accomplishment of this, Jane Grey, as Rags, a saloon piano player, contributes a large share. Her delineation of emotion is well defined, and never overdone.

In the scenes wherein she realizes the hopelessness of her love for the minister whom she has redeemed from drink and set on his feet, Miss Grey does some especially good work.

THE MINISTER PROTECTS RAGS

William Desmond, who has the role of the unfortuate young minister, also commands the full attention of the spectator, only in less degree.

The most pretentious scenes are those which take place in the saloon dance hall, and these are exceedingly effective. The types assembled for these scenes are very good.

Robert Kortman, as Bat, the bartender, who is in love with Rags, is an instance of perfect casting, so far as physique is concerned.

Others in a well-chosen cast are Carol Halloway, J. Frank Burke, Fannie Midgeley, Lewis Durham, Truly Shattuck, and Harry Keenan.

Scott Sidney, working from a script by J. G. Hawks, looked after all details carefully, and much of the effectiveness of the production is due to his work.

Although the picture has all the necessary elements to win its way into the hearts of spectators—and it does, without a doubt—we may point out that the ending, which sends Rags back to the slums after the minister has regained his place in the community chiefly through her efforts, seems somewhat unnecessary.

However, this denouement is out of the ordinary, and certainly serves to make the spectator still more deeply sympathetic toward Rags. It also enables suspense to be kept going to the end.

"A VILLAGE VAMPIRE"

(Triangle-Keystone—Two Reels)

(REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER.)

SOME day somebody will write a book explaining how Mr. Sennett's clever young men and women perform their hazardous stunts. When the book is written, it will have to devote a chapter to "A Village Vampire."

One of the things which will be explained is how an automobile, apparently loaded down with Keystone cops, is projected unscathed through a house, knocking it to flinders, while the car goes merrily on its way.

Another will set forth the technique back of another scene in this picture, wherein the pursuers drive a locomotive through a freight car, without wrecking the locomotive, but with sad results to the freight car.

Of such hair-raising tricks, is this subject made. In fact, the plot gets lost periodically in the maze of stunts. So far as it can be discerned, it deals with the machinations of a band of crooks, headed by a vampire, who invade a rural community for the purpose of laying hands on the output of the village gold mill.

Anyhow, there is opportunity for typical Keystone acting by Fred Mace, Anna Luther, Joseph Swickard, Earl Rodney, Billie Brockwell, Dale Fuller and others. Edward Frazee directed.

"A Village Vampire" is in the front rank of stunt pictures. It is filled with the absurdly comical situations for which Sennett is celebrated, and we dare anybody to find a dull moment in it.

"THE FORTUNATE YOUTH"

(Ocean Film Corporation—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE weakness in this adaptation of William J. Locke's novel appears to be the adaptation. The manufacturer does not enlighten us as to the director, and thus, in ignorance as to his identity, we are inclined to tread lightly.

He does not seem to understand the use or value of "timing scenes," and the continuity of his picture is consequently a bit "lumpy."

Men jump out of one room into another many miles away in rather breathless manner, and one is apt to lose track of just what is going on.

Nevertheless, the story is an absorbing one, and will appeal to a great class of the population. The melodramatic chord is twanged frequently enough and loud enough to compel the attention of all, and the interest holds evenly throughout.

The principal character is a youth, who, abused by his stepfather, runs away from home. His real father is in prison, and his mother, thinking him dead, has married again.

The youth reaches London, and for a time makes a living posing; then he becomes an actor, and later runs for parliament.

The principal encouragement received thus far in his life came from a Sunday-school teacher, who picked him out of the streets, a ragged urchin, and made him a member of her class.

The young man finds himself opposed for parliament by a self-made business man of rather advanced years. This man asks the younger one to withdraw from the race, and when he refuses, the older one reveals himself as the father, who had been released on parole many years before, and under another name has climbed to success and fortune.

"I AM YOUR FATHER"

Nevertheless, the young man refuses to withdraw, and is elected. On the night of election word comes that his father is dying, and he takes the cheering crowd over to his rival's house to cheer for him.

The old man hears the cheers, and the son at his bedside tells him they are for him. The father dies, believing himself elected.

Then the fortunate youth meets the Sunday-school teacher, who has been his inspiration all along, and they quickly reach an understanding.

Wilmuth Merkyl, William Cahill, John A. Smiley, G. Davison Clark, Charles Graham, Lilie Leslie, Rita Fitzgerald, Sue Balfour, Marguerite Forrest and Betty Holton compose a very acceptable cast.

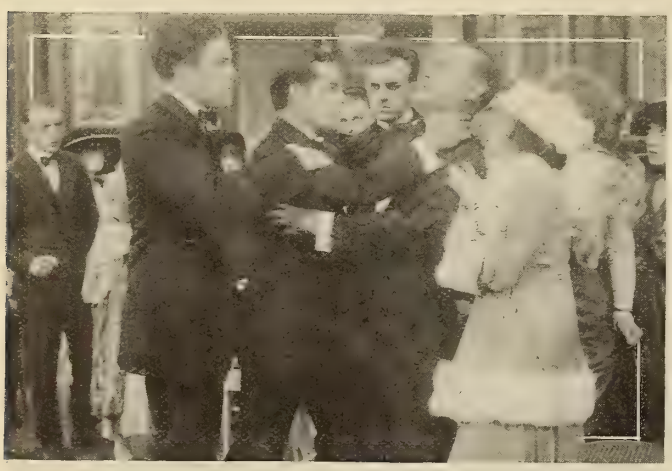
"THE SUPREME TEMPTATION"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

GOOD acting, pleasing settings, and a quantity of what is called human interest work together to make this an acceptable offering. Though the plot is mostly a variation of the eternal triangle, and is punctuated with several improbabilities, a final good effect is obtained by careful work on the part of Director Harry Davenport and the players.

Antonio Moreno makes a convincing figure of Herbert Dubois, a young physician, whose hasty marriage to Annette, a Parisian grisette, plagues him after his return to America.



He marries again, thinking Annette dead, and discovers his mistake when he is called upon to perform an autopsy.

The subject of the autopsy turns out to be Annette, who has come to America, how or why is not explained. Annette is subject to cataleptic trances, and one of these gave rise to the belief that she was dead.

Dubois is tempted to kill her, as she lies unconscious on the operating table, but his better nature finally wins, and he announces to the crowd in the hospital that she is alive.

The interest aroused by this central scene is quite marked, although the sight of a physician pausing several minutes while he registers surprise, remorse and temptation, without creating curiosity in the minds of the students gathered to witness the autopsy, seems unnatural.

However, flaws of this sort are offset by Moreno's sympathetic work, which is characteristic, too, of the entire cast. Charles Kent appears briefly, but convincingly, in the role of Dubois, Sr., who kills himself as a result of business troubles. Dorothy Kelly renders Annette in a finished manner. Evart Overton, as the physician's friend, does well. Marguerite Blake appears as the wife of young Dubois, Kate Davenport as his sister, and Mary Maurice in a typical "mother" role.

THE QUARREL

Others are Jack Brawn, Templer Saxe, Daniel Leighton, John Robertson, Yvonne Dangman, and Frank Brule.

A pleasing love story gives opportunity for comedy.

The spectator is sent away with a satisfied feeling which springs from seeing young Dubois surmount his troubles, when finally Annette's death is announced to him just as he receives the news that his wife has borne him a son.

"ACCORDING TO LAW"

(Gaumont-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels.)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS is a story along rather conventional lines, with complications introduced which justify their name, in that they make it complicated.

It is well produced, however, and as a rule well acted, and should afford a good evening's entertainment for the average audience.

Robert Bland, a business man, detests society, while Isabel, his wife, is a social butterfly. They are childless, which is a great disappointment to Robert, and they drift apart.

He takes up with another woman, and the affair ends in a divorce. Isabel retires to the Bland summer home off the coast of Florida, while Robert takes up his residence in the Everglades.

Ignorant of the divorce, Proctor, a former sweetheart of Isabel, writes that he is on the way to visit the Blands on their island home; the letter is received by Robert, whose love for Isabel returns, and he resolves to deliver the note personally.

Meantime, Proctor arrives at the island, to find Isabel alone. The servants have gone to the mainland to market, and a storm has prevented their return.

BELLA FINDS HELP

Proctor is delighted at the news of a divorce, and resumes his wooing. He is on the point of success, when a flash of lightning reveals to Isabel the face of Robert at the window.

She sends Proctor away, and although she cannot find Robert, she seeks him in the Everglades, and the two resume their former life. They have a child, but Isabel dies without seeing it.

Now we jump twenty years. Robert and his daughter Bella are still living in the Everglades. Robert is stricken with a fatal illness, and in seeking aid, Bella runs across her Ralph and Austin.

Robert dies, and Ralph's father, who has been made the girl's guardian, attempts to retain her property. Austin's father, a retired judge, who, by the way, was the same judge who sat in the Bland divorce suit, comes to the rescue, and saves the property to Bella. She and Austin are married.

Mildred Gregory does some excellent work as Isabel, and Helen Marten is pleasing as Bella. Others in the cast are Howard Ball, E. K. James, Madison Weeks, Alan Robinson, Albert Macklin, John Reinhard, Charles W. Travis, and Mathilde Baring.

"CHIP'S BACKYARD BARN-STORMERS"

(Juvenile Film Corporation—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THERE is the great touch of nature in this picture of and by children which takes us all back to the days when we played circus and theatre in the backyard and woodshed.

James A. Fitz-Patrick, the author and director, is not so much more than a child himself, but he shows a feeling for and a grasp of the ideals of childhood, which makes the picture almost a poem.

All the actors, with one exception, are children. Chip and his little friends decide to give "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in the backyard.

Chip himself does a Chaplin imitation, and as his face is not unlike that of the real Chaplin, the imitation is really the best we have seen.

Mose, who is cast for Uncle Tom, is prevented from attending, because of the necessity of turning the wringer. Mose is necessary, however, and one of the boys makes a noble sacrifice of himself: he turns the wringer while Mose goes to the show.

As a wringer-turner the youth does not give satisfaction, so he flees, pursued by Mose's mother. She reaches the temporary theatre just in time to see Mose tied to the stake.

Unfortunately, in building the stage, the structure has been nailed to a wagon in the next yard, and just as the negress arrives, the owner of the wagon drives off, taking most of the stage with him. The show ends in a riot.

"THE BONDMAN"

(William Fox—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

HALL CAINE'S novel of love, hate and sacrifice has been translated into an excellent photoplay under the direction of Edgar Lewis, with William Farnum as the star. It is probably the best screen work Farnum has ever done in his career as a portrayer of strong men shaken by elemental emotions. His rendition of two contrasting roles, Stephen Orry, the weak father, and Jason, the resolute son who devotes his strength to revenge until his better nature is awakened by his love for Greeba, is unusual, and registers with fine effect.

Screened, "The Bondman" resolves itself into a drama of the great outdoors—the wild rugged coast of Iceland, and the deserts of the Isle of Man. And it is in a picture of this sort, of course, that Farnum is absolutely at home. Opportunity is afforded him to demonstrate his physical prowess in the scenes showing the wrestling bouts at the festival of the Mount of Laws, Iceland's greatest holiday. The explosion in the sulphur mines is another high light of realism.

JASON SWEARS REVENGE

In the staging of these scenes, in the selection of locations, and in the management of the action, Director Lewis has done a splendid piece of work. The atmosphere both of Iceland and of the Isle of Man is gained successfully by making clever selection of scenery on the coast of Maine. The lighting effects and the tinting in this picture have been carefully looked after.

Because the story is vigorous, full of climaxes and of strong emotional appeal, it was eminently worth screening, and its possibilities have been brought out by a superior cast. Dorothy Bernard, as Greeba, does some telling work; Harry Spingler, as Sunlocks, realizes well that character; Doris Wooldridge has some fine moments as Rachel; Charles Graham does a fine bit of character work as the Danish Governor of Iceland; L. O. Hart, as Adam Fairbrother; Charles Brooke, as the Danish minister, and Julia Hurley, as Stephen Orry's mother, are all good.

Hall Caine's novel is a household classic, and we will not presume to tell its story in detail here. Suffice it to say that it is of absorbing interest. The story is slightly involved, but instead of creating anything more than temporary confusion in the spectator's mind, the complications tend to heighten the interest. For this gratifying fact Director Lewis is deserving of praise.

We think your patrons will like "The Bondman" very much. It works up to a fine denouement, and the interest is amply sustained throughout. It is William Farnum at his best.

"THE LOST BRIDEGROOM"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IT is somewhat of a difficult proposition to take rollicking John Barrymore seriously, yet this is the manner in which the Famous Players would have you take him in "The Lost Bridegroom."

Perhaps that statement is too broad, for there is excellent comedy in the feature, most of which lies in the first reel or so, but subsequently with only slight intermissions the story runs a serious course.

It follows, naturally, that these first phases of the picture are the best. Mr. Barrymore has very few peers at the portrayal of comic parts, and he demonstrates this when he transforms a hackneyed situation into an exceedingly funny one.

Bertie (Mr. Barrymore) is so bashful that the girl of his heart just has to force a proposal from him. Here the star demonstrates his ability, for this incident is genuinely funny.

The day of Bertie's wedding is set, and there is the usual bachelor farewell the night before. Bertie is attacked on the way home, and he suffers after a severe blow from the popular motion picture ailment, amnesia.

The rest of the picture is employed in depicting his experiences with a gang of crooks amongst whom he lands.

He manages to bring peace into a turbulent home before he goes to crack a safe which, coincidentally enough, is in the home of Bertie's fiancee.

At the sight of the girl Bertie's memory partially returns, and he turns traitor to his band and is instrumental in their capture. An operation and a reunion that again makes one laugh closes the picture.

Such is the vehicle which Willard Mack's work has furnished Mr. Barrymore. It is only in justice to the high quality of his previous comedies that we state that "The Lost Bridegroom" drops some of its interest in the serious portions of the picture.

The action there runs at the same level throughout, and although there are touches of local color here and there, that all-important element of suspense is lacking.

James Kirkwood's direction is good, considering the inadequate material he worked with in respect to the scenario.

The blame is not his for photographing scenes that are too lengthy individually, nor for Mr. Barrymore's lack of varied expression in the slow parts. The photography and settings are, as usual, a credit to Famous Players.

Katherine Harris, Ida Darling, June Dale, Edwin Sturgis and Hardy Kirklane make up an efficient supporting cast.

"FIGHTING THE ALLIES"

A SENSATION IN WASHINGTON

8 Days at Belasco Theatre—All Last Week

What the Washington Newspapers Say:

Times, March 14—"They go far beyond most of the war pictures that have been seen here in the actual battle scenes that are photographed."

Star, March 14—"Realistic charges, actual combats on land and in the air and other thrilling scenes in France. A particularly thrilling scene is given of a fight in the air between a Zeppelin and a French plane."

Post, March 14—"The pictures tell the inside story of the great war and actual battle scenes between the French light armor sky planes and those high air fortresses, the Zeppelin."

Herald, March 14—"The greatest and most daring picture ever taken by a photographer shown at Belasco Theatre."

THE BIRTH OF CHARACTER

WON THIS CRITICISM WHICH APPEARED IN THE LONDON KINEMATOGRAPH & LANTERN WEEKLY FEB. 17, 1916

" "The Birth of Character" was produced by Claridge Films, and is the second example of their work to be seen on this side of the Atlantic. We have, therefore, much pleasure in testifying to the general excellence of the photography, acting and stage management, which are quite equal to the best that comes from America. The settings include some pleasant river-side and country views, and ball room and other indoor scenes of much luxury and magnificence."

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Golden Supper." (Biograph. Mon., March 27.)—This reissue is more of a fantastic allegory than the regular story represented in such pictures.

Two princes, Lionel and Julian, love Camilla. The girl marries Lionel, but after a brief and happy honeymoon, she dies and is laid away in the vault. Lionel, inconsolable, becomes a hermit.

Julian feels that he must have one look at the face he has loved so dearly, and enters the vault. There he finds that Camilla is not really dead, but in a coma, from which she awakens in his presence.

He leads her out to the light, and for her own sake, goes in search of Lionel. He reunites the pair, then disappears. Dorothy West, Edwin August, Charles H. West and Claire McDowell are in the cast.

"Madelaine Morel." (Biograph. Three reels. Wed., March 29.)—A gripping screen story has been made of the play, which hundreds will remember as having been produced by the old Augustin Daly company.

Count Dalberg misses a bag of gold from his safe, and accuses Morel, his steward. The man is innocent, but to escape arrest, he flees with his little daughter, Madelaine.

Years later, the Count finds the gold where the children had hidden it in play. He dies of remorse, and his son Julian goes out in search of Morel. He finds Madelaine living with an actress, and brings her back to his sister, Marguerite, and then falls in love with her.

The Count Von Armin, who is to wed Julian's sister, arrives for the wedding, and recognizes in Madelaine his former mistress. Then the actress arrives and denounces Von Armin as the man who worked Madelaine's downfall. Marguerite casts him off, and takes Madelaine away, leaving Julian brokenhearted, and Von Armin to follow his own evil ways. Robert Drouet, Clairette Claire, Alan Hale, Gretchen Hartman, William Russell, Jack Drumeir, Betty Gray, A. C. Marston and Thomas Jefferson compose the cast.

"The Dixie Winner." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., March 28.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Judge Boyce, a Southern aristocrat, suffers reverses, and decides to put all his money on his thoroughbred, Satan, in the Dixie sweepstakes.

Morgan, a banker, covets the horse, and kidnaps the negro jockey in order that the horse will lose and Boyce will be ruined. But Boyce's granddaughter rushes to the paddock, rides the horse to victory, thus rehabilitating her grandsire's fortunes, and bringing about a family reconciliation.

In the cast are Joyce Fair, Marion Murray, Ernest Maupain, and Patrick Calhoun.

"Vernon Howe Bailey's Sketch Book of Paris." (Essanay. Split reel. Wed., March 29.)—Five hundred feet of sketches made of interesting places in Paris, the balance being a Western scenic.

"The Spider's Web." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., April 1.)—Not shown for review, the story follows. David Linden, after graduating from college, enters his father's steel mills. Dr. Forsyth, who had hoped to get the position of manager in the plant, sees in him a stumbling block to his ambition.

On this account he fosters the cocaine habit in him, and Linden becomes a wreck. Inspired by his sister and sweetheart, he goes to a sanitarium and cures himself of the habit.

But on his release he is attacked by some thugs hired by Forsyth, and when unconscious, he is again made a slave to the drug.

His father disowns him, and he sinks to the lowest depths, but he finally regains his grip. He becomes the head of the mills, and marries the girl he loves.

Bryant Washburn, John Junior, John Lorenz, Gertrude Glover, Elizabeth Burbridge, and Grant Foreman appear in the cast.

"Ham and the Hermit's Daughter." (Kalem. Tues., March 28.)—A good burlesque on the story of the surveyor meeting the girl who has been brought into the woods by her father, and brought up as a man.

Ham, Bud and Norma Nicholls are the leads, and the business of the former two is as funny as usual, while the prettiness of Miss Nicholls lends color to the reel.

The usual points of a serious story are accentuated to a truly laughable degree.

"The Trailing Tailor." (Kalem. Wed., March 29.)—This comedy by Howard Irving Young is quite the best of the Ethel Teare comedies, as the story is clever and the acting quite suitable.

The picture concerns the efforts of a tailor to break into society, through the medium of a creditor. Ethel Teare, Jack MacDermott and Gus Leonard are the leads.

"The Trapping of Peeler White." (Kalem. Sat., April 1.)—This presents an exciting story unusually well acted, concerning the "Hazards of Helen."

The customary thrilling stunt is partially left out for some reason but the story builds to a good climax and is interesting all the time.

Helen Gibson, True Boardman and Percy Pembroke are the leads.

"The Gulf Between." (Lubin. Three reels. Thurs., March 16.)—An old, old plot, in which the hero nearly fails to marry the heroine after her arrest as a member of a gang of counterfeiters.

The girl, of course, is not a member of the gang. Her father is the leader of it, but she doesn't know it. After she is cleared of the false charge, her father dies of a wound received in a fight with one of his confederates, whose disappointment at losing the girl's affections caused him to arrange for her arrest.

The last reel shows the girl in the lowly position of maid in a home where the hero goes to attend a dance. The ending is happy, but it hardly required eight or nine hundred feet of film to show it.

Allan Forrest, Jim Morely, Melvin Mayo, Helen Walcott, George Routh, B. W. Hopkins, Evelyn Littlepage, Adelaide Bronti, and W. J. Spencer compose the cast.

Their efforts make the piece fairly interesting, despite its ancient plot.

"Dare-Devil Bill." (Lubin. Sat., March 18.)—Billie Reeves again, and in a better-than-usual slapstick. He poses as a cowboy here, in order to impress the folks back home, but a real Westerner arrives and heavily discounts Billie's glowing narrations of his achievements in the West. Margaret Adair and Clarence Jay Elmer are also in the cast.

"The New Janitor." (Lubin. Mon., March 20.)—Davy Don performs quite amusingly in this. He is assisted by Patsy DeForest, Fred Douglas, Florence Williams, and Baby Weiser.

The janitor's career is ingloriously ended when a boiler explodes, hurling the janitor into a coal bin. This does not prevent his marrying the girl of his choice, however.

"Number 13, Westbound." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., March 20.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"A Social Deception." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., March 27.)—This is a drama of average excellence, its improbability being partly compensated by the climaxes made possible. The cast is thoroughly competent, and while the characters they are called upon to assume are somewhat unreal, the acting is interesting.

Edward J. Piel, Eugenie Besserer, Wheeler Oakman, Vivian Reed, Grace Darmond, Harry Mestayer, and James Bradbury compose the cast.

When Grace's father loses her inheritance, her fortune-hunting suiters abandon her. She meets Dodge, a millionaire, who pretends to have evidence that she is a crook, and claims to be a crook himself.

She goes to a dinner in his honor, and finds out his real identity, and is the means of reuniting him with his long-lost sister. He then asks Grace to marry him.

"Her Dream of Life." (Selig. Sat., April 1.)—A melancholy drama presenting a pessimistic kind of story. Harry Mestayer and Grace Darmond are the leads, and their work is excellent.

When the wife dies, her husband reads her diary. It tells of her happy engagement and marriage, but then as the days go by, and her husband becomes more of a drunkard, her happiness is changed to sorrow.

Her child dies, and she is finally accidentally shot. The husband, overcome by his misspent life, groans in an ecstacy of despair.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Pansy Post, Protean Player." (Falstaff, Tues., March 21.)—Unusual features are depended on to get the laughs in this comedy, and they are successful.

Pansy, an actress out of a job, is seized upon by an employment agent who is having hard work getting commissions.

He uses Pansy's gift for impersonations and quick changes, to introduce her as several different types of servant.

She holds each job a day, then the employer comes back for another servant—and gets Pansy in a different make-up.

Of course, another commission is paid for each servant, and this is divided between Pansy and the agent. Pansy ruins the whole thing, when in her own character she elopes with her employer's son.

"The Fifth Ace." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Wed., March 22.)—In this subject, a melodrama of high life, on the old lines, is presented. It is full of action, and should prove an attractive addition to the average program.

A professional card sharp decides to go after "big game" and he selects an heiress whose picture he has seen in the papers. He contrives to get introduced to her house party, and makes violent love to her.

He eliminates her rival by getting him into a poker game with several other guests, and so juggling the cards as to make it appear that the rival has inserted a fifth ace in the pack, dealing himself four of them.

The young man is ordered from the house in disgrace. At the same time, the crook finds it necessary to take a steamer for Europe, but before leaving the house he rifles the safe and steals a diamond necklace.

At the station he meets the rival, who is about to take a train, the two grapple and are fighting when the girl and her father come up.

The crook's suitcase is opened, and the necklace and a pack of marked cards reveal the real criminal. The story was written by Clinton Stagg.

"The Bruiser." (American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe. Five reels. Thurs., March 23.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Snow Stuff." (Mustang. Three reels. Fri., March 24.)—This is the final release of the "Buck Parvin" series, and is in many respects the best of them. It has much of the spirit of Van Loan's Saturday Evening Post story on which it it based.

There is more drama and less straight comedy in this one, but there are plenty of laughs. As in the other pictures of the series, fans are shown how the movies are made.

The acting, directing, locations and photography are all good. "Snow Stuff" ought to go well in any house.

Prominent in the cast are Art Acord, Dixie Stratton, George Clancy, Ashton Dearholt, Larry Peyton, and Joe Massey.

The Titan Moving Picture Company is in Truckee taking "Snow Stuff," when Gordon, Western manager of the company, arrives. He makes love to Myrtle Manners, the leading lady, and makes himself unpopular with all the players.

He insists on showing the director how a scene should be taken, and takes the opportunity to kiss Miss Manners. She knocks him into a nearby river, and insane with anger, he determines to have her dismissed.

But the camera man has taken the entire scene of Gordon's insult, so when the president of the company sees the filmed episode, he asks Gordon to resign.

"In the Shuffle." (American. Three reels. Tues., March 28.)—Much of the footage of this picture is occupied by bar-room and gambling scenes which might offend a super-sensitive audience.

But the majority of houses will find this release a suitable one, for it tells a good story in a logical way, and has an unusually good cast.

The players are Winnifred Greenwood, Edward Coxen, George Field, and William Marshall.

Bill Ensor is a gambler, but he reforms when he falls in love with Sharlee Evans. Sharlee's brother is a habitue of a gambling place run by the man who ruined his father.

When he learns that the owner was the cause of his father's downfall, he goes to interview him, and is later accused of the man's murder. But a waiter in the den is proved to be the guilty one, so Sharlee, her brother, and Bill go West to start life anew.

"A Trunk an' Trouble." (Beauty. Wed., March 29.)—Not shown for review.

"The Lion-Hearted Chef." (Vogue. Thurs., March 30.)—Not shown for review.

"Revelation." (American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe. Five reels. Thurs., March 30.)—Will be reviewed in next week's issue.

"The Ranger of Lonesome Gulch." (Mustang. Three reels. Fri., March 31.)—Reviewed in last week's issue.

"The Improbable Yarn of McQuirk." (Beauty Sun., April 2.)—Not shown for review.

"A Still Hunt." (Vogue. Sun., April 2.)—Not shown for review.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"In Soft in a Studio." (Starlight.)—Heine and Louie do a lot of stunts in this reel and Heine gets a job as a sculptress' model.

This gives the producers a chance to introduce that which is slightly suggestive, but on the whole the reel is full of fun, typical of the Starlight product.

"Luke Pipes the Pickings." (Phunphilms.)—Harold Lloyd, alias Lonesome Luke, here sets up as an entire vaudeville agency and his day's work is portrayed.

This consists of giving a varied collection of four-a-day artists try-outs and the entire thing ends in an uproar.

Lloyd gets in some uproarious business while the entire company works together in most humorous style.

"Double Dubs." (Starlight.)—Heine and Louis extract much amusement from a stuffed porcupine in this reel. It makes an excellent humorous weapon.

Afterwards they steal the sweethearts of two young men and that night the fellows get even by playing ghosts and riotously disturbing the peace and quiet of their dreams. This is an excellent comedy.

"The Red Circle." (Thirteenth Episode. Two reels.)—In "Branded as a Thief," the police, her lover and mother discover that June is none other than the Red Circle girl, and subsequently her mother turns her away from home.

This instalment is exceedingly well built and relies on its story to take effect. The leads keep up the intelligent work which marked their earlier performances.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Graft." (Universal Special Feature. Sixteenth episode. Two reels. Week of March 27.)—In "Pirates of Finance" Harding is elected mayor of the city, defeating the candidate backed by the Graft and Money trusts.

Several attempts are made on his life but he manages to withstand them all. Stone, after the election defeat, is ousted from the trust and his plan to kidnap Dorothy goes astray.

The election campaign introduces many good light effects and its exciting incidents keep up the strong pace of the serial.

"Autumn." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., March 27.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of March 18.

"The Janitor's Busy Day." (Nestor. Mon., March 27.)—This comedy by Al Christie has three distinct themes which hardly converge in the proper style, thus giving the effect that the entire reel is rather purposeless.

Lee Moran as the janitor does not effect as much funny business in this part as is his usual wont. Others are Neal Burns, Billie Rhodes, Betty Compson, Ethel Lynn and Ray Gallagher.

"Lady Raffles Return." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., March 28.)—Francis Ford and Grace Cunard have here compiled a detective story somewhat after the fashion of a Sherlock Holmes piece.

Its improbabilities are quite prominent, however, and as the action is laid in Newport, the co-directors have seen occasion to clothe all their characters, even the chief of police, in dress suits and cutaways, according to the time of day.

The picture belongs to the "Lady Raffles" series, intermittently contributed to by Ford and Miss Cunard for some time. Jack Conely also appears.

"There's No Place Like Home." (Rex. Tues., March 28.)—A young boy, longing for freedom runs away from home to find his desire not at all what it's cracked up to be and he returns much the better for the experience.

Lois Weber wrote the scenario and directed Antrim Short in this most satisfactory picture. It is extremely well constructed and is altogether human.

"The Gasoline Habit." (Imp. Tues., March 28.)—Roy Clements has again poked a lot of fun at an innocent Ford car and incidentally the fun is truly laughable, strange as it may seem.

The lines seen in the subtitles help the action immensely. Victor Potel and Eileen Sedgwick are the leads.

"A Model Husband." (Victor. Two reels. Wed., March 29.)—A comedy by Samuel Greiner featuring Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby.

The husband poses before the world as a "model," but through a chain of circumstances it is discovered that he is about as bad as they come.

Harry Myers is about the funniest thing in this subject and the laughs that he causes are not overly frequent. Greiner's idea of subtlety and humor which he attempts to bring out in subtitles is inferior.

His lines are vulgar and common and fail to create response because of their flatness and staleness. Perhaps they will be eliminated.

"The Blackmailer." (Laemmle. Wed., March 29.)—A Rupert Julian release that runs an extremely novel course. It shows the manner in which a woman checks the attempts of a blackmailer by merely scaring him into flight.

The subject is a little too full of subtitles and the closeup is over-used, but on the whole, it is away above the standard one reeler. Julian and Elsie Jane Wilson are the leads.

"A Fool's Gold." (Laemmle. Three reels. Thurs., March 30.)—That riches without love are worthless is what this melodrama proves in a sensational style. It is a story of Wall Street, of speculation, intrigue, success and failure and it is done in a highly vivid way, working all the time to a very strong climax.

L. V. Jefferson wrote the story and included in the cast under Richard Stanton's direction are Myrtle Gonzalez, L. M. Wells, Gretchen Lederer, Hayward Mack and Stanton himself.

"Between Midnight." (Powers. Thurs., March 30.)—A broad burlesque on a bank robbery and the apprehension of the gang, written and produced by Carter DeHaven.

The stuff is done along old lines, but it is a very good comedy and if 1911 comedy goes over in this year we ought to see more of it.

The subtitles help the laughs along while there is a good lot of business that is original, for which we should thank De Haven.

"Scorched Wings." (Imp. Three reels. Fri., March 31.)—Showing the trouble wrought by a young lady who thinks it clever to flirt.

Betty Gray, featured in this subject, pouts entirely too much, evidently attempting to register winsomeness. She is a very pretty little lead, but it is obvious that she needs careful direction.

Harry Spingler, Curtis Benton, Paul Panzer and the late Ned Reardon make up the supporting cast.

"He Almost Eloped." (Nestor. Fri., March 31.)—A boarding school comedy in which Ray, being flirtatious, hovers between two belles and as a consequence loses both of them.

This is not up to Al Christie's standard but it has no mean portion of humor in it at that.

Ray Gallagher, Betty Compson, Billie Rhodes, Stella Adams and Harry Rattenberry are the principals.

"The Night Riders." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., April 1.)—The half breed spurned by the white men of the town proves himself a hero by puting to route a group of bandits, all for the sake of the sheriff's sister.

Harry Carey and Olive Fuller Golden are featured in this exciting western, the former giving one of his magnetic performances in the role of the half-breed.

The scenes and photography are both appropriate and good and the fights and riding are as usual thrilling. Jacques Jaccard directed from a scenario of his own.

"A Serpent in the House." (Powers. Sat., April 1.)—A comedy staged at the seashore centering for most of its humor on mistaken identity.

It is more or less funny throughout although there is nothing greatly original about it. Bob Daly directed Fritzi Brunette and others.

"The Tale of a Telegram." (Joker. Sat., April 1.)—One of Allen Curtis' comedies with his usual cast consisting of William Franey, Gale Henry, Milburn Moranti, Lillian Peacock and Charles Conklin.

For much of its humor the picture relies on its plot, which is cleverer than the usual Joker release. The character work of the players is for a time disregarded.

"Caught on a Skyscraper." (L-Ko. Two reels. Sun., April 2.)—A sleep walking wife furnishes the risque element of this film, but the scenes are handled in a clever and humorous manner, hardly liable to give any but the severely straight laced offense.

The final scenes show the sleep walker parading about on the edge of a high roof. These scenes are the sort that make the spectator either marvel or shut his eyes in terror.

Gertrude Selby, Reggie Morris, Harry Gribbon and May Emory are the leads.

"Her Sister's Sin." (Victor. Sun., April 2.)—Francis Ford and Grace Cunard here appear in dual roles. Several times each appear on the screen twice and the effect is most novel.

But "Her Sister's Sin" is otherwise negligible, for the reel is cluttered with closeups, which mean nothing and the story is so incoherent that it leaves no impression at all.

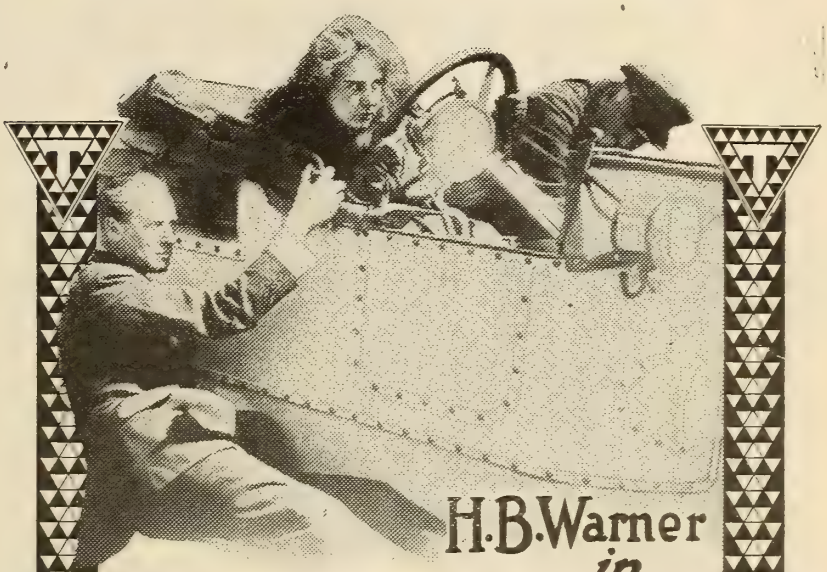
Triangle Releases For

Motion pictures that appeal to the public and that the public will pay real money to see are the kind of pictures that you want to be running in your theatre. The two advertisements above which were prepared as a part of a regular service for TRIANGLE exhibitors show just why the TRIANGLE PLAYS released this week will appeal to your patrons—just why it will be of financial advantage for you to run them. These advertisements are merely illustrations of one of the basic ideas back of the TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION—that each picture must contain some vital point that will strike the heart of the public and make people feel that they simply cannot afford to miss the next TRIANGLE PLAY.

TRIANGLE FILM

Week of March 26th



H.B.Warner in The Raiders

In this, his first appearance in motion pictures, H. B. Warner, the popular Broadway star, more than lives up to the reputation he gained in "Alias Jimmy Valentine" and many other successes.

If you really want to see a motion picture of the "best yet" variety, a picture that has all the necessary qualities of thrills, adventure and romance, you will be delighted with this latest TRIANGLE PLAY.

See it at this theatre.

H.B.Warner in The Raiders

Many are the thrilling and exciting scenes in this latest TRIANGLE PLAY, in which H. B. Warner as the young clerk defeats the plans of the clever crooks to cheat his employer. The fascinating stock-room scene at the time of the terrible run, the narrow escape from the forest camp, and many other quick-moving moments keep you on the jump all the time. You'll not be sorry if you make it a point to see this picture.

And in addition there will be shown a TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE COMEDY—one of the kind that keeps you doubled up with laughter.

Never for a moment does the TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION forget that its success is dependent on the success of TRIANGLE exhibitors.

And in addition to supplying photo-plays that are the best that can be produced every effort is made to be of the greatest possible assistance to exhibitors in solving their advertising and publicity problems. In addition to all of the usual advertising helps that are ordinarily sent out TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION prepares special newspaper advertisements as illustrated above on every drama release. Further, the services of the Department of Publicity are at your disposal at all times for individual attention, and if for any reason your theatre is not paying as it should especial attention will be given your problem. A TRIANGLE Weekly devoted to news and points of interest to TRIANGLE Exhibitors is issued every week. If you are an exhibitor and are interested in TRIANGLE PLAYS why not use the coupon.

During the week of March 26 two new David Horsley productions of uncommon merit are available to exhibitors.

On March 27 will be released as a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, a five part feature entitled "The Love Liar." It is a pretentious and skillfully made production of an absorbing dramatic play of the finer type, beautifully photographed, and convincingly enacted by a popular cast of players headed by Crane Wilbur.

On March 31 will be released a one reel Cub Comedy, "Jerry and the Smugglers," a rollicking farce of good, clean fun presented by George Ovey and an all-comedy cast.

Productions such as these will please in any theatre and reflect their value in the box office. Ask your nearest of the Mutual exchanges in the United States and Canada for bookings.

NESTOR COMEDIES

Popular With Millions of People

NESTOR COMEDIES are the CLASS of the Comedy World. They are the most refined comedies made. Every NESTOR comedy is based upon a genuinely funny plot; that is why they never fail to please. And because they are so consistently excellent and so distinct from any other comedies, no programme is complete without a NESTOR. You can book them blindfold on the name alone, but if you want to please your patrons, don't neglect to—Have a NESTOR Comedy in your Programme . . . . . ALWAYS."

With such brilliant stars as Billie Rhodes, Lee Moran, Eddie Lyons and a dozen more, under the direction of that Master of Comedy, Al. Christie.

NESTOR COMEDIES simply can't help being the best class comedies in the comedy world. Moran, Rhodes, Lyons, Christie and all the others that work in NESTOR COMEDY pictures are the type of Actors who work always with real snap, real enthusiasm. They love "the game," as Lee Moran says. Their hearts are in their work. That's what makes NESTOR COMEDIES the cream of their field.

NESTOR COMEDIES have been making millions laugh and will continue to make millions laugh as long as motion pictures endure. It takes talent—real talent—to keep on producing comedies, with different situations, different plots, different laugh-getting qualities year in and year out, and NESTORS DO IT. Such productions as:

"The Deacon's Waterloo," March 13
"Across the Hall," March 17
"Love and Vaccination," March 20 and other coming releases, including
"Lem's College Career," two reels
"The Janitor's Busy Day," and "A Leap Year Tangle," show Nestor Comedies at their best. Book them all and have a Nestor Comedy in your program ALWAYS.

JUVENILE FILM CORPORATION

Announces

That under the direction of Mr. James A. Fitz Patrick they have completed the following pictures:—

Joseph Monahan, "Chip"

"A Chip Off the Old Block" - (1 Reel)
"Chip's Elopement" - - - (1 Reel)
"Chip's Backyard Barnstormers" (2 Reels)
"Chip's Rivals" - - - - - (1 Reel) and
"The World War in Kidland" - (1 Reel)

These pictures are based upon scenarios specially written by Mr. Fitz Patrick who has successfully carried out our idea of restricting his productions entirely to Juvenile Performers—the ages of his cast varying from 3 to 10 years. In placing these pleasing little comedies before the public we are satisfying a long-felt want —in fact AN INSISTENT DEMAND.

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

By J. H. Hallberg

73—Describe the construction of a magnetizing coil or solenoid or a choke coil.

Ans.—The magnetizing coil or solenoid, as it is called, required for the excitation of the iron core in a reactive or choke coil must be carefully designed and constructed.

It is usually composed of a double cotton covered magnet wire made of copper although in some instances it is possible to use a copper wire insulated with a baked enamel.

For very large choke coils, copper strips or bars of either rectangular or square cross section are used without insulation because they are wound so that the turns are separated from each other by air space.

For our purpose a regular solenoid made of cotton covered copper wire answers the purpose the best.

When winding a solenoid for use with A. C. the greatest care must be exercised to make sure that the cotton insulation is not injured and will not be cracked or injured, when bending the wire around the square corners, for instance.

It is generally necessary to use a wooden block and a hammer in forming the coil if it is composed of a fairly large size wire, as required with currents ranging between 25 and 80 amperes.

The better manufacturers do not depend upon the cotton insulation in separating the different layers of the coil from each other but separate each layer from the other by inserting a thin sheet of mica or fibre between the different layers.

This makes a complete new surface for each layer and in this manner avoids the possibility of break-down in the insulation which would cause a short circuit between two or more turns.

A short circuit between even two turns in a choke-coil or transformer will cause a tremendous current flow in the two turns which are short circuited, and as a result the cotton insulation will begin to burn and before long the entire transformer is either burned out or the fuses will blow, putting the coil out of business.

In view of the fact that the core has to be made up from laminated iron sheets, it is evident that the rectangular or square core construction, that is a core having a square or rectangular leg, is the easiest and more practical to construct.

Therefore, the coil must necessarily be wound in rectangular or square form, so that it is really necessary to insulate each layer from the other, at least on the corners where the full strain is between the different layers of wire.

74—What size wire should be used for choke-coils, that is, what should be the cross section of the wire relative to the ampere capacity?

Ans.—For ordinary interior wiring, we know from the underwriters' table that in order to avoid excessive heating, to carry a current of 50 amperes we must use not smaller than No. 6 wire, which is equal to 26,250 circular mills.

In a solenoid, however, where the wires are laid very close to each other and where there are several layers one on top of the other, it is not so easy to radiate the heat generated by the drop in the wire.

Therefore, a much larger cross section must be used in order to prevent heating to such an extent that the insulation would be destroyed. For an ordinary arc lamp choke-coil, I would recommend a wire at least three times the number circular mills used for ordinary interior wiring.

Under this condition a 50 ampere choke-coil would require a wire which would have a capacity of anywheres from 65,000 to 80,000 circular mills, and this would call for a wire of approximately No. 1 or No. 2 B. & S. gauge.

From past experience in coil construction I have found that it is not safe under any condition to allow less than 1,000 circular mills for each ampere to be carried.

A 50 ampere choke-coil should under no circumstances be made up of a wire smaller than 50,000 circular mills.

The foregoing sizes recommended are based upon ordinary coil construction where one layer is wound upon the other in the regular form. However, where air ducts are provided between the different layers and where the coil is cooled by artificial means, such as a ventilating blower or by immersing it in a bath of oil, which will more readily transmit the heat, under which condition the windings can naturally be kept much cooler, a somewhat smaller size wire may be used without danger of over-heating.

75—After the coil has been wound in the required form, what do you have to do to it?

Ans.—In order to avoid disintegration of the cotton insulation, due to the heat and vibration of the coil when it is subjected to the influence of an Alternating Current becomes necessary to paint each layer and turn of wire as it is being wound with an insulating compound, which after the coil has been completed is thoroughly baked in an oven at considerable heat, so as to form a solid body of the different wire turns and layers.

In the more modern manufacturing establishments, where transformers are made on a large scale, there is generally provided what is called a "Vacuum Impregnating Tank," in which the insulating compound or liquid is kept under heat and in which the coils are immersed.

After the tank has been fully loaded with coils the man-hole lid is put on and tightened to make the tank air-tight. Then the air is exhausted and during this process the insulating compound is forced into every crevice of the coil, which then becomes practically a solid mass.

After it has been baked it is as hard as rock and then there is not much danger of the coil becoming injured, even though it should be subjected to rough usage and considerable overheating, and that is the form of construction which should always be insisted upon in selecting choke-coils or transformers.

Generator Obviates All Loss of Current

Efficiency in Machine for Transforming Alternating into Direct Current, No Longer a Luxury but Now Considered an Absolute Necessity, Is Obtained by Construction Enabling the Maintenance of an Arc Without a Rheostat in Series

THE transformation of alternating into direct current for motion picture projection is no longer a luxury. It is an absolute necessity for the modern exhibitor.

The Hallberg 20th Century Motor Generator is a most efficient apparatus for changing A. C. to D. C. or for transforming a higher voltage D. C. into a lower voltage D. C. to dispense with the rheostats for the control or projector arc lamps.

In order to obviate all current losses, J. H. Hallberg some years ago produced a line of generators directly connected to electric motors which were so designed and constructed that an arc could be maintained without a rheostat in series therewith.

Motor generator ready for installation

This was accomplished by special windings which would counteract the shunt windings of the generator in such a way that the closer the carbons were put together, the greater would be the counteracting effect, actually reducing the voltage produced by the generator.

As a matter of fact, if the carbons were put together and a short circuit established, the generator would stop generating voltage and current, simply running idle.

Shaft Exceptionally Large in Diameter

The shaft upon which is mounted the D. C. armature (Fig. 2) with its commutator and the rotor for the A. C. motor, is exceptionally large in diameter, and it is very short, thus producing an apparatus which will allow for a very small air gap between the pole pieces and the armature, which, we all know, means increased efficiency, power factor and regulation.

The shaft with the armature and the rotor is supported by two ball bearings, one in each end casting. The ball bearings are lubricated by a special grease, which is forced into the ball bearings when the machine is made and lasts about one year in regular service without renewal or attention.

When it becomes necessary to change the grease, there is a brass crew on the bottom of each bearing and one in top—upon removal of these a grease gun is simply inserted in the top opening, forcing the old grease out through the bottom and replenishing in that manner the lubrication.

After this operation the plugs are put back and the machine is ready for another year's operation.

Fig. 3 shows the interior of the D. C. end of the machine, and illustrates the eight pole pieces, which are built-up laminated electrical steel, fastened inside of a comparatively light steel casting, insuring the very best magnetic qualities conducive of high efficiency and perfect regulation.

Four of the pole pieces carry shunt field windings and special compound winding. The other four, or smaller pole pieces, carry only a series winding. These windings are insulated to withstand as much as 20 times the voltage which will ever be applied to them under normal conditions.

Fig. 4 illustrates the shaft, commutator and the armature with one brush and brush holder complete. The entire interior of the commutator and the armature, as well as of the rotor for the A. C. motor, is hollow, and upon the same shaft there is mounted a specially constructed small fitting, shaped like the blades of a fan, the purpose of which is to induce air circulation through the interior as well as around the exterior of the rotor, the armature and the commutator, insuring cool and perfect operation.

Fig. 4 shows the brush holder for the brush to be of most simple and strong construction. There is a finger, adjustable by a spring in notches, by means of which the carbon brush is forced against the commutator under light but still firm tension.

The brush is provided with a copper pig-tail for conveying the current collected by the brush to the brush holder studs and terminals.

The capacity of the carbon brushes is so liberal that the machine will generate its rated output even though two of the four brushes employed are removed entirely from the machine.

In other words, the factor of safety in the brush gear is 100 per cent., insuring sparkless and cool commutation with minimum friction and wear.

Judging from past performances during tests extending for a period of one year, the brushes will last between six months and one year without attention or renewal, depending upon the length of time the generator is in service each day.

Directory of New Theatres

This department is designed to be a weekly guide to all sales, leases, construction and remodeling of photoplay theatres. If you are building, selling, leasing or renovating, kindly communicate it at once for publication.

ARIZONA

THE Columbia theatre, the most modern and up-to-date play house in Arizona, has been leased for a term of years by Messrs. George Mauk and Joseph E. Rickards, who control the Phoenix Amusement Company's string of eight houses in the state, and it will be run as a picture theatre.

It opened on March 5. Mauk and Rickards own and operate houses at Ray, Hayden, Sonoro, Florence as well as two houses, the Amuzu and the Columbia, in Phoenix. They book and supply the Coliseum at Mesa and the Goodwin Theatre at Tempe as well as the Pastime at Superior and the Rainbow at Glendale.

ARKANSAS

Kirk Perry, manager of the Majestic in Clarendon, whose house was severly damaged by the floods last February, recently reopened it after making extensive repairs.

CALIFORNIA

The old Golden Gate Family theatre on San Pablo avenue, Oakland, is to be opened at an early date. The house has been dark for several months.

The Bell theatre in the Mission section, San Francisco, has been closed.

The Strand theatre at Sacramento is now being conducted by M. Dieppenbrock, owner of the property.

P. Bladt has refitted the moving picture house at Gustine, and will operate it as a first class moving picture theatre.

The Progress theatre on Fillmore street, San Francisco, is now changing its program four times a week, instead of two.

Moving picture equipment is to be installed in the high school at Auburn.

Contracts have been awarded by the William E. Miller Estate Company for the construction of a theatre building on Franklin street, near Fourteenth, Oakland. The structure will be of brick and concrete construction and will be furnished in a handsome manner.

CANADA

Mr. Picore, manager of the King George theatre, Montreal, has quite a record behind him. Seven years' successful experience in things theatrical, includes the building of his present house, which he afterwards sold to take over the management of the Plaza and the Bellevue.

These two houses owe their fresh start to him and he then bought back his former theatre, the King George, which he now runs. He has raised the admission to ten cents straight, although the house capacity is only 388.

Mr. Herow, former manager of the Quimetoscope, has been transferred to the Crystal Palace theatre, Montreal, where he is using Universal Service, supplemented by Metro and Paramount features. His management has been productive of fine results already.

Mr. Godel, late of the Arcade theatre and the London, of Montreal, has accepted the management of the big New St. Denis theatre, which has just been opened in that city.

A further improvement in the Variety theatre in Victoria, B. C., during the time it was recently closed for alterations, was a $10,000 organ manufactured by the Karn Morris Piano and Organ Company, of Woodstock, Ontario. The house has just reopened, and reveals a great transformation.

W. A. Wilkinson, who has been conducting the Opera House in Kamloops, B. C., using moving pictures, has now secured the Empress theatre, the other principal house of the city, and will hereafter conduct both houses, using the Opera House for pictures at five and ten cents, and placing road shows in it when any are available. The Empress will be the main picture house, showing V-L-S-E and other feature productions at ten and fifteen cents.

CONNECTICUT

Chase Park House, Waterburg, has added another attraction to its already long list of recreation features for the people of its neighborhood, in the form of moving pictures.

DELAWARE

The National theatre built by the National Amusement Company on French street, just above Eighth, Wilmington, opened recently and has proven to be a very beautiful house. Dr. Samuel Elbert is the head of the company while J. Victor Dorrell is in active charge of the theatre.

GEORGIA

W. T. Murray, George Pheles and Sig Samuels have leased the Wiseberg building, 41-43 Peachtree street, Atlanta, for ten years at $18,000 a year. They have already started the work of converting this building into one of the largest motion picture theatres in the south. The transaction involves $230,000. The ten-year lease calls for $180,000. The theatre will cost $50,000, and will seat 1,000 people.

Columbus is to have a new $40,000 picture palace. Work will be begun in the next sixty days. The building is to be constructed on the west side of Broad street by Sol. Loeb, and is to be occupied by James Johnson, the owner of the American theatre of that city.

ILLINOIS

A syndicate composed of John Voumvakis, B. Charurkas, John Costen, and Gus Statis have leased the Vernon theatre, Sixty-first street and Vernon avenue, Chicago, and will open this eight hundred-seat house on May 15. A $10,000 Bartola instrument with Echo attachment is being installed.

INDIANA

Frank Watson, of Lewisville, has bought a 1916 Motiograph machine and a Minusa screen from the Motion Picture Products Company for the opera house at Lewisville which he has leased and is equipping for motion pictures. The theatre will be open three nights each week.

The Read theatre, of Morristown, was destroyed recently by a fire. The loss was estimated at $15,000. Mrs. J. S. Read, owner of the theatre, says the large loss was due to the lack of sufficient fire protection. H. C. Jackson was the manager. The cause of the fire is unknown. There was no one in the theatre when the fire started, as it happened early in the morning. Included in the loss was a $6,000 organ.

The Showers Brothers Company, of Bloomington, furniture manufacturers, will construct a theatre to show motion pictures in a new $25,000 administration building, the construction of which has been started.

The Cort theatre, Kokomo, has been remodeled and reopened with a new stage setting, screen and decorations.

The Majestic theatre at Gary has closed.

The Princess theatre at Evansville has been bought by a company headed by A. J. Merrill. Mr. Merrill formerly owned three theatres in Montana, but recently has been special representative of the Universal company in several western states. The Princess is one of the most popular picture theatres in Evansville.

The Dreamland theatre, of Michigan City, has undergone interior redecorations.

The K. G. theatre of Rochester has been closed pending repairs ordered by the state fire marshal. The exits are to be enlarged and put on a level with the auditorium floor, which made necessary extensive repairs in the theatre.

The Dickey Amusement Company, of Jackson, Mich., which has a string of motion picture theatres in Michigan, has bought the Lincoln theatre, opposite the St. Joseph Valey bank, in Elkhart, and has reopened it.

Charles Brick, formerly of Elkhart, but late manager of a theatre at Aurora, Ill., is the new manager. The theatre will show feature pictures always at five cents admission. Harry MeGee will be pianist. The Dickey company is owned by F. W. Dickey, of Jackson and Robert Denoyelles. The interior and exterior of the house was remodeled and renovated.

Rapid progress is being made in the construction work of the Circle theatre, in Monument Place, Indianapolis, although it will be some months before the theatre is completed and ready for dedication. Only extreme cold weather is delaying the workmen.

The first of the brick walls to go up is on the Sciota street side, where the bricklayers have reached the top of the window frames of the second story. The north wall is about the same height.

The cement foundation is in for the other two walls and the builders expect that before long the frame steel work will begin taking form. The building committee, made up of officers of the Monument Realty Company, is holding several sessions each week. Contracts for furnishings are being awarded Indianapolis companies, an order for 2,400 yards of carpet going to the Pettis Dry Goods Company and the furniture contract went to Sander & Recker.

IOWA

Dave Beatty has taken over the Fairfield theatre at Fairfield, and has enlarged and improved the house.

B. A. Jean is the new manager of the Pastime theatre at Mount Pleasant.

Rath and Ramsey have sold the Star, Washington, to R. J. Viehl.

E. E. Orris has opened a new theatre at Corydon. It is a pretty little house, seating four hundred people.

Norman Samish has just spent $20,000 improving the Temple Grand theatre at Creston. New seats were put in, the house repapered, the lobby built over, new screen and new machines installed, together with a large organ.

The theatres at Glenwood and Malvern were closed recently by the health authorities during a scarlet fever epidemic.

Frank Bently has opened a house at Corning, and is showing features.

Sullivan, Thomas and Coen recently bought the Idle Hour theatre at Afton, thereby gaining control of the local theatre trade. They then closed the Idle Hour, adding its patrons to those at their other two houses.

KENTUCKY

Stanley Spoehr, of Henderson, has succeeded Louis Zahler as manager of the Strand theatre, Lexington. Mr. Zahler has severed his connection with the Switow Amusement Company, which operates the Strand, to accept a position in Chicago. Mr. Spoehr formery managed the Nickelodeon and Princess theatres at Henderson.

An adjustment of the fire loss of the Ben Ali theatre, Lexington, which was burned last January has been fixed at $68,500. The insurance was carried by a number of companies. The Ben Ali which is being repaired, will reopen in a few weeks with motion pictures.

During the coming summer, motion pictures will be shown at the Casino theatre at Wallace Park, Paducah, on Sunday nights, according to an announcement made by the Paducah Traction Company which controls the park.

The Gem theatre, Frankfort, which has been closed for some time, reopened March 11, under the management of James Taylor. The house has been renovated. A daily program of four reels will be run and on Friday of each week a special feature will be shown.

Music is furnished by a four-piece orchestra. Admission is five cents.

Application for a permit to erect a motion picture theatre at Eleventh and Walnut streets, Louisville, has been made by the Citizens Amusement Company. The plans call for a brick building 38 x 152 feet with a seating capacity of 800.

The estimated cost is $12,000. The theatre will be for negroes exclusively.

LOUISIANA

S. Bridgewater has opened a four hundred seat picture house at De Ridder.

J. M. Key has opened a new picture theatre at Natalbany.

MASSACHUSETTS

Pittsfield is to have another film theatre. Architect George E. Haynes has been consulted by several local men, among them former Mayor Kelton B. Miller, and the proposition calls for erection of a theatre on the vacant lot in the rear of the Miller building.

This block occupies the site of the old Academy of Music, which was destroyed by fire several years ago. Preliminary plans provide for an entrance to the theatre through one of the North street stores in the Miller building.

Robert Costello, a man of considerable theatrical experience, has leased from B. M. Taylor, the Taylor theatre in Adams.

Louie H. Tolman and Lester T. Winn have purchased the Gem theatre in Athol.

Libby and Clark have taken over the Dean theatre on Essex street, Cliftondale.

MICHIGAN

Grand Haven will have one of the finest photoplay theatres in the district when N. Robbins and Son open their new 500-seat Robinhood house about May 1. Mr. Robbins, who has been an agent for the Goodrich Steamship Lines for thirty years, believes in giving the public only the best.

MISSISSIPPI

F. M. Hutchison has sold the picture show Crystal Springs to Messrs. Ford and Allen, of Utica.

MISSOURI

D. T. Graham, a well-known manufacturer of St. Louis, who, with his four sons, recently built the Webster theatre at Twelfth and Clinton streets, had no idea a year ago of going into the picture exhibiting business, but with idle capital on hand, the Grahams, in looking for investment, decided on a motion picture theatre.

The Webster is just opposite the Webster School, with 1,200 pupils attending, and although Mr. Graham says he was warned against building a theatre so near a school, he has found that it is one of the very best means of advertising there is, to have little children walk past the theatre every day and making notes of the pictures that are coming to the house. The Webster runs a five-cent program on five days a week, using short stuff, and ten cents on Saturday and Sunday, when features are shown.

An airdome is being planned for the lot adjoining the theatre, which will be a new departure in summer theatres in St. Louis. The front wall is to be of ornamental brick, with windows of plate glass, in which to frame the posters.

There will be four of these display windows, and there will be a tier of seats in the back of the airdome that will slope from eight feet in height in the rear, to the street level in front of the screen. The theatre and airdome together will represent an outlay of about $30,000.

NEW JERSEY

Further indications of the improvement of Bergenline avenue, Union Hill, as a shopping and business thoroughfare was had when plans and specifications were filed with Town Clerk Bautz for a new motion picture theatre, office building and stores to be erected at 9-11 Bergenline avenue.

An old frame building now situated on that site will be torn down and a new brick two-story structure erected.

With the "Battle Cry of Peace" as the chief attraction, the new United States Photoplay House, Paterson, opened February 25.

NEW YORK

A new company, known as the Palace Theatre Company, Inc., has purchased the beautiful Palace theatre at Main street, opposite Shelton Square, Buffalo, and will continue to operate this house under a policy of three changes a week, with admission placed at ten cents. I. M. Mosher, who went from New York some months ago to manage the Palace, is the new secretary, vice-president and manager of the company. Howard Smith and George E. More are the other members of the new holding company. The house was formerly owned by the Mitchel H. Mark Company.

HAS CHANCE TO BUY LIGHTING PLANT AND WANTS TO KNOW IF IT IS LARGE ENOUGH FOR THEATRE

W. G. M., Saltsburg, Pa.—I have a chance of buying a three K.W. lighting plant, D.C., 110-volt, cheap, and would like to know if it is large enough for my theatre. Am informed it will stand twenty per cent. overload without injury.

I have only one machine, Power's 6-A motor drive, my throw is about 50 feet, screen 9 by 12 feet, silvered; three-sixteenth fans, three motors, each ⅛ H.P., one on machine, one on piano and one on blower, seating capacity 140. 225 watts will cover all the lights I use.

This generator set can be regulated to produce current lower than 110 volts; suppose it was set at 100 volts, would this be sufficient to drive machine and piano motors, which are 110 volts?

The whole thing hinges on amount of wattage necessary for arc lamp. If the plant could be run at 100 volts, and 20 amperes would be sufficient for arc, it would leave 1,000 watts for lights and motors, which I think sufficient.

Any information you give me on this question will be appreciated.

ANSWER.—If you are satisfied that the 3 K.W. D.C. lighting plant is of good manufacture, made by a responsible concern and is in proper and perfect operative condition, I am sure that the same will answer your purpose.

A 3 K.W. 110-volt generator providing the engine is large enough, and if it will stand a twenty per cent. overload will have a maximum capacity of 3,600 watts for intermittent service, which would mean an output of about 33 amperes at 110 volts.

If I were you I would select about 25 amperes as the consumption for the picture arc, as this amount of current will give you good satisfaction at a distance of 50 feet with a silvered screen measuring 9 x 12. I would recommend that you use not to exceed ⅝-inch cored carbon in the top holder and about ½-inch solid or cored carbon in the lower holder.

Operating your arc on 110 volts, through the rheostat at 25 amperes, you will have used up about 2,750 watts of your capacity.

The balance of your load consists of 225 watts for your electric lighting of the house, 200 watts for three 16-inch fans and 300 watts for three small motors of ⅛ H.P. each. In other words, your total electric load for the house and the motors is 725 watts.

This would make the total load on the generator 2,750 watts for the arc and 725 watts for the balance of the load, or 3,475 watts with the entire load on the generator.

If your generator can stand an overload of 20 per cent. it is capable of delivering 3,600 watts, so that you can easily run 3,475 watts load on the generator, if it is as guaranteed, because you would certainly not run all of the house light when the moving picture arc is burning.

It would be of no benefit to you as far as the generator is concerned to reduce your voltage to 100, as it will be better to operate at 110, which is the correct voltage for your fans and other motors.

However, if your engine is overloaded and cannot pull the generator at the required speed without pounding and shows sign of overload, then is the time to reduce the voltage on the generator from 110 to 100, which will relieve the generator of a load of about 360 watts, which is around one-half H.P.

When you do this, then you must cut out some of the resistance in series with the arc so as to get the amperes up to 25 again, and you must also remember that your motors will run a little slower on 100 volts, and if that condition is satisfactory to you there will be a considerable decrease on the load on your engine.

I think your proposition is all right, if you feel satisfied that the generator and the engine are properly guaranteed to you at the right price.

BEST STYLE CARBON FOR LOWER HOLDER WITH D. C. WHEN CORED CABRON IS IN UPPER HOLDER

W. H. R., New York City:—What style carbon is the best to use in the lower carbon holder with D. C. when a cored carbon is used in the upper holder? I have experienced trouble with the lower carbon. If I use a large one it will not burn away properly, and if I use a small one it will pencil. What should I do to overcome the trouble?

ANS.—Your question is very interesting to me because it is one of the subjects about which I have been greatly concerned.

About five years ago, there was placed on the market in this country a carbon called the "Fabius Henrion," made in France, which proved very satisfactory in many instances, but the carbons would pencil when the proper size with good results was used.

It fell upon me to make the tests on these carbons and to recommend means for overcoming the trouble.

After giving study to the proposition, it occurred to me that if the carbon should be covered with a copper coating it would serve two purposes, as follows:

First: The copper coating would carry the current from the carbon clamp, holding it at the lower end, to the crater which would reduce the voltage drop, and stop consequent disintegration and heat in the carbon on that account.

Second: The copper coating would also serve a more important purpose in that it is a well-known fact that copper will radiate the heat better than carbon will.

Therefore, the effect of the copper shell or covering on the carbon is to quickly carry away the heat generated at the crater while the carbon is burning, thus preventing the disintegration of the carbon.

The only point to be considered in placing the copper coating is the thickness of the copper. Usually the coating is very thin, and is put on by the electro-plating process.

It is interesting to note that recently I have equipped several large shows, using heavy amperages with ⅞-inch cored carbon in the upper holder and a ⅝-inch cored copper-coated carbon in the lower holder for the negative and the results are simply splendid.

With the carbon not copper coated it would pencil, and if we used a combination having ¾-inch in the lower holder, it would not burn away fast enough to keep the point clean, so that the copper-coated ⅝-inch carbon solved the problem perfectly.

I also take pleasure in mentioning the fact that Thomas A. Edison adopted the use of the copper-coated carbon as used on the Fabius Henrion make in the small 5/16-inch cored carbon for the Edison Home Kinetoscope. The copper coating of the carbon for the Edison Home Kinetoscope served two purposes.

First: To carry the current from the holder to the crater.

Second: To keep the fingers from getting dirty when the carbons had to be handled by individuals who were not in the operating business, and the copper-coated carbon gives excellent satisfaction.

Copper-coated carbons can easily be obtained from any of the leading manufacturers upon request. The price is naturally greater than for a plain carbon, but in some instances the results obtained justify the greater expense and they last longer.

Gentlemen:

I am in receipt of shipment of Speer Projector Carbons and have given them a thorough test and have arrived at the conclusion that they are the only carbons that I have ever used.

My light is much better and I do not get flicker that I have been getting on other carbons.

I am using alternating current and my light is just as steady as possible to get same.

I have recommended your carbons to a friend of mine in the Motion Picture business and am confident you will receive an order from him in the near future.

Very truly yours,

WANTS MOTOR TO DRIVE GENERATOR SO PLANT CAN BE PUT IN BOOTH

C. S., National Theatre, Lucas, Iowa.—I am using an Ohio Electric Works 60 volt, 30 ampere D.C. plant, the engine a 4 H.P., 2 cycle Bessemer engine. I want to get a motor to drive the generator so that I can put the plant in my booth.

Now, how much or many watts will a 5 H.P., 110 volt, 60 cycle motor use in an hour pulling 30 amperes the full hour?

ANSWER.—For a 60 volt, 30 ampere D.C. electric generator you will require a 3 H.P. motor if it is directly-connected to the generator. If it is belt-connected, and you do a nice job of installing the machines by getting them perfectly lined up, and by using an endless belt of the highest quality with belt centers not less than 6 feet, and by using pulleys which are not smaller than 6 inches in diameter, but, of course, of the right proportion so that your generator speed will be correct; but neither one of the pulleys should be smaller than 6 inches. You may still use a good 3 H.P. motor and get results.

A 5 H.P. motor will, of course, operate the plant with greater ease and less strain, but it will take more power and costs slightly more to install.

Not knowing just what make or type motor you intend to put in, I cannot figure the exact wattage consumption, but it is safe to say that a 5 H.P. motor driving your 60 volt, 30 ampere generator will not consume more than 4 K.W. per hour, belt driven, and if you make the machine directly connected, that is, with the generator coupled directly to the motor shaft, without the use of belt, and if the lineup is perfect, you may operate this plant with anywhere from 3,200 to 3,500 watts per hour, so that at the 10-cent rate the lowest operating cost would be around 32 cents per hour and the highest 40 cents per hour. I think that will be figuring safe.

OPERATORS IN SAN FRANCISCO WANT ONLY UNION MEMBERS AT DEMONSTRATION WORK IN EXCHANGES

THE Motion Picture Operators of San Francisco have suggested a number of changes in working condition, but these as a whole have not met with the approval of employers.

They desire none but union operators run off films for demonstration purposes at the various exchanges and ask that film inspectors join their organization.

Exchange managers insist that it would be impracticable to have regular operators on hand to display films to prospective customers and declare that they are well satisfied with conditions in their inspection departments, most of this work being done by women.

VENTILATING AND HEATING COMBINED IS LATEST SYSTEM

A BRAND new system of ventilation, manufactured by the Peerless Unit Ventilation Company, Inc., 1328 Broadway, New York City, has just been brought to our attention, which is most feasible for installation in motion picture theatres.

The leading features of this system are as follows:

First.—It is a unique combination system of ventilating and heating. In summer fresh air can be pulled in at any rate desired, thus keeping it continuously in motion within the theatre so that in the hottest days the auditorium is very comfortable.

Second.—It permits the ventilation of a room or auditorium to be adjusted to the exact requirements of the people to be seated.

Third.—The ventilation is under absolute control and entirely independent of weather conditions.

Fourth.—Air is only admitted under proper temperature. It is also cleansed and to some degree humidified.

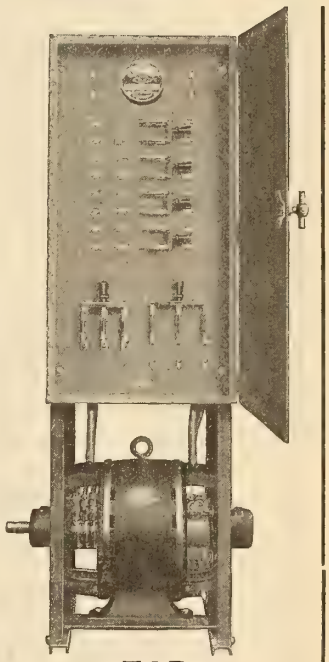
Fifth.—The system can be applied to old buildings without remodeling.

Sixth.—No built in or large sheet metal duct in the basement is ever used even in new construction.

No Draft with Air Distribution in Auditorium

Seventh.—The incoming fresh air is distributed throughout the auditorium without creating a draft at any point.

The cut shows the air being taken in directly through the wall. If the air at this particular point is not fresh, the intake is connected with a vertical duct extending to the roof or other point where the air is known to be absolutely pure.



This air is taken in by means of a motor and blower and forced down over a specially designed radiator through very fine screens which help take out any dust which may be lodged in the air and from there against a receptacle holding water, which, from the force of the air, is continually in ripples. This water takes out the rest of the dust and adds the needed humidity.

From there it passes up and out into the room so that a person may sit within a foot of the unit and not feel the least draft or any discomfort from the heat of the radiator, owing to the fact that it is entirely enclosed and the air is continually in circulation.

In the case of an old house, the installation takes a little more room than an ordinary radiator, but when the house is new it is built into the wall so that it extends out only the width of the opening through which the air is forced into the auditorium. This measures perhaps five inches.

It is scientifically known exactly how many cubic feet of air a given number of persons will use up in a given length of time.

The "MARTIN" ROTARY CONVERTER

FOR REAL "SUN-LIT" PICTURES

AND PERFECT REEL DISSOLVING

This is the machine they are all talking about, and the only one on which two arcs can be burned simultaneously and reels dissolved into each other without the starting of the second arc disturbing the light on the picture being projected by the first.

Our emergency panel provides A. C. for the lamps in case the rotary should be out of service and eliminates the cost of compense-arcs for emergency purposes.

The placing of the converter in base of panel board makes it a self-contained outfit and cuts the wiring and installation cost in half.

Therefore the engineer making the installation in any theatre knows exactly how much air it will be necessary to force into the auditorium for a given length of time in order that it may be continually fresh.

In like manner it is known exactly how large an opening it will be necessary to have through which the used air must be forced out.

If this opening is too large or too small, as the case may be, there will either be an over-abundance of fresh air which must be heated or a great lack of it.

Right Number of Cubic Feet Forced in Theatre

The greatest point in favor of the system is that exactly the right number of cubic feet of air is forced in each minute and likewise the exact amount of used air is forced out in the same given time.

In the case of a new theatre, all intake ducts are well hidden, as are those through which the air is forced out. It is often necessary in the case of an old house to put these ducts either on the inside walls where they are painted or run them through the walls and up the sides of a theatre.

This, however, is an easy matter and one which should not be considered in obtaining efficiency.

The motor which pulls the air into the theatre is so near being absolutely silent that it is unnoticeable at a distance of a foot or two.

No matter whether the outer air is dry, wet or cold, it is always in exactly the same condition when it reaches the water tank.

After being passed over this surface the air is cleansed and humidified, so that when it enters a theatre it is in the most healthful condition possible.

The radiator itself is of a special design, as it is necessary to pass the air over it very rapidly. Therefore in particularly cold weather it is necessary that it should strike as many heated surfaces as possible.

The cabinet which encloses the entire apparatus is made of cold rolled steel, finished to imitate any particular kind of wood desired, so that it is one hundred per cent. inconspicuous.

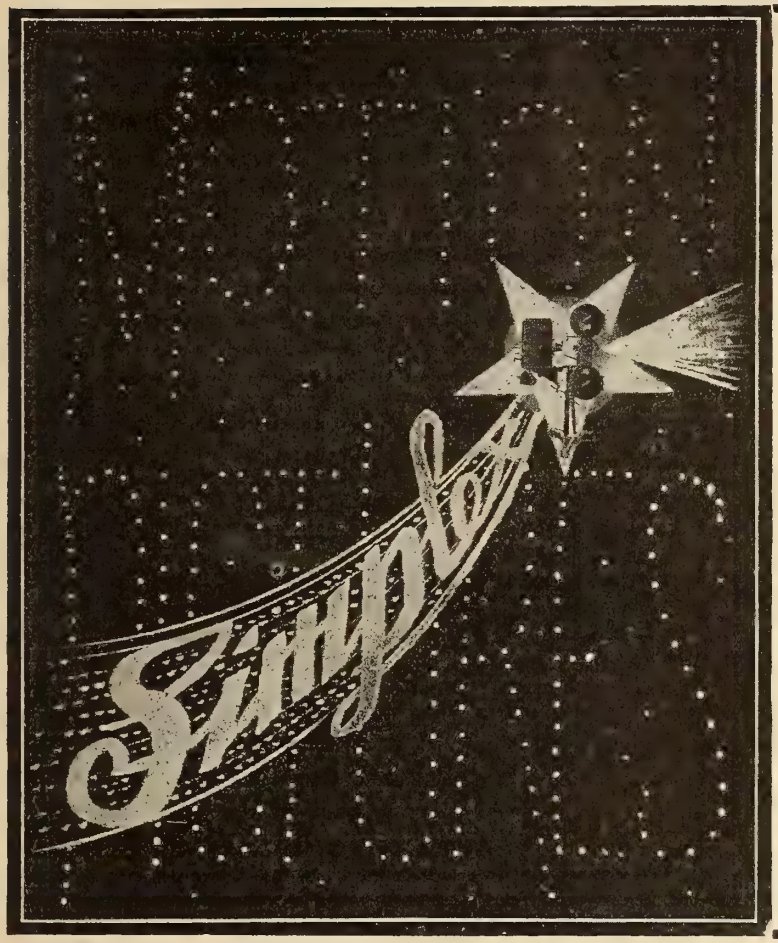
LYRIC, INDIANAPOLIS, CHANGES FROM VAUDEVILLE TO MOTION PICTURES

THE Lyric theatre, in North Illinois street, Indianapolis, operated by Barton and Olson, changed from popular-priced vaudeville, Sunday, March 19, when it reopened as a photoplay theatre, with the Paramount program, showing "An Alien," featuring George Beban.

"An Alien" will be shown for one week, and "Poor Little Peppina," featuring Mary Pickford, will be shown the following week. The regular changes, after the first two weeks, will be made on Sunday and Thursday.

Whether or not pictures will be shown hereafter in the Lyric theatre is not certain, but pictures will be shown for at least six months in the theatre. Last summer photoplays were shown in the theatre during the summer months, but reopened with vaudeville in the fall.

Barton and Olson, who run the Lyric, are heavily interested in pictures in Indianapolis, also operating the Isis theatre and Alhambra theatre, as well as being interested in other theatres.



A stage setting, representing a Japanese tea garden, is being built for the theatre, and music will be provided by an orchestra and soloists.

The theatre will run from 1 p. m. to 11 in the evening. The admission will be ten and fifteen cents.

A $100,000 THEATRE IS PLANNED FOR SUPERIOR, WISCONSIN

A NEW $100,000 motion picture and vaudeville theatre, with a seating capacity of 1,200, will be built in Superior, Wis., by M. S. and B. J. Cook, proprietors of the New Grand, Duluth, and Frank N. Phelps.

The building will be of brick, concrete and steel, and modern in every detail, with the latest system of ventilation and will be absolutely fireproof. There will be play rooms and a nursery for children, rest rooms for women, and smoking rooms for men.

SOUTHERN MOTION PICTURE TRADES EXPOSITION SET FOR MARCH 30-APRIL 1, IN ATLANTA

THE Southern Motion Picture Trades Exposition will be held in Atlanta from March 30 to April 1. Among the firms which have contracted for space are:

The Nicholas Power Company, New York; Minusa Cine Screen Company, St. Louis; Consolidated Film and Supply Company, Atlanta; Lears Theatre Supply Company, St. Louis; Mutual Film Corporation, Atlanta; Motion Picture News, New York; Automatic Player Piano Company, Atlanta; Lucas Theatre Supply Company, Atlanta; United Film and Supply Company, Atlanta; Atlanta Ad Men's Club, Atlanta; Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, Atlanta; World Film Corporation, New York; New Film Company, Atlanta; and Scenic Film Company, Atlanta.

Arrangements have been made for Gaumont stars in Jacksonville, Fla., to be present, including Marguerite Courtot, Alexander Gaden and Gertrude Robinson. The attendance of Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, Metro, now in Savannah, is part of the plan, and the Fox stars at work in Tullulah Falls, Ga., will probably be present.

The exposition will close with a ball and a beauty contest, the winner of which will get a try-out from a leading producing company.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Chamber of Commerce has appropriated five hundred dollars to send a delegation to the exposition.

The Automatic Player Piano Company, Atlanta, has arranged to take a $10,000 organ from Chicago to Atlanta, with a special organist to operate the instrument throughout the meeting.

GENNERT ISSUES COMPLETE CATALOG OF MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS, APPARATUS AND SUPPLIES

FROM the well-known photographic supply house of G. Gennert, at 24-26 East Thirteenth street, New York, has just come a copy of its latest catalog of motion-picture cameras, apparatus and supplies.

This catalog has been in the process of compilation for several months and is the best and most complete seen in a long while.

In addition to a large and varied line of motion-picture cameras listed, a special feature is a dissolving shutter which the company is prepared to furnish, to order, for the Pathé camera, and also some high-class focusing attachments and special nickel alloy aperture and pressure plates.

We can assure anyone intending to purchase, or otherwise interested in a motion-picture camera, that this latest catalog of the Gennert company contains a world of information on the various instruments and accessories.

INQUIRIES FROM EUROPEAN EXHIBITORS FOR SATIN GOLDFIBRE SCREENS

FRANK DUNCAN, of the Satin Goldfibre Screens, Inc., 2030 Penobscot building, Detroit, Mich., reports that he is getting inquiries from European exhibitors as well as from the United States.

He says that every month shows bigger business. He feels very optimistic regarding the future of Satin Goldfibre screen, and hopes to have it as well known in the moving picture industry as Detroit-made cars are known in the auto industry.

PORTER MADE MANAGER OF DUPLEX THEATRE, DETROIT

FOLLOWING are the latest important theatre changes in Detroit: Charles W. Porter succeeds Earl Hennessy as manager of the Duplex theatre, East Grand Boulevard, and Harry W. Irons succeeds Jack Mowat as manager of the Empire theatre.

Mr. Porter was for three years manager of the Miles theatre, and Mr. Irons was formerly associated with the John H. Kunsky theatres.

EXAMINING BOARD FOR OPERATORS CREATED IN KALAMAZOO, MICH.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., by means of a city ordinance has a newly created motion picture machine operators' examining board.

The board will make inspections of picture machine booths, and also will examine operators before granting them a license.

We show our pictures on a cloth of gold—the celebrated Minusa Gold Fibre Screen—the most expensive screen in the world.

Send for this free slide and show it as often as you can. If your patrons know that you have the finest screen to be had, they will better appreciate the show.

Always—invariably—the finest and best patronized theatres use Minusa Gold Fibre Screens.

5000 theatres throughout the U. S. A. are now equipped with these Anderson Method—Gold Fibre Screens.

These exhibitors appreciate the merit of the Minusa Gold Fibre Screen and realize that it offers the best projection surface to be had.

If this were not true, why would so many demand the Minusa Gold Fibre in preference to all others—particularly when it costs them more than any other screen.

The public are beginning to appreciate the difference in projection screens and that is one good reason why the theatre with the Minusa Gold Fibre Screen will continue to be the best patronized.

Selection of Cameras by Exhibitors for Topicals

"The Box" Should Take Standard Size Film—Others Are a Poor Investment—Prices Range from Fifty Dollars to the "No Limit" Mark, But an Expensive Machine is the Best in the Long Run for Pictures Taken on Short Notice

SO numerous are the inquiries from exhibitors and others ambitious to take motion pictures as to what is the best camera to purchase, that we will endeavor to set forth some points by which they may be guided in purchasing or testing a motion camera.

There are numerous cameras taking standard size film to choose from, ranging from fifty dollars to "no limit" in price. Cameras which do not take standard size film are a poor investment, and pictures made with the miniature film instruments can only have a limited use.

The quality of motion picture cameras is in accordance with the price one pays, and the more expensive machine, within reasonable limits, will be found the cheapest in the long run.

An important point to be ascertained is the capacity, or footage, the camera will hold. A camera holding two hundred feet of film will be the handiest for the exhibitor or local event amateur.

The shortest length of negative stock generally obtainable in the original and unbroken package is two hundred feet.

This saves the possessor of a camera of two hundred feet capacity, the trouble of any rewinding operations, which quite frequently are productive of static, or of cutting the film roll. The negative stock is ready for loading the magazine just as it comes.

Must Consider Importance of Lens

The lens to equip the camera with is an object to be considered, if high-class results are expected. There are frequently supplied on the lower-priced cameras lenses with a speed of f. 6. or thereabouts.

Although not anastigmats, they yield good results on sunny days, but are "out of the running" on dark or rainy days, in the shade or on interiors.

It is best to order with the camera a lens with a speed of f. 3.5. or thereabouts of a standard make. All of the leading makers of photographic lenses can supply these rapid lenses in 50 and 75 m.m. focal length, or two and three inches, respectively, American measurement.

The two-inch lens is vastly to be preferred for all-around work, topicals and scenics, having much greater depth of focus than a three-inch lens, and of course embracing a much wider angle of view.

Lenses of this description will cost in the neighborhood of thirty dollars each, but are a necessary and important factor in successful filming.

Make sure that the camera you purchase has a good device for focusing the image at the exposure aperture. A focusing device fitted with a magnifying glass in the eyepiece is to be preferred and will greatly facilitate securing a critical focus.

The type of focusing device, consisting of a mirror right behind the aperture, at 450 to same, and connecting with an eyepiece on the door of the loading site of the camera, is about the best for the non-professional cameraman, and is incorporated in most all of the moderate-priced cameras.

Footage Indicator Convenient Though Not Necessary

Another convenient, although not strictly necessary, item is a footage indicator or dial on which the amount of film exposed can be noted. Most all cameras, large and small, are now equipped with this handy device.

If it is desired to indulge in any trick photography, or to attempt an occasional animated cartoon, a camera should be secured that has a trick shindle, to which the crank when attached will just expose one picture at each complete turn of the same.

In examining a camera special attention should be given the aperture plate, the sprockets, and the rollers which hold the film to the sprockets.

These should have the metal, or other material, of which they may be made, cut away in the center, so that they do not touch the center portion of the film strip, which will be occupied by the pictures. Attention to this detail is necessary in order to avoid scratches in the negative.

If you contemplate contributing some of your negative to a Weekly news film, get in touch with them and ascertain the location of the frame line or dividing line btween pictures which they use and purchase a camera which spaces the pictures thus.

Of course, if a professional camera be secured, there will be provision made in the camera for changing the aperture.

Not much more can be said, but it shall be borne in mind that while the cheaper cameras, made of cast parts and cheaply constructed, will take a picture, they do not remain in good operating order long, nor will they at any stage produce the equal of film made with a professional camera.

MARKET FOR PHOTOGRAPHIC SUPPLIES IS EXCELLENT IN CENTRAL AMERICA

THE United States Department of Commerce is in receipt of reports from Consul Wilbert L. Bonney, at San Luis, Potosi, Mexico, and Consul Samuel T. Lee, at San Jose, Costa Rica, regarding the markets for photographic materials in the respective countries.

While deliveries of imported goods of this nature are now difficult, it is stated in the Mexican report that the market warranted a trip recently by one person to Texas for the purpose of bringing back a supply in hand luggage.

The official statistics of Costa Rica show an importation of $10,000 worth of photographic apparatus and supplies during the calendar year 1914, including the smaller portable cameras, moving picture machines, printing paper and card mounts, but not including chemicals.

Of the total importation, the United States furnished $7,000 worth, Germany $1,000, Great Britain $800, and France $600.

The steamship route which furnish the most direct and cheapest method of shipment with San Luis Potosi is the Ward Line, from New York to Tampico.

The best route of shipment of plates and films to San Luis Potosi would be by rail, through Eagle Pass or Laredo, as they would not be exposed to salt air and dampness.

The language of the San Luis Potosi district is Spanish. In treating of photographic materials, the standard list of sizes is the same as used in the United States.

In the Costa Rica trade, f. o. b. New York, prices are well understood, and some of the leading importers have current accounts with the exporters from the United States.

There is considerable cash trading, however, and a large share of this merchandise is brought in by parcel post.

Samples should be furnished by exporters from the United States desiring to enter the Costa Rican market, giving the lowest prices and best terms.

Correspondence and descriptive literature must be in Spanish, and for samples of small size and value the ordinary mail is preferable to parcel post.

A list of dealers in photographic goods in San Jose, Costa Rica, and San Luis Potosi, Mexico, may be obtained from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce or its district offices.

THE QUEEN THEATRE, WILMINGTON, DEL., IS LOCATED ON SPOT OF HISTORIC INTEREST

THE Queen theatre, Fifth and Market streets, Wilmington, Delaware, recently opened, has a seating capacity of 2,000. While it will be used mostly for moving pictures it is also adapted to stage purposes. The dimensions of the house are 65 by 150 feet.

The lobby is 22 by 50 feet. The walls are wainscotted with marble to a height of eight feet and caen stone is used above that point.

The attractive part of the lobby is the fact that there are no steps. From the front entrance a gentle slope leads to the first floor. On both sides of the lobby are inclines upward, which lead to the first balcony. The interior is strikingly handsome.

The seats are upholstered in Fabrikoid. This material is clean, neat and gives a luxurious appearance to the theatre. It not only adds to the appearance of the house, but also is a decided advertising point for the house with a local and continuous appeal.

Fabrikoid is an artificial leather preparation which is manufactured with a basis of strong, tightly woven cotton cloth into which the outside coating penetrates so that the cloth and coating become one. This is in turn grained so that the casual observer could not tell whether it is the natural grain leather or not.

How the selection of the word Queen for the theatre came about is novel. For more than a century the site where the theatre now stands has held a peculiarly intimate community interest for the people of Wilmington. On the same spot, when the city was little more than a village, stood the old Queen Hotel. Here much history was made, social and civic functions held, and the community activity centered.

After the passing of this ancient place of abode, came the Clayton House. Now it has been supplanted by the Queen theatre, thus reviving the old interest.

The theatre is controlled by the Wilmington Amusement Company and is managed by Joseph N. Ginns. The house was designed by the Hoffman Company, Philadelphia architects. The building is a substantial structure of concrete and steel.

Arrangements for heating and ventilating are the most complete, comprising three exhaust fans, six ventilators in the roof and a very large exhaust fan for the middle of the house. The structure is thoroughly heated by steam and an elaborate electric light system has been installed.

A Power's 6-B machine is in use and the length of the throw is 150 feet. The pictures are projected on a Mirroroid screen. The Haywood company furnished the seats, designed for wide isles and the comfort of the patrons. The musical equipment consists of a Mueller organ and a ten-piece orchestra. An electric four part automatic ticket seller is installed in the cashier's booth.

The Queen is located in the business section of Wilmington and uses Triangle service at admission prices varying from five cents to twenty-five cents. Manager Ginns believes in advertising and takes liberal space in the local newspapers.

A THEATRE A DAY IS RECORD FOR ONE WEEK IN WISCONSIN

A THEATRE a day or seven a week is the record for new theatres set in Wisconsin during the past seven days.

Plans for exactly seven new houses have been announced by builders and architects, the costs ranging all the way from $7,500 to $30,000.

Builders, exhibitors or exchangemen could give no particular reason for this sudden and remarkable activity in theatre building other than that good business conditions and a very bright future warranted this building.

A strange feature of this activity is that but one of the seven houses reported, is to be built in Milwaukee. All the others are to be erected in the smaller cities not one of whose population exceeds the 20,000 mark. The majority of the towns range around the 10,000 mark.

One of the towns, Muscoda, only boasts of 743 people. Architect F. L. Kronenberg of Madison, has completed plans for the erection of a theatre for Fred Paulick, of that city. The building will be two stories and basement, 50 x 100 feet, will have vacuum steam heating, a sound proof floor and metal ceiling.

At Marshfield, G. A. Krasm, 326 S. Central street, has completed plans for the remodeling of a store for a photoplay theatre. The building is owned by Kleiner, Lang and Scharmann, hardware dealers. The present building is of reinforced concrete and is 30 x 77 feet. An addition will be 30 x 80 feet, two stories high and when completed the theatre will have a 500 seating capacity.

At Antigo, H. E. and P. J. Hanson, proprietors of the Palace theatre, have instructed Architect H. T. Liebert, Wausau, to take figures for a solid brick theatre, with cut stone and terra cotta trimmings. The building is to be 45 x 180 two stories and basement, will have hot air heating, composition roofing and probably terrazzo floors. When finished the building will cost about $20,000.

Ripon has selected Architect Henry Auler, of Oshkosh to prepare plans for a new city hall armory and theatre to cost between $30,000 and $40,000. The Madagin-Lauerman Company, Marinette, is having plans prepared for the erection of a photoplay theatre on Main street, of that city, to be leased by Asher Brothers, proprietors of the Bijou theatre. The building is to be of solid brick, 90 x 120, with a seating capacity of about seven hundred.

In Milwaukee, B. S. Scheiderer is preparing plans for the erection of a photoplay theatre for J. R. McKinley at Stevens Point. The building is to be solid brick or brick and tile construction, one story and part basement, 40 x 130 feet. It will have furnace heating, a fan ventilating system, tar and gravel roofing, stone trimming, a stage and indirect lighting.

The theatre is expected to cost about $7,500 and will have a seating capacity of five hundred. The Kroening Construction, 708 Majestic Building, is taking figures for the erection of a photoplay theatre in that city, costing about $20,000, to be built on Fourteenth avenue and Mitchell street.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

Errors in Lithographing Drawback to Picture Music

Reason Due to Lack of Time Allowed for Putting the Score in Proper Manuscript Form for Use of the Lithographer and Little Time for Proof-reading—Remedy Possible Only When Features are Made Far in Advance of Release Dates

WE hear all kinds of criticism for and against the making of musical scores for feature films. To say the least, very little has been accomplished by the use of these scores.

Possibly the greatest drawback has been the errors made in lithographing the music. This has been caused by the limited time allowed for putting such a score into proper manuscript form for the use of the lithographer, and not allowing enough time for the necessary proof-reading for corrections.

The errors found in these scores are unpardonable when you realize that you not only abuse the theatre audience with poor music, but you blaspheme the orchestra as well.

Until feature plays are made far in advance of release, such methods are impossible and certainly not practical. Were the above difficulty removed, it would still not be probable that music scores, par excellence, could be arranged in the form now involved without infringement upon the copyright laws.

Picture Theatre Affords Widening Music Latitude

The picture theatre affords a large and continually widening latitude for music, which will never be allowed to narrow down to the publications of any one publisher.

The supply of good and entertaining musical numbers will never wane, and the picture theatre beckons the best, regardless of publisher or copyright. I doubt if musical scores created by individual publishers will ever have a value.

The manufacturers of feature plays, were they willing to obtain copyright permissions from the respective owners, would be able to create good musical scores, but, as I said before, music compiled in such manner would take more than double the time than is at present possible to obtain.

Timing the scores to pictures is also a waste of time, as there is no specific time set for running any certain part of a picture. Successful exhiibtors set only a minimum and maximum time.

I know for a fact that in some of our largest picture houses, the same feature is run in certain shows in an hour and five or ten minutes, while in other shows it has run as long as an hour and thirty minutes.

A nice time one would have fitting timed music to a picture run in this manner. Regardless of what we may do, or later devise in picture music, it will always be required that the picture musician or leader of musicians must use a certain amount of intelligence to be successful as a picture musician.

We should not try to numb this intelligence, for the success of music and the picture depends more upon the musician making a thorough study of picture theatre requirements.

Musical talent augmented with a study of picture music possibilities will do more for the industry at large than scores.

What we need at the present time is a continued application of original thought into picture music, which will eventually form an endless chain of knowledge spreading gradually, whereby we will get, eventually, better picture music results.

The picture theatre is unique musically for the reason that there is no fixed rule for the ultimate result in presenting "Music and the Picture." When we destroy the musician's originality, we destroy that which gave birth to his talent.

STRAND IN BUFFALO, N. Y., MAKES MUSIC A FEATURE FOR ITS PATRONS

THE Strand, Buffalo, N. Y., claims to have one of the finest orchestras in New York state for a motion picture show. The personnel of the organization is as follows:

George A. Bouchard, director, one of the leading organists of Buffalo; Alfred A. Fahlbusch, first violinist, concertmeister of the Rochester Symphony Orchestra and a member of all leading Buffalo musical organizations.

Alfred Lohmann, second violinist, former member of the Berlin Philharmonic and a former pupil of Anton Witek, concertmeister of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; O. L. Bachelor, flute, Buffalo's leading flutist; cornet, John W. Bolton, conductor of the Seventy-fourth Infantry band and Buffalo Park band; clarinet, George Kroeder, former member of both above organizations as solo clarinetist.

Cello, Louis Heine, former cello soloist with Victor Herbert orchestra and New York Philharmonic; double bass, Joseph F. Locke, former member of the Buffalo Symphony Orchestra under John Lund; and drums, David Edel, a former member of the Cincinnati symphony.

This aggregation of artists are rendering a series of programs unexcelled and are delighting local music lovers and photoplay enthusiasts.

REFUSES TO SEAT PATRONS DURING RENDITION OF ORCHESTRAL NUMBERS

CLEVELAND, O., theatres, in order to secure greater respect for musical selections and in an attempt to eliminate conversation during the rendering of overtures and selections by the orchestra, have adopted the plan of declining to seat patrons during the orchestral numbers.

The innovation was started by the Alhambra theatre, one of Cleveland's high class East End motion picture houses.

"ON THE BOWERY" PLAYED BY ORCHESTRA AT KNICKERBOCKER FOR LODGING HOUSE SCENE

THE old Hoyt song, "On the Bowery," which precipitated the pending effort of the business men of that thoroughfare to have its name changed, is one of the musical features of the current week at the Knickerbocker theatre.

It is employed in the score during the lodging house scene in "The Habit of Happiness."

THEATRE BUILDING BOOM HITS SAN FRANCISCO; CONSTRUCTION RUSHED ON HOUSE OPPOSITE ST. FRANCIS HOTEL

MORE moving picture theatres of large capacity are now in course of construction in San Francisco than has been the case at any time since the disastrous fire of 1906, and a number of others are planned for this year's building program.

While there are over one hundred moving picture houses in the city, most of these are small, and visitors have commented upon the fact that there are so few really large theatres of this character in the downtown district.

The New Mission theatre of Kahn and Greenfield, which is to supplant the old Idle Hour theatre on Mission street, is rapidly assuming form and will be opened about the first of May.

This theatre will not only be one of the largest in the mission district, but will be one of the finest in the whole city. It will have a seating capacity of almost two thousand and will be equipped in the best manner possible.

Construction work is being rushed on the new moving picture house being erected for N. L. Josey on Geary street, opposite the St. Francis Hotel, and this will be ready for occupancy within three months.

The seating capacity will be slightly more than one thousand and it is planned to feature the very highest in photoplays, a program having already been arranged for. This house will be the only amusement place of the kind in the Union Square district.

Contracts have been let for the construction of the Strand theatre at Ellis and Mason streets and workmen are now engaged in putting in the foundations.

This house will have a seating capacity of more than twenty-five hundred, and it is the plan to devote it to vaudeville and moving pictures.

A short distance from this theatre, and closer to Market street, the Mason Street Amusement Company will erect a moving picture theatre with a seating capacity of about fifteen hundred, the building to cost about $70,000.

The remodeling of the American theatre on Market street, above Seventh, is progressing very rapidly, and this splendid house will probably be ready for occupancy some time in April. The old balcony has been removed and a new one put in, the use of posts having been done away with.

The front of the building is to be remodeled, a marquis extending over the entire sidewalk installed and an immense electric sign erected.

More than $75,000 is being expended in the work of remodeling and the house will be opened, when completed, by Sheehan and Lurie, the opening attraction probably being the Annette Kellermann film of the William Fox Corporation.

Still another new moving picture theatre being planned is one for the corner of Market and Fourth streets, in the very heart of San Francisco.

This corner has just changed hands for a consideration representing the largest sum ever paid for property in San Francisco, figured on the front foot basis, and is now owned by a syndicate which has announced its intention of erecting a magnificent theatre to be devoted to moving pictures.

A three-story building is located on this site and this will be torn down to make room for the new structure, putting the Peerless theatre, conducted under the management of N. K. Herzog, out of business.

AT NEW REGENT OPENING IN MONTREAL 2,000 ARE TURNED AWAY

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Montreal, P. Q., March 17.

THE Independent Amusement Company has fulfilled its promises. It promised Montreal the finest theatre possible and it has opened the New Regent which, it is believed, amply redeems the pledge.

On March 4 the New Regent was opened to the public, showing the feature "The Campbells are Coming." At the same time the occasion was made something of an event, to which all the local theatre men and newspaper men were invited. George Nicholas, managing director, superintended the arrangement, assisted by Mr.

THE OWNERS

say of the Broadway Theatre Organ, New York, erected by the W. W. Kimball Company, that it "is the finest theatre organ in New York." Of this the public has no doubt.

Why not have one like it?

BALL PARK AND NEMO OPEN IN CLEVELAND; GROSSMAN WILL SPEND $3,000 IN SIGNS

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Cleveland, O., March 18.

BALL PARK theatre, so named because of its proximity to the Cleveland baseball ground, and recently opened, seats four hundred and fifty and is built on a perfect plan.

All new theatres in Cleveland are providing sufficient space to permit patrons to pass each other with greater ease. This is one of the best features of the Ball Park theatre. The ventilation system is also particularly good. The house opened with a Pathé program.

The Nemo at Detroit avenue and West Eighty-third street has also been reopened after renovations and redecorations were made. Hart Brothers are the owners of the Nemo. This theatre was built by Herman A. Hart, a gardener in the royal gardens at Potsdam, who came to this country thirty years ago to establish extensive nurseries on the west side of the city.

Joseph Grossman, of the Standard theatre, Cleveland's most successful downtown house, has won his long fight with the city authorities and obtained permission to use two big electrical signs. Mr. Grossman, who is the William Fox first run exhibitor in Cleveland and the man who created the full-page advertisement precedent and the full-week run for photoplay features in the Sixth City, plans to spend at least $3,000 on his new signs.

FIVE SCREEN THEATRES IN ONE SQUARE IN NORTH ILLINOIS STREET, INDIANAPOLIS

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Indianapolis, Ind., Mar. 17.

THE Crystal theatre, in North Illinois street, Indianapolis, which has been closed for the last six weeks, while the theatre has been rebuilt, opened Sunday, March 19, with "Forbidden Fruit," an Ivan Film production, featuring Paula Shay, which is being distributed in Indiana by the General Feature Film Company, of Chicago.

The theatre, operated by Schmidt and Cohen, has been reconstructed entirely, the only thing left of the old theatre being the front.

The room on the north, formerly occupied by the Oak cafe, has been taken in, and the seating capacity of the theatre has been increased from 242 to more than seven hundred seats.

Workmen were employed night and day for the last month in order to have the structure ready for the opening.

The theatre was not complete for the opening as the interior decorations were not complete, but it is planned to finish these later on, when the weather is warmer.

It is estimated by Schmidt and Cohen that about $28,000 will be spent in reconstructing the theatre. Arrangements have been made to put in a balcony later on.

The Crystal theatre, which is opposite the terminal station, in North Illinois street, is the oldest motion picture theatre in the city and is located in the heart of "movie row."

With the reopening of the Crystal theatre, and the switching to photoplays of the Lyric theatre from vaudeville, which opened Sunday, March 19, there are now five motion picture theatres in one square in North Illinois street.

25.	Dr.-Andte.	"A. B. C. Dramatic Set No. 4"—B2	To End.

Effect Notes: During the playing of No. 4 and 22, a trumpet call is suggested on the screen. The number does not need to be stopped to make this call. No. 7 calls for a church bell imitation which is very important. During Nos. 23 and 24 rifle shots, and the usual tumult accompanying battle is called for.

Music Notes.—The picture is based on an Indian story. The Indian suggestion should not be overdone after the first reel. After the first reel, the action becomes more dramatic than characteristic.

Numbers in minor keys should be used as much as possible in both the heavy descriptive and waltz numbers. The Mexican tone should also be accentuated in Nos. 2 and 22.

Nos. 1 and 4 should be slow 2/4 Indian numbers of positive character. No. 2 is a Mexican or Spanish serenade. Nos. 3, 8, 11, 18, 19, and 20 are all slow dramatic numbers. Numbers in minor keys are preferable. Nos. 19 and 20 play long and should be lengthy numbers. No. 6 must be a slow number and have a positive pathetic appeal.

Nos. 9 and 21 must be slow waltzes in minor keys, having an aboriginal appeal. Nos. 10 and 22 must be 2/4 numbers of Mexican or Spanish character. No. 24 should be a gallop of exciteable nature.

Nos. 5, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17 and 23 are short melodramatic numbers as suggested in music plot.

During Nos. 14, 15 and 16 the Indian action should be positively suggested.

No. 25 are short andante movements to finish the picture.

The organ can be used throughout, the Indian effects not being difficult to obtain on the large organs.

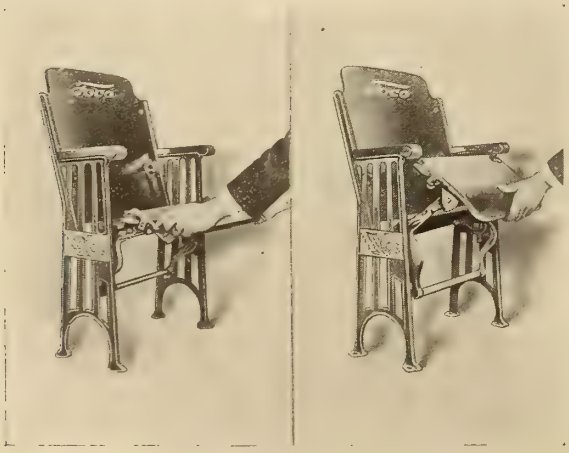
Special Seats Give Children Clear View of Screen

Device Breaks in Center So That When It Is Folded Back and Hooked in Place It Forms a Small Seat Halfway Up the Back of the Chair When in Normal Position, and at Same Time Throws Out a Foot Rest for the Children's Feet



FROM time to time we have commented upon various seats and seating arrangements, as well as seat appliances. The comfort of the patron has in each case been of prime importance, but in each instance the entire attention has been given to the adult patron, without regard to the comfort of the children, who are attending the motion picture theatres in increasing numbers.

A CHILD'S VISION AS COMPARED WITH AN ADULT'S

The A. H. Andrews Company, of Chicago, has just prepared ready for the market a new seat which is aimed primarily for the comfort of the juvenile patrons.

CHAIR BEING SET IN POSITION FOR CHILDREN

Anyone going into a picture house where children are in attendance will notice, providing the house is full, a certain restlessness due to the inability of the child to see through the grown person sitting directly in front of him.

The vision of a child under sixteen when seated in a standard chair starts from a point approximately a foot below that of the adult, as is illustrated in the accompanying photograph, which shows how impossible it is for him to get a view of the screen.

The A. H. Andrews Company, of Chicago, however, in putting out the Foco brand of chairs, has given the theatre owner a product which not only works a definite good for the younger people, but does not in any way inconvenience the adult.

In cut No. 2 it will be noted that the seat of the chair breaks in the center, so that when it is folded back and hooked in place it forms a small seat half way up the back of the chair when in normal position, and at the same time throws out a foot rest for the children's feet.

CHILD'S VISION WHEN USING SPECIALLY RAISED SEAT

The result of this is that by using this raised seat the children's eyes are brought on a level with those of the adult, so that they can see the picture as perfectly as anyone else in the house.

It also absolutely eliminates the continuous noise and disquieting effect of restless children endeavoring to see the screen from a position which makes it physically impossible.

The adoption of this scheme among houses making a particular play for children's performances will undoubtedly find it of considerable benefit because of the decided increase in popularity and advertising advantage to the house which should result.

GENERATOR OBVIATES LOSS OF CURRENT

The only renewals required are, under ordinary circumstances, the refilling of the lubricating grease chambers, once a year for the two ball bearings and from one to two sets of brushes per year.

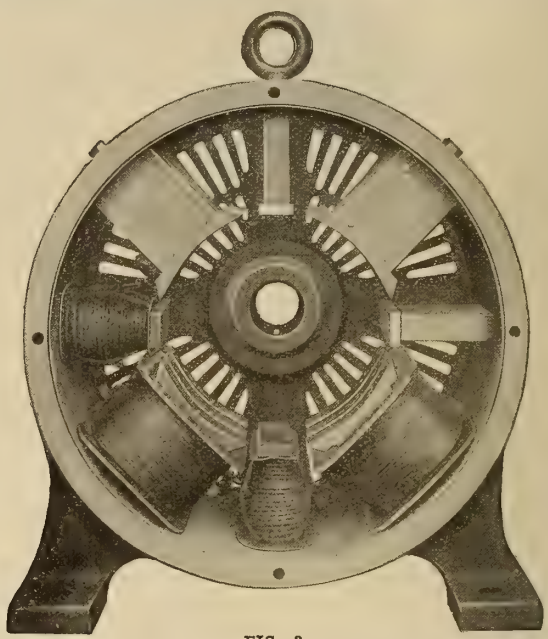

FIG. 3

With two-phase and three-phase motors, starters are not required as far as the motor generator is concerned.

In most cities the electric lighting companies permit the installation of two-phase and three-phase motors without starters, but where a starter is necessary or demanded by the electric lighting company, it will be furnished at the regular market price.

With the single-phase 20th Century Motor Generator, a starter is furnished, and it is an interesting fact to note and remember, that on 110 volts its starts with only 46 amperes and on 220 volts with only 23 amperes. As a matter of fact, the starting current for the single-phase machine is less than the running current.

All of the foregoing figures are for the standard equipment in the capacity of 60 amperes continuously or adjustable from 30 to 70 amperes when in service intermittently, as is the case in a moving picture machine installation.

Taken as a whole, the Hallberg 20th Century Generator equipment is complete in every detail and gives the operator perfect, simple and quick control of his arcs, whether burning singly or two at the same time.

My Dream Has Come True

Years ago when the motion picture industry was a teething infant—

I dreamed about a factory where the supreme degree of film quality was the paramount issue.

We have such a factory, the new home of perfect developing and printing.

I dreamed about a studio, completely appointed, where perfect illumination secured maximum light values.

We have such a studio, and it will soon be available to you at reasonable rental rates.

I dreamed about the combination of such a factory with such a studio, so that one could completely serve the motion picture trade.

We will operate our studio in conjunction with our factory, thus securing the highest degree of efficiency.

I dreamed about an organization of film experts, men trained to the minute; scientifically managed—a capable, experienced, thinking unit, operated to efficiently and sufficiently serve.

We have the ideal organization—actively and completely at your service.

With guaranteed film quality and adequate studio facilities, we have everything to offer you. And, everything we have to offer is properly priced and honestly delivered.

AN APPRECIATION

Mr. Chester Beecroft has resigned after being in my employ for the past two years.

Mr. Beecroft has been the most able, honest, frank, capable, far-seeing, enthusiastic and resourceful helper I have ever had and I regret his decision to resign.

Mr. Beecroft's success in the future is assured by his unusual ability, and I do not know of anyone who can point to a longer list of achievements in a large way in his chosen field.

During the time that Mr. Beecroft has been associated with me a strong friendship has grown up which even his decision to travel in different paths cannot destroy.

Mr. Beecroft carries with him my best wishes and a key to the front door to be used whenever he wishes to return.

"THE BOLDEST WORD"

PERHAPS the strongest endorsement which any moving picture service can receive is the number of representative exhibitors who are using that service.

To those who arrive at facts through the medium of figures, the following record, therefore, will be more eloquent than words:

Total number of moving picture theatres in Pittsburg	120	Average number of V-L-S-E subjects shown daily in Pittsburg theatres . .	28
Houses charging 10c admission or more (approximately one half)	60	Total number of "downtown houses" charging 10c or more	5
Total number of houses charging 10c or more served by Big Four	51	Total number of "downtown houses" served by V-L-S-E	5

None but a service which is scoring, and scoring high for its patrons, could consistently point to such records, of which this is but a single illustration of conditions prevailing throughout the country.

Such evidence places Big Four features in a position where failure to avail yourself of their true and tried drawing powers is a challenge to your best interests.

Can you afford to ignore it?

When we gave the long list of bookings to your representative, we had to start them on Mondays which were the only days we had open.

We never could get any business on Monday before, so had expected to move up bookings on your features to Tuesday, so that we could draw larger crowds on them.

But now has a miracle been wrought. We find that your features will draw business even on Monday where we could never get any before.

It seems to us that this certainly is a compliment to you. Now we want you to give us additional bookings on Friday also.

PATHÉ'S Most Intensely Dramatic of ALL SERIALS

The IRON CLAW

has won the unqualified commendation of the reviewers – men whose long experience in judging pictures has given them the right to be heard.
The extracts on opposite page are characteristic →

MR. EXHIBITOR, YOU CANNOT LOSE IF YOU BOOK THIS CROWD-DRAWING SERIAL!

The PATHÉ EXCHANGE inc.

EXECUTIVE OFFICES

25 WEST 45th ST. NEW YORK

"The newest Pathé serial has performed its first duty admirably; it has aroused the interest and has kept it in suspension. The story promises to be an absorbing one, and it is so presented as to make all of its points tell. The action is sharp and fast, but more than all it is presented by a cast of players which have made themselves popular all over the country. They include Pearl White, Creighton Hale, and Sheldon Lewis, and the trio is or should be enough to fill many a house where 'The Iron Claw' is shown. The serial should have a drawing power as great if not greater than any the Pathé people have yet issued."— Harvey S. Thew in "The Motion Picture News" of March 4th.

"Practice has made the Pathé Company notably proficient in the production of serial photoplays. Through long experience, beginning with the renowned 'Perils of Pauline', directors and scenario writers connected with Pathé have learned the difficult art of telling a story in installments so that each release is complete in itself, yet an essential part of the extended plot. The impression left by the first two episodes of 'The Iron Claw' is that it bids fair to become the most popular serial made by Pathé····We should say that a winning combination is engaged in producing this story of mystery and thrills····no exhibitor need fear 'The Iron Claw.'"— Lynde Denig in "The Moving Picture World" of March 4th.

For the week of April 2nd the TRIANGLE-INCE Release will be a picture of particular merit—a play of such quality that your patrons will surely appreciate it.

Jane Grey and William Desmond in "The Waifs" present a story with such conviction that the success of this play is already assured.

In this striking TRIANGLE PLAY William Desmond presents the part of a young minister unfrocked because of his love for and indulgence in drink. Deep in despair he descends from bad to worse until finally at the lowest level he vows to end it all in the harbor at his feet.

Jane Grey plays the pretty little piano girl in a cheap bar-room. She convinced him that only cowards seek to end it all in that way, and when she began to take an interest in him life seemed sweet after all.

TRIANGLE

Can a Bad Woman Make a Weak Man Good?

Is it possible for a woman of the slums to take a weak individual and make him become a decent, hard-working citizen? It's a question of vital interest to many of your patrons. People have been asking it for centuries.

This question is answered with a big YES in this throbbing TRIANGLE PLAY and as the stirring picture progresses it will make your patrons feel certain that such a thing is not only possible but very probable.

The other drama to be released this week will be Douglas Fairbanks in "The Habit of Happiness." Little need be said of the assured success of this play. With many successes already to his credit Fairbanks has a following to be envied and catered to. Five reels of great comedy that will keep your audience constantly laughing are assured.

Then two Keystones, "A Bathhouse Blunder," and "His Wife's Mistake" with "Fatty" Arbuckle and Al St. John complete the program.

TRIANGLE PLAYS are now being shown all over the country by progressive exhibitors. If you have not received information in regard to the presentation of these pictures in your territory why not drop us a line.

Essanay Photoplays Strike Universal Chord

Kipling's idea of paradise is a place where one can "draw the thing as he sees it." In every heart there is an innate love of truth to things as they are.
Essanay spares no pains to draw the things as it sees them and as they are. That is the keynote of Essanay realism. That is why Essanay plays strike a universal chord.

Unity and Harmony

THERE are several big issues confronting the industry right now.

One feels inclined to write about mergers. They are only in the air at present, but we are going to have mergers. Not monopolistic mergers; they are impossible. But mergers to solidify the industry, to save it and its product in a crisis now grown acute.

But there's just as great a danger without the industry.

WE are not taking the danger seriously—in its full seriousness—because we have our eyes upon the faults within, upon the big and little problems which directly concern our own businesses.

The danger is censorship.

I presume the reader will stop here and vote the rest of this article of academic interest.

So much has been said about censorship that we're beginning to accept it or at least to regard it as a vague menace of general and therefore no particular application.

LET us see about this.

There are Federal and State bills now pending which if they become laws will make the shoes pinch of every man who reads this editorial. Any man with any imagination ought to feel the pain already.

But this is not the worst of it.

The very conditions that brought about these ominous bills exist also in every state and city in the country. They are apt to spring into censorship at any moment. The only reason we have a pending bill in New York and none in Iowa is because the politicians of Iowa haven't seen the light as yet. But they will.

THERE is no reason at all why we should not have censorship bills in all the States of the Union; there is nothing to prevent censorship following the hills and that means the end of the industry and every man's job in it.

There is nothing to prevent this finale, nothing—except the undivided effort of the industry.

The undivided effort of the industry means organized effort; and organized effort means complete co-operation between the Board of Trade and every exhibitor organization and an extension to the fullest possible degree of the membership and activities of each.

THIS is a big industry and a big menace is threatening it.

The time has come for a big effort.

The Board of Trade alone cannot meet the issue in forty-eight states; and just so neither can the Motion Picture Exhibitors League nor the local and state leagues of exhibitors. Neither can the things be accomplished within the industry—which must be accomplished—through the divided effort of these organizations.

Good progress is being made. Eight States—Massachusetts, Minnesota, Washington, Indiana, Maryland, Michigan, Kansas and North Carolina have asked through the exhibitor organizations to co-operate with The Board of Trade. This is fine. Let there be more.

PERHAPS this form of co-operation may furnish the necessary centres of organization throughout the country. Perhaps it will be advisable for the Board of Trade to establish sectional centres or organizations similar in scope to the local Boards of Trade now successfully active in San Francisco, Los Angeles, and New Orleans.

But this much is certain. The time has come for genuine and widespread organization. That means hard work, sincerity, unselfishness—the elimination of the personal element.

WE must have harmony. We must have the closest kind of co-operation between every organization we now have. We must have this harmony not only to do at once the things that must be done now, but also to attract to the Board of Trade and to the national, state and local leagues of exhibitors the larger membership needed to do the things of the future.

Harmony can only be had through patience and understanding. Harmony can easily be destroyed by a single man kicking over the traces.

THE situation is delicate and serious. It is a situation that puts every man on his mettle. It is an opportunity for every one and for each organization to prove that the broad deep interests of the industry are held above every other interest.

This is a time for sober, serious, discussion and plenty of it—plenty of it before any hasty or ill-advised action is taken.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS is for unity—first, last and foremost.

Francisco Villa—Eliminated by the Ohio Board of Censors

THE climax of censorial insolence and oppression has been reached at last.

Within the past week, the Ohio Board of Motion Picture censors issued a general order, forbidding the exhibition of any picture of Francisco Villa within the state.

Their official reason was that Villa "is a murderer and a bandit, and pictures of him upon the screens of motion picture theatres would inflame the populace."

WE wonder whether the censors fully realize what this action means.

It is a direct attack upon the news weeklies, which in content are completely parallel to, and in many instances identical with the pictorial supplements of the printed newspapers.

The aim and end of the news weekly and the newspaper is the same. The one expresses in pictures what the other declares in words.

However reluctant the courts may be, at present, to admit that the constitutional guarantee of free speech includes all motion pictures, they can hardly withold its protection from that portion of them which is nothing but a newspaper translated into pictures.

AND why, in the name of every principle of democratic government, should any man, or woman or body of men and women be permitted to say what part of the world's news they may know, and what part they must not know?

Is Ohio or any other State in the Union so completely Russianized that it will tolerate such an impudent curtailment of its liberties?

We have submitted to the emasculation of literature and drama on the screen. Must we now have contemporary history sterilized for us? Is one half of the world now to be forbidden to know how the other half lives?

IT is time that this reckless running amuck of a few petty officials intoxicated with their power should be stopped. We believe it will be, and there never was a more certain opportunity to make an example of the censors than in this case of the news weeklies.

Were the MOTION PICTURE NEWS a producer of pictures and thereby entitled to become plaintiff in an action against the Ohio censors, we would not wait twelve hours to file suit against them. And we would prosecute it to the highest court of the land.

The Exhibitors' Response to the Actors' Fund

THE motion picture industry is nobly playing its part in the raising of the Actors' Fund.

Besides the generous response from individuals from every branch of the business, the theatres have entered the campaign with an enthusiasm and a unanimity that is significant in more ways than one.

NEW YORK, Philadelphia and Chicago have each elected to occupy a prominent place in the work. In Chicago particularly, within twenty-four hours of the launching of the campaign there, 118 theatres had pledged ten per cent. of their receipts for Monday, May 15, as their contribution to the raising of the half million dollars that is expected from the picture interests.

THE Actors' Fund is a cause that every exhibitor can afford to support, and every exhibitor should be proud to be identified with it. No movement could be more disinterested than this, none freer from partisan spirit or prejudice.

Moreover, every facility is offered by the committee in charge to swell the receipts of the theatre identifying itself with the movement so that even the humblest manager can become a party to the movement without burdening himself.

INDEED as their letters express it, "the great publicity campaign now under way will be so instrumental in increasing the attendance in your theatre on that Monday, that what we are really asking you is for you to be a medium through which your patrons will contribute."

Approximately two hundred and twenty-five exhibitors have already enrolled themselves as active workers for the Actors' Fund, and the numbers are mutiplying daily. Seven weeks of work are before the committee. Before the campaign is concluded, we should like to see five thousand exhibitors enlisted in the cause. Why not be one of them?

As a matter of fact, the Ohio Board of Censors ought to be sent into Mexico to eliminate Villa there.

Though this is only March, 1916 is already proving the prophets' predictions that it would be a big year in the industry's history.

Speaking of censorship, it is pleasant to observe that the Pennsylvania censors have been defeated once more in the courts. This time it was "The Kreutzer Sonata" that proved too much for them. Wasn't it Breitinger who ordered the title of this same picture changed because, in his opinion, it was immoral?

Two Kansas Bodies Hold Convention in Wichita

Amusement Association and Exhibitors' League Convene on March 20-21 with About 110 Motion Picture Theatre Managers in Attendance—Censorship Is Chief Topic—J. W. Binder Takes Out Membership on Behalf of the Motion Picture Board of Trade.

Special to Motion Picture News

Kansas City, Mo., March 24.

THE Kansas Amusement Association and the Exhibitors' League of the State of Kansas met in Wichita, Kansas, on March 20 and 21.

The first meeting was called to order Monday morning at 10:30 with about 110 exhibitors in attendance. It was easy to see at the very outset of the convention that the chief topic of discussion would be censorship.

It was talked about before the meeting came to order, and the first speaker on the program held to that subject.

E. R. Pearson, of V-L-S-E in Kansas City, spoke very highly of the work of the association so far, and showed a book of clippings taken from various Kansas newspapers regarding the question of motion picture censorship.

Mr. Pearson was followed by Prof. Payne, of Emporia, Kansas. Prof. Payne is a candidate for superintendent of schools for the State of Kansas. The power of motion picture censorship is vested in this office.

Prof. Payne at the very outset of his remarks made it plain that he was a lover of the motion picture. He said that in Emporia, his home town, he had never seen an indecent or immoral picture; that he believed that this condition of affairs was true throughout the state.

Need Square Deal

He said that what was needed in Kansas more than anything else that he knew of was a square deal. This immediately made him a friend of the exhibitors, because they certainly do not feel that they have received a square deal.

Although the exhibitors are fighting the censorship bill, they are going to support Mr. Payne for election, because should it happen that their plans to repeal the censorship laws now on the statute fail, it would be of great benefit to them to have a man in that office who is friendly toward their interests.

J. W. Binder, secretary of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, was a guest of honor at the convention, and was a source of inspiration to both exhibitors and exchange men.

He dwelt at considerable length upon the magnitude of the industry; upon the possibilities of the future development and the danger of censorship.

He said it was positively astounding that in this day the manufacturers of motion pictures were forced to lay the creations of their brains, thought and ability before three or four men whose intelligence is mediocre; whose technical knowledge is nil, and whose prejudices do not permit of fair judgment.

Binder Joins Association

He created quite a sensation by joining the Kansas Amusement Association in behalf of the Motion Picture Board of Trade.

Mr. Binder laid before the exhibitors a practical working plan by which the censorship evil of Kansas may be done away with. He showed how slides, petitions and literature can be used among the citizens and senators of the state.

He told the convention that if it were necessary that they have more financial support than they are able to secure in their own home state that they could call upon the Motion Picture Board of Trade and funds would be forthcoming.

Mr. Binder made a very warm place for himself in the hearts of every exhibitor and exchangeman.

It is the first time in the history of any motion picture organization in Kansas that a man of his importance and standing in the film world, has taken enough interest in the work to participate.

The Exhibitors' League of Kansas held an executive session Monday afternoon, at which time new officers were elected.

The new officers elected are: Chris Glamann, of Wellington, Kansas, president; Harry Rogers, Marion, Kansas, vice-president, and Frank Gerrity, of Winfield, Kansas, secretary and treasurer.

There was considerable talk of merging the Exhibitors' League and the Kansas Amusement Association, because it is felt that the two organizations are not needed and that all of the strength possible should be given the Amusement Association.

Nothing along these lines, however, was accomplished, because a great many of the exhibitors wanted to continue in the league for the sake of the national affiliations.

Mills of Mutual Speaks

The big event of the Tuesday session was a speech by E. C. Mills of the Mutual Film Corporation. The credit for the Kansas Amusement Association goes largely to Mr. Mills, for it is due to his efforts that it was organized.

Mr. Mills' speech was the longest of the convention, but, as he said, "There were so many things crowding to his tongue that he had to get them off of his chest."

In language that was more picturesque than beautiful, he told of the queer and curious workings of the Kansas Board of Censorship.

He told the exhibitors that at one time he looked upon the Censor Board at Topeka as simply a nuisance that must be put up with and looked upon as a harmless evil.

However, he stated, now he was bitter and was anxious to see a fight instituted against the board.

Resolutions suggested by Mr. Binder supporting President Wilson were passed.

Mr. Binder also put forth resolutions stating that this league stood absolutely and unalterably opposed to any form of censorship whatsoever. This was also passed unanimously.

The last meeting of the convention was given over to the election of committees and cleaning up of routine business.

Committees Elected

The committee on grievances consists of Fred Savage, Hutchinson, Kansas; J. J. Marshall, Manhattan, Kansas; H. M. Burman, of the Metro office in Kansas City; R. C. Cropper, manager of the Universal office in Kansas City, and L. M. Miller, of Wichita.

The legislative committee consists of Chris Glamann, of Wellington, Kansas, and P. H. Pierce, of the Wurlitzer Music Company, and R. O. Proctor, manager of the General Film Company, Kansas City.

The presidential and vice-presidential chairs of the association were vacant. W. H. Willey, of Mulberry, was elected president; L. M. Miller, of Wichita, was elected vice-president.

C. S. Edwards, Jr., manager of the Pathé Exchange, Kansas City, surprised the exhibitors by getting up at the last moment and stating that he was authorized and legally prepared to fight the censorship law on the statute books of Kansas, providing he could secure the co-operation of one or more film companies.

Exhibitors have been very anxious to see something of this kind occur, because recent decisions regarding the inspection of oil in Kansas has resulted in the Supreme Court declaring that all inspection which returns a large profit is a revenue rather than a police measure, and the censorship fees have returned a great profit to the state already.

The film companies having exhibits were: Universal, Mutual, V-L-S-E, Bluebird, Paramount, Pathé, World, Kliene-Edison, Wichita Film and Supply Company and Metro.

Exchanges Well Represented

The film exchanges were all fully represented at the convention. H. M. Berman, manager, and Mr. Skirbol, traveling representative, represented Metro. The Universal Film and Supply Company was represented by R. C. Cropper, manager of the Kansas City office, O. K. Mason, manager of the Wichita office, and Mr. Hensley, of the Oklahoma City office. C. A. Jones and T. D. Dewalt were also there in the interest of Universal.

The Bluebird Photo Plays, Inc., was represented by Arthur G. Hull, manager; William G. Parsons, representative; Jerome Abrams, and George A. Bowles, publicity manager.

The Mutual Film Corporation was represented by Mr. Kiltz, manager of the Kansas City office; E. C. Mills, assistant manager, and Jack Brainard, of the Wichita office.

The Paramount Picture Corporation was represented by Gerald Akers and Mr. Balsley.

The General Film Company was represented by Mr. Proctor, manager, and "Ted" Morris, representative. V-L-S-E was represented by E. R. Pearson, manager, and

The World Film Corporation had Richard Robertson, manager, and J. S. Stout, representative. Mr. Churchill attended to the interests of the Kleine-Edison corporation.

Pathé was represented by C. E. Edwards, Jr., manager; William Beckenstein, representative, and H. E. Jameyson, representative. Charles Hardin, manager, and William Wachter were here in the interests of the Fox Film Company. Mr. Edwards, representing the Monarch Feature Film Company, of Kansas City, was also here.

The Minusa Cine Products Company had Nat. I. Brown at the convention.

H. J. Blakley represented Motiograph. E. G. Olson, C. E. Olson, E. P. Abbet and H. G. Dickson represented the Wichita Film and Supply Company. C. S. STEPHENSON.

CROMELIN WARNS LEGISLATORS AGAINST MEASURE BANKRUPTING NEW YORK FILM COMPANIES

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Albany, N. Y., March 24.

Motion picture interests, both producer and exhibitor, opposed the Cristman-Wheeler bill before the joint education committees Thursday. The bill would establish a board of censors of three members to be appointed by the board of regents, and exact a minimum tax of five dollars for the examination of all films.

The sponsors for the bill maintained that censorship was proposed to protect the morals of the child, but opponents of the measure maintained that such censorship would fall short of its purpose.

Assemblyman Fred M. Ahern, of Brooklyn, who has a censorship bill now on the assembly calendar, which proposes a board of censors to be appointed by the governor, opposed the Cristman-Wheeler bill in form as unworkable, although he was in accord with the principle.

W. Stephen Bush pointed out the failure of the censorship in Pennsylvania and Ohio, and maintained that the display of obscene pictures could be prevented under the present law.

William M. Seabury, general counsel of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, believed that the question of the moral feature of a picture should be left to the community.

"You can't improve Broadway any by regulating for the rural districts up-state," said Seabury.

Paul A. Cromelin, of the Cosmofoto Film Company, condemned the bill as unworkable, and maintained that the bill would exact a toll of at least $720,000 a year from the motion picture producers in this state and would drive the industry into bankruptcy.

Lee A. Ochs, president of the New York State Branch of the National Motion Picture Exhibitors, saw no necessity for censorship, believing that the exhibitor himself would be forced to display only clean pictures in order to satisfy the majority of his patrons.

Opposition to the measure was also voiced by James P. Holland, president of the State Federation of Labor, on behalf of the stage employees and the motion picture operators, and Charles S. Shay, international representative of the Stage Employees of the United States and Canada.

H. C. Barber, representing the Society for the Prevention of Crime, favored the bill, but was for it only because of the lack of federal censorship of some kind, preferring the latter, he said.

"The trouble is that the motion picture industry is opposed to any form of censorship," said Barber. "The producer will sacrifice his personal standards for box office receipts.

"If an immoral picture will result in crowded houses the producer will manufacture this sort of picture."

He was for prepublicity regulation, no matter what the form, but insisted that the fee for examination should be reduced.

Senator Franklin W. Cristman, of Herkimer, urged favorable action on the bill. He said it was an improvement over the Ahern bill and was designed to purify the motion picture industry the State over.

He said the plea that the exhibitors would see to it that no indecent films would be shown was unworthy, inasmuch as the exhibitors, after signing a contract, must accept the reels sent to them, whether they be indecent or of the highest type.

HORSLEY PAYS UNUSUAL TRIBUTE TO BEECROFT

An unusual advertisement in this issue calls attention to the resignation of Chester Beecroft as general manager of David Horsley Productions. The advertisement is signed by Mr. Horsley, and is a remarkable and sincere tribute from one man to another.

Chester Beecroft's career in the industry goes back to the Motion Picture Patents

CHESTER BEECROFT

Company, and has been rounded out by executive experience in every important branch of the producing and distributing fields.

Although best known as an exceedingly skillful advertising man and a press representative of unusual insight and resourcefulness, he has also a practical knowledge of the mechanics of the industry and the essentials of successful production.

Mr. Beecroft has as yet made no announcement of his future plans.

Hearst Plans New Chain of Film Exchanges

Publisher Launches Plan of Wide Scope for Developing His Motion Picture Enterprise—Edward A. MacManus, General Manager of International Film Service, Says That Ground Work of Scheme Is to Create Trinity of Dailies, Magazines and Pictures.

THAT William Randolph Hearst is about to establish a new chain of film exchanges has caused a sensation among the film men. Mr. Hearst's entrance into the exchange business has often been rumored, but repeatedly denied. The announcement made by Edward A. MacManus, general manager of the International Film Service, sets all rumors at rest by setting forth a complete and comprehensive plan of organization now in the process of perfecting.

The announcement states that the opening of the chain of exchanges throughout the country is but the first step in a series of important developments in Hearst's moving picture enterprise.

"The ground work of Mr. Hearst's idea," said Mr. MacManus, "is to create a trinity of his daily newspapers, magazines and motion pictures. In the newspaper field Mr. Hearst is to-day recognized as the most powerful influence for good on public opinion. In the magazine field his policies are producing media of unheard of power.

"With the motion picture as the third and increasingly more popular means of entertainment, we shall have such an engine for informing, educating and entertaining the popular mind as has never been attempted in this or any other country."

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

Mr. MacManus points out that Mr. Hearst early recognized the potential possibilities of the motion picture as a popular form of entertainment and education. But he has felt that the time was not ripe till now for bringing about the alliance between his newspapers, his magazines and motion pictures.

When the International Film Service originated the "Perils of Pauline," "The Exploits of Elaine" and "The Goddess," Mr. Hearst had two ideas in mind.

One was to bring into being pictures which for entertainment was to top anything that preceded these serials.

The other was to create an organization which by actual handling of big things would have a thorough mastering of the film field.

Main Work Series and Serials

It is, therefore, not surprising that, according to Mr. MacManus, the main work of the organization for the present at least will be series and serials.

Indication of the close union that will be maintained between the publications and the films is the distribution of the exchanges. "At the start," said Mr. MacManus, "we will begin with ten to fifteen exchanges, located in and about the cities where the Hearst newspapers are the strongest.

"Naturally, these are the big cities of the country, and we feel that if we serve the places of big population that we are going to find a tremendous market. Later, when it is demanded by other parts, we will extend the service. We are not going to try to immediately cover the earth, we are not going to shoot haphazardly, but rather our efforts will be along intensive lines.

"These cities, the entire list of which I will be able to supply in the course of the next two or three days, are going to have as careful attention as hitherto, I might say, without attempt at disparagement, has been given the entire country."

Speaking of the recently effected alliance between Hearst and Vitagraph, Mr. MacManus stated:

"Of course, we shall continue the News-Pictorial, and hope to continue to improve this news-reel to the standard of our ideal pictorial. We shall offer comedies and animated cartoons.

"At this point I might say that we are of the opinion that the animated cartoon is capable of as many variations as any other kind of pictures, and we are going to have the pick of the Hearst artists—cartoonists and illustrators.

"We will make dramas of a different sort, and we are going to make an attempt not to get into the rut of doing over old ideas. I think you will agree with me that the Hearst newspaper and magazine are a veritable treasury, when you consider the authors and editors we possess.

"I feel that the mere statement that these brilliant men and women representing every field of thought, are at the disposal of the International Film Service, is one of the most remarkable statements ever made in filmdom."

Other Activities Affected

Among the other activities that are affected by this new enterprise, according to Mr. MacManus, are:

The American Sunday Magazine, New York Evening Journal, New York American, New York Sunday American, Chicago Examiner, Chicago American, Los Angeles Examiner, San Francisco Examiner, Boston American, Boston Sunday American, Atlanta Georgian, Atlanta Sunday American, Cosmopolitan Magazine, Hearst's Magazine, Good Housekeeping Magazine, Motor, Harper's Bazaar and the International News Service.

E. A. M'MANUS

These publications dominate the news gathering for a thousand other of America's leading periodicals.

Reading between the lines, it is easy to see that the Hearst pictures will probably have an open road to publicity in all the Hearst organs, and, according to one man who is closely allied with Mr. MacManus, the next few months are going to bring forth big space day after day.

"SIS HOPKINS" FILMS TO CONTINUE INDEFINITELY ON GENERAL

Affixing of signatures to a new contract last week between Rose Melville and the Kalem Company insures the indefinite continuance of Sis Hopkins on the General Film program in Kalem releases.

While the contract originally entered into had many more weeks to run, the success scored by the "Sis Hopkins" subjects caused a long-term document to be entered into, which practically makes it certain that Rose Melville's "Sis Hopkins" will continue under the Kalem banner during the time she appears before the motion picture camera.

The innovation of presenting a star so well known as Rose Melville in one-reel productions on the regular program has met with an enthusiastic welcome from exhibitors.

Los Angeles, March 24.

The Mutual-Chaplin Comedy Company has become a reality. Production was started last week on the first subject at the studio at 1025 Lillian Way, Hollywood.

Mr. Chaplin arrived in Los Angeles last week, having been preceded by H. P. Caulfield, former business manager at Universal City, who is to serve as production manager.

It has a thoroughly equipped laboratory, business offices, projecting room, and comfortable dressing quarters.

The stage, which was 65x100 feet, is being increased to one hundred and fifty feet in length. There is considerable additional space, which later may be used for stages if found necessary.

Edna Purviance, who played leads opposite Mr. Chaplin in all Essanay productions, will again appear with Chaplin.

Other players selected for a permanent berth are Eric Campbell, Charlotte Mineau, Leo White and Lloyd Bacon.

"Iron Claw" Producer Changes Name of Company

Will Be Known as Edward Jose Feature Film Corporation, Decision of Pathé Board of Directors, Who Take Step from Realization of Director's Value to Concern

EDWARD JOSE, who is producing Pathé's serial, "The Iron Claw," has had about as varied and extensive stage experience as any person in the business. He was born in Brussels, his father being musical director of the Opera there, and art and music were his inheritance from all his immediate ancestors.

The young Jose, in keeping with the family traditions, was sent to the Conservatory at Paris. When only seventeen years' old he took the first prize as pianist, a reward of merit much sought for among the students.

On graduation Mr. Jose made a concert tour of Europe under the management of Charles Baret, the impresario.

Music, despite his success, however, did not appeal to the young man as did histrionic art, and he showed his courage by leaving a career promising much success to take a position as super with Sarah Bernhardt.

His talent as an actor being plainly evident, he was advanced to more important roles, and he remained with the "divine Sarah" for several years.

Dissatisfied with his salary, Mr. Jose then went into the managing end of the business and took his own companies all over Europe and to Africa and South America as well. After fifteen years of this he went back to acting and played leads in some of the most important productions in France, England and the United States.

As a motion picture actor Mr. Jose became very well known through his work in such pictures as Pathé "The Stain," "The Corsair," "The Leech of Industry" and "The Taint," and through his work as co-star with Betty Nansen in the Fox pictures, "The Celebrated Scandal" and "Anna Karenina."

EDWARD JOSE

Mr. Jose then became a director for the Fox company and made "The Resurrection." He also starred in "A Fool There Was," and showed his ability as a scenario writer by writing the script of "The Resurrection" from Tolstoi's work, and also the adaptation of Zangwill's "The Children of the Ghetto."

Returning to the Pathé company as a producer, he made the Gold Rooster features, "The Beloved Vagabond," "Simon, the Jester," "The Closing Net" and "Nedra."

He then formed the Feature Film Corporation of which he is director-in-chief. The value of his name is recognized by the board of directors of that corporation to the extent that steps are now being taken to change the name of the company to the Edward Jose Feature Film Corporation.

Mr. Jose has taken out citizenship papers and will live in the United States for the rest of his life. At present he is making New York his home.

April Set for Metro Advertising Campaign

In First Week of Month Company Will Begin to "Spread Copy" Simultaneously in Newspapers of Five Hundred Cities, Continuing a Year and Costing $250,000

THE nation-wide advertising campaign in daily newspapers, which was announced by the Metro Pictures Corporation after its annual meeting a few weeks ago, will begin in the first week in April, and contracts have been signed with the Lee-Jones agency, of Chicago, for the placing of the entire business.

It will begin simultaneously in five hundred cities and will continue for a year. The appropriation approximates $250,000 for newspaper space alone.

The contracts signed by President Richard A. Rowland on behalf of Metro, and by O. J. Gunnell, on behalf of the Lee-Jones company, provide that the agency will work under the direction of Metro's publicity department and in conjunction with the Metro exchanges throughout the United States.

The advertising will continue regularly, and large amounts of space have been contracted for in a chain of newspapers reaching from coast to coast.

The newspaper advertising forms part of a general publicity program submitted by Arthur James, Metro's advertising and publicity director, at the annual meeting, and approved in full at that time.

It subsequently was worked out in detail by the department and Mr. Gunnell of the Lee-Jones agency. Copy designs new to the motion picture field include a unique use of the column wide measure. New copy will be used each week with alternating three columns and one column space for the ads.

The designs are marked by simplicity, and a small amount of reading matter plainly typed, and illustrations that add to their power to attract attention.

Three Year Contract Offered Mary Pickford?

Hampton, Representing Group of Capitalists, Said to Have Made Offer—Zukor Declares Actress Is Under Contract with Famous Players

A NEW YORK theatrical daily, under date of March 27, gives the semblance of fact to a rumor current the week previous to the effect that Ben. B. Hampton, vice-president of the American Tobacco Company, and believed to represent a group of capitalists, had made a three years' contract with Mary Pickford, the contract being dated March 18.

Mr. Hampton, when asked for a statement, referred all inquiries to Mary Pickford. He neither denied nor affirmed the rumor of a contract.

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players, declares that Miss Pickford is under contract to his company and is not in a position to accept any offers from any other concern.

When the rumor was first printed, Mr. Zukor issued the following statement in which he emphatically declared that Miss Pickford is under contract to the Famous Players and denying the rumor that she had not renewed her contract.

"That is a decided error of fact," said Mr. Zukor. "In January, 1915, a company was formed, known as the Famous Players-Mary Pickford Company, Inc., for the purpose of producing and distributing subjects starring Miss Pickford.

"I am the president and Miss Pickford the vice-president. That company made a contract with Miss Pickford for the year of 1915, which was renewed for the year 1916 at double her guaranteed income of the previous year, and she is now working at our studio under that contract."

When the report was repeated in print on Monday morning Mr. Zukor reiterated his previous statement, saying that there was no cause for amending any portion of it.

Metro, One Year Old, Makes Plans of Wide Scope

Celebration of Anniversary Includes Launching of Countrywide Newspaper Advertising Campaign Embracing Smaller Cities First and Larger Cities Later—Bushman Series of Fourteen Episodes Soon Under Way and Travelogues Are Nearly Ready for Release—Plan Includes Rotating Star System

THIS is big week with Metro, as the first anniversary of the organization is being celebrated at the offices of the Metro Pictures Corporation throughout the United States, in Europe and Australia.

The celebration is made notable by a formal announcement of new activities and the setting forth by President Richard A. Rowland of a broad and elastic policy for the New Metro year beginning with the final week in March.

The plans include rotating star system which has certain elements new to the feature picture business. Metro's first year has been one of remarkable growth from a modest but enthusiastic beginning to a high place among the best elements of the picture business.

Metro's first release was "Satan Sanderson," sent forth to the exhibitors on March 29, 1915, following an organization of its manufacturing and selling forces to meet a demand for feature pictures of a high grade that were box office attractions. In a few months Metro was in its full stride.

Rowland States Success Reasons

President Rowland in his announcement on behalf of his associates has this to say:

"Metro started one year ago with everything brand new. We had to organize our manufacturers, our exchanges and our central body all at one time.

"We built what we have practically on a general working plan formulated at that time by our group of enthusiastic showmen.

"I lay special stress upon the fact that they are showmen, and because of this fact they were able to anticipate the public's demand for big feature productions.

"The exchange men knew the wants and the needs of the exhibitors and they have kept in close touch with the central body and the manufacturers. This brought together a winning combination, and as a result Metro made good from the start.

"Metro's growth has been healthy, along sound and safe lines. As a result Metro at the end of a year occupies an enviable place in the industry and its pictures are being exhibited throughout the world.

"The credit rests with no one individual, but is the result of the combined efforts of our enthusiastic family of showmen. We have had harmony within and have not had to spend our time and energy in battling with one another.

"In respect to our future we can promise as many surprises for the next year as during the year just closing, and we can definitely set down these few facts for consideration by those who may be interested:

"Metro will make more feature pictures than before, but it will not arrange to release two features weekly for the sole purpose of being big or of endeavoring to impress anybody.

"We will have a real business reason for presenting our pictures, and will continue to keep our organization so elastic that it will release the type of pictures that the exhibitors require to make their theatres profitable.

Reel Length to Meet Exhibitor Needs

"Metro will put out one-reel, two-reel and five-reel productions in keeping with the requirements of its exhibitors. We have adopted a rotating star system which assures pictures with stars of box office drawing power so that exhibitors will not only have good pictures but pictures with selling power to the public.

"In order to round out and complete this plan, Harold Lockwood, May Allison and Viola Dana have just been added to our list of stars.

"Our regular star list now includes Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne, Mme. Petrova, Ethel Barrymore, Emily Stevens, Mabel Taliaferro, Lionel Barrymore and Marguerite Snow, Hamilton Revelle, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew and Mary Miles Minter. These do not include the stars in the special pictures.

"There will be more pictures with these stars and several others yet to be announced, in order that the public may see their favorites with a proper frequency in productions worthy of their importance in the world of pictures.

"The air today is full of rumors of great combinations and it may not be amiss to set forth Metro's position. We have no interest in any of these rumored combinations.

"We are in a position to go in or stay out as we please. We are in the business not only because we find it profitable but because we like it, and although others may have a desire to sell out Metro sees no reason, and has no desire, for such a course.

Appreciates Friends' Co-operation

"I can scarcely close without a word of hearty thanks to our many friends for their kindly co-operation and we hope to merit a continuation of their confidence."

RICHARD A. ROWLAND

Metro celebrates the reaching of its first milestone by the launching of a countrywide newspaper advertising campaign, which will embrace the smaller cities first and include the larger cities at a later date.

A "family dinner" at the Hotel Astor, a Metro Birthday celebration at the New York theatre and other events will mark the beginning of the new year's work on the big Bushman series of fourteen episodes. Production will begin after the completion of Mr. Bushman's new feature picture. The new Metro Travelogue pictures are now nearly ready for their first showing.

ROLIN WILL HAVE ITS OWN STUDIO

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, March 24.

The Rolin Film Company, which heretofore has been producing at commercial studios, is shortly to have an exclusive studio at 5821 Santa Monica Boulevard.

This will be built in connection with the plant of the Pacific laboratories. The stage will be approximately 40 by 75 feet, and later is to be enclosed, making it possible to continue production during all kinds of weather. The erection of the plant is under the supervision of Business Manager Dwight Whiting, and it will be ready for production when Director Hal Roach returns from New York.

LITTLE LENA BASKETTE, "U," DANCES FOR LOS ANGELES SOCIETY

Little Lena Baskette, the Universal Company's child dancer, made such a distinct impression upon Will Wyatt, manager of the Mason Opera House in Los Angeles, when she danced for the benefit of the Actors' Fund, that Wyatt invited her to occupy a box with himself and wife to hear the Boston Grand Opera and see the Pavlowa ballet.

A few nights later the child danced before the fashionable set at the Beverly Hills Hotel.

Merger Rumors Are Without Foundation—Kessel

His Company Is Going Right Ahead Producing as Always Regardless of Combine Talk—Quality Will Be Maintained in All Pictures

ADAM KESSEL, JR., who has just returned from Los Angeles, says that the various rumors of mergers are, so far as he knows, rumors and nothing else.

"We are going right ahead producing pictures, just as we have always done. That is our business. We are producers, and we are still aiming, as we always have, to give the public what they want.

"As a producer, I can see the advantages of a merger. Great economies could be effected in studio work, and in these days of high cost it is very essential that studio expense be kept down to the lowest possible figure.

"Yes, I believe in mergers. It's either

ADAM KESSEL, JR., E. H. ALLEN, ARTHUR GRAHAM, AND CHARLES O. BAUMANN AT INCE'S CULVER CITY STUDIO

that or a survival of the fittest, and the latter means a ruthless struggle and great losses somewhere. It ought, by all means, to be avoided.

"But I know nothing definite. I read of rumors in the newspapers and hear more. According to these reports, nearly every prominent company has been approached by capital.

"I feel a little sore," said Mr. Kessel, laughing, "that we've been overlooked."

Mr. Kessel reports amazing growth at the new Culver City and Hollywood studios of the New York Motion Picture Corporation. Entering the Culver City studios to-day, he says, is like entering a world's fair. Studio activities and ideals of a year ago are nothing to what they are to-day. No pains or expense is spared now to attain artistic production and comedy pictures with the "punch" in them.

"We are thirty-five negatives ahead of production," said Mr. Kessel. "We could shut down for three months and still catch our release dates. This and only this policy enables us to keep quality up. If one picture falls down we can shelve it without disturbing our releases. Quality must keep well ahead of distribution. It is bound to suffer if it is trying always to keep up to distribution."

Two World Directors Run Race in Production

Five-Reel Subjects Completed by John Ince and Maurice Tourneur in 7 Weeks and 5 Days, Actual Working Time—"Struggle" and "Hand of Peril" Release Day March 27

TWO directors producing for the World-Equitable recently entered into an involuntary competition, which ended in a dead heat.

Maurice Tourneur, of the Paragon forces, and John Ince, of Equitable, were handed scenarios on the same day.

Tourneur was given the completed scenario of Arthur Stringer's "The Hand of Peril," and Ince was given Harry Chandlee's story, "The Struggle."

This was on January 23. The two subjects were announced for release March 27, which allowed about nine weeks for the completion of the pictures.

The completed negatives of each were received at the World-Equitable offices on March 19, "The Hand of Peril" being just forty-five minutes behind "The Struggle."

The difference in time was caused by the greater distance of the Paragon studio from the parent office.

Ince took his company to Brazil, where the Leper Colony, which is situated on an island in the Amazon, was utilized for scenes. Tourneur worked in South Brooklyn.

His script called for the construction of a complete nine-room house with the front removed, so that the action could be shown in the nine rooms simultaneously.

In addition he had to provide a number of special mechanical devices, and had to reconstruct an abandoned pier.

For the Ince picture was needed four rooms, a salon, a companionway, smoking and dining-room of an ocean liner, which had to be constructed in the cabinet-making quarters of the Flushing studio, transported by water to Manaos, built in dry dock there and a great number of scenes taken within the four rooms as it was lowered into the water, representing the interior of a steamer while sinking.

A week was lost at Manaos securing permission from the red tape federal government of the Latin republic before consent was given to photograph the interior of the leper hospital.

Tourneur lost nearly a week sending representatives to Washington to secure permission to photograph several counterfeit plates which he had procured the loan of from his friend, W. J. Burns; and thus, while Ince worked in tropical America, Tourneur labored incessantly in South Brooklyn.

A typical West Indies typhoon kept Ince and his company indoors on the island of Sabor Rock, and the storm of February 21 necessitated Tourneur's company remaining idle three days.

Thus it will be seen that the two directors lost practically the same number of working days.

The two five-reel subjects were completed in seven weeks and five days actual working time and ten days of lost time credited to both directors through no fault of theirs.

The negatives were shipped from the studios at practically the same time and each picture, curiously enough, contains 307 individual scenes.

"The Struggle" has one more title than "The Hand of Peril," while "The Hand of Peril" offsets this by having one more character introduced at the beginning.

The two pictures were released on the same date—March 27—and the prints were shipped to the World Film branches in the same packing crates.

LOUISE GLAUM IN A STRIKING COSTUME SHE WILL WEAR IN A COMING INCE-TRIANGLE PHOTOPLAY

TWO FORMER SELIG DIRECTORS IN "CRISIS"

The cast for "The Crisis," the Selig production, contains two former Selig directors and two former Selig assistant directors.

They are Thomas Santschi and Marshall Neilan, with Cecil Holland and Leo Pierson as assistants.

Variety of Theme Is Keynote in April Big Fours

"Salvation Joan," with Edna May, the Star of "The Belle of New York," Is Vitagraph Subject—"Fires of St. John" Suits Talents of Nance O'Neil, Lubin Tragedienne; Selig's "Cycle of Fate" Features Marshal Neilan for Third of the Month; Dorothy Kelly Will Be Seen in "The Law Decides"

MANY features are scheduled in the list of V-L-S-E releases for the coming month.

Of particular interest to exhibitors and indeed all concerned in the world of motion pictures is the vehicle chosen by Edna May, "The Belle of New York," for her farewell appearance before the public.

Miss May, who forsook her stage triumph ten years ago to become the wife of Oscar Lewisohn, the millionaire copper man, has steadfastly refused the most tempting offers to return to the footlights for a single good-bye appearance.

"Salvation Joan," the seven-reel picture selected for Miss May's debut in films, will bring back memories to theatre patrons of "The Belle of New York," in which Miss May, as the winsome Salvation Army lassie, won international fame.

It is as a member of the blue-red and poke-bonneted brigade that she has chosen to pose for the camera.

Incidentally it may be mentioned that personally Miss May will derive no financial benefit from her momentary return to public life.

Already rich in this world's goods, she has distinguished herself in the exercise of philanthropy by making large donations to the Red Cross Fund in aid of war sufferers, and the entire sum obtained by her camera work will be devoted to the same purpose.

Story of the Play

Tiring of her aimless existence in high social circles, Joan Ellison takes up rescue work in the slums as a member of the "Army" and becomes known as Salvation Joan.

During a fight started by rowdies at a meeting Joan is saved from injury by the interposition of "Bill," a dweller in gangdom.

Bill is converted and a mutual affection springs up between him and Joan, who has previously broken an engagement with Phillip Ralston, a man in her own circle of life.

Later it transpires that Ralston is an associate of spies who are endeavoring to create a situation calculated to force the country into war with a foreign power.

Ralston has also obtained a hold over Joan's sister Madeline, wife of the British ambassador, and uses his knowledge to blackmail her.

A dramatic climax occurs when Bill turns out to be a secret service man, and places Ralston under arrest, the play ending with a complete understanding established between Joan and her faithful lover. The picture is scheduled for release by the V-L-S-E April 10.

The preceding week Vitagraph will present "The Vital Question," directed by S. Rankin Drew. Virginia Pearson, Charles Kent and Anders Randolf supply the leading roles in this picture.

The feature propounds for solution the problem of a woman's right to realize her dreams and visions, to live as she deems it best, and the bestowal of love according to the dictates of her heart.

Nance O'Neil Release from Lubin

Nance O'Neil, as Marika in "The Fires of St. John," released April 10 by Lubin, is cast for a part particularly well suited to the talents of this famous actress.

The scene of the play is laid in Pennsylvania, some twenty-five years ago, and introduces Vogel, a prosperous farmer, to whose keeping is entrusted George, the only son, then a four-year-old child, of his dead brother.

Vogel adopts Marika, the baby daughter of a gypsy woman, the latter agreeing to give up all claim to her child. Three years later a daughter is born to Vogel.

In later years Marika and George fall in love. Vogel and his wife arrange a marriage between George and their daughter Gertrude.

Marika, actuated by gratitude for what the Vogels have done for her in the past, assumes a cold manner to her lover, who thereupon marries Gertrude.

Marika's gypsy mother, now a drunken old hag, re-enters her daughter's life, causing her infinite trouble.

The death of the gypsy and Marika's response to the affection of Pastor Hoffner, the faithful friend who has always loved her, brings the drama to a happy conclusion.

Nance O'Neil is always at home in a part calling for strong contrasts of grief and joy, and in "The Fires of St. John" she may be said to cover the entire scale of human emotions. The support furnished her is adequate in every respect.

Realistic Drama from Selig

A drama of realism is presented by the Selig Company in another April 3 release.

It is entitled "The Cycle of Fate," and features Bessie Eyton, with Edith Johnson and Wheeler Oakman as co-stars.

This five-part drama consists of two episodes, in which different casts of character figure, each cast, however, playing an active part in the development of the tale.

Marshal Neilan, who wrote and directed the scenario, also plays an important role in the feature.

On April 24 the Vitagraph presents Dorothy Kelly in "The Law Decides," with a carefully selected cast which includes Harry Morey, Leah Baird and Bobby Connelly.

English House Gets Rights to Five Raver Films

Anderson Buys for Kino Publicity, Ltd., Renting Privilege of "The Other Girl," "The Fortunate Youth," "Life Without Soul," "Frankenstein" and "Driftwood"

PERHAPS one of the largest purchases made by any English film company since the start of the present European war was consummated last week by J. W. Anderson, of Kino Publicity, Ltd., of London, with Harry R. Raver, president of the Raver Film Corporation.

The deal involved the world rights, with the exception of the United States and Canada, of the Raver production, "The Other Girl," from the Augustus Thomas play, starring James J. Corbett and Paul Gilmore and the Ocean pictures, "The Fortunate Youth," adapted from William J. Locke's well-known book and featuring Wilmuth Merkyl; "Life Without Soul," taken from "Frankenstein," by Mrs. Mary W. Shelley; and "Driftwood," adapted from the stage success of Owen Davis for Vera Michelena.

Mr. Anderson recently visited the States with the purpose of buying the best on the American market and returned to England with the contract for his company on these four productions.

With the marketing conditions as they presently exist in the belligerent countries this is considered a rather large contract to enter into. However, Mr. Anderson is of the opinion that he has secured productions that will retain their value for years to come.

Kino Publicity, Ltd., is recognized as one of the foremost powers in the motion picture industry in Europe. Its aim has always been toward the better class of productions.

At the recent trade showing of several of these subjects they were received with considerable enthusiasm.

It is Mr. Anderson's intention to launch these pictures in the very best London theatres for their initial showing, and it is his anticipation that they will be accorded the appreciation and attain the success that subjects of their merit deserve.

CHARLES FRANZ JOINS E. AND R. JUNGLE TO DIRECT COMEDIES

Charles Franz, well known in the motion picture business as a comedy director, has replaced Louis Chaudet, former director of the E. and R. Jungle comedies.

Mr. Franz has been producing comedies for the last six years. He was three years with the Edison company in the east and then joined the Selig company, where he remained for two years producing many comedies.

Most recently Mr. Franz has been employed by the Keystone company where, it may safely be said, his comedy education was completed. He goes to the E. and R. Jungle Film Company with a keen insight into the art of comedy directing.

Mr. Franz has already taken up his duties at the E. and R. studio in Los Angeles, and is at present engaged in directing a one-reel comedy with Lillian Brown Leighton and Ralph McComas holding down the human side of the cast, opposite Napoleon and Sally, the chimpanzees.

FLASHES FROM THREE VOGUE COMEDIES: "BUNGLING BILL, DETECTIVE," "A STILL HUNT," AND "THE LION HEARTED CHIEF"

MISS YOUNG WILL WORK ON TWO PICTURES AT A TIME

When the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation begins the production of its features on July 15 with Miss Young as the star, what is said to be an innovation in picture making will be introduced. Miss Young has worked out a plan by which she can produce two features simultaneously.

Two directors will be selected, and their work so scheduled that, while one is having sets built on the studio floor for some of his interior scenes, Miss Young will be out on location working with the other director in another picture.

Lewis J. Selznick, president and general manager of the new corporation, in discussing the plan, pointed out that it will thus be possible to finish twelve five-reel features in a year.

BROMHEAD MAKES TRIP HERE WITH LEON GAUMONT

Reginald C. Bromhead, who is associated with the English branch of the Gaumont company in an accounting capacity, has accompanied Leon Gaumont on his present visit to America.

Mr. Bromhead speaks French fluently and in addition to being of service in a business way is acting as Mr. Gaumont's interpreter. Mr. Bromhead is himself a member of the firm of Bromhead Brothers and Company, London.

Reel Fellows Club in Chicago Elects Officers

R. R. Nehls Is President; Frank J. Flaherty, Vice-President; W. J. Sweeney, Treasurer; M. G. Watkins, Secretary, and F. H. Owens, Assistant Secretary

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chicago, March 24.

THE annual election of officers was held at the March meeting of the Reel Fellows Club. The following members were unanimously elected to hold office during the ensuing year:

R. R. Nehls, president; Frank J. Flaherty, vice-president; Richard C. Travers, second vice-president; William J. Sweeney, treasurer; M. G. Watkins, secretary, and Freeman H. Owens, assistant secretary.

Watterson R. Rothacker, L. A. Boening. Fred W. Wild, Jr., George Berg and H. C Miller will constitute the board of governors.

After this business was disposed of, entertainment was supplied by H. C. Miller in the form of a wrestling match and a boxing bout, both of which aroused great interest.

Several exhibitors from southern Illinois, who were attending the state convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Illinois, were guests of William J. Sweeney.

Among these were G. M. Luttrell, of Jacksonville, Ill., president of the league; C. J. Law, of Pana, Ill., chairman of the executive committee; W. W. Watts, of Springfield, Ill., treasurer of the state league; Mr. Snyder, of Petersburg, Ill., and E. Kunz, of Springfield, Ill.

These guests were called upon for short speeches in which they lauded the hospitality extended them by the Club, and President Luttrell's application for membership to the Reel Fellows Club was enthusiastically passed upon.

More "Better Babies" Releases from Paramount

One Presents a Child with a 100 Per Cent Perfection Record and the Other a List of "Don'ts" for Mothers—Another Gilbert-Bray Silhouette, March 23

THE campaign for "Better Babies" which is being waged in Paramount Pictographs with the co-operation of women's clubs, the national government, and state and city officials is continued in two coming releases, one of which presents a child with a 100 per cent. perfection record, and the other a list of Don'ts for Mothers.

The child with the 100 per cent. perfection record is Eileen Geraghty, of New York, perfect in all her features. She pulled down a perfect score in a physical contest.

She weighs and measures exactly 100 points in the standard set for a child of three years, the method of doing which is picturized in the Pictographs.

In visualizing the method of properly measuring the baby there are shown the doctor, the nurse, and the baby, together with a close-up view of the score card on which are contained the basic measurements for a perfect three-year-old child.

In the "Don'ts for Mothers" baby is utilized, and the child is made to give her mother pointers, such as: "Don't keep me in long clothes, I want to exercise my legs," and "toys hung before my face do not amuse me, but cause me to be cross-eyed."

The Paramount Pictures Corporation also announces the appearance on March 23 of another Gilbert-Bray Silhouette Fantasy, the story of which is called "Inbad the Sailor Gets Into Deep Water." The chief portion of the fantasy is confined to the story that Inbad imparts as to how it happened that he was swallowed by a big fish.

Ivan Productions Company Takes More Space

Corporation Is on Second Floor, Especially Altered for Its Needs, of Leavitt Building, 126-30 West Forty-Sixth Street, New York City

TO better accommodate the increasing demands of its business, The Ivan Film Productions, Inc., has removed its offices to new quarters, especially constructed and designed for its needs to the second floor of the Leavitt Building, 126 to 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York City.

Several innovations have been installed. A large office has been set aside for the use of visiting exchangemen. The Ivan film distributors throughout the country when in New York will have for transacting such business as they may have, the use of a private office, stenographer, telephone and all other up-to-date and thoroughly modern office facilities.

Every effort will be made by the management of the company to be helpful and to facilitate the business of the Ivan film distributors.

The projection room may in truth be termed a private theatre, so ample in size is it and so well equipped.

The machines, furnishings and decorations are all of the most practical sort.

Visiting exchangemen are cordially invited to make use of this projection room at any time they may be in the city.

Montreal Papers Get Illuminating Facts from Fox

Company Points Out Through Brenon Neglect by Press of Film News and Advertising—Although There Are Sixty-four Theatres in City Only Four Are "Legitimate" Houses—While These Four Yield Less Revenue Than Picture Places They Get as Much Reading Matter—Reform Probably Inaugurated Soon

Special to Motion Picture News

Montreal, March 27.

A LONG step forward in the movement for co-operation between newspapers and film exchanges in Canada was taken at a meeting held in this city at the offices of the Fox Film Corporation, Ltd., 322 St. Catherine street, West.

Heads of the advertising departments of the Montreal weeklies and dailies were present at the invitation of C. St. John Brenon, the Fox Montreal manager.

Eugene Tarte, proprietor of La Patrie, one of the two leading French papers in the Dominion, presided. Mr. Brenon called the attention of the newspaper men to the slack manner in which the motion picture industry was being exploited by the Montreal press, and showed sample pages of the leading dailies and weeklies of the United States which are making a big feature of motion picture news.

Upon statistics collected in the city from authoritative sources, Mr. Brenon pointed out that in Montreal alone the motion picture theatres owned $10,000,000 worth of property; that of the sixty-four theatres, the largest number secured for advertising by any paper for its Saturday issue was only nine or ten.

He argued that of the sixty-four theatres but four were devoted to the legitimate drama. These catered throughout the week to a maximum of 50,000 people, while the picture houses drew 270,000 in the same time.

Brenon Submits Data

He then submitted theatrical and motion picture pages of the various papers, pointing out that the advertising rates for the two modes of amusement were to a great extent equal.

Yet the four legitimate theatres, which yielded less revenue to the newspapers than the motion picture houses, received an amount of reading matter of various kinds equal to that given to the sixty-four picture theatres.

He charged the newspapers with throwing away thousands of dollars of advertising which could be secured from motion picture houses if an effort were made to get up attractive pages in the papers as an inducement for the exhibitors to advertise.

Mr. Tarte at the conclusion of Mr. Brenon's address stated that he was astounded at the figures that had been submitted and would not question the veracity of Mr. Brenon's statement which he realized for the first time in his life.

He stated that the Fox Film Corporation was the first film manufacturer that had ever taken the trouble of pointing out to the papers the situation and that he felt sure after the speaker's remarks had been considered, that there was no question that every effort would be made by the press of the city to co-operate with the motion picture industry.

He pointed out that for the first time in eighteen years had the representative advertising men of all local papers been got together.

Mr. Brenon stated that Mr. Fox's office and his experts were always at his disposal to inaugurate a high class motion picture page in his or in any paper that cared to derive any benefit, a benefit Mr. Brenon thought would result in the bringing of thousands of dollars to that paper as well as increasing its circulation.

Advertising Men Agree with Brenon

Sam Dunn, of the Montreal Herald and F. J. Arrowsmith of the Standard, the pioneer advertising men in the city, both supported the Fox Film Corporation in its argument and stated that they would do all in their power and would appreciate any assistance given by Mr. Fox.

There is no question that the result will be far-reaching since the value of the motion picture industry to the press has most emphatically been brought forward.

Arrangement Committee Appointed for Convention

CRANE WILBUR IN DRAMA WRITTEN BY HIMSELF

Crane Wilbur, who has been starring in David Horsley productions for the past six months, will have as his next vehicle a psychological drama written by himself, entitled "The Conscience of John David."

It has been made in five parts and is scheduled for release as a Mutual Masterpicture on April 24.

The theme is that man's better self always rises to its proper sphere, no matter what his preceding state, through the influence of conscience.

In the supporting cast are Alice Rinaldo, Frederick Montague, John Oaker, Mae Gaston, Louis Durham and Francis Raymond.

MACKENZIE-PATHE COMPANY BACK FROM CUBA

Donald Mackenzie, producer of many Pathé pictures, is back from Cuba where he took a large company of players several weeks ago.

He has been filming a stirring picture for the Astra Company, which will be released through Pathé. Ralph Kellard, Grace Darmond and Leon Bary were in the party.

RENA ROGERS SIGNED BY VOGUE FILMS, INC.

The Vogue Films, Inc., announces having signed Rena Rogers, "The Little Blonde Lady," to play leads in Vogue comedies which are made under the direction of Jack Dillon.

Miss Rogers goes to Vogue with a large following of admirers and a considerable reputation as a laugh-maker, having played important parts in comedy productions with large companies producing on the Pacific coast.

Miss Rogers' first vehicle will be a one-reel story written especially for her, having plots centered around her blonde curls, and it will be entitled "The Little Blonde Lady," named for her.

MASS MEETING FOR PROTEST AGAINST CENSORSHIP SET FOR APRIL 2

Special to Motion Picture News

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 24.

Sunday, April 2, has been the date selected for the holding of the monster mass meeting of the members of the Pittsburgh Screen Club.

As so many persons signified their intention of being present at the meeting, the Pitt Theatre has been selected for the place and it is possible that it will be the largest gathering of the motion picture people in the state.

At this meeting the opening gun of the anti-censorship campaign will be fired.

Addresses will be made by J. W. Binder, secretary of the Motion Picture Board of Trade; William A. Johnston, president and editor of Motion Picture News; Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the Big Four, and a number of others prominent in the industry.

The patrons of motion picture theatres have been asked to come to the meeting, and from all accounts the large Pitt Theatre will not hold the crowds which have stated they would be present.

Falstaffs, Like Namesake, Shake with Jollity

Like Bard of Avon's Funmaker, of Merry Girth, They Are Rotund with Mirth and, Says Thanhouser, Will Make Dearth of Gloom on Earth

IT is now about a year since Edwin Thanhouser launched one of his new ideas in the form of the Falstaff brand of comedy. It was at that time announced that these single reelers would represent the direct line of legitimate comedy, in contrast to the more strenuous action of the comedies in vogue.

It was pointed out by Mr. Thanhouser that attention would be given first to the story, as that was the most conspicuous missing element of rapid-fire funny films.

To this end the genius of Lloyd Lonergan, author of the "Million Dollar Mystery," was put into play, also Phil Lonergan, his able younger brother. From the very first the big feature of the Falstaff brand was the oddity of the alliterative titles; and they quickly caught on. After a few releases the trade realized that Falstaffs were a different kind of comedy. Then Mr. Thanhouser signed up Riley Chamberlin to appear in Falstaffs exclusively, and soon after that Louise Emerald Bates, the blonde Ziegfeld beauty who is now known as "The Falstaff Girl."

Claude Cooper, funmaster, was made an acting director, and Walter Hiers, the fat comedian, was engaged to foil Chamberlin. Claude Cooper then reached out for a fun partner and finally landed Frand E. McNish, the famous old eccentric comedian.

While all of this was being done, the Falstaff output was doubled to two a week, and William A. Howell was added to the directing staff.

The original Falstaff director is Arthur Ellery, and his company remained in New Rochelle when it came time to go to Florida. Frances Keyes is his chief comedy character and her versatility will be exhibited in a forthcoming release entitled "Pansy Post, Protean Player."

Under the present release schedule the two Falstaffs a week have established their following, but it is expected that additions will be made to the staff.

"Whispering Smith" Will Speak Up in Ten Reels

Director McGowan Begins Preparations on Frank H. Spearman's Story for Making It Talk Railroad Motivation to Public for Signal Company

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 24.

THE Signal "Girl and the Game" Company will complete the fifteenth and last episode of the serial some time during the coming week.

One of the biggest thrills for the serial has been reserved for the final scenes. This is to consist of a passenger train crashing into an automobile.

The serial out of the way, Director J. P. McGowan will then devote all of his attention to the film adaptation from the Frank H. Spearman story, "Whispering Smith."

This, it is announced, will consist of ten reels, each to contain at least one big punch. Mr. McGowan will play the name role, that of Smith, and Helen Holmes will appear in the character of Dixie, the daughter of a neighboring rancher.

This change will not mean good-bye to railroad work for McGowan and Miss Holmes, inasmuch as a greater part of "Whispering Smith" deals with railroad work, woven into a Western story.

It is absolutely different from anything that these well-known photoplayers have appeared in previously.

J. L. Farley, who has been wearing a plaster paris cast on his arm in all scenes for the "Girl and the Game" Signal serial since the seventh episode because of a broken wrist bone, is now wholly recovered from his injury and has discarded the cast.

He will be retained for the "Whispering Smith" photoplay.

"Vital Question" Tops List of "V's" for April 3

Frank Daniels Will Be Seen in "Mr. Jack, a Doctor by Proxy"—"Freddy the Fixer," "Her Partner" and "Resurrection of Hollis" Follow

"THE VITAL QUESTION," a five-part drama by Joseph L. Norris, tops the list of Vitagraph releases by the Vitagraph Company for the week commencing Monday, April 3.

Included in this list are: "Mr. Jack, a Doctor by Proxy," a one-part Frank Daniels comedy; "Freddy the Fixer," a single-reel comedy; "Her Partner," one thousand feet of laughs, and the three-part Broadway Star Feature, "The Resurrection of Hollis."

Virginia Pearson, George Cooper, Anders Randolf, Leo Delaney, Denton Vane and Charles Kent are in the cast. S. Rankin Drew produced this Blue Ribbon Feature, which will be released on Monday, April 3.

The Coast division of the Vitagraph contributed "Her Partner" to the comedies of the week.

The story comes from the pen of William Addison Lathrop and features Mary Anderson, Webster Campbell, Otto Lederer and Jack Mower.

William Wolbert is director of the play. Monday, April 3, is the day of release for this picture. Friday, April 7, is the day on which "Freddy the Fixer" is to be released.

Frank Currier is responsible for its direction and selected William Dangman, Lucille Crane, Virginia M. Talford and George O'Donnell for his cast. "The Resurrection of Hollis" is a three-part Broadway Star Feature listed for Saturday, April 8.

ERNEST TRUEX, IN "ARTIE" FOR "V," PLAYS LEAD IN STAGE SUCCESS

Ernest Truex, who appears opposite Dorothy Kelly in the forthcoming Vitagraph feature comedy, "Artie, the Millionaire Kid," which will be released through V-L-S-E April 17, has had an interesting career, covering many years, on the musical comedy and straight comedy stage.

He played ten successive years in stock companies, got his first big opportunity with Ethel Barrymore in "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire," and then appeared in such successes as "Wildfire," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Doctor De Luxe" and "Over Night."

He was starred opposite Mary Pickford in the stage and film version of "The Good Little Devil." "Caprice" was another production in which the two stars appeared.

Mr. Truex then returned to the stage and is now playing the lead in "Very Good, Eddie!"

FITZGERALD IS OUT OF CLEVELAND PRODUCING COMPANY

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Cleveland, O., March 11.

Director James A. Fitzgerald has severed his connection with the Reserve Photo Play Company, 717 Superior avenue, Cleveland. This is the second director Cleveland's pioneer producing company has had during its short working period.

It is understood that Johnny Ray, chief comedian and guiding spirit of the concern, will probably direct his own pictures in the future.

Mr. Fitzgerald, who has been in the motion picture business for seven years, is trying to induce one of the best known and most talented of screen actresses to come to Cleveland to make big features and give her name to a new company.

Selznick Plans Chain of Exchanges for Young Films

Incorporates Company for Their Distribution as a Group Beginning July 15—His Concern Will Also Produce Pictures with Other Stars

THE organization this week of the Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Incorporated, dispels any lingering doubt as to the manner in which the features to be produced by the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation are to be distributed.

The Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Inc., is the result of its founder's recent trip to Cleveland, Ohio. It is the beginning of a chain of exchanges that will embrace every big city in the country and through which all pictures produced by Miss Young after July 15 will be handled.

By the time the first of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation pictures is ready for release in October, the Selznick exchanges will be in active operation.

In addition to the pictures of Miss Young, the Selznick Productions will include the annual output of a number of film stars.

Each of these will be distributed as a separate proposition. The exhibitor will be able to book the C. K. Y. features by themserves or the pictures of any of the other stars they may choose.

This is a direct departure from the customary contract system of booking and in explaining it Mr. Selznick had this to say:

"I have been accused of being the founder of the present contract system. I don't claim this honor, but I plead guilty to having developed the system to its present form.

"And now I frankly admit that I see where the contract system is all wrong, that it works against the interest of the exhibitor, and I am determined to adopt revolutionary methods of reform in conducting the Selznick's Productions.

"As the contract system works today, the exhibitor must buy gold, silver, brass and tin at the same price. The producer lumps all these metals together and to get the gold the exhibitor must buy the tin as well. That this is unfair to the exhibitor anyone can see at a glance.

"My new system will be this. The Selznick exchanges will handle the Clara Kimball Young pictures as a group. They will be sold at a price commensurate with their box office value.

"The Selznick exchanges will also control the annual series of motion pictures of other stars.

"Each of these can be obtained by the exhibitor as a separate and distinct proposition and at various prices, arranged according to the actual value of the pictures which are offered."

LOOK OUT, EXCHANGEMEN! YOU ARE APT TO KILL THE GOOSE THAT LAID THE GOLDEN FILM EGGS

For the past six months the tendency of Los Angeles exchanges toward renting old films to any theatres that might wish them, has been rapidly growing, with the result that numerous down town houses are running this class of pictures.

It is not unusual to find subjects released two or three years ago being shown in the business section houses, as well as in many of the suburban theatres.

By many this is believed to be a very detrimental move on the part of film exchanges, in that it resurrects as though from the dead, films now of an inferior nature, which were in their day excellent subjects.

These, however, were made before the present day art had been introduced into photoplays, and many fear that it will cause a general reaction to the present prosperous business.

It is maintained by the owners of the better theatres that motion picture theatre clientele has been gradually increased by the continuous improvement in films. If these theatregoers find the old subjects, it is thought there will be a general falling off in business.

Several managers of the better houses have considered organizing to prevent further practice of this method on the part of the exchanges, believing that, inasmuch as they pay first run prices for subjects, that it is an injustice for the exchanges to rent their competitors' subjects at a give-away price. The theatre men have not adopted any given policy.

TWENTY WEEKS IN VAUDEVILLE NO OBSTACLE TO PICTURE WORK FOR TRAVERS

Richard C. Travers, one of Essanay's leading men, has started on a twenty-week vaudeville tour. He will visit the twenty largest cities in the United States, giving an original monologue and a talk on pictures.

His act will include the showing of four hundred feet of animated cartoons drawn by Wallace A. Carlson, pertinent to his work at Essanay.

Mr. Travers will make flying trips to and from Chicago to the various cities in which he is to appear. He is still being cast in Essanay plays and expects to put in two to three days a week on photo-play work at the Essanay studio.

When his tour is completed he will resume his regular duties with Essanay.

RAILROAD MEN GIVEN "RIGHT OF WAY" AT UNIVERSAL CITY

Universal City officials during the past week entertained a number of railroad men of national note who were shown over the grounds and entertained at luncheon.

Included in the several parties were: J. T. Clark, vice-president Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railway; E. T. Glennon, assistant vice-president, New York Central Lines; Willis M. Baldwin, Chicago capitalist; F. A. Lehman, assistant to the vice-president of the Santa Fe system; Charles S. Fee, passenger traffic manager; F. E. Batturs, general passenger agent of the Southern Pacific Company at San Francisco; John M. Scott, general passenger agent, Southern Pacific Company, Portland, Ore., and Clarence M. Knox and F. S. McGinnis, Los Angeles, Southern Pacific general agents.

TYRONE POWER IS GUEST OF HONOR AT KATHLYN WILLIAMS' HOUSE-WARMING

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Mar. 24.

Kathlyn Williams, with the Selig Company, and Madame de la Cruz, with Universal, were hostesses of a very notable gathering of Los Angeles society people and motion picture players Saturday evening, March 11, at the new home of Miss Williams.

At this affair Tyrone Power was the guest of honor, and the reception was given so that he could forward the movement suggested by Mr. Power to found a large theatre in Los Angeles and secure sufficient endowment for its continuation under all circumstances.

Mr. Power's plan includes a revival of Shakespearean and more modern successful plays, in the presentation of which there will be no stars. All players will take part not for the popularity or the publicity, but for art's sake.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. DeWolf Hopper, Mr. and Mrs. William Farnum, Constance Collier, Violet Tree, Madame Estella, Hart Dreyfus, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Heffron, Mr. and Mrs. James Neil, Herman Drumm of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rankin, John Emerson, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Dwan, W. D. Taylor, Senor de la Cruz, Charles Eyton and many others.

ROTHACKER PICTURES AT CHICAGO MEET SHOWED WINCHESTER ARMS AND HEINZ PLANT

The feature of the entertainment given at the Chicago Advertising Association was the presentation of moving pictures made by the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company for the Winchester Repeating Arms Company of New Haven, Conn., and the H. J. Heinz Company of Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Winchester pictures illustrated fancy shooting, with rifle, pistol, and shot gun, and also showed scenes of the big Winchester plant. The H. J. Heinz pictures illustrated the manufacture of the famous "57 varieties."

Both these pictures were presented in conjunction with a descriptive talk by E. H. Philippi of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, who is also the chairman of the Industrial Movies committee of the Chicago Advertising Association.

PEARL WHITE SENDS CHECK TO AID CAMPAIGN FOR ACTORS' FUND

Pearl White has been added to the role of honor of the individual contributors toward the half million dollars to be raised through the motion picture campaign for the Actors' Fund before May 15 as a permanent endowment for the Actors' Home on Staten Island.

This campaign already indicates that the desired amount will be greater than the figure originally stated. Besides the returns that will come from National Tribute Day, Monday, May 15, when all motion picture theatres will contribute a part of the gross receipts, the actors of the film studios have donated or will donate.

The Edna May Picture Will Be Ready April Tenth

"Salvation Joan," a Seven Reel Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Through V-L-S-E, Is Set for Release on the Tenth—Cast Includes Morey and Lytton

LATEST POSES OF EDNA MAY, THE VITAGRAPH STAR

SHE WILL BE SEEN IN "SALVATION JOAN," A SEVEN-PART PHOTOPLAY

"SALVATION JOAN," a seven-reel Vitagraph Blue Ribbon which the V-L-S-E will present to American picture-goers April 10, introduces Edna May as a motion picture star in what will probably be her only screen appearance.

Since Edna May's remarkable stage career, which began with the great hit she achieved in "The Belle of New York," was terminated by her marriage to a New York millionaire, she has appeared but once before the public.

This was at a charity benefit in London, at the personal request of Queen Mary. Subsequently, all the principal theatrical producers have attempted to secure her name to a contract, but without success, until she finally consented to enact the title role in "Salvation Joan" for the Vitagraph Company.

A typical Vitagraph cast, which includes Harry Morey, L. Rogers Lytton, and others equally well-known to screen fame, will support the star in this subject, which, it is announced, has been given an elaborate production.

Rothapfel's Rialto Theatre Will Open on April 15

Largest Theatre in Country Erected Exclusively for Pictures Is Equipped with Massive Organ, Has No Stage and Holds Record for Dimming Units

THE Rialto, New York's newest theatre and probably the most ambitious temple of the motion picture in the world, is scheduled to open Saturday, April 15.

It will be under the direction of S. L. Rothapfel, and will occupy the former site of Hammerstein's Theatre of Varieties, Forty-second street at Seventh avenue.

This new amusement institution, located on what is said to be the most costly plot of real estate in America devoted to that purpose, is being erected by the Rialto Theatre Corporation and expresses in concrete form the life dream of the vice-president, secretary and managing director of the company, Mr. Rothapfel.

The Rialto is the largest theatre in this country erected exclusively for the presentation of motion pictures.

The faith of its founders is eloquently demonstrated by the absence of a stage or any provision that would permit of the installation of one should occasion arise to change the policy of the house.

Where the latter would ordinarily be located, there is a permanent decoration in the form of a colonnade. Its marble stairs afford an effective spot for soloists, while one of the panels of the colonnade contains the picture screen.

Concealed about this permanent decoration is the mechanism of the largest organ ever installed in a theatre. Its size may be estimated from the fact that a single gong contained in its interior is 21 feet high and weighs eight hundred pounds. This instrument is being built by the Austin Organ Company, of Hartford, Conn. Daily organ recitals are promised and leading organists have been engaged for this purpose.

In another respect the Rialto will outclass any theatre in the world. Oddly enough in view of the purpose for which it will be employed, this is in its lighting equipment. Director Rothapfel entertains secret plans for carrying his lighting effects into the audience, instead of confining them to a stage, and in this connection has installed a system with a greater number of dimming units than any other theatre in America.

Few details have been given out other than the meagre fact of the opening date of the new theatre. Even the attraction remains unnamed.

The architect of the Rialto is Thomas W. Lamb and the supervising engineer, Russell B. Smith. No attempt has been made to achieve a decorative exterior, and the latter is purely utilitarian.

BRYSON IN CHARGE OF "U" IN LOS ANGELES

James Bryson, for a number of years manager of the Laemmle Film Exchange at Minneapolis, and made manager of the Los Angeles California Universal Exchange, has arrived in Los Angeles.

PLACES ORDER FOR EXTRA PRINT OF "SOCIAL PIRATES"

Manager H. G. Morrow, of the New Orleans General Film Exchange, showed the first two episodes of "The Social Pirates" to exhibitors in that city on St. Patrick's Day.

Following the showing the exchange manager dictated a telegram that made Kalem officials at the Twenty-third street offices forget that Saturday was such a cold day.

Manager Morrow's message read: "First two instalments of 'Social Pirates' received a screen inspection. It proves this series unquestionably a winner. It is undoubtedly the best two-reel picture ever witnessed by me.

"I am placing an order to-day for one more print of each episode. Rush complete lost of advertising aids available. Your company deserves great credit for this. Series could not be better. H. G. Morrow."

Six Players Signed by William Fox for Features

Milton Sills, Leading Man in Dramatic Attractions; Hattie Burks, Vaudevillian; Elda Furry, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Dorothy Rogers and Alice Gale Make List

SIX new players have been signed by William Fox for appearance in his feature films.

Milton Sills, a leading man in dramatic productions, has been signed by William Fox and is now in California, where he will play leads in a new picture to be produced under the direction of Raoul A. Walsh, the director of "Carmen," "The Serpent," "Blue Blood and Red" and other pictures.

Mr. Sills has supported such stars as Carlotta Nillson, Blanche Bates and Julia Dean. He is an athlete and a college man, a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon Society.

He admits that he secured his first theatrical position by "dressing well and lying to the extent of claiming two years' experience behind the footlights' glare."

Hattie Burks, half of the vaudeville team of Lorraine and Burks, which has been featured for the last year in "The Blue Paradise," is a member of the William Fox organization and is now appearing in what will be her first picture.

She is credited with having introduced the "minaret" gown into the United States and is noted for wearing stunning costumes. In addition to being a singer of merit she is a most graceful dancer.

HATTIE BURKS

Elda Furry, a noted beauty, has been engaged by William Fox as leading woman for William Farnum in his next feature film. Miss Furry is now in Los Angeles at work in the Fox studios in conjunction with Mr. Farnum in a stirring story of the sea.

Stanhope Wheatcroft, the well-known actor, has entered the motion picture field under the auspices of William Fox. The old Wheatcroft school of acting has made the family name well known in American theatricals.

Dorothy Rogers, well known in vaudeville and as a leading woman in stock, has joined the William Fox players and begun work in her first picture.

Alice Gale, whom every theatregoer in the United States and Canada knows, has joined the forces of William Fox and will shortly appear in her first picture drama.

She has been on the stage for forty years and has played with such favorites as Mrs. Leslie Carter, Nat Goodwin, Marie Wainwright, Amelia Bingham, Robert B. Mantell, Edwin Booth, Minnie Dupree, Otis Skinner, Charles Richman, Laurette Taylor and Louis Mann.

Although an actress of recognized ability for the last thirty-five years, she is as nervous as a schoolgirl at the prospect of her appearance in a photoplay. She is now working at the Fort Lee studios under Director James Vincent.

Leon Gaumont Pays Tribute to President Freuler

"Before He Signed Chaplin, Executive Ability of Mutual Head Was Evident," Is Declaration of Visitor—Expansion of the Program Gratifies French Film Magnate

LEON GAUMONT, head of the great motion picture company which bears his name, Societe des Etablissements Gaumont, who is paying his first visit to America since the outbreak of European hostilities, gave his first interview the other day.

"This is my first visit to America since the war began," explained M. Gaumont while at the office of the Mutual Film Corporation.

LEON GAUMONT

"As we have begun to manufacture for the Mutual since my last trip to this country, naturally I was anxious to meet my new business associates.

"Even before the signing of Charles Chaplin, I recognized that in Mr. Freuler the Mutual had a president of rare executive ability.

"I now thoroughly appreciate the driving force which has given the Mutual such a commanding position in America.

"The expansion of the Mutual Program has been particularly gratifying to me. In addition to the cordial reception given our three and five-reel productions, we are meeting with gratifying success with our scenic series, "See America First," which also has an animated cartoon by Harry Palmer upon the same reel.

"The Mutual Weekly is also manufactured at the Gaumont laboratories. All these are released through Mutual.

"Conditions have changed materially in the motion picture industry since my last trip to America, and I am glad of the opportunity to study the present transition era at first hand.

"Mr. Freuler has quickly given me an understanding of the Mutual's aims and aspirations, and I believe that the Gaumont company will have to increase even beyond its present plans for enlargements and betterments to keep up with the Mutual movement."

STARS AT ACTORS' FUND BENEFIT, CENTURY THEATRE, APRIL 2

The first of a series of benefit performances that will include many of the most noted stars of the theatre, operatic, vaudeville and moving picture worlds is to be given at the Century theatre during the week beginning Sunday, April 2, in aid of the Motion Picture Campaign for the Actors' Fund.

With the bill that will include such stars as Weber and Fields in a short sketch, it has been arranged to have a novelty number enacted by motion picture stars.

MRS. FAWCETT LEAVES NEW YORK FOR CHICAGO

Mrs. George Fawcett and her daughter arrived in Chicago recently from New York City to visit George Fawcett, who is enacting a leading role in "The Crisis," a Selig play in course of production.

HARDING LEAVES UNITED

W. H. Harding, who has been sales manager for the United Photo Plays Company, of Chicago, for the past year, has severed his connections with that company.

"FEATHERTOP" FROM GAUMONT ON APRIL 17

Announcement was recently made that "The Quality of Faith" would be released by Gaumont on April 17 as a Mutual Masterpicture, de Luxe Edition.

Since then, however, such progress has been made with "Feathertop," the Marguerite Courtot production, that this little star will be seen on the screen in April.

Hence, "The Quality of Faith" has been assigned to May 1 and "Feathertop" will take its place.

In "Feathertop," Miss Courtot is supported by Sydney Mason, John Reinhard, Gerald Griffin, Charles Graham, Mathilde Baring and James Levering.

"The Quality of Faith," which is now held until May 1, again brings together Alexander Gaden and Gertrude Robinson as co-stars.

It is the first time they have been seen together since they appeared in Gaumont's "As a Woman Sows."

In their support are Lucille Taft, Charles W. Travis, Henry W. Pemberton, John Reinhard, John Mackin and Alan Robinson.

MABEL NORMAND PICKED AS STAR FOR FIVE-REEL TRIANGLE COMEDIES

As frequently rumored within the last few months, Mabel Normand is to have a wider field of motion picture activity. This is the announcement from the Triangle Film Corporation, with which she has recently signed a contract.

She is to be a star in five-reel comedy dramas. A director all her own will select plays for her, and it is said that the first will follow the lines of "Peggy," in which Billie Burke made her film debut under the direction of Thomas H. Ince.

Whether Miss Normand will make her first picture under this new arrangement in the East or on the Coast has not yet been determined.

NETTER, WITH SOL LESSER, IN NEW YORK

Leon D. Netter, who for the past four years has been connected with Sol L. Lesser's Western exchanges, namely, the Golden Gate Film Exchange and the All Star Feature Distributors, is now in New York.

Mr. Netter will remain here indefinitely, and in all probability will associate himself with one of the propositions which Mr. Lesser has pending, announcement of which will be made later.

"NE'ER-DO-WELL" FOR INDEFINITE RUN AT BROADWAY-STRAND

Harry I. Garson of the Broadway-Strand theatre of Detroit was a visitor in New York the earlier part of the week. Garson controls "The Ne'er-Do-Well" and "The Battle Cry of Peace" for the state of Michigan.

"The Ne'er-Do-Well" will open at the Broadway-Strand for an indefinite run about April 1.

Bluebird Themes Fit in with Daily News "Stories"

"The Yaqui," Pictured on Mexican Soil, Is Given Special Interest by Villa Chase, and "Great Problem," Prison Reform Play, Bears on Osborne Case

IT becomes opportune to note the success Bluebird photoplays have made under the direction of General Manager M. H. Hoffman, both as a strictly commercial achievement and as exponents of timeliness in theme and general interest.

Of the fourteen features that have been either released or announced, one out of four has touched upon a subject that has held the interest and attention of the general public right at a time when the newspapers carried many columns treating matters from a news standpoint.

The Sarah Bernhardt release started the program, immediately it became known, through cable dispatches, that the great French tragedienne could not fulfill her American engagements this year and, in all probability, may never again appear on the stage in a complete drama.

The constantly increasing unrest in Mexico, culminating in the present open hostilities, gave an opportunity to exhibitors to make profitable use of "The Yaqui," a feature pictured on Mexican soil, and showing much the same territory over which the United States troops are now operating.

In this feature real Mexican soldiers are employed in the battle scenes, and there is a faithful representation of conditions in Mexico.

During the past few days every newspaper in the land has been carrying front-page stories of the Peck murder case, involving Dr. Waite of New York. "Hop, the Devil's Brew," a recent release on the Bluebird program, is based upon the importation of opium and the traffic in habit-forming drugs.

Last week Warden-on-Leave Osborne, of Sing Sing Penitentiary, was vindicated in one set of charges and his trial on further indictments is set for early April.

"The Great Problem," to be released by Bluebird Photoplays on April 17 is based on the psychology of crime as addressed specifically to prison reform.

While the great penologist "Tom Brown"—the name assumed by Mr. Osborne when he became a voluntary prisoner at Auburn Penitentiary—is not directly referred to in "The Great Problem," the theories on which he bases his activities constitute the motive of the film.

Rex Ingram wrote and directed the piece and Violet Mersereau is introduced as a Bluebird star for the first time in "The Great Problem."

It Isn't "Devilish Business" for Miller to Make Comedies in Vogue

LARGE STAGE SET USED IN VOGUE COMEDY ENTITLED "DEVILISH BUSINESS" TO BE RELEASED MARCH 26 THROUGH MUTUAL

THE photograph herewith depicts a stage set arranged for a big scene in the Vogue comedy entitled "Devilish Business," directed by Rube Miller.

Mr. Miller, the central figure seated in the foreground, is shown in conference with the studio manager and the assistant director.

Mr. Miller, who has an important role in this comedy, is supported by Arthur Moon, who gives a realistic impersonation of His Satanic Majesty; Madge Kirby, the pretty little blonde ingenue, who, as "the prey" changes from rags to fine raiment; and Alice Neice, as "The Keeper of the Book of Doom," who assists in the deviltry of "His Satanic Majesty."

CAPTAIN MELVILLE WRITES AND PRODUCES "NONE SO BLIND"

Captain Wilbert Melville of the Lubin studios in California, has written and produced a three-act drama, "None So Blind," in which Princess Mona Darkfeather makes her screen debut.

ILLUSTRATING "THE SOCIAL PIRATES," KALEM'S SERIAL, WITH MARIN SAIS AND OLLIE KIRKBY

WALSH MARRIES MIRIAN COOPER, MEMBER OF HIS COMPANY

Raoul Walsh, the youngest director in the motion picture industry, who has been successful in the staging of the William Fox photo dramas "Carmen," "The Serpent," "Regeneration" and others, surprised his friends by announcing that he had married a member of his company.

The bride is Miriam Cooper, who is working with Mr. Walsh at the Fox studios in Los Angeles in the production of "Blue Blood and Red," the Western photoplay shortly to be released.

In this picture play Mr. Walsh's brother, George Walsh, and Doris Pawn, take the leading parts.

L. J. BAMBERGER, BIG FOUR SALES PROMOTION MANAGER, TO UNDERGO OPERATION

L. J. Bamberger, manager of the V-L-S-E sales promotion department, has left for his home in Indianapolis, where he will undergo an operation.

His condition, although necessitating immediate surgical attention, is said not to be serious, and his speedy recovery and early return to duty is confidently expected.

McCLELLAND GOES INTO POLITICS

Special to Motion Picture News

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 24.

Alfred H. McClelland, local manager of the New Film Corporation, is a candidate for state legislature from the seventh district, and from all accounts should be the winner at the polls next May.

Captain McClelland is well known throughout the entire district. He has resided in the seventh district all his life.

POWELL RESIGNS FROM EQUITABLE

Frank Powell, producer of "The Chain Invisible" for the Equitable Film Corporation now directing Gail Kane in "The Other Sister" for the same company, announces his resignation to take effect upon the completion of this picture.

Mr. Powell has several excellent propositions at hand and will announce his new connection in the very near future it is expected.

Kalem Figures on 30 Gowns for 2 Stars in Serial

Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby Will Need All This Fine Raiment for Modish Touch to "Social Pirates," by George Bronson-Howard, by End of Picture

NOT the least considered item of expense for Kalem in staging the fifteen episodes of George Bronson-Howard's "Social Pirates" is the bill that is mounting up for gowns and hats of all sorts for Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby, the pretty portrayers of the social pirates.

Kalem has found that securing special costumes for a feature production is a simple task compared with the task of catering to Dame Fashion's demands through the long course of fifteen two-reel pictures.

Women fans are quick to note—and write complaining letters—when stars wear a gown too frequently in ordinary productions and in the case of a series, when they are following the characters with more than ordinary interest their demands are even more exacting.

So, between the requirements to meet passing time in the individual episodes, and the necessity of entirely new creations in each instalment it has been figured that Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby will each require well over thirty gowns before the Bronson-Howard series has reached any way near the end of its fifteen-week life.

A brand new thrill was found by trade paper representatives who last week viewed the showing of "The Record Run," a forthcoming Kalem "Hazard of Helen."

The thrill is produced by seeing a handcar speed directly towards you, rise up until it seems about to leap off the screen and then abruptly stop.

Kalem owes the "new" thrill to an accident. The scene in the picture was intended to show Helen Gibson on a handcar derailed within a few feet of the camera.

But instead of turning over obediently when it left the track the handcar kept straight ahead till it struck the camera, hurling the film container through the air.

Helen pulled herself from the tangled wreck of the hand-car, brushed off a little dust and offered to do the scene over again as soon as another camera could be secured by the director.

But when investigation and test prints showed that the film was unspoiled up to the point when the operator stopped grinding to make a last-minute jump for safety, the director vetoed any retakes.

Work on Indiana Historical Pageant Under Way

State Commission Approves Scenario Submitted by the Company—Script Provides for Seven-Reeler—Production Will Begin in a Week or Two

Special to Motion Picture News

Indianapolis, March 23.

WITH the coming of the first signs of spring, the cameramen, actors and actresses who are to take part in the filming of historic Indiana will come to the state and begin the making of the pictures.

This announcement was made by the State Historical Commission, on Monday, March 20. The commission has received and approved the scenario prepared by the Selig Polyscope Company, which will make the pictures.

The scenario provides for a seven-reel production, the first two of which will be in the nature of a prologue covering the period between the arrival of La Salle in 1679 and the admission of Indiana into statehood in 1816.

Herbert S. Hoaglund, general manager of the Selig Polyscope Company, who conferred yesterday with Director Woodward and other members of the Indiana Commission, said that the forthcoming picture of historical Indiana will set a new mark in the motion picture business.

"It may be interesting to citizens of Indiana to know that this is the first state to attempt to embody its great historical events and personages in film reproduction," Mr. Hoaglund took occasion to point out.

"We will take our pictures on the very ground where the events we are to chronicle actually occurred, with the costumes and environment of the times reproduced as accurately as possible."

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

USES "CAPTAIN JINKS" SONG AS BUSINESS GETTER

A novel publicity stunt was used by J. C. Adams, of the Lyric theatre, Centralia, Ill., to draw crowds to "Captain Jinks." "The Big Four Family" describes it, in part, as follows:

Mr. Adams knew there was something he could publicize and he finally found it in the age of the play and the rollicking song that runs through it:

"I'm Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines,
I give my horse good corn and beans,
Of course it's quite beyond my means,
Though a Captain in the Army."

He used paid space in the newspaper for a publicity story telling how, when he himself was a little boy, a well-known villager used to take him on his knee and sing that old song to him—and that now he wanted to find someone who could sing, whistle, play or hum the tune so "Rufus," his piano player could pick it up. This story was headed, "Old Timers Will Remember 'Captain Jinks.'" Underneath was a two-line announcement of the showing in bold-face type marked "Advt." so that the news story would appear as such and not as a paid advertisement.

'Phone calls in hundreds resulted from this novel appeal. An old man played the tune on an accordion for "Rufus," who wrote a piano score for it. Everybody had a different conception of how it should be played and "Rufus" played it to suit them all—as a waltz, march, two-step, fox-trot, tango and even a la "Streets of Cairo." This made quite a hit and Mr. Adams reported fine business, getting many new patrons from the older people of the community, some of whom had never before seen a motion picture.

THEATRE ADVERTISING IN POETRY AN ALABAMA STUNT

A unique advertising scheme has been adopted by the Empire Theatre, Montgomery, Ala., which runs the Paramount program each week. Their method is to do their advertising in a classy, poetic manner, which has attracted a great deal of attention throughout that section of the country.

The latest ad in the campaign of this theatre's advertising in poetry is the following:

E—arth has its pleasures manifold—
M—irth is a jewel set in gold;
P—ictures are gladdening to the eye—
I—sn't it time you are stopping by?
R—estful, pleasing—pictures rare—
E—very one beyond compare.

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS STARTS PHOTOPLAY DEPARTMENT

The Buffalo Evening News has at last recognized the popularity of the silent drama and will hereafter devote a entire column to "Flashes from the Shadow Stage." The News has a daily circulation of over 110,000.

The Buffalo Sunday News, which suspended publication a year ago, was the first Buffalo paper to recognize the motion picture and for more than a year published weekly a four-page section with front page in color. Charles B. Taylor, who was editor of that section, will edit the new column in the Evening News.

POSTAL CARD HERALDS COMING ATTRACTIONS

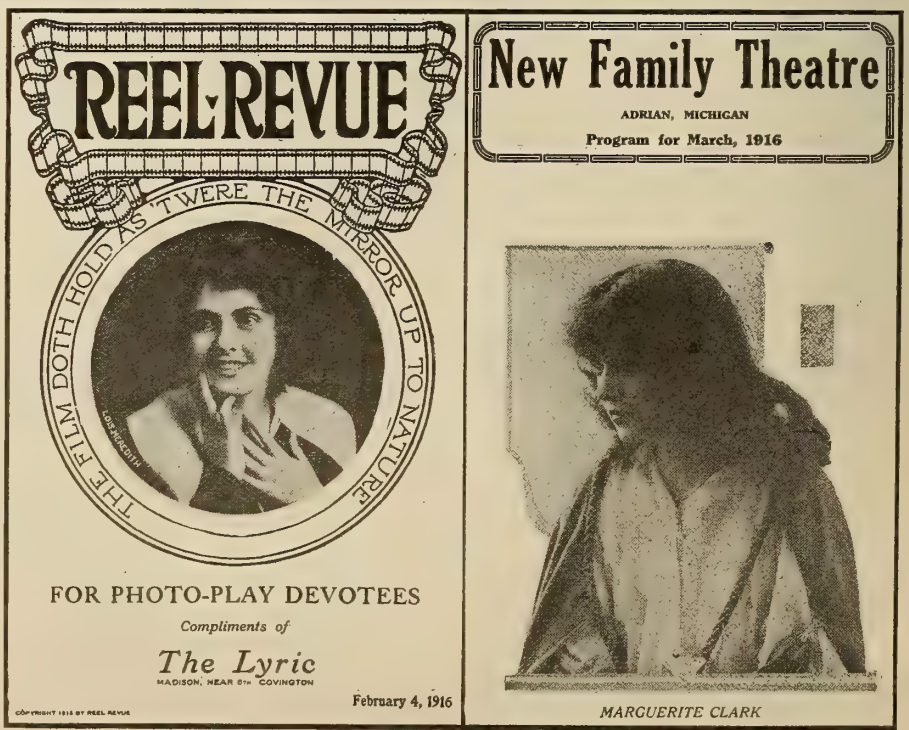
The Star theatre at Chillicothe, Ohio, sends out to their mailing list a postal card on which they feature coming Paramount attractions.

On Monday and Tuesday, January 3 and 4, they used one of the new thumb nail star cuts of Blanche Sweet in advertising the "Secret Sin."

CHILDREN'S SHOWS PLANNED FOR NEW ALBANY, IND.

Efforts are being made by women of New Albany, Ind., to have special motion pictures for children in one of the theatres each Saturday. It is proposed that two shows will be given, one at 10:30 A. M., the other, immediately following, at 12:30 P. M.

A committee will be appointed to view films before their presentation to the children.



A DAILY REMINDER CALENDAR ON A CARD

The Apollo theatre, Hollywood, Cal., distributes an attractive card which is distributed each week to merchants and homes in their town.

This calendar is printed in the regular form but under each date is a small memorandum of the Paramount play which is appearing on the bill.

A calendar such as this as a daily reminder can be made in many attractive forms, and should be a business getter for any exhibitor.

HOUSE ORGAN SERIES NO. 26: TYPES OF DISTINCTIVE COVERS

ATTRACTIVE COVERS, LIKE THOSE SHOWN ABOVE, LEND DIGNITY AND FORCE TO THE HOUSE ORGAN

NEAT SPECIAL INVITATION FROM CLEMMER THEATRE

The special invitation stunt is always good when you have a particular occasion to announce, and your advertising appropriation is big enough to stand a little extra expense. Here is a "Spring Opening" four-page announcement from James Clemmer, of the Clemmer theatre, Seattle. The first and third pages only are printed; the other two are blank.

The first page is reproduced here. Note the neat set-up, the good tone brought out

IT is with a great deal of pleasure that I extend to you and your friends a cordial invitation to the Spring Opening of the Clemmer Theatre, and it is with double pleasure that I advise you of an entirely new policy, which I have inaugurated and will pursue in the Clemmer Theatre, namely, the securing of the famous Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc., Features, which I will show first run in Seattle, and the arrangements for which have been completed, whereby I can procure two of these features weekly and thereby in the future, please know that the change days of the Clemmer Theatre will be every Sunday and Wednesday.

¶ In other words, I will show a new Big Four attraction every Sunday and Wednesday.

¶ The list of stars and features on the following page will give you an excellent idea of the scope of the Big Four concern and also impress upon you the fact that I am sparing no expense to keep the Clemmer Theatre where it always has been, namely, the best motion picture theatre in Seattle.

¶ Trusting I will have the pleasure of your patronage, I beg to remain,

Yours very sincerely,

James Clemmer

RENTS UMBRELLAS TO PATRONS ON RAINY NIGHTS

Wichita, Kans., has one theatre that is doing a novel stunt which is advertising the house far and wide. The Princess theatre management, when it rains, brings out a stock of umbrellas kept in the Princess cigar stand and rents them to patrons who have seen the show and desire to get home without being drenched.

Manager L. S. Brown says that the umbrella trade is good on rainy nights.

SHORT ITEMS SHOULD FIND PLACE IN THE HOUSE ORGAN

Too many house organs confine themselves to casts, synopses and cuts of coming attractions. The short gossipy item is overlooked. Yet the short item is a business builder, because it can be made to tell your patrons a lot of personal stuff about stars, incidents that happen in the course of production, and the like, thus creating livelier interest in the pictures themselves.

Why not take your copy of MOTION PICTURE NEWS every week, and glean a few items for your house organ from the array of stories carried in each issue of THE NEWS? Try devoting a page, or a half page of your house organ, to short items. The most enterprising exhibitors are following this plan.

SCHOOLROOM BEST PLACE TO ADVERTISE SPECIAL CHILDREN'S SHOWS

THE schoolroom is the place, above all others, where your special children's shows should be advertised, if possible. The reason is obvious: you can reach more children through that medium than any other.

But it may not be easy to get the school authorities to permit schoolroom announcements of your showings. They may refuse, and will refuse unless you approach them in the right way.

In this connection, the experience of the Swanson Theatre Circuit, which operates, among others, the American, Rex and Liberty Theatres, in Salt Lake City, will be useful to you. The Swanson people first got the women's societies interested in the movement. Next, the Board of Education was prevailed upon to endorse children's shows, with the result that the American-Rex-Liberty children's performances are announced in every school room in the city each Friday.

This strikes us as the right way to go about it The women's societies and the school authorities are interested in the welfare of the child; they know that the child must be amused, and that the child will go to picture shows They are, therefore, interested in seeing pictures suitable for children exhibited at your theatre It ought not to be very difficult to win over women's clubs to the idea. When you have done this, take the matter up with the Board of Education or the City School Superintendent, and prevail upon the women's clubs to help you. Their influence is the strongest you could enlist. Get a committee of women to present the matter to the school authorities.

If the women will not go in person, obtain a written endorsement from them which you can offer to the school authorities. After you have converted them to the idea, broach the matter of announcements in the schoolrooms.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS is vitally interested in the children's show movement. Write us your experiences.

CHILDREN'S MATINEES A SUCCESS IN CLEVELAND

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Cleveland, Ohio, March 25.

That matinees for children with specially selected programs are needed and can be made commercially profitable has been proven by the Lakewood theatre in Lakewood, a residential suburb of Cleveland.

The programs are approved by the Lakewood Book and Thimble Club and by the Board of Education and the Lakewood management has adopted the slogan, "Let us take care of your children."

Accordingly, the first Saturday morning whole families of children came, and several mothers with babies in their arms Some families got bargain prices when two and three were let in for a nickel.

The Lakewood theatre seats 560 and but one performance was arranged for. When it was found there were more children than seats, the manager asked the children to crowd together in order to let a few more in.

"Hey, here's room. Come on in and sit with me," readily came forth the cheerful invitations, and 1,000 children were packed in and 500 turned away.

The succeeding Saturday two performances were given, the first one commencing at 8 a. m., and were met with the same success.

The success of the children's matinee, not only at the Lakewood, but also at the Alhambra and Wind-A-Meer theatres, was informally discussed at Tuesday's meeting of the North Eastern Ohio Exhibitors' League.

Most of the members taking part in the discussion expressed the opinion that the children's matinee can be made a commercially profitable undertaking. There seemed to be a disposition on the part of many present to follow the lead of the theatres now successfully running matinees in and around Cleveland.

CIRCLE THEATRE A CONSISTENT NEWSPAPER ADVERTISER

The Circle Theatre, Easton, Pa., sends in several specimens of recent newspaper ads. These are two and three columns wide, and of fair depth, indicating that the Circle knows the value of daily advertising. Its enterprise is commendable.

In general, the layout of these ads. is good, though we suggest that most of them contain too much "copy." It would be well also to keep as far away from heavy type and mourning borders as possible. Plenty of white space is a good thing. For instance, one of the smaller ads. with about a quarter of an inch white space all the way around is really more effective than the larger ones, which follow old-fashioned ideas. White space makes your ads. stand out.

TORONTO WORLD ISSUES A WEEKLY EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

The Toronto Sunday World has started a new idea, which is meeting with favor. This is the publication of the coming weekly releases of the big film companies, under the form of an exhibitors' guide.

BRIEF HINTS FOR BUSY EXHIBITORS

Again we urge every exhibitor to print in his house organ and newspaper ads. a calender of hours when features are shown. Many people will stay away from a picture theatre rather than run the chance of walking in on Reel 2 or Reel 3 of a feature.

Advertise the comforts and conveniences of your house, as well as the pictures you show. Make "service to patrons" your slogan.

Cultivate the personal acquaintance of the people who attend your theatre. Ask them individually how they like your pictures, and make them feel you want honest criticism, not mere flattery.

Does your newspaper run reviews of your two and three-day features? If not, call on the city editor or the managing editor, or the photoplay editor, and invite co-operation in this matter. Back up your argument by distributing a few passes, good at any performance.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

"TWO-EDGED SWORD" WILL MAKE KEEN BID FOR POPULARITY IN WEEK OF 27th FOR "V"

AN interesting program has been prepared by the Vitagraph Company for release during the week of March 27.

The headliner is the four-part Blue Ribbon Feature, "The Two-Edged Sword." The supporting list of pictures consists of "Mr. Jack Inspects Paris," the latest of the "Escapades of Mr. Jack," with Frank Daniels; "Three Johns," a single reel comedy; "Freddie Foils the Floaters," another of the "Freddie" series of single part comedies, and the three-part Broadway star feature, "Out of the Quagmire," a political drama, complete the bill.

In "The Two-Edged Sword" Edith Storey and Evart Overton have the assistance of Josephine Earle, Robert Gaillard, Logan Paul, Marion Henry and Mrs. Nellie Anderson. George D. Baker directed. It will be released on March 27.

"Mr. Jack Inspects Paris," the latest of "The Escapades of Mr. Jack," will be released on March 27.

In this episode, Frank Daniels poses as a generous uncle who sends his nephew Paul $5,000 to start the practice of medicine in Paris.

Paul, however, is more interested in Fifi, a chorus girl, on whom he spends the money. When Uncle decides to visit Paris on short notice, complications arise and amusing incidents take place.

"Three Johns" is the story of the attempts of two men, each named John, to capture a lunatic, also named John.

Each thinks the other the lunatic, and while they are having each other arrested, the sheriff's wife captures the real John and the reward.

The film was produced by Dave Smith, the cast including G. Kunkel, G. Holt, G. Stanley, O. Beninger, Anne Schaeffer and Jack Mower. It is scheduled for release on March 27.

In "Freddie Foils the Floaters," the latest "Freddie" picture, William Dangman as Freddie, gets a job with a newspaper.

Having a personal grudge against one of the candidates for district attorney, he rounds up that candidate's repeaters or "floaters."

He then succeeds in trapping them in a barn. It proves a big job but be succeeds.

Dangman is assisted in the enactment of the picture by George O'Donnell and Frank Currier.

The latter, besides playing an important role, also directed the picture, slated for release on March 31.

"Out of the Quagmire" deals with the attempt, by a rival faction, to cast a slur on the honor of Arsdale, the candidate for mayor, by making it appear that his wife is in love with Norton, keeper of a gambling house.

Circumstance points toward the truth of this statement and Arsdale in a fit of jealousy shoots Norton. Directly after the killing, Arsdale is informed of his election to the mayoralty. He realizes that his hasty action has shattered his career in its infancy.

Joseph Kilgour, Julia Swayne Gordon, Eleanor Woodruff and a supporting cast appear. Theodore Marston is responsible for the direction of this picture, for release on April 1.

MEXICAN BORDER SCENES ANIMATE SELIG-TRIBUNE, NO. 22

The Selig-Tribune, the animated news reel released twice weekly by the Selig Polyscope Company, of Chicago, came forth in the No. 22 edition with a wealth of war pictorials from the Mexican border.

Motion pictures of Villa, Newton D. Baker, new Secretary of War, General Funston and others, proved most interesting and timely.

VICTOR MOORE SUPPORTED BY ANITA KING IN "THE RACE"

Victor Moore, the Lasky comedian, supported by Anita King, the Paramount Girl, in the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company's production of "The Race," a thrilling comedy-drama founded upon Miss King's recent transcontinental automobile trip, which she made absolutely alone, will be released on April 6.

"The Race," a Paramount picture, has to do with the adventures of Jimmie Grayson, the frivolous son of a wealthy automobile manufacturer.

In addition to Anita King, are Victor Moore surrounded by a cast of unusual excellence, including such prominent actors as Robert Bradbury, William Dale, Horace B. Carpenter, Mrs. Louis McCord, Jane Wolf and other members of the Lasky all-star organization.

NAPOLEON AND SALLY, E. AND R. "CHIMPS," STARRED AS CUPIDS

"Twin Cupids" is the E. and R. comedy being made from a scenario by Frances Willy, which features Lillian Brown Leighton and the chimpanzees, Napoleon and Sally.

A love affair between a widow and a bachelor is partially broken off because of the bachelor's liking for strange pets and his purchase of the two chimps.

Finally the chimps bring about a reconciliation, and the picture will fade out with Napoleon and Sally as the twin cupids au natural.

"BILLIE'S DOUBLE" BASED ON MISTAKEN IDENTITY

"Billie's Double" is a new one-reel comedy written for Billie Reeves by Clay M. Greene and directed by Earl Metcalfe.

Billie Riddle and William Riddle are alike as two peas, but have never met. They register at a hotel. Mrs. Biddle appears and—.

VITAGRAPH DRAMA AND COMEDY: SCENES FROM "OUT OF THE QUAGMIRE," "THE THREE JOHNS," AND "MR. JACK INSPECTS PARIS"

TWO FAIRBANKS 5-REEL COMEDIES IN ONE MONTH FROM TRIANGLE

TWO Douglas Fairbanks five-reel comedies in one month is the announcement from the Triangle Film Corporation in its list of April releases.

The coming month also marks the return to the Triangle screen after long absences of De Wolf Hopper and Frank Keenan.

Later H. B. Warner, previously seen in "The Raiders," will appear in a new C. Gardner Sullivan story, "The Beggar of Cawnpore," set in India during the Sepoy Rebellion of 1857.

In addition to these stars the five release dates of the month present in an unusually long list William S. Hart, Dorothy Gish, William H. Thompson and Lillian Gish.

Ten Keystone comedies will be contributed by Mack Sennett, one of them with Roscoe Arbuckle again doubling as director and star.

Week of April 2 brings forward Fairbanks and Jane Grey as the dramatic stars. Miss Grey appears as a slum heroine in "Waifs," with William Desmond featured at the head of an Ince cast.

The principal players are Carol Holloway, Robert Kortman, J. Frank Burke, Fannie Midgley and Truly Shattuck supported by a large cast.

The Fairbanks comedy has a strong undercurrent of sociology, as indicated by its appropriate title, "The Habit of Happiness."

The picture was made in the East and many Broadway actors appear in the company, among them George Fawcett, Dorothy West, Grace Rankin, Macey Harlam, George Backus and William Jefferson.

"Little Meena's Romance" and "The Aryan" follow in the week of April 9. In the latter William S. Hart is again seen in one of the Western dramas with which his name has come to be firmly associated.

Bessie Love was drafted from the Griffith forces for the leading feminine role in the Ince feature. She has since returned to Fine Arts to play opposite Douglas Fairbanks in "The Good Bad-Man."

Dorothy Gish and Owen Moore are the youthful lovers presented in "Little Meena's Romance."

An unusually large supporting company includes Margaret Marsh, Kate Toncray, Fred J. Butler, Robert Lawler and James O'Shea.

Right on the heels of her sister comes Lillian Gish as a young Russian girl in "Sold for Marriage."

The action takes the players from Russia to America and requires the services in support of the star of Frank Bennett, Walter Long, A. D. Sears, Pearl Elmore and many others.

The same week marks the reappearance of Frank Keenan. Mary Boland, for many years John Drew's leading woman, appears in "Stepping Stones" with him.

Robert McKim is the husband and Keenan the powerful financier who wins his widow after the suicide of this rival.

Later in the month comes De Wolf Hopper in "Sunshine Dad," combined with William H. Thompson's first appearance as a Triangle star in "Civilization's Child"; then Fairbanks in "The Good Bad-Man" and Warner in "The Beggar of Cawnpore."

"LEOPARD'S BRIDE" ON APRIL 13 INSTEAD OF 15

Due to a re-arrangement of schedule for the release of Mutual Masterpictures, de Luxe Edition, the five-part David Horsley production, "The Leopard's Bride," will be released April 13 instead of April 15, as originally announced.

Margaret Gibson and William Clifford are the featured players in the production.

KLEINE FORCES SEE ADVANCE SHOWING OF NINTH "MISHAPS OF MUSTY SUFFER"

SCENE IN COMEDY NO. 9 OF "THE MISHAPS OF MUSTY SUFFER," FEATURING HARRY WATSON

AN advance showing of Comedy Number 9 of "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer," featuring Harry Watson of Bickel and Watson, was given the other day at the George Kleine studio in the Bronx to members of the Kleine forces.

Director Louis Myll invited the company into the projection room to see the picture screened.

Comedy No. 9 of "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer" series deals with Musty's adventures while holding down a job as general factotum in an amusement arcade, one of the chief features of which is an escalator or moving stairway.

Musty, neatly uniformed after the fashion of a trained monkey, holds down the jobs of ticket-taker, chief janitor, bootblack and hat cleaner, and is forced to hop in lively fashion from one job to the other as occasion demands.

The "bouncing" of patrons who fail to go through the formality of buying tickets is one of his chief difficulties, but one which he overcomes promptly when he discovers the reverse action of the escalator.

Musty also has several discouraging adventures with the museum or menagerie freaks which escape periodically, but meets each emergency in an ingenious way.

"THE CITY OF ILLUSION," IVAN, TO BE RELEASED IN APRIL

"THE City of Illusion," the newest Ivan production, has just been completed, Director Ivan Abramson and the entire company returning from Richmond and Washington a few days ago.

For "The City of Illusion" Mr. Abramson has surrounded himself with a company of players, each one of whom is a competent screen artist and has played leading roles for the films.

Carleton Macy, who created the leading male role in the legitimate Belasco drama, "The Woman," and whose most recent screen work was leading man opposite Theda Bara in "Destruction," will create one of the leading male parts in the new Ivan production.

Mignon Anderson, a leading lady formerly with Thanhouser; Bradley Barker, formerly Olga Petrova's leading man; Paula Shay, "the Mary Garden of the screen"; Joseph Burke, star of "A Fool's Paradise"; Maxine Brown, Edison's well-known ingenue; Willard Case, formerly juvenile lead with Essanay, and Guido Colluci, a delineator of character roles, formerly with Edison, constitute the principals in the cast.

"The City of Illusion" will probably be released as a special production in several thousand feet more than the usual feature.

ILLUSTRATING "THE CITY OF ILLUSION," THE NEXT PHOTOPLAY TO BE OFFERED BY IVAN

TWO ORIGINAL PLAYS, AN ADAPTATION AND A "BEST SELLER" IN SCREEN FORM FROM FAMOUS

AN adaptation of a work of one of the living dramatists, a screen version of "one of the six best sellers," and two original photoplays constitute the contribution of the Famous Players Film Company to the Paramount program for April.

Israel Zangwill is the playwright; "Molly Make-Believe" is the "best seller," "The Eternal Grind" and "The Innocent Lie" are the original productions.

Marguerite Clark is the star of "Molly Make-Believe," an adaptation of the story and book by Eleanor Hallowel Abbott, which, after appearing as a serial in one of the big national magazines, was issued in book form and has been one of the most popular gift books ever since.

Though the story centers around a series of letters, when the film makes its appearance on April 10 it will be found that it has been converted into a romantic photoplay by the star, director and cast. J. Searle Dawley directed the photoplay.

Mary Pickford makes her first appearance since creating a sensation in "Poor Little Peppina," in another original photoplay, "The Eternal Grind," which, as the name implies, is a factory story.

April 17 is the day set for release. Casting aside the Italian characteristics which she so delightfully portrayed in "Peppina," Miss Pickford becomes a little factory girl drudging at her task of sewing shirts. "The Eternal Grind" was produced under the direction of John O'Brien.

"The Innocent Lie," with Valentine Grant in the principal role, is a romantic drama opening in Ireland and shifting the scene of action to New York, where many intensely dramatic situations arise before the completion of the tale.

Sidney Olcott directed the production. It will be released on April 20.

Pauline Frederick follows her appearance in "Audrey" by starring in the adaptation of Israel Zangwill's gripping play, "The Moment Before Death," which will be introduced on the screen under the shorter title "The Moment Before." It appears on the screen April 27.

As a very wealthy woman is about to enter a church, the bells ring out and she hears in them her death knell. Then we are taken back through the past and shown why these sweet-toned bells are freighted with death for this beautiful creature.

"The Moment Before" is being produced under the direction of Robert Vignola at Jacksonville, Fla.

Several well-known players have been engaged to support the stars, among them J. W. Johnston, Thomas Holding, John Bowers and Edwin Mordant.

APFEL COMPLETES CAST FOR "BATTLE OF HEARTS"

Director Oscar Apfel of the Fox western forces has completed the cast for the photoplay on which he is working, entitled 'The Battle of Hearts."

Opposite William Farnum in this subject, the principal feminine role will be taken by Elda Furrey, a legitimate stage actress who has won a number of successes.

The supporting cast includes William Burress, William Lewis, Wheeler Oakman, H. J. Herbert and H. A. Barrows.

ESSANAY RELEASES FOR MAY INCLUDE "LITTLE SHEPHERD OF BARGAIN ROW" AND A MICHELSON

ESSANAY has scheduled a number of releases for May as announced by George K. Spoor, president of Essanay.

"The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row," written by Howard McKent Barnes, will be one of the early five-reel releases. It deals with the little girls of bargain row from whose lives the light and sunshine has been crushed out, and with the little shepherd who brings them out of their misfortune into clean green fields of open life.

Other multiple reel features include "According to the Code," by Charles Michelson, and "That Sort," taken from the celebrated play of Basil MacDonald Hastings.

"Secret Service," with William Gillette, the famous stage actor, will also be produced as a multiple reel feature. "Sherlock Holmes," also featuring William Gillette, now is nearing completion and will be released shortly.

The three-reel photoplays announced include "The Danger Line," "Once a Thief," "The Frame-Up" and "The Man Who Couldn't Be Kind," the latter written by William Merriam Rouse.

Among the two-reel plays to be released are "The Double Cross," "Dregs of Gold," "The Little Samaritan" and "In the Moon's Ray," the latter a reissue featuring Francis X. Bushman.

Two more of George Ade's Fables also will be released this month, including "The Fable of the Undecided Brunette." The public is also offered two of Vernon Howe Bailey's Sketch Books on American and foreign cities, each accompanied by five hundred feet of scenic.

"AT PINEY RIDGE," SELIG, FROM V-L-S-E ON MAY 1

"At Piney Ridge," a Selig Red Seal Play, picturized by Gilson Willets from David K. Higgins' greatest stage success, will be the V-L-S-E release for Monday May 1, it is announced.

Fritzi Brunette takes the role of Cindy Lane and she is supported by a company of Selig stars including Al W. Filson, Leo J. Pierson, Edward J. Piel, Frank Clark, Vivian Reed, William Scott, Lillian Hayward and James Bradbury.

On Monday, April 1, "The Cycle of Fate," a Selig Red Seal Play, will be released through V-L-S-E. Bessie Eyton is the star.

ARCHITECT'S PERSPECTIVE OF THE DRESSING ROOMS AT THE NEW INCE-TRIANGLE STUDIOS, CULVER CITY

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

FOR the forthcoming V-L-S-E production of "The Toilers" Edgar Lewis has taken his company of Lubin players, headed by Nance O'Neil, into the oil fields, near Charleston, W. Va. Nearly all the exterior scenes will be made in that district, where Mr. Lewis has found just the local color his script calls for.

It has been decided at the Universal studios to unite William Garwood and Violet Mersereau in a series of pictures, work on which is already under way.

This decision followed a plea from Universal exhibitors, who protested at a Garwood-Mersereau combination for one picture only.

Last week it was announced that the two would make one picture together at Universal Heights, and letters began to pour in, asking why, so long as the two were at the same studio, they could not make several pictures in company.

Consequently they are now working on "Some Leap," which is nearly finished, and then they will take up work on "The Go-Between."

Following this they will be co-starred in a five-reel feature for the Universal program. In "The Go-Between" Miss Mersereau plays a small town girl, and Mr. Garwood a youth from the same town, who goes to the city to study bacteriology.

He becomes distinguished and forgets his old town and the girl, but she never forgets him, and when he becomes a victim to some of his own germs, she is right at his side, bringing him back to health.

Players to Savannah for a "U"

Director Henry Otto has taken King Baggot and a large supporting company of Universal players, to Savannah, to take the exterior scenes for "Half a Rogue," Harold McGrath's story which will soon be ready for Universal exhibitors.

This story was one of the most popular novels of several seasons ago, and it has been made into the first five-reel feature in which King Baggot has ever appeared. Mr. Baggot himself had a hand in its selection as his first big feature vehicle, choosing it from among more than a dozen novels submitted to him.

Great care is being used to get every detail of this picture "just so," and this is one reason why so large a company has been sent south for the sake of comparatively few exterior scenes.

The entire company made the trip by rail in order to hasten the work. In the party, besides Messrs. Otto and Baggot, are Clara Beyers, Ben Molter, Howard Crampton, and Edna Hunter. Clara Beyers will play Katherine Galboner; Miss Hunter, Patty Bennington; and Mr. Baggot, Richard Warrington. The adaptation from the novel is the work of Director Otto.

"Joe" Girard, Universal villain, has been cast in a straight part. He is now at work with Mary Fuller in "The Huntress" at Universal Heights and will be seen minus the old wickedness in which he has always been clothed on the screen.

"It isn't my fault," Joe explains. "Director Henderson thought I was the nearest to the type he wanted of any man in the studio, so he cast me.

"For several years past my work has been confined to wrecking homes, raising checks, drugging maidens, foreclosing mortgages, stealing papers, derailing trains and betraying confidences.

"I am glad I am the type for this part, but I don't at all like the idea of respecting the sanctity of the home, cancelling the mortgage, marrying the maiden, and leading a decent blameless life. It irritates me."

Cupid Works in Full Set

Cupid has been busy around the Universal studios. First C. Alfred Karpen, title and cutting expert, and Jessie Howat Christie, were married.

This occurred on March 11, and the couple have taken up their residence at 468 Willard avenue, Brooklyn Manor, L. I.

Now rumor has it that Matt Moore, third of the famous brothers, and Jane Gail are engaged. No announcement of the latter event is forthcoming at this time.

Famous Players has sent a company from the New York studios, under Sidney Olcott, to Bermuda, where scenes for "The Innocent Lie" are to be made. This feature will introduce Valentine Grant to Paramount audiences as a Famous Players star. The picture will be released on April 20.

Though this is the first time that Miss Grant has been featured by Famous Players, she is popular among motion picture audiences by reason of the clever work which she did in the reecnt series of Irish films in which she appeared under the direction of Mr. Olcott.

Miss Grant is a bona-fide daughter of Old Erin, as a glance at her black hair and dancing eye would instantly prove.

In "The Innocent Lie" there will be ample opportunity for Miss Grant to display her ability both as a comedienne and as a tragedienne, for the story, opening under most delightful circumstances in Ireland, suddenly shifts to New York.

Among these whom Mr. Olcott now has at Hamilton, Bermuda, and who will appear with Miss Grant are Robert Cain, Jack J. Clark, Morris Forster and Miss Hunter Arden.

MADAME KALICH, EUGENE ORMONDE, T. JEROME LAWLER, AND OTHERS, IN TYPICAL SCENES FROM THE PLAY

"The Innocent Lie" depicts the adventures of a young Irish girl who arrives in New York in search of her brother. The brother has taken to drink and slipped out of his boarding house leaving his bill unpaid. Nora, completely at a loss where to find him, falls easy victim to a man who declares that he knows where Pat lives. But she fights against the man's advances and is stunned during the struggle.

Mistaken Identity Takes the "Spot"

When she is picked up by the police, the only mark of identity to be found on her is the address of the wealthy relatives of a young Irish friend to whom she was to carry a message that the friend would not be able to sail for America as she had intended.

Nora is mistaken for the other girl and when she recovers consciousness, is surrounded by loving, tender hands and is hailed as "cousin." Her protests that she is not the cousin are unheeded because the doctor attributes them to concussion of the brain.

But Nora's difficulties are by no means at an end when she finally succumbs to the luxury and tenderness of her surroundings. She pays dearly for every bit of comfort which she enjoys in her false position.

William Nigh, Metro's versatile director, announces that his next production will be a five part feature called "Cassidy," produced by Columbia Pictures Corporation. Mr. Nigh will not only direct this production, but will be starred in it, besides being the author. Marguerite Snow will be co-starred with Mr. Nigh.

PAULA SHAY (Ivan)

Mr. Nigh has just completed the direction of "The Kiss Of Hate," a Russian story, in which Ethel Barrymore is starred.

David Thompson, assistant director to Mr. Nigh, will also have a prominent role in "Cassidy." He will play the heavy part. Mr. Thompson was the leading man at Thanhouser for several years, and played opposite Miss Snow in many features produced by that company.

VIOLET MERSEREAU AS "LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY," THE COSTUME IN WHICH SHE APPEARED AT THE UNIVERSAL BALL

When Director Edwin Carewe and his company of Metro players, headed by Mabel Taliaferro left New York for the frozen regions of Port Henry, New York, they looked like an expedition that was ready to make an early spring dash to the North Pole.

The day they left New York it was bitterly cold, and the members of the company were taken to a store in Sixth avenue, where Arctic goods are a specialty, and were all fitted out for the trip.

When they were supplied with garments of wool and furs, Mr. Carewe suggested that they all wear them out into the street and go to the Rolfe-Metro studio to have a picture taken before they left.

Miss Taliaferro has just concluded work on "Her Great Price," which the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., made for the Metro program. Her next starring vehicle will be "The Snowbird."

It is the first time that Miss Taliaferro has appeared in a story dealing with the northland, although she has played in almost everything, ranging from comedy to the Yeats Irish plays in Ireland.

She is enthusiastic over "The Snowbird," aside from the novelty of working in the production.

Among other things which Miss Taliaferro will add to her many accomplishments in the forthcoming feature, will be the driving of a team of Esquimaux dogs over mountain trails.

Many natives of the Canadian border will be used as "extras" in the five-part feature production.

Lund Off to Port Henry

O. A. C. Lund, one of Metro's newest directors, who produced "The Price of Malice," starring Hamilton Revelle has also gone to Port Henry, New York, to make exteriors for "Dorian's Divorce," in which Lionel Barrymore is starred. The company of players appearing in support of Mr. Barrymore is an unusually strong one and includes Grace Valentine, Edgar Davenport and half a score of prominent stage and screen artists. Many of the interior scenes were photographed for "Dorian's Divorce," in the Rolfe studio, before Mr. Lund and Mr. Barrymore went north. The production will be completed immediately upon their return.

It has become necessary to build a studio within a studio at the Rolfe plant, where Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew are at work on the one-reel Metro-Drew comedies.

There are always four or five big feature producing companies at work on the same floor and sometimes, when big courtroom or similar scenes are in production, there are from five to six hundred persons on the studio floor.

So Maxwell Karger, general manager of the Rolfe-Metro studios, has enclosed one corner of the big studio floor especially for Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Drew improvise their speaking lines as they act before the camera, and as both have a keen sense of humor and ready wit at hand, the lines they speak are often excruciatingly funny.

They work very fast in the making of their pictures and do not employ a director. When Mr. Drew is working in a set Mrs. Drew does the directing.

Bushman Almost Loses Fingers

Francis X. Bushman, the Metro star, who is appearing in "The Wall Between,"

MAY ALLISON (METRO) IN THE MAINE WOODS

a forthcoming five-part military production, nearly lost three fingers of his left hand while working in the picture near Savannah, Georgia.

As a young lieutenant of the United States army he was leading a charge up a hill against five hundred negroes, playing the part of natives of Nicaragua in an insurrection.

In attempting to wrest a sword from a giant negro, who had been directed to put up a stubborn fight, the action became too realistic and Mr. Bushman's fingers were cut to the bone.

He was laid up for several days and the other members of the company were given a vacation for that length of time.

The Premo Film Corporation sent its new acting company with the director, Harley Knoles and his assistant, Arthur Edeson, to Saranac Lake, N. Y., to take some of the outdoor scenes of "The Woman of It," which is starring Ethel Clayton and Carlyle Blackwell, who are being supported by Paul McAllister.

Down around the lake the thermometer dropped to thirty below zero. Harley Knoles almost lost the fingers of his right hand. Edeson acquired chilblains. Miss Clayton was made quite ill and was sent back to New York on a special train. The only one who seemed not to mind the zero weather was Carlyle Blackwell.

Ivan Scenario by Kopfstein

A scenario which when completed will have taken a full year to write is that of "Anyman's Wife," an original work for the screen by Jacques Kopfstein, author of "Dwellers in Glass Houses," "Arrows of the Almighty," "Bricks without Straw" and over one hundred other produced photoplays.

In order to write this photoplay Mr. Kopfstein cancelled all his contracts for original plays and adaptations and devoted all his time to this one effort.

Work will commence as soon as a suitable cast is assembled and a director chosen. It is the intention of the Pacemaker Company to assemble a cast of principals to enact every role and negotiations are under way with several well known screen stars for parts in this production.

HARRY HILLIARD AND VIVIAN MARTIN AS THEY APPEAR IN "A MODERN THELMA," WILLIAM FOX PRODUCTION

Instead of one, two well-known directors will be engaged to give their joint efforts to produce the play. The length of "Anyman's Wife" will be either eight or nine reels. It is expected to have this completed and ready for release on the states right plan about the middle of August during the coming year.

Castle Cave was the scene of a vivacious Vitagraph gathering Saturday night, March 18. Arthur Victor Smith, manager of the Vitagraph Studios, was chairman of the committee on arrangements and made a reputation for himself as a magician.

Not that he picked flowers and rabbits from a hat, but because he had several delightful surprises up his sleeve that were not on the bill.

Hughie Mack, the Vitagraph heavy in the laugh department, aided digestion with automatic massage, by arousing the risible of the roastbeefers.

Dick Leslie entertained the gathering with a number of his popular songs, sung in his interesting and entertaining manner.

Garry McGarry, former Vitagraph juvenile lead, now with the Shuberts, was gotten hold of at the last moment by "Vic," as Mr. Smith is affectionately known to the Vitagraphers.

GERTRUDE McCOY PHOTOGRAPHED AT THE GAUMONT FLORIDA STUDIOS IN A COSTUME ESPECIALLY DESIGNED FOR HER BY A NEW YORK DRESSMAKER

Carry brought with him his troupe of Hawaiian singers who entertained the party with their Hawaiian music and singing. Then Garry sang a few songs himself greatly to the delectation of his old friends. It was Garry's treat to Vitagraph.

It was a case of everybody happy, and a reporter recorded the following names among the more than one hundred present: Earle Williams, Antonio Moreno, Harry Morey, Edward Dunn, Harold Foshay, Donald Hall, John T. Kelly, Richard Leslie, Hughie Mack, Thom Mills, Anders Randolf, Templer Saxe, William Shea, Doc Stark, E. A. Turner, Denton Vane, William Lally, Charles Burton, George E. Hedden, William Watkins, Sam Spedon, Doc Dunahue, Walter Arthur, Leonard Smith, Herbert Schmidt, August Wenz, William Blackton, Max Held, Fred Held, Frank Brule, Frank Lawrence, Harry Waldron, Archie Stuart, Arthur Cozine, Doc Kleine, James B. French, Walter Bunyon, Joe Schelderfer, Frank Shaw, George Baker, Paul Scardon, Lawrence Semon, Charles D. Chapman, Edward Thomas, Edward Wentwroth, Wallie Van.

Director John G. Adolfi of the Fox Film Corporation took a company of fifteen from Fort Lee to Bar Harbor last Monday to produce winter scenes for a Fox feature in five reels and found Bar Harbor and its blizzardy greeting almost made to order.

EDGAR LEWIS (Lubin)

Al Cowan, location hunter of the William Fox company, went to Bar Harbor the week before, to pick out a location for the exterior scenes of "A Modern Thelma," and also to purchase a two-masted schooner to burn in one of the spectacular scenes of the production. The schooner was found at Sorrento, and he arranged for its purchase and transference to Somes Sound, and then returned to New York.

In the Adolfi party were J. W. Kellette, Hugh C. McClung, photographer; Ben Kline, assistant cameraman; Harry A. Stillwell, property man; Al Cowan, pathfinder; Joseph Lent, carpenter; Vivian Martin, who is being featured in the picture; Flora Mason, who enacts the role of Britta, Thelma's companion; Maud Sinclair, who portrays Ulrika; Florence Crawford, Mrs. Grace Martin; Harry Hilliard, William H. Tooker and Richard Neill.

This is said to be but a small part of the company at work on "A Modern Thelma," and it is estimated that 4,000 miles of the United States have been traversed from Georgia into Virginia, where, for the first time in the history of motion pictures, the interior of the famous grottoes at Harrisonburg, Va., was filmed, Mr. Adolfi taking along a complete electrical illuminating plant.

At Bar Harbor scenes surrounding a little Norwegian cottage which was taken up from New Jersey, were taken, after the building had been set up in the snow about three miles outside the village of Bar Harbor.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 25.

FOR several weeks past there has been a general reduction of the stock companies of several of the larger Coast studios, and the dismissal of the great number of players has caused the circulation of wild rumors which in some instances cast very discreditable reflections upon the producing organizations.

There are several reasons given by managers at the studios for the reduction in the number of stock players, but the principal answer is that the winter season is now past, and it is possible for the companies to keep up their releases with a smaller number of players. It is now possible to continue work almost every day.

It is the general belief among the rumor circulators that two of the larger studios will add additional staffs shortly for the making of one, two and thre-reel dramatic subjects.

For months these studios have been devoting all of their attention to the making of multiple reel features. These rumors would receive little or no attention by people engaged in the film industry here, were it not for the fact that preceding practically every change of policy by various companies rumors have become current several weeks before it was announced.

In the coming releases of the Signal serial, "The Girl and the Game," the mammoth locomotive of the Mikado type, awarded the grand prize at the San Francisco Exposition, will be seen.

Shortly after the close of the exposition, this locomotive was purchased by the Salt Lake Railway, and when Signal Director J. P. McGowan and his company went to Las Vegas, Nevada, the engine was sent there for them to use.

This is equipped with air reverse gears, automatic low water alarm; the drive wheels are sixty-three inches in diameter, and the cylinders are 26 by 28 inches. The weight is four hundred and fifty thousand pounds, and the cost of building this most powerful passenger locomotive was twenty-six thousand dollars. While on the Nevada desert Director McGowan used this exclusively in railway scenes.

Good-Natured Helen Helps Exhibitors

Los Angeles theatre managers are taking advantage of the good will of Helen Holmes of the "Girl and the Game" Signal serial, and for the past several weeks she has been invited to appear almost nightly at theatres where the episodes of this serial are shown, this in addition to the strenuous work of producing the subject and keeping ahead of the release.

At practically all of the theatres the attendance has been remarkable, and both Miss Holmes and Director McGowan have become popular as curtain speakers.

Within the next few days several new productions will be taken up by several of the Lasky directors, George Melford having completed the Victor Moore-Anita King subject "The Race," which has been shipped, and William C. deMille's latest subject, "The Sowers," has also gone East.

Mr. Melford is now rehearsing a cast for a photoplay in which Sessua Hawakaya, the Japanese actor, and Tsuru Aoki, his wife, will appear in the leading roles.

William C. deMille and Marion Fairfax are engaged in writing a new story, and this director will shortly begin rehearsals.

Frank Reicher is cutting his latest picture, "The Love Mask," which features Cleo Ridgley and Wallace Reid, and he will also begin a new production within a few days.

Director General Cecil B. deMille has selected a very capable cast to support Marie Doro and her leading man, Elliot Dexter, in "The Heart of Nora Flynn," which is now being filmed.

The cast includes Lola May, a former prominent leading woman of the speaking stage who has been filling an engagement in pictures on the West Coast, and little Billy Jacobs, aged five years, who has appeared in a number of photoplays.

Others for this love story of members of a New York Irish settlement are Ernest Joy, Charles West, Margaret George and Mrs. Lewis McCord. Miss Doro appears as an Irish nurse, and Mr. Dexter as an Irish chauffeur.

Famous English Landmark in Replica

For "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," being filmed by James Young at the Lasky studio, a replica of the ballroom at the casino at Bath, the famous English watering place, has been built to appear as it did in the latter part of the eighteenth century.

More than two hundred people were used in the ballroom scenes, and the costumes for this were made especially for the Lasky company by Alfreda Hoffman, until recently connected with one of the most celebrated New York costumers.

A decidedly Irish comedy with scenes laid in an Irish settlement in a city, originally planned for St. Patrick's Day release on the Triangle program, was finished last week at the Keystone studio.

The title of this is "A Love Riot," in which three couples take very active part, the six principals being Charles Murray, Louise Fazenda, Harry Booker, Alice Davenport, Weyland Trask and Dora Rogers.

The direction of this was in charge of Dick Jones, supervised by Mack Sennett. The comedy contains in addition to a number of very unusual situations brought about by the flirtatious parties a most remarkable finish in which the use of trusty guns by the Irish and a marvelous chase are important parts.

Another Keystone whirlwind nearing completion has been titled "A Bath-house Blunder." Del Henderson is directing the funmakers in this, and his cast includes Mae Busch, Polly Moran, Charles Hayes, Joseph Belmont and Blanche Payson.

The principal part is that taken by Miss Bush, who conducts a swimming school, and is one of the instructors as well. Many scenes are filmed in the interior of her human aquarium which is built about the mammoth tank of the Keystone stage.

Plans were discussed at the semi-occasional meeting-dinner-dance of the Scream Club at Hotel Alexandria, Los Angeles, on St. Patrick's Eve, for the formation of an organization which it is hoped will ultimately grow into the one big club of writers, artists and players of the West Coast.

Initiative and "Pep" Appreciated by Club

This organization has never adopted by-laws or constitution, nor has it elected officers, it having been the unique policy of the membership to depend upon any member who had the initiative to make arrangements for a meeting about the festive board.

Publicity writers and representatives of motion picture trade journals, automatically become one of the Screamers when accepting such a position. There are no dues. According to plans discussed the impromptu methods of the past will be succeeded by organization.

During the dinner short speeches were made by the original members of the organization, including Tom Walsh of the Biograph company, Ford Beebe of Signal, Bennie Ziedman of Fine Arts, and others.

Members were notified that Screamers are to write the column of "quips" for the April 1 issue of the Chicago Tribune for B. L. T.'s "A Line o' Type or Two," and the air was filled with wheezes.

Invitation was exteuded to David Horsley to act as host at a dinner to the Screamers, and the invitation was accepted by Carlyle Robinson of the Horsley studios, and it is very probable the next meeting will be held in a lion's den. The St. Patrick's eve dinner was arranged for by Clarke Irvine.

The sight-seeing busses of Los Angeles have finally appreciated the great interest of the public in motion picture making, and have added Universal City, Selig Zoo and David Horsley's Bostock Jungle Arena and film plant on their daily rubberneck itinerary. These carryall automobiles take hundreds of people to the studios daily.

The mammoth stage at the Horsley plant was used several days last week for one set representing the ballroom of a palace at Simla, India, in which a military ball was held for the coming Mutual Master picture, "Nadji's Sacrifice," which features Marguerite Gibson, William Clifford, and is being made under the direction of Edward Alexander.

More than one hundred people, all attired in evening gowns and appropriate military costumes, made the scenes filmed very gorgeous ones.

Light All the Time at Horsley's

The David Horsley studio has been equipped with additional electric lighting devices furnished by the Winfield-Kerner Company of Los Angeles, making it possible now to film by artificial lights on all stages at one time.

This equipment greatly facilitates the producers and makes it possible in the future to turn out all subjects on schedule time. This gives to the Horsley studio one of the greatest artificial light equipments of any on the Coast.

The popularity of the Horsley players at local functions is increasing almost weekly, and every few days members of the producing staff are requested to appear at this or that public entertainment.

Last week William Clifford gave the death scene of Sir Henry Irving's "Bells," and Crane Wilbur gave a reading of original poems at a division meeting of the Masons at Pasadena.

Another of the photoplay colony on the program was Kenneth O'Hara, publicity man from Inceville, who gave vocal imitations of Harry Lauder.

The manager of the David Horsley Bostock Zoo entertainments given daily with a boxing contest in which Fitz, the boxing kangaroo, meets all comers, has found it necessary to eliminate this portion of the program because Fitz has won every battle, and there are no "comers."

This kangaroo was used by Bob Fitzsimmons when he trained at Bergen Beach near New York a number of years ago.

Residents of the numerous apartment houses in the vicinity of David Horsley's Bostock Jungle Zoo seriously considered asking local courts for an injunction to prevent circuses from occupying an adjoining lot.

The past week a circus played near the Bostock Zoo, and the calling back and forth of the animals was almost continuous, it being the general opinion of all that if the cages were opened there would be a reunion of many lost brothers and sisters.

The Horsley Cub Comedy company is filming "The Winning Punch," in which George Ovey, by the aid of weights in his glove, knocks out the terrible Swede.

The fight is an illegal one, and immediately after the Swede, George George, takes the count, officers rush in and the only one who does not flee is the prostrate fighter.

He is taken to the police station, and when the gong of the fire alarm rings thinks it is the signal for the fight to begin, and starts cleaning out the police station

"Mary, Mary," with Vola Smith

"Mary, Mary" is the title given a comedy drama which is being filmed by Walter Coyle for the Biograph in two or three reels.

Vola Smith has been cast for the name part with a supporting cast which includes Jack Mulhall and Clara McDowell.

The principal character is the ward of an eccentric professor who is a student of mental diseases, and many of the scenes are laid around the action of a patient who escapes from an insane hospital.

The other Biograph company, under the direction of J. Farrel Macdonald, is soon to take up the production of an underworld story. Neither the title nor the cast for this has as yet been decided upon.

The recent trouble with Mexico, and the threatening war rumors, caused an investigation to be made by Jesse L. Lasky regarding the equipment of the company, and facts compiled by Fred Kley, the business manager, show that in two hours' notice the company could call to the colors more than three hundred men, and sufficient automobiles to transport twice that number to any given locality.

The prop rooms contain almost enough guns and similar equipment for the men, and it has been found the Lasky company could well protect its own property.

Announcement has been made by Jesse L. Lasky and William Wyatt, chairman of the Los Angeles committee for the Actors' Home endowment fund for a dinner to be given Wednesday, March 22, at Huntington Hotel, Pasadena, and on April 5 a dinner at the Maryland. Both of these events will be of the nature of a dinner dance with a continuous vaudeville program between dances and courses. Both hotels are wintering places for the ultra rich of the East and northern countries.

The Actor's Fund will receive sixty per cent, of the gross proceeds, which it is expected will amount to fifteen hundred dollars in each instance.

The hotels have been specially wired, and cameramen representing the various news weeklies will make motion pictures of the dinner.

Grace Cunnard in Popularity Contest

Wires from W. A. Bach, manager Universal Film Company at Toronto, Canada, brings the news to Universal City that Grace Cunard is leader of a big popularity contest being conducted there.

This will close shortly, and because of the great margin the Universal serial star has gained, it is expected at the studio that she will win the contest.

Production of the Vitagraph serial, "Hearts of Three," adapted from the Jack London story, has been discontinued by William Walbert and company of players owing to some misunderstanding with regard to rights for this story.

Previous to the time these rights were sold by Jack London to the Vitagraph Company, it is alleged he made certain other contracts with other producing companies, and the Vitagraph Company learning of this discontinued work of production until the matter was completely straightened out.

"Little Miss Adventure," a three-reel comedy by William E. Wing, is being produced by Vitagraph Director William Walbert. Mary Anderson appears in this in the name part, that of the little sister whose older sisters secure all the favors of the family, and she has but a very poor leaving.

The male lead is taken by Webster Campbell, the part being that of a nephew of an elderly woman of means who has observed his frailties and selected for him a bride who has the qualifications he lacks. The aunt's will prescribes that when he becomes engaged to this girl, he and the girl will receive her inheritance.

The older sisters are taken by Carmen Phillips and Corrine Griffith, the aunt by Anne Schafer, and Otto Lederer appears in a prominent part.

Director Rollin S. Sturgeon, of the Vitagraph Company, is now preparing the script for his next Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, which will be an adaptation from Cleveland Moffatt's "Through the Wall."

The story is laid in Belgium, and will require a number of very handsome settings, including a Notre Dame Cathedral.

Water Nymphs in a Vogue Comedy

A great number of water nymphs in charge of Neptune worked last week with Director Jack Dillon of Vogue Comedies in the filming of "Bungling Bill's Dream." This shows the visit of Bungling Bill to the habitat of the sea nymphs and their ruler.

The water stuff was filmed at Laguna, where there are many beautiful locations, and the principals are Paddy Maguire, Rena Rogers and Arthur Moon.

While directing a scene of a comedy in which an aeroplane was used, Rube Miller of the Vogue Company was injured, and as the result is now producing pictures from an easy chair with crutches within his reach.

While gazing skyward Mr. Miller stepped on a large nail, which penetrated to the ball of his foot to the bone. Pending his recovery it was necessary to get up another picture, as he had been playing a prominent part in the aeroplane comedy.

The title of the picture now being made is "A Count By Proxy," wherein two convicts escape from prison and overpower a count and his valet, forcing them to exchange clothes. In their disguise the escaped convicts are hunted down by officers of a matrimonial agency in whose hands has been placed the order for them to secure a count to marry the daughter of the man of wealth.

The count by proxy is successful in his courtship, but at the hour of the wedding, the true man of blue blood puts in an appearance, and walks away with the bride. Madge Kirby, Alice Neice, Henry Keernen and Arthur Traveris are the principals.

Upon advice from the New York office of the Universal Film Company, a new policy was inaugurated last week by the Christie Film Company, which provides that all future subjects shall contain more characters of eccentric or comedy make-up.

In accordance with this the players under the direction of Al. E. Christie last week took up the filming of "Pancakes and Lunatics," which will be made in two reels. Eddie Lyons appears as the just married man, and Billie Rhodes his wife, while Lee Moran takes the part of Dr. Bug.

The bride's inadequate culinary artistry is the cause of a series of misunderstandoings, all of which are traced to the pancakes in which she failed to use soda.

Both of the newly-weds have a hard time keeping out of the insane asylum because of the charges made against one another, but the reconciliation is brought about before the padded cells are needed.

Pugilism Basis of a "U"

A son of wealth incognito posing as an ex-pugilist while in search of adventure in which he wishes to earn his own livelihood is the basis of the plot of "The Day of Days," a two-reel Universal picture being produced from an original scenario by F. McGrew Willis, directed by William Worthington.

The son of wealth is taken by Herbert Rawlinson. At a summer resort he secures employment as a physical instructor, and there a romance is begun. He eventually secures the promise of the maid for her hand, and she in turn induces her father to employ him as manager of his estate.

The groom has planned to surprise the bride and her parents just prior to the wedding, and a few hours before the appointed hour goes to his home to secure clothing and funds.

His mother has just caused the home to be closed while she goes abroad, and a new caretaker being in charge makes it impossible for him to enter his home, thus causing the embarrassment of his borrowing funds from his prospective father-in-law.

But on the steamer he meets his mother and explanations follow. Agnes Vernon, who formerly played opposite Herbert Rawlinson, is cast for the feminine lead in this picture. The other members of the cast are Helen Wright, Ruby Cox, T. D. Crittenden, Jack Conley and William Canfield.

A one reel Universal story being made is entitled "The Sea Lily," and features Thomas Jefferson as the aged light-house keeper who finds a baby girl on the beach. To the child is tied a bottle containing a will and an identification.

The part of the girl is taken by little Zoe Beck, and later when she grows to womanhood the part is played by Marjorie Ellison. There is a rivalry between a fisher lad and the light-house keeper's assistant for the hand of the girl, which results in the playmate of childhood days being successful in winning her hand.

The heavy is played by Burton C. Law,

GRACE CUNARD IN HER "PEG OF THE RING" COSTUME

who is author of the story, and the juvenile lead by Frank Newberg.

"Graft" Company on 19th Chapter

The "Graft" serial company are working on the nineteenth episode under the direction of Richard Stanton.

Episode number eighteen has some very remarkable settings built in replica of the underground opium dens of San Francisco prior to the earthquake, and is entitled "The Hidden City of Crime," and brings out the fact that business men depend upon the underworld for their income.

The work of filming a five-reel feature entitled "Bobbie of the Ballet," adapted from the story by Grant Carpenter, has been commenced at Universal City with Louise Lovely and Jay Belasco in the principal parts. Others in the cast are Gene Hathaway, Gilmore Hammond, Lon Chaney, Lule Warrenton and Gretchen Lederer, who appears in the role of a vampire.

Miss Lovely takes the part of a member of the pony ballet of a musical comedy company, who wins the attention of a young man of fortune who is just fresh from college and who had previously devoted his attentions to the passe prima donna.

As the dancer is forced to support her aged mother and small brother and sister from her meager earnings, she finds this almost impossible after the season closes. She is given financial assistance by a crook who lives in the adjoining apartment.

Later he tries to force her to aid him in his thievery for the money advanced, and cruelty on his part is prevented by the young man of fortune who has just learned her whereabouts.

Numerous attempts of the vampire prima donna to blighten the romance are frustrated, and the persistent efforts of the young man's mother to prevent the marriage of her son and the dancer are overcome.

"Maggie McGady's Choice" is a one-reel comedy melodrama being filmed under the direction of Directoress Cleo Madison, who plays the name part. Supporting in this are William Mong, Edward Hearne, Marguerite Whistler and Ray Hanford.

The story contained in this scenario shows an unsophisticated Irish girl who becomes infatuated with a pickpocket and confidence worker because of his attractive clothing and goodly sized roll, but she sees the folly of her ways, and finally accepts the hand of her former sweetheart, the plumber.

Oriental Setting for Myrtle Gonzalez

A one-reel romance with an Oriental atmosphere is being filmed by the Lynn Reynolds Company in the making of "The Pilgrimage of Ali Ben."

Myrtle Gonzalez is featured in this as the daughter of Ali, who is on his annual pilgrimage to Mecca, where he is to sell the daughter.

While en route she becomes infatuated with a passing traveler, and learning that the admiration is mutual she consents to his stealing her away in the night.

Val Paul appears as Ali Ben, and the other characters are taken by Fred Church, Walter Belasco and William Grinley.

A pretty story of a blighted romance is revealed in the two-reel subject, "Heart Aches," being produced by Lloyd B. Carleton.

This pertains to the chance meeting of a college youth who lives beyond his monthly checks, and is forced to give up his college career because of a mortgage on the farm.

During his last few days at college, he meets an attractive girl, and their admiration for one another is mutual.

The girl returning from a track meet at the University campus finds her grandmother dead, and a letter that instructs the girl to make her home with the early day sweetheart of her grandmother, and upon the day she is betrothed she is to open a letter left by her grandmother.

The grandmother's sweetheart proves to be the grandfather of the youth, and the courtship begun on the campus is continued when she reaches his grandfather's home.

When they become engaged she opens her grandmother's letter and finds it to be the mortgage on his grandfather's estate. The four principals in this are Emory Johnson, Dorothy Davenport, Alfred Allen and Helen Wright.

According to reports to be heard at the Fine Arts studio, an author fully satisfied with the production of his photoplay, has at last been found in the person of William Everett Wing, who wrote the Russian story to be released under the title "Sold for Marriage."

TOM PERSONS, MANAGER OF THE SELIG JUNGLE ZOO

Mr. Wing attended a private showing of the film at the Fine Arts studio prior to its shipment to New York, and when he came from the projecting room it is said he was overflowing with praise for Lillian Gish, Frank Bennett, A. D. Sears and Director William Christy Cabanne. Miss Gish's work in this subject, Mr. Wing maintains, is the best of her career.

Underworld Story for Norma Talmadge

An underworld story of the "Jimmie Valentine" type is to be the next Fine Arts vehicle for Norma Talmadge. This was written by Bernard McConville and contains three big dramatic parts.

Ralph Lewis appears in one of the principal roles, while Eugene Palette, who has been very successful in slum characterizations, will appear in another. This play is now in rehearsal and active production will be begun shortly.

Owen Moore, the Fine Arts leading man, will leave for New York within the next few days to spend a week with his wife, Mary Pickford, and confer with her before she signs any of the contracts which are now offered her by various film companies. He will be absent from the studio about three weeks.

Thanks to shrewd detective work, copies of the following telegrams, which passed between Bert Leston Taylor, who is known as the Longacre of the Chicago Tribune, and the Los Angeles Scream Club, have fallen into our hands:

"B. L. T., Chicago Tribune: Scream Club, composed of Los Angeles film publicity men, in executive session, accepts challenge to conduct your column April first, and challenges you to make good by wiring acceptance immediately. J. C. Jessen, for Scream Club."

"Chicago, 3-1-16. J. C. Jessen, Scream Club, Los Angeles: Shoot. B. L. T."

From which we infer that one might as well order his Chicago Tribune for April 1 in advance.

How many letters and telegrams of inquiry does it take to "deluge" a person or office? Some authorities say hundreds, others say thousands. The fact remains that press agents are continually reporting their various offices as "deluged" with inquiries and requests for booking. Figures are now in order.

mysteries! For instance, we present herewith one of the latest photographs of the human back. This particular stripling, according to no less an authority than the rubber stamp of the Fox publicity office, is Theda Bare-a. Any mystery there might have been regarding the real name of this actress, or how she came by it, or whether it is appropriate, is hereby solved.

Irving Bacheller has resigned from the board of directors of the Mirror Films, Inc., as he finds that his literary engagements do not give him the time required for a faithful performance of his duty in that position.

The following playlet, drawn from life, the life of the Carolina mountains, is vouched for by the annexed "still," and is offered as an actual experience of the Frohman Amusement Company's party which went down to Carolina in January to make the scenes for "Then I'll Come Back to You."

Characters: Director George Irving, Alice Brady, Jack Sherrill, Leo Gordon, Detec-a-tive Allen.

Scene: A campfire in the mountains, where a scene had just been made.

Discovered: Alice, Jack and Leo, standing about the campfire.

Enter, Detec-a-tive Allen, dressed in a coat of many colors, a shave of several weeks back, and pants in a high state of disrepair.

Allen.
What you all doin' in these year mountains?

Alice.
Why, the idea!

Allen.
Don't you get fresh with me, young woman; I'm Detec-a-tive Allen.

Leo.
So you're a detective?

Allen.
Yes, I studied detective by correspondence. I paid $18 for ten lessons at the school in Kansas City, and I learned so quick that I didn't have a single lesson sent back.

Jack.
What was the first lesson?

Allen.
Have confidence in yourself.

Alice.
Are you still studying?

Allen.
No, I'm a graduate; but I send 'em $2 a year, jest to keep up with the latest dodges.

Jack.
That's a fine pair of handcuffs.

Allen.
Yep; but I lost the key.

Leo.
Aren't you afraid to be alone in the woods?

Allen.
Nope; only person I'm afraid of is my wife. She gives me the dickens for not earning any rewards.

(Enter Director Irving. He is introduced to Allen, who promptly presents his license to detect, signed by the correspondence school. The certificate also thanks, in the name of the school, all who extend any aid or courtesy to the bearer.)

Irving.
Very glad to have you with us, Mr. Allen. Where do you live?

Allen.
I don't live; jest travel around.

Irving.
Do you get a salary from the state?

Allen.
Oh no, jest the rewards.

Jack.
Have you caught anyone yet?
Allen.
No, not yet; I've been doing this sort of work for fourteen years, and the criminals around here all know me so well they keep out o' the way. Reckon I'll have to go up to N'york with you folks. I hear there are plenty of criminals up there.
Leo.
Why don't you go after the reward Mr.

GEORGE IRVING IN THE PRESENCE OF "THE LAW"

Sherrill offered? He lost his tonsils and offers $50 for their return.
Allen.
I'll keep my eyes open for 'em.

There is a good story from the west, of Jane Bernoudy riding a spirited horse in a costume subject, of how the horse reared and plunged while the enthusiastic populace was shouting "God Save the King!" of how Miss Bernoudy tried in vain to quiet her steed, and then as the shout continued, replied: "God will have to, for I can't with this horse." We would like very much to print it, but we fear to. Not only might many persons regard it as sacrilegious, but the ghost of the first author might rise up and haunt us.

One of the more brilliant of the younger members of the Green Room Club, New York, is at work on the scenario of an eight-reel feature, dealing with life among the garlic growers of southern Italy. The picture is to be called "The Breath of a Nation."

We have discovered why the ancient Greeks and Romans, masters of pantomime though they were, could never produce a motion picture. In those days there were no framed photographs for the characters to pick up from library table or dresser, and gaze at musingly.

Elmendorf Travel Talk Pictures on April 15

Twelve Lectures a Year, Either for Outright Purchase or Percentage Booking, Is Plan of Globe-Trotter—School Superintendents Endorse Travelogues

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chicago, Ill., March 24.

THE Elmendorf Travel Talk Company was recently organized with offices in the Schiller Building, Chicago, for the purpose of distributing through courses of lectures the famous Dwight Elmendorf travel pictures to photoplay houses throughout the United States.

Mr. Elmendorf in his extensive travels for the past twenty-five years has been collecting photographs and more recently motion pictures of every section of the globe.

Much of this film, which was taken in Europe before the war, can never be replaced.

It all represents the best of photography and has been hand colored in Mr. Elmendorf's laboratory under his supervision.

These pictures were used to accompany his lectures at two-dollar prices in the larger cities of the country.

It is the plan of this company to start releasing on April 15 a series of twelve lectures a year. Each lecture will include about two reels of film and one hundred slides, selected from Mr. Elmendorf's vast collection, and will be delivered by an experienced lecturer who has either accompanied Mr. Elmendorf on his travels or else is thoroughly acquainted with the countries visited.

These yearly courses of twelve lectures will be open to the exhibitor in all the towns in the United States and can be purchased outright or booked on a percentage basis. They have on hand enough material for five courses of lectures to be spread over five years.

The service department, in charge of Phil H. Solomon and S. S. Lippert, both men of wide film experience, will have charge of the booking of these pictures.

Before launching this proposition form letters were sent to the superintendents of high schools in the vicinity of Chicago, explaining their plan and asking them to recommend the best photoplay house in their town.

Practically every superintendent responded in a most cordial tone, offering their co-operation in making the series of pictures a success should they be booked in their city.

Within the past few weeks the roadmen sent out in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio have succeeded in booking these pictures to one theatre in nearly every city visited.

Associated with Mr. Elmendorf in this enterprise are Dr. Albert A. Lowenthal, an eminent Chicago alienist, and William Cadoret, a well-known motion picture exhibitor of Kankakee. Mr. Cadoret will act as Western representative for the company.

"Invisible Enemy" Ready for E-K-O in Few Days

Five Reel Subject Designed to Aid Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis Is Backed by Association with 3,500 Offices to Guard Public Against Consumption Ravages

AN elaborate production dealing with the perplexing problem of tuberculosis will be released in a few days by the E-K-O Film Company, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City, recently organized by Emma K. Oswald, of Los Angeles, for the direct distribution of "The Invisible Enemy," a five-part photoplay, produced some time ago in California.

The film has the endorsement of the National Association of the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis and presents in story form the combat of man against its deadliest foe.

The general manager of the new firm is George Szirmay who, as press and publicity man of long standing and as a special writer on health subjects, is thoroughly familiar with the wide scope and ramification of the various national organizations engaged in social welfare work.

"In distributing 'The Invisible Enemy' throughout the country," he said to the MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative, "I am going to inaugurate an entirely new policy of distribution which will enable both the exhibitor and state's-right buyer to get the benefit of the most effective co-operation.

"The far-reaching influence of the National Association with its 3,500 local agencies for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis scattered throughout the country is at our command and is back of our five-reel subject.

"I have in recent years followed closely the work of various national organizations whose campaign is carried on solely for the benefit of humanity and my firm conviction is that the screen is primarily destined to become the most powerful medium in the dissemination of knowledge.

"Thus shall it take its place as a factor in the betterment of the human race and in the actual conservation of human lives.

"The progress made along the lines of preventive medicine, the constant cry for the promotion of public health, industrial hygiene and sex education, clearly indicate the role that is awaiting the motion picture in the betterment of general social conditions.

"The social welfare work of this country, carried on a stupendous scale, needs 'accelerated publicity' and, with the popularity that motion pictures enjoy, the screen is the most effective medium for the voice of knowledge and wisdom to reach the brains and hearts of the people.

"By extending the scope of the motion picture in producing sociological photoplays that will not merely deal with sex problems and divorce, I perceive possibilities that can readily be put into practice.

"My views on this subject are fully confirmed by leaders in social welfare work.

"Concerted action with them and eventually with the exhibitor cannot fail in producing the desired results. I shall devote in the future all my attention to the production of photoplays along lines that will mean real education."

ANUFACTURING CO.

ON the regular Universal Program every week in the year you will find more genuine stars in really fine plays than on all other programs combined. By star we mean a name that is a genuine box-office attraction. Playing a leading part in a picture or two does not make a star. Continued good work that wins the public; genuine ability and a personality that makes for an actor or actress millions of friends among the fans—that is the Universal test of a star's calibre. Look at the monster showing which follows, constituting the features for the week beginning April 17, and you will realize that to get the true star quality you must tie up to the Universal Program.

Cleo Madison in "Her Bitter Cup." Twelfth Red Feather Production. Directed by Cleo Madison and Joe King. Released April 17. A daring and unusual photodrama which gives this great emotional actress a marvelous opportunity. Poor and of lowly birth, Cleo sacrifices her womanly honor to enable her to help her friends among the weak and downtrodden. She leads a strike and rescues a miserly factory owner from his burning building. She discards the dope fiend who wrought her downfall. He is the brother of the man she loves and marries. The miser is their father. Plot, situations and scenes are unusual in the extreme. The visualization of the dope fiend's dream that he has crucified Cleo is one of the most daring scenes ever filmed. A tremendous production.

Herbert Rawlinson in "The Best Man's Bride." A two-reel Gold Seal Society Drama with Francella Billington. Directed by Wm. Worthington. Released April 18. Every fan knows that Herbert Rawlinson is a handsome, virile, vigorous and energetic actor who puts the punch into his work that gets over big. Herbert is traveling. He stops off to be best man for a cousin. He proves himself so far the best man that he captures the little bride. All sorts of complications keep up the interest, and the story is big enough to pad out another reel or two. A big picture, clean, wholesome and boiled down to the shortest possible footage—that's the Universal Program standard.

"Royal Love," Three-Reel Romantic Victor Drama. Released April 19. When first shown this magnificent picture was in four reels, packed with interest; but the film editor said "Cut," and it is on the program in three reels so crowded with action that it will prove a winner wherever shown. Fight for love and a throne; a woman's choice between duty and her heart's desire, furnish the themes for one of the very best romantic plays of the season. Realistic settings and lavish staging give an enjoyable atmosphere to the picture. An enormous production even for the Universal Program.

"Oh What a Whopper," Two-Reel Baseball Comedy. Big U. Released April 20. You've heard of baseball nuts, of course; if you want to see one in action see this hilarious laugh producer. Mr. Baseball Nut creates a riot at the ball game and is rescued from a mob of frenzied fans by a bunch of cops who land him in a cell. His wife bails him out and he solemnly raises his right hand and says "Never again," just as though he meant it. A picture that will send any audience into spasms of laughter.

King Baggot in "The Haunted Bell," with Edna Hunter. Two-Reel Imp Mystery Drama. Directed by Henry Otto. Released April 21. What would you think if you had a bronze bell of odd design but no special value; if a man offered you a thousand dollars for it; then when you were puzzling over that fact the bell began striking the hours; if you discovered a dead man in your library, and the bell—GONE? The fans know what King Baggot can do with a picture like this and they enjoy Edna Hunter's beauty and fine acting, too. By the way, Miss Hunter was chosen from among all the famous screen beauties to represent the moving picture industry in the Shakespeare Tercentennial in New York City this coming June. Big evidence of more big value on the Big U Program.

"The Passing of Hell's Crown," with Harry D. Carey and Olive Fuller Golden. Thrilling Western Drama. 101-Bison. Directed by Jacques Jaccard. Released April 22. If the "$2 Picture" people produced this screen drama they would pad it three reels and choke it down your throat, first carefully relieving you of all your surplus cash. The public is NOT tired of Westerns. It is tired only of ham actors in cowboy clothes who can't ride, or act, posing on livery nags on the outskirts of their studio town. When Harry Carey and his band of Rough Riders appear in a Western you get the thrilliest pictures ever filmed and human stories that make friends for your house and make your nickels grow to dollar size. Book Universal Westerns every chance you get.

Ben Wilson in "His World of Darkness," with Clara Beyers and Charles Ogle. Three-Reel Imp Society Drama with a heart punch. Directed by Ben Wilson. Released April 23. Let's suppose that you are happily married. Suddenly you are stricken blind. Your best friend takes advantage of you and steals the affections of your wife. You recover your sight unknown to them and learn of their treachery. If you could conceive what you would do under these circumstances you might possibly guess how it is worked out in one of the most novel and startling situations Ben Wilson has ever staged. A picture that will hold any audience spellbound. Fully up to the Universal's high program standard.

KLEINE PHILADELPHIA EXCHANGE GETS TOP PRICE FOR "GLORIA'S ROMANCE," WITH BILLIE BURKE

"GLORIA'S ROMANCE," the new Billie Burke serial which is to released by the George Kleine Company on May 22, has even at this early date made film history for the Philadelphia Kleine office.

Harry Scott, the manager, has his hands full answering the special letters, long distance phone calls and telegrams that are pouring in every hour.

So keen is competition among exhibitors for the first showing of this film that the top notch price is being offered.

Although only two reels each week will be shown, making about a half hour's entertainment on theatre programs, two rival houses in a town in Mr. Scott's district—outside of Philadelphia—have each bid $1,000 a week for the privilege of having the first run of the picture.

As New York City itself has up to date a $1,200 bid as its highest, it will readily be seen how phenomenal is the $1,000 price for a theatre outside the metropolis.

The decision as to which theatre will get the coveted prize has not yet been made, nor is it yet known which Philadelphia house will have the initial showing of the Billie Burke film novel.

It will be necessary for the Quaker City branch to enlarge its quarters to efficiently handle the increased business.

Arthur C. Melvin, Kleine-Edison representative from the Philadelphia office, has been promoted to the managership of the George Kleine office in Kansas City, Mo., and will leave at once to take up his new duties.

Mr. Melvin was at one time assistant manager of the Philadelphia office of the World Film Corporation.

On March 27 the Philadelphia Metro office was one year old.

The lusty infant celebrated by adding a two hundred dollar increase over previous weeks of business during the last seven days of its first year.

In the kaleidoscopic changes peculiar to the film business in this section, it is pleasant to record that the same management that started the office is still holding it down.

J. D. Clark is president of Metro and C. U. Bethell, treasurer.

The employees have been increased one hundred per cent. in the year. "Peggy," with Billie Burke, is one of the big hits of the Triangle output in all of the territory controlled by the Philadelphia office managed by J. H. Butner.

J. W. Pope succeeds C. G. Powell as manager of the Philadelphia office of the Mutual Film Corporation.

Mr. Pope was manager of the Continental Feature Film Corporation until this name was supplanted by Mutual Masterpictures, since which time the latter have been under his special jurisdiction both in the city and the district.

At present Mr. Pope will manage both features and service part of the Mutual in that territory.

HOWARD IS BLUEBIRD HEAD IN CINCINNATI

W. K. Howard, former assistant manager of the World Film Company's office in Cincinnati, has resigned to become manager of the Bluebird Film Exchange in Cincinnati.

ROSENBERG, DE LUXE FEATURE FILM COMPANY, VISITS NEW YORK

M. Rosenberg, president of the De Luxe Feature Film Corporation, operating fiim exchanges in Portland, Ore., and Seattle, Wash., was a recent visitor in New York.

Mr. Rosenberg recently purchased "The Ne'er-Do-Well" from Sol Lesser for the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana and reports successful engagements in Seattle, Portland, Spokane, Everett and Salem. These engagements covered from one to three-week runs.

Mr. Rosenberg is also interested in "The Spoilers" for several of the Southern states with Sol Lesser. This territory is handled through the R. & L. Feature Film Company of Washington, D. C.

The De Luxe Feature Film Corporation is in charge of Mr. Rosenberg's brother, Al. Rosenberg.

OMAHA EXCHANGES BUSY; "CHAPLINS IN DEMAND"—WEISFELDT; "BLUEBIRDS GO BIG"—MITCHELL

MAX J. WEISFELDT, exchange manager for the Mutual at Omaha, Neb., declares the Charley Chaplin salary paid by the Mutual was one of the biggest advertising ideas in modern motion picture progress.

"Adkins Brothers, proprietors of the Besse Theatre in Omaha, wanted the first run of Charley Chaplin because they said it was such a fine thing to advertise," said Weisfeldt. I ask fifty dollars a day for the Chaplin pictures and I have a full list.

"Charley Chaplin's first year's salary has been paid already, as the result of the advertising gained. It was wonderful."

Extensive repairs are being made in the offices of the General exchange in Omaha. Rapidly increasing business, says Manager C. W. Taylor, made the improvement necessary. Mr. Taylor's office has been enlarged, as well as the other departments, while the waiting lobby has been made smaller.

J. Earl Abrams, special representative of the Melies Manufacturing Company of New York, visited the General exchange in Omaha last week and appointed J. W. Rachman to represent the Melies company in that territory. Rachman will call on the larger exhibitors and interest them in Knickerbocker features and Vim comedies, which are made by the Melies company.

Rachman is a native of Omaha and formerly operated the Grand Theatre at Sixteenth and Cuming streets. He will cover the territory south to Kansas City and west to the coast, out of Omaha.

Omaha, Neb., film men are calling attention to the fact that while Omaha is fifteenth in the list of cities in the country, it is eighth in motion picture importance.

Jake Mitchell, in charge of the Bluebird exchange in Omaha, inaugurated an advertising stunt the other day when bluebirds, migrating northward, arrived in Nebraska. "Bluebirds Come to Nebraska" said his advertisements. He went to considerable trouble in getting a local story about the unusually big flight of bluebirds northward, called attention to their sweet singing, and when the reporters wrote up the story, they added at the bottom that Mr. Mitchell was with the Bluebird Film exchange.

"Bluebirds are going all over Nebraska," he said to MOTION PICTURE NEWS. "Exhibitors come to the city and look up my office to drop in and sign contracts. My roadmen are kept very busy. Whether it is because your paper has called their attention to Bluebirds, I don't know, but I do know business is booming. It has been ever since the first triple-page announcements appeared in MOTION PICTURE NEWS."

H. C. Phillips has resigned from the position of roadman with the Mutual exchange in Omaha, and H. H. Luttbeg of Fort Dodge, Ia., formerly an exhibitor, has succeeded him.

MERIT FILM COMPANY MOVES

To meet its increasing business and to better serve the motion picture exhibitors of the state of New York and northern New Jersey, the Merit Film Corporation has removed from its present offices at 110 West Fortieth street to the Leavitt Building, 126 to 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York City.

The Merit Film Corporation, which is the exclusive distributor of all Ivan productions in the state of New York, is now amply equipped to care for the needs of its business.

SAN FRANCISCO EXCHANGES INSIST ON PAY-IN-ADVANCE PLAN

The film exchanges of San Francisco affiliated with the San Francisco Film Exchange Board of Trade, together with the few exchanges of the city which are not members of the organization, have joined hands in placing in effect the cash in advance system of film rentals.

For some time they have been working under a system whereby credit was limited to one week, after which all films would be sent out cash on delivery, but this has failed to stop all the leaks and irresponsible exhibitors have been enabled to secure service for nothing for a short period, to the loss of exchanges and legitimate exhibitors alike.

Under the plan that will be placed in operation at once bills for service will be sent to exhibitors one week in advance, and if these are not paid by Friday of the preceding week all films will be sent out collect on delivery.

While the new ruling has been generally received with satisfaction on the part of exhibitors, there are some who seem to feel that this is a reflection on their personal standing, especially some who have been in the business many years and have always settled their accounts promptly.

They are being assured by exchange managers that such is not the case, but that a radical step was found necessary to protect their joint interests.

Concerns such as the Progressive Motion Picture Corporation, the Triangle Film Corporation and the William Fox Film Corporation have been securing payment in advance for their service under different plans for some time with success, and there seems to be no reason why other exchanges cannot do the same to advantage.

ELECTRIC THEATRE SUPPLY BUYS RIGHTS TO "ONE DAY" FOR SIX STATES

The Electric Theatre Supply Company of Philadelphia, through H. Schwalbe, has purchased from B. S. Moss the rights to exhibit "One Day" in eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, southern New Jersey, Virginia and the District of Columbia. A record price is said to have been paid for the rights.

Written as a sequel to Elinor Glyn's "Three Weeks," "One Day," according to reports, has been making box office history, and return engagements are the rule.

The feature broke the record for attendance at Marcus Loew's New York Theatre recently.

E. AND R. JUNGLE SELLS COMEDY RIGHTS TO CELEBRATED PLAYERS FOR ILLINOIS AND INDIANA

The Celebrated Players Exchange, Wabash avenue, Chicago, has signed contracts with the E. and R. Jungle Film Company whereby the purchaser receives the sole rights to market the E. and R. output in the states of Illinois and Indiana.

The E. and R. produces one-reel comedies featuring the chimpanzees, Napoleon and Sally, and the salesmen of the Celebrated Players believe they have obtained a quick selling article in these pictures.

KALEM, PARAMOUNT AND TRIANGLE LENTEN TRADE EXCELLENT IN NEW ORLEANS

ATTENDANCE has not visibly slackened in the New Orleans territory on account of Lent. On the other hand, those exhibitors who are showing suitable features for the season are reaping the reward of their wisdom.

Exchange managers on the whole report that they are doing very well considering the time of year. The exchange managers are receiving numerous requests for second runs.

The office of the General Film Company has issued invitations to exhibitors in the territory for the private showing of the first two installments of "The Social Pirates." There will be three performances on March 22, at 11 a. m., 2 p. m., and 3 p. m.

Four hundred or more members of the New Orleans Telephone Society were guests of Manager W. Fred Bossner, manager of the Crescent theatre, at a special showing of Paramount pictures last week.

Miniature poles stretched with wires extended all the way across the foyer of the theatre to represent a telephone line. A special telephone comedy was added to the night's bill. Mr. Bossner was presented with a beautiful Shriner's pin as a token of the organization.

Exchange men heard with a great deal of sorrow of the death of the father of C. E. Tandy, general manager of the Southern Paramount Pictures Company. The elder Mr. Tandy died on the eighteenth in Hopkinsville, Ky.

After wiring the Kalem Company that he had given "Social Pirates" a screen inspection in New Orleans, and that the picture was the best ever witnessed by him, Manager H. G. Morrow of the General Film Company, placed on March 17 an order for one more print of each episode for his territory.

Harry E. Pocock, representing the Buffalo Times, was in New Orleans last week making arrangements for the running of the serial "Social Pirates" in a local newspaper in conjunction with the pictures about to be released to local theatres. It is probable that either the Times-Picayune or the Item will run the serial.

The United Program Film Service has closed its New Orleans office at 832 Common street and moved to Memphis.

The company will operate in that city and in Atlanta, President Paul L. Ford announced. Abe H. Kaufman will manage the Memphis office while R. M. Savini remains in Atlanta.

Arthur Lucas, of the Triangle Film Corporation, who has been in New Orleans for the past week, is about to close a lease on a building in Carondelet street, which will be the future home of the Triangle exchange in the Crescent City.

The Rex Photoplay Service, Inc., with offices in the Nola Building, has dissolved. It is understood that its owners have moved to New York City.

B. G. Abrams, personal representative of Paul Melies, in charge of Melies productions for the General program, reached New Orleans last week and will make that city his permanent headquarters.

RECEPTION FOR MISS REED IN "THE WOMAN'S LAW," HELD BY EDWARDS IN ST. LOUIS

E. W. DUSTIN, in charge of the World Film offices at 3626 Olive street, St. Louis, has resigned, and W. W. Drum is at the head of the office temporarily.

Felix Feist, sales manager of the World Film Corporation, spent a few days in St. Louis last week.

Sam Werner, one of the veteran film exchange managers of St. Louis and present head of the United Film Exchange at 3628 Olive street, has acquired the interest of all the other stockholders of the United company and will hereafter be sole owner of the branch. Mr. Werner will release one big feature a week and a one-reel comedy.

C. S. Edwards, manager of the Pathé Exchange in St. Louis, gave a private showing on March 17 of "A Woman's Law," by Harvey F. Thew and Albert S. Le Vino. Mr. Edwards secured the Congress theatre, at 4021 Olive street, and had as guests many out-of-town exhibitors, numerous managers of St. Louis theatres and other exchange managers besides Florence Reed, the star, who is filling an engagement at the Park and Shenandoah theatres.

After the film was run and favorably commented on by the many admirers of her work, a light lunch was served, and an informal reception was held in Miss Reed's honor.

Robert B. Dickson and Son, who recently purchased the Kriterion Exchange when that branch in St. Louis went into bankruptcy, report a much improved business from every standpoint since the good weather set in.

Floyd Lewis, the Triangle Exchange manager in St. Louis, has taken a ten day business trip through the southern territory covered by his office, returning by way of Kentucky.

MACK SUCCEEDS SAVAGE AS HEAD OF GENERAL IN BUFFALO

A new Paramount office has been opened in Buffalo, N. Y., at 145 Franklin street, with Daniel Savage, former manager of the Buffalo General Film office as "officer in charge."

Western New York houses using Paramount service will hereafter be supplied from the Buffalo office.

Mr. Savage has been in the film business in Buffalo for many years, in charge of the Mutual exchange before assuming the management of the General Film branch.

Mr. Savage, by the way, is president of Buffalo's new Screen Club. It is rumored that the club is planning a ball in April with several of the film stars as guests. W. A. V. Mack, of Syracuse, succeeds Mr. Savage as the General Film manager in the Buffalo territory.

SIMMONS, SUCCEEDING JOHNS AS LOS ANGELES MUTUAL MANAGER, OLD HAND AT FILM BUSINESS

E. M. Simmons has been sent to Los Angeles to succeed T. W. Johns as manager of the Mutual Film Corporation Exchange. Mr. Johns resigned to become manager of the Pathéscope northern California office at San Francisco.

Mr. Simmons is one of the pioneers of the film business, having been engaged in it continuously since 1909, when he first became associated with William Swanson.

Prior to that time, however, he had been an exhibitor and conducted the Pastime theatre in Chicago as early as 1907.

From 1909 to 1912 Mr. Simmons was manager of the western exchange of the General and in 1913 organized the Pacific Coast Sales Company, which became the General exchanges.

Following this he was manager of the Seattle office, and later supervised the Eclectic exchanges in the northwest. For a time he was sales manager of the Mutual at New York.

In September of last year he went to the Coast and opened branch exchanges for the Triangle Film Corporation at Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle.

PEACHY BACK IN FRISCO; EMMICK IN LOS ANGELES

Fred S. Peachy, who recently returned to San Francisco from Portland, Ore., where he opened an office for the Bluebird Feature Film Company, has returned from a road trip in the interests of the California Film Exchange.

While in Oregon he saw but little except snow, but in Northern California exhibitors were commencing to place their airdomes in repair.

E. H. Emmick, who has charge of the Picture Playhouse Film Company's interests in the San Francisco territory, is making the second business trip of the month to Los Angeles. He has several large deals on hand that are expected to be consummated soon.

The splendid new home of the General Film Company on Golden Gate avenue, just above Leavenworth street, San Francisco, is rapidly nearing completion and will be occupied some time in the early part of April. The building to be occupied is the first to be erected in that city exclusively for film exchange purposes.

RAND RETURNS TO DENVER AFTER ROAD TRIP

W. S. Rand, manager of the Triangle Exchange, returned to Denver the latter part of last week with several new contracts. Among the houses taking Triangle service are the Rex Theatre, Raton, New Mexico, and Paris Theatre, Santa Fe, New Mexico.

L. A. Schaffer, roadman for the V-L-S-E Exchange, will leave Denver at an early date for a three months' trip through Wyoming, Utah, Montana and Idaho.

Denham Palmer, Western Representative of the World Film Corporation, had a most pleasant stay in Denver owing to the fact that Manager Charles Gilmour of the World Exchange has just purchased a late model, seven-passenger Chalmers. One could see Palmer and Gilmour driving up and down Denver's great white way most every night last week.

KANSAS CITY IS SCENE OF MANY CHANGES; FLINTOM RETURNS FROM CUBA TRIP

P. L. RYAN, formerly a theatre manager in Muscatine, Iowa, is a new traveler for the Kansas City Feature Film Company in Kansas City.

The management of the offices of the Fox Film Corporation in Kansas City has been installing new office furniture and equipment.

Romaine Fielding, Lubin actor, has been visiting friends in Kansas City.

W. B. Puffer, who has been in charge of the shipping department for the World Film Corporation in Kansas City, has been promoted to roadman. His position goes to H. C. Robertson, brother of R. Robertson, office manager.

The Pathéscope, Mid-West Company, Inc., has opened an office at 402 Bonfils Building, H. B. Kelly acting as manager. This organization handles motion picture machines for schools and similar institutions.

L. B. Flintom, son of A. D. Flintom, president of the Kansas City Feature Film Company, has just returned from a five months' trip to Cuba, Costa Rica, the Panama Canal Zone and other points in that vicinity.

Mr. Flintom was with a party headed by E. A. Salisbury, which went there for the purpose of taking pictures of wild life, pictures which Mr. Salisbury has specialized in for some time.

H. L. Orear, formerly assistant manager of the Kansas City office of the General Film Company, is now manager of the office at Cincinnati, Ohio.

Before going to Kansas City, where he has been the past two years, Mr. Orear was employed by the General people at St. Louis. John W. Hicks, Jr., a traveler out of the Kansas City office, succeeds Mr. Orear.

A recent visitor to the office of the Kansas City Feature Film Company was Stanley Mayer, of the Des Moines Film and Supply Company.

Mr. Mayer is a Kansas City man and went home on account of an operation performed on his mother.

V-L-S-E MAKES NUMEROUS ADDITIONS TO ITS EXCHANGE STAFF

GORDON LAURENCE, formerly manager of publicity in the V-L-S-E's Cleveland office, has moved to the Chicago office.

From that point of vantage Mr. Laurence will conduct a press campaign covering the Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati and Chicago divisions.

S. D. Parmelee is the latest recruit enlisted in the Big Four's Cleveland sales brigade. Mr. Parmelee goes to the V-L-S-E from the Pathé company in that city, bringing with him a high reputation for ability as an energetic business getter.

That portion of Indiana covered by the Chicago branch office will hereafter be handled by R. S. Shrader. The latter was transferred from Cleveland, where he worked under the Abel administration.

A. G. Gallos, Mr. Shrader's predecessor in office, has been assigned to Chicago's central district. The central section was previously covered by H. O'Brien, who is no longer connected with the V-L-S-E.

A change of territories has been negotiated by Messrs. L. C. Hartsock and M. S. McCaffrey, the former assuming charge of Iowa, while the latter will travel through the northwestern Illinois territory.

S. E. Bestor, a recent Chicago office acquisition, will attend to the sales wants of the Windy City's southern district. The former incumbent, Edward Cohen, has been transferred to the Michigan block.

The western and northern districts of Chicago are in the hands of I. Natkin and Charles Filkins, in the order named. F. W. Redfield still maintains charge of Wisconsin.

W. B. Nelson is the most recent addition to the sales force of the Dallas office.

GATE CITY FEATURE FORMED BY MARTIN AND GANAHA

The Gate City Feature Film Corporation is the name of a new film company recently organized in Kansas City. H. O. Martin has the controlling interest, with E. E. Burdick and L. A. Ganaha also in the firm.

Mr. Martin's organization has handled "The Spoilers" and "The Christian" for some time in that district, and he has a large acquaintance among the exhibitors of the section.

Mr. Burdick was formerly associated with Mr. Martin, while Mr. Ganaha for the past two years has had houses at San Diego and Los Angeles.

BRENNAN TAKES OVER UNITED EXCHANGE IN BANGOR, MAINE

Walter J. Brennan of Boston has taken over the managership of the United Film Exchange in Bangor, Me., filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of William White.

Mr. Brennan, who was connected with the same company in Boston, had a conference with several of the motion picture men traveling in the Bangor territory recently.

Those present at the conference held in the offices of the United Film were: Samuel A. Moscow, assistant manager of the United Film Company at Boston; Robert Clark, roadman for the Kleine-Ediston Company; R. H. Willis, roadman for the V-L-S-E; William Shapiro of the Fox service, and Carl Clifford of the All Feature bookings.

New Laws And Court Decisions

This department is designed to keep the industry informed of all news concerning new or projected laws, Federal, State, County or Municipal, that may affect the business, and all events involving any branch of the trade with the authorities in all sections of the country

PATRONS IN CANADA WILL BUY TAX TICKETS IS PROPOSED McGARRY PLAN

THE Hon. Mr. McGarry, provincial treasurer, in presenting his tax budget to the Government in Ontario, made the following important statement:

"We have decided to tax the people who like to spend the evening at the picture show or some other amusement After carefully considering this legislation, after having taken, as far as we could, an inventory of the amount of business which these people are carrying on, we have decided to place a tax upon the patrons of these shows, which may be paid by the owner of the show, but it will be on the patron of places of amusement."

This, he stated, means theatres, moving picture houses, amusement halls, concert halls, circuses, baseball parks, skating rinks or other places that come under the category.

He added that the tax of one cent might be increased to 25 cents by regulation and order in Council. Taking that tax at one cent, he estimated the Government would receive about $350,000 in the Province of Ontario.

In other words, it was reckoned there were 35,000,000 admissions to the various places of amusement. Excluded from the operation of this tax would be all entertainments for a philanthropic, religious or patriotic purpose.

He would give further information with respect to these two sources of taxation when the bills are brought down in the House.

Mr. McGarry explained later that the above tax would be instituted and collected by issuing a Government ticket, value one cent, which would be purchased by the patron of the theatre and dropped in a special box. Heavy penalties will be meted out to offenders of the regulation, whether theatre man or patron.

COLLECTION AND DELIVERY AGENCY FOR SMALL SHIPMENTS IS AIM OF BLACKMON BILL

CONGRESSMAN FREDERICK L. BLACKMON of Alabama has introduced a bill in the House of Representatives under the terms of which all common carriers engaged in interstate and foreign commerce would be compelled to establish a collection and delivery service for the handling of all shipments weighing not more than fifty pounds.

Congressman Blackmon would require the carriers to receive and transmit and deliver to connecting lines by trains that now handle express matter, such shipments within the weight limit named when properly packed and which would otherwise be accepted by the express companies; to collect shipments of this type from consignors and to deliver them to consignees when the same are located within the confines of the territory in which express companies render similar service.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is authorized to prescribe the terms and conditions under which the carriers shall collect and deliver such shipments as may be so tendered to them, and it is to approve a reasonable rate for the services performed by the carriers.

Section 3 of the Blackmon bill also provides that where the package of goods, wares, or merchandise is delivered to the carrier at the station or depot of such carrier by the consignor, and is received at the station or depot by the consignee, a less rate shall be charged for the transportation than if the same were collected at the residence or place of business of the consignor and delivered at the residence or place of business of the consignee.

FRISCO TEST OF ANTI-VENDING MACHINES ORDINANCE IS ON

A controversy is now on at San Francisco over the use of vending machines in theatres.

The city authorities passed an ordinance some time ago placing a license tax of one dollar upon each machine and the owners are fighting the measure, contending that it is a violation of the state constitution.

For a time the use of the candy vending devices in theatres was stopped, but recently these were placed in commission again.

Ralph M. Richardson, one of the largest operators of vending machines in the city, has been arrested and a test of the ordinance will be made.

The case is being watched with much interest by exhibitors as candy machines are installed in most of the large motion picture houses.

If the use of these is done away with, they will lose considerable revenue.

NEWARK, N. J., EXHIBITORS SHOW PUBLIC VALUE OF SUNDAY OPENING

Increased determination to give to the public the reasons for favoring an ordinance that will permit the opening of motion picture houses in Newark, N. J., on Sunday may be seen in the present plans of local exhibitors.

The subject has been called to the attention of local organizations and societies accompanied by the request that when the subject was discussed they be given an opportunity to be heard.

At a meeting of the Clinton Hill Improvement Association a few days ago Joseph Stern, of the Theatre Owners Association, and Max Simon, owner of a motion picture playhouse in Passaic, presented some interesting facts to the members.

Mr. Simon stated that one Newark theatre had during the past year contributed to Newark charities more than $13,000 as a part of the receipts from Sunday patrons.

He also explained that Newark theatres are subjected to examination to such an extent that the theatre building ordinance of Newark is pointed to as a model throughout the country.

Monday morning records of crimes in Newark police stations have decreased seventy-two per cent. since the Sunday benefits have been inaugurated, declared Mr. Stern.

Mr. Simon declared the department of public safety of Passaic had sanctioned Sunday pictures. Street corner gangs which had been a source of considerable trouble in Passaic on Sundays have practically disappeared since the advent of Sunday pictures, he said.

CANADA AMUSEMENT COMPANY SEEKS REFUND OF THEATRE TAX

The Canada Amusement Company, a Vancouver corporation, recently applied to the finance committee of the city council for a refund of $175, paid as 1914 license fees on the Rose and Imperial theatres.

On account of unsatisfactory business, these houses were closed before the year had expired, and the amount now sought by the company represents the tax for the portion of the year during which the houses remained closed.

On account of a fear that to make this refund might establish a dangerous precedent, the committee set the matter over until its next meeting, at which time the license inspector, the city solicitor and the comptroller are to submit a report on the matter.

TIME LIMIT BILL FOR PICTURE SHOWS IN BAY STATE KILLED

Vaudeville has failed to curtail the length of motion picture shows in Massachusetts. The bill which would have limited the time of a feature to thirty minutes, with a ten minute intermission, has been shelved.

Similar disposal was made of the measure to prohibit the sale of tickets to motion picture shows after all available seating space has been occupied.

Proponents of the bill to cut down the time during which a picture could be shown continuously were led by Representative Chapman, an ex-actor. The White Rats were represented with a claim that the bill would help the theatrical unemployed, stage hands and movers, as well as players, by providing more time for turns.

Also, it was declared, the bill would improve the eyesight of the public and, strange to say, public morals. A long period of darkness, said one speaker, in a film theatre was conducive to actions he would not attempt to describe.

This speaker probably never heard that the up-to-date picture house is light enough to read a newspaper in. The film companies and the vaudeville houses opposed the bill with success.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., GETS PURITANIC TWINGE OVER SUNDAY OPENING

War on almost every form of Sunday amusement in Birmingham, Ala., has begun in earnest. Deputy sheriffs in one day swore out warrants against 137 men charged with keeping their doors opened in violation of the Sunday laws.

Included in the number were soda water and cigar stands in the heart of the city. More than three hundred arrests of small retailers were made in two weeks.

An endeavor is being made to close every grocery, butcher shop, confectionery store and soft drink stand in the city.

Motion picture exhibitors, knowing that they are next in line for attention at the hands of the puritanical city commissioners, are making an earnest effort to stay the hand writing on the wall, and so far have been successful.

The Sunday moving picture law will be introduced before long, and will be bitterly fought out, moving picture men say.

POLICE IN EDMONTON, ALBERTA, ENFORCE LOBBY ORDINANCE

The recent conviction of Manager John Hazza of the Empress Theatre in Edmonton, Alberta, on a charge of allowing patrons to congregate in the lobby of his theatre, has prompted the local police commissioners to follow up the matter, and thus add another foolish regulation to those already in force. At a recent meeting of the commissioners the following resolution was passed:

"That the Chief Constable be instructed to see that his officers maintain a careful supervision of the crowding said to be prevalent in the entrances and exits of local picture theatres, and to take action forthwith unless this dangerous practice is stopped."

So during rainy or windy weather, pending Mr. Hazza's appeal, patrons must stand out in the cold, and gaze more or less sadly at a comfortable (and empty) lobby.

THIRTY-FIVE THOUSAND SEE FREE PICTURES IN FORT WORTH, TEXAS

Picture theatres were opened at Fort Worth, Tex., March 6, free to the public with labor union as host, as large placards announced at all entrances. The decision to open the houses came after a meeting of the union of motion picture operators.

It is estimated that over 35,000 people visited the free pictures. No donation boxes were maintained and there was nothing done towards securing admission fees. It was the first time that picture theatres have operated in Fort Worth on Sunday since a ruling from a higher court held it to be illegal to maintain a donation box in a Fort Worth theatre.

The opening of the shows followed injunction proceedings more than a week ago, which restrained the city from holding an election March 8 to determine the attitude of the city towards Sunday amusements. No announcement was made as to how long the program of free Sunday shows will continue.

BILL AT ALBANY WOULD ALLOW CHURCH SHOWINGS WITHOUT LICENSED OPERATORS

In the interest of the Men's Club of Westminster Presbyterian Church of Buffalo, N. Y., which conducts a settlement house, Senator Spring has introduced a bill at Albany to exempt churches, private homes, clubs and charitable institutions from the application of the present law which says only a licensed operator shall run a motion picture machine in any of these places.

The club says unless the law is amended numerous Buffalo churches and settlement organizations will have to forego the pleasure of motion picture entertainments, many of them given for the benefit of unfortunates. The bill will be state-wide.

LEXINGTON, KY., FACES CENSORSHIP

Plans for the establishment of a motion picture censorship at Lexington, Ky., will be considered by the Lexington School Board at its next meeting.

The board has received a communication from the Woman's Club asking it to take some action in regard to picture censorship.

The faculty of Transylvania College has sent a letter to the School Board indorsing the report of that body made recently which declared that many objectionable pictures were being shown in Lexington.

Delegations from the Woman's Club and the Committee on Social Hygiene will meet with the School Board to take up the censorship matter.

PROHIBITION LADIES THIRST FOR SUNDAY CLOSING

The Lexington, Ky., branch of the W. C. T. U. has announced its intention of waging a campaign against Sunday picture shows in that city. No details as to the form the agitation will take have been given out.

CONFERENCE HELD BETWEEN BOSTON EXCHANGEMEN AND FIRE COMMISSIONER

Through the initiative of Fred B. Murphy, of the United Film Exchange, Boston, a conference of motion picture exchangemen was held last week with the fire prevention commissioner in regard to new regulations affecting the transportation of motion picture reels which were to have become effective on Wednesday.

Some time ago exchangemen began ordering steel cans for reel shipment. Three weeks ago the fire commissioner let down the bars and allowed tin cans to be used. The company with which the earlier orders had been placed filled them with tin rather than steel cans, charging 16½ cents a can. This, claim the film men, is too much for a tin can. An effort will be made to have manufacturers of tin cans submit bids so that the lowest price will be secured.

There is another complication in the application of both the interstate commerce commission ruling and that of the state fire prevention commissioner.

The commerce commission allows shipment of reels without cans. The fire commissioner rules that reels cannot be shipped without cans.

This phase of the question has not been cleared up at this writing, except for a postponement of the date upon which the new regulations go into effect.

SEWARD, NEB., ALLOWS ONLY ONE THEATRE TO OPERATE

The city council of Seward, Neb., last week, went a step farther than usual. They not only passed an ordinance prohibiting the showing of motion picture shows on Sunday, but also made a provision limiting the exhibiting of motion pictures to one motion picture show, operating under a yearly lease.

There are at present three flourishing shows at Seward. To be the exhibitor with the political strength to get the single annual license, means much, therefore. At present all three exhibitors are trying to get the single license. When it is granted, it is expected the other two will take the matter into the courts.

SEWARD, NEB., ALLOWS ONLY ONE AGAINST 5 WACO MANAGERS

Following affidavits filed by the committee of seven against the proprietors of five picture theatres at Waco, Tex., for keeping open at that place on Sunday, County Attorney McNamara has filed complaints against the managers.

In turn, the managers of the theatres are making preparations to file complaints against drug stores for selling soda water and cigars, shoe shining parlors, auto supply stations, paid choirs and all who permit work on Sunday except those specially permitted by law.

KENTUCKY ASSEMBLY TAKES NO ACTION ON CENSOR BILLS

The Kentucky General Assembly adjourned March 14 without taking any action on the three bills introduced which pertained to the regulation of the motion picture business.

ROTHACKER SIGNS COLBY, ANIMAL ARTIST, FOR ANIMATED ADVERTISEMENTS

Watterson R. Rothacker announces that he has signed a contract for the exclusive services of Vincent V. Colby, the animal artist.

Mr. Colby is the originator of the Colby Dog post cards which were published in sixteen designs and had a record-breaking sale of more than twelve million.

As an animal artist, Mr. Colby has an international reputation; he is also recognized as an authority on gelatine photogravure.

Mr. Colby has traveled extensively in his artistic studies and has been on every continent except Australia. He was with the United States Army during the early part of the Moro insurrection and spent two years and seven months in active service in the Philippines, during which time he made splendid drawings of army life.

VINCENT V. COLBY

Mr. Colby will produce special half-tone animated advertising cartoons for the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company and is working out a series of entertainment cartoons for general release, details of which will be announced to the trade by Mr. Rothacker at an early date.

"CYCLE OF FATE" WILL WHEEL INTO VIEW ON APRIL 3

"The Cycle of Fate" in five reels will be the next Selig release through V-L-S-E. The date is Monday, April 3. This film drama was written and directed by Marshall Neilan and features such Selig stars as Bessie Eyton, Edith Johnson, Frank Clark, Wheeler Oakman, Al W. Filson, Marion Warner and others.

The story shifts from a sea prologue to the turmoil and the wickedness of a great city.

"Thou Shalt Not Covet," a Selig Red Seal play, proved popular by its unusual qualities. "The Cycle of Fate" follows suit and carries two separate and distinct episodes although each has an important bearing on the other.

Pavlowa Makes Another Visit to Universal City and Is Welcomed by Her Screen Friends

MLLE. ANNA PAVLOWA AT UNIVERSAL CITY SURROUNDED BY THE RUPERT JULIAN COMPANY. DIRECTOR JULIAN IN WHITE COAT AT RIGHT, DOUGLAS GERRARD STANDING BEHIND THE FAMOUS DANCER AND FRANCELIA BILLINGTON AT HER RIGHT

WHEN she was at Universal City last summer, Mlle. Anna Pavlowa said it was one of the happiest periods in her eventful life.

The picture city has great attractions for the world's most famous dancer, and several times during her recent engagement in Los Angeles she visited the place to see Lois Weber, who directed the photoplay, "The Dumb Girl of Portici," in which the celebrated artiste is featured, and her many other friends in the city of make-believe.

Pavlowa knows almost everyone at Universal City, where she is admired for her happy manner and democratic ways.

One day last week she took with her Alexander Volnine, her dancing partner, and M. Clustine, dancing master, and the party received much attention during the several hours they spent on the stages.

Later in the day Mme. Tamaki Muira, the Japanese prima donna, accompanied by Mme. Rabinoff, wife of the impresario of the Boston Opera Company, also paid a visit to Universal City.

Departure of Trained Animals, Several Carloads, Hardly Registers "Depletion" in the Ranks of Their Friends Left at the Zoo in Los Angeles

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, March 24.

SUPERINTENDENT JOHN ROBINSON, of the Selig Jungle Zoo, has taken several carloads of trained animals and equipment to San Diego where on March 18 the Selig trained animal show was opened.

It is hardly possible to notice any change at the Zoo even in the absence of this number of animals, the collection being so large.

A. L. Monahan, manager of the Selig Jungle Zoo, has arranged for a number of big picnics to be held at this public amusement place, including those of the Los Angeles postoffice employees, the annual picnic of the Swedish Association of Los Angeles, and the Eagle Lodges of Southern California; also a benefit picnic for the Jewish Home for the Aged Association, and the Free Burial Association.

General Manager Tom Persons, of the Selig West Coast studios, has purchased from Russell E. Smith a three-reel story entitled "The Hard Way," which is to be put into production the coming week under T. N. Heffron.

This was purchased especially for Jack Pickford, who will be featured in the part of the college youth who first becomes a criminal and later reforms.

ESSANAY COMPANIES WORK NIGHT AND DAY

Even with the increased studio space of Essanay, which has more than doubled its capacity, it is necessary for the stock companies to work nights as well as days to produce the required number of releases.

This is occasioned by the massive sets which are being undertaken. Large sets require floor space, but they also make beautiful pictures, is Essanay's contention.

THE FIGHT SCENES IN "THEN I'LL COME BACK TO YOU" (Frohman-World Photoplay)

TOWN AND RAILROAD OWNED BY ONE MAN IN A WORLD SUBJECT

"Then I'll Come Back to You," a World-Frohman film just completed under the direction of George Irving, utilized in its making a whole town—Pensacola, North Carolina.

The town is situated on a railroad thirty miles in length which is owned by one man, a Dr. Aldridge, who also owns every industrial enterprise in Pensacola. He gave the film folks a free hand and practically turned over the town to them.

The entire railroad, the mills, mines, bridges and other settings were used in the making of the picture. The strongest man in the town, measuring over six feet five inches in height, was induced to play the role of a bully and consented to fight a fistic battle with Jack Sherrill, who played one of the roles opposite Alice Brady, the star.

In return for the courtesies of the Pensacola folk, the picture will be shown to them at a special performance.

SCOTT GETS REQUESTS FOR CHAPLIN SUBJECTS

Ward E. Scott, manager of the Mutual Exchange of Denver, reports that Harry Cassady, roadman for the Mutual, has been swamped with requests for Charlie Chaplin features.

Over half the mail Scott has received during the past two weeks has been concerning the first Chaplin release.

Exhibitors on Lookout for Third Farrar Subject

Following Announcement of "Maria Rosa" on Paramount Program Many Requests Are Made at Exchange Centers for Picture Before Release Date, May 8

FOLLOWING the announcement last week that the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company will release on the Paramount Program the third photoplay in which Geraldine Farrar appears as the star, entitled "Maria Rosa," a number of Paramount exhibitors throughout the country made immediate requests of their exchanges to show this production in advance of the release date, May 8.

The introduction to the Paramount Program of the third Farrar photoplay has led several exhibitors to anticipate a Geraldine Farrar week in their theatres, showing the three productions.

Miss Farrar's role is a distinct characterization for her and shows her in a light quite different from anything she has done on the operatic stage or in her two previous photoplay productions, it is said.

The principal masculine role in "Maria Rosa" will be taken by Wallace Reid, who appeared as Don Jose in support of Miss Farrar in the Lasky "Carmen."

Pedro de Cordoba, who played Escamillo in the same production, appears in "Maria Rosa" in a villain's role.

The cast also includes Ernest Joy, James Neil, Horace B. Carpenter and Anita King.

"Maria Rosa" was produced by Cecil B. De Mille from a scenario by William C. De Mille. It is founded on the drama of the same name, which served as the vehicle in which Lou-Tellegen, Miss Farrar's husband, made his debut on the American stage as an English-speaking actor.

Wolbert on Short Comedies in Wait for Bigger Film

Sets for "Hearts of Three" Are Not Completed on Time and Vitagraph Director Banishes Idleness by Putting in Hours Making Laughs for Ribticklers

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, March 24.

WHILE waiting for sets to be completed for "Hearts of Three," the coming Vitagraph serial from a story of the same name by Jack London, Director William Wolbert is producing two one-reel comedies.

The one nearing completion includes in the cast Mary Anderson, Webster Campbell, and Otto Lederer, and within a day or two the making of the second with William Duncan, Corine Griffith, Carmen Phillips and Mr. Lederer will be taken up. The latter has a locale in a small town, and practically every member of the Vitagraph producing staff will take part.

Director Dave Smith has begun work on a Vitagraph comedy by William E. Wing, in which Webster Campbell appears as the farmer boy, and Mary Anderson as the dairy maid.

Plans are being made for a housewarming of the new Vitagraph studio in Hollywood, but this will be deferred a few weeks because of municipal improvements that completely block the streets and sidewalks.

Managing Director Rollin S. Sturgeon promises to supply sufficient fish from Catalina waters caught on his own hook and line for a big fish fry, and has agreed to take George Kunkel along so that there will be no difficulty in carrying the fish.

Ball in Jacksonville for Actors' Fund Donation

Thanhouser Players in Southern Film Producing Center Active in Promoting Affair, Set for March 31—Part of Receipts Will Go to Florida Charity Society

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Jacksonville, Fla., March 25.

A MOTION picture charity ball, for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America and the Florida Children's Home Society, will be held in this City Friday evening, March 31, under the auspices of the Thanhouser Club, composed of members of the Thanhouser film colony here.

Citizens of Jacksonville, headed by Mayor J. E. Bowden, are actively engaged in promoting the affair. Manager Cavanaugh, of the Windsor Hotel, has donated the use of the hotel ballroom. Tickets will be one dollar, and the receipts will be divided equally between the Actors' Fund and the local charity organization.

The officers of the Thanhouser Club, under whose auspices the affair will be held, are:

President, George A. Grimmer; vice-presidents, Hon. Mayor Bowden and George Webber; secretary, W. Ray Johnston; treasurer, Leo Wirth; chairman of the entertainment committee, Harris Gordon.

The members of the entertainment committee are: Thomas Curran, Boyd Marshall, George Welsh, Walter Hires, William Burt, Sully Guard, Morgan Jones, William McNulty, Charles Owens, Arthur Bauer, Benjamin Ross, James Murray, William Alexander, Lawrence Williams, Bert Delaney, George Hollister and John Bowman.

The patrons will include Mayor Bowden, W. Eugene Moore, Ernest Warde, W. A. Howell and George Foster Platt.

Kirkland Company Added to "U" Production

Gladys Brockwell Will Play Lead in Organization to Be Directed by Former Co-Director of Robert Leonard—Lynn Reynolds Goes to Oxnard

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 24.

AN additional producing company was added to the "U" staff this week, which will be directed by Dave Kirkland, who has been serving as co-director with Robert Leonard, while the latter is acting with and directing Ella Hall. Gladys Brockwell will p[illegible]y leads for the new company.

The Lynn Reynolds Universal Producing Company has gone to Oxnard, California, to make desert scenes for "The Pilgrimage of Ali Ben" for an Arabian photoplay.

Carter DeHaven, appearing in the part of a pugilist in "The King of Broadway," being filmed by William J. Bowman, has come to be a believer in preparedness.

Daily he has been practising for the big fight scenes with a well-known pugilist who is to fight him before the camera, and he insists upon buying the said pugilist the best of cigars and food.

The company spent several days of the past week at Los Angeles harbor, where sea scenes were made for this subject.

J. J. Shubert of the well-known theatrical firm was the guest of General Manager H. O. Davis at Universal City during the past week, and found so much of interest that he spent more time here than his previously prepared itinerary called for.

Other interesting visitors were: Ezra M. Lawton, American Consul at Teguagalpe, Honduras; W. B. Jerome, general western passenger agent of the New York Central Lines, and E. M. Bryan, general agent at Los Angeles.

Adolph S. Ochs, owner of the New York Times, also spent an afternoon at the big film city.

Saturday members of the Imperial Council of the Mystic Shrine, including all the high officers, were guests at "U" City. A number were duly made up and costumed, and appeared in a drama and comedy, directed by Otis Turner and Roy Clements, respectively.

DOROTHY BERNARD TO STAR IN FOX FEATURE TO BE MADE IN EAST

Dorothy Bernard, who has been William Farnum's leading woman in all of his most recent pictures, is to be starred by William Fox in a new production already under way at one of the New Jersey studios.

James Vincent is her director. This is his second Fox feature. His introductory work for the Fox organization was "Gold and the Woman," starring Theda Bara.

Miss Bernard has been working for several months at the Edendale studio of the Fox Film Corporation, Los Angeles, and while there she played the lead in "Fighting Blood" and "A Man of Sorrow," the latter to be released in April.

In the cast for the new picture are Alice Gale, Tom Burrough, Stanhope Wheatcroft, the well-known actor; Miss Bernard, Hattie Burke, the Titian-haired dancer taken from "The Blue Paradise;" Florence Ashbrook, Lillian de Vere, Grace Barton, Emil Hock and Pauline Barry.

EINAR LINDEN, FOX, IS VERSATILE

Einar Linden, who is shortly to appear in the William Fox production of "The Eternal Sappho," has been successively a grand opera tenor, composer, stage manager, dancer, clown, musician, composer, librettist and concert singer.

WAITING FOR THE CLOUDS TO ROLL BY: "THE GIRL AND THE GAME" COMPANY PREPARES TO TAKE A SCENE FOR THE SIGNAL-MUTUAL SERIAL

VERA PEARCE, MODEL FOR WELL KNOWN ARTISTS, NOW A METRO ACTRESS

Vera Pearce, who has posed for Charles Dana Gibson, Harrison Fisher, Howard Chandler Christy, J. Campbell Phillips, Harry Watrous, Herbert A. Morgan and other famous artists, and whose pretty face has graced the leading magazines of the country, has answered the call of motion pictures and is now appearing exclusively in Metro productions.

So far Miss Pearce has played but small parts, but she has proved exceedingly gifted in dramatic work for a beginner and, with her great beauty as an asset, she should rapidly forge to the front.

VERA PEARCE

Miss Pearce was last seen with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in "Man and His Soul," and before that with Julius Steger in "The Blindness of Love."

She was born and reared in Middletown, N. Y., and while on a visit to her brother in New York City at a New Year's Eve party she attracted the attention of a famous artist, who sought an introduction to her.

At first her family was opposed to her posing, but finally gave into her wishes. Within a year she became one of the best-known models in New York, with a national reputation.

Organized Fight Against Censors in Keystone State

Screen Club of Pittsburgh Prepares for Vigorous Action in Autumn Elections—Meeting in Philadelphia Is Planned for Film Interests in April

Special to Motion Picture News

Philadelphia, March 24.

ACCORDING to Edward Kraupa of the Monarch Film Company, a thoroughly organized fight against censorship is about to begin in the state of Pennsylvania.

The initiative has been taken by the Screen Club of Pittsburgh, assisted by Mr. Kraupa. The legislature of the state will hold its biennial session next winter. The fall elections will probably be taken advantage of to work for the election of those legislators who are against all forms of censorship.

A meeting at an early date in April is now being arranged for in Philadelphia. At this meeting it is expected to have all the film interests of the whole state represented. Senator Boies Penrose and James Dorney are expected to address this meeting.

A strong fight to have the censorship bill repealed is looked to result from the co-operation of exhibitors, exchanges and producers.

Prohibition was practically prohibited in Pennsylvania by the State Board of Censors. That is to say the six-reel film so named was so mutilated after about one hundred eliminations had been made by the censors that its point was lost, its moral was gone, and its interest for the public in consequence so lessened that the film was stopped after one week, although it had been booked at the Chestnut Street Opera House for a long run.

Jay Emanuel, who has a large interest in the picture, told of his experiences with the censors, who, he declares, are backed by the powerful liquor interests of the state.

These interests are fighting this particular picture because in its unabridged form it is a strong plea for the abolition of drink and as such had the endorsement of men of national reputation in the temperance ranks such as Bryan, Daniels and Hobson.

Mr. Emanuel said the picture in question had been purchased by him and his associates from the Photo Drama Company, the producers. The picture was first censored for this company, and certain eliminations made. This was last autumn.

No suitable opportunity occurring, Emanuel kept the picture for a long booking.

Prominent temperance men and educators having given "Prohibition" their endorsement at several private showings, it was determined by the Chestnut Street Opera House management to give the picture a long run at this house.

Mr. Emanuel says that, at his request, Mr. Breitinger promised to again look at the film in its original state before the eliminations had been made for the Photo Drama Company. Of course, the usual six dollars for the six reels had to be again produced.

This time the picture was so badly cut that it took all day and consequently was not ready for the opening performance, as advertised, and the picture was returned to its owners.

After the Philadelphia papers had given the censors' action big headlines, and the noted temperance advocates had expressed themselves in strong terms as to the elimination of all the moral lessons of the picture, it is alleged that Mr. Breitinger said had there not been so much publicity given the case he would have left some parts in that were now cut out.

But at all events the film was run for nearly a week at the Opera House in its cut condition without the required approval stamp of the censor board and the usual action of arresting the person responsible for such omission was not taken.

Mr. Emanuel, who as treasurer of the Philadelphia Exhibitors' League, secretary of the former Reel Fellows Club and chairman of several exhibitors' ball committees, and is well known among film circles in the state, declares that, unless the stand against censorship is strongly taken in Pennsylvania, in a short time there will be nothing left to censor, as the business will be practically ruined in these parts.

"Happy Ending" Is Favored for "The Heart of Paula"

Ballot Cast at Dinner Given in Hermitage by Pallas After Projection Room Showing Resulted in Tie, but Miss Ulrich Decided by Flip of Coin

GUESTS AT THE LENORE ULRICH LUNCHEON AFTER THE SHOWING OF "THE HEART OF PAULA"

REVIEWERS of the trade and daily press served as judges at a showing on March 24 of "The Heart of Paula," the newest Pallas Pictures production, which will be released on the Paramount program, with Lenore Ulrich in the stellar role, supported by Forrest Stanley and a number of other well-known screen players.

The Pallas people, in making the picture, took two endings—one tragic, the other happy, and not being able to decide themselves which was the better, asked the reviewers to judge.

The ballot resulted in a tie, and it was finally decided to have Miss Ulrich flip a coin, with the result that Fate decided in favor of the happy ending.

Interest was added to the event by the fact that the Strand theatre, New York, agreed in advance to show the ending selected by the reviewers.

The balloting took place at a dinner given at the Hotel Hermitage just after the showing of the picture. Miss Ulrich was the guest of honor.

B. A. Rolfe, manager of the Strand, delivered a speech, and acted as master of ceremonies. Harry Ennis of the Clipper obliged at the piano, after which Carolina Cassells, contralto, accompanied by William Stickles, rendered "Paula," a song dedicated to Miss Ulrich in connection with her appearance in the photoplay.

Autographed copies of the song were given to all present. A few graceful remarks by Miss Ulrich, in which she thanked the party for their interest in the picture and their commendation of her acting, were generously applauded.

Those present at the showing of "The Heart of Paula" were:

Lenore Ulrich, Pallas-Paramount star; B. A. Rolfe, manager Strand theatre; Julian M. Solomon, Jr., Pallas Pictures; E. Victor Wilson, Strand theatre; Pete Schmid, Pallas Pictures; Patrick Kearney, Motion Picture Mail; Arthur J. Miller, New York Staats Zeitung; Ernst Schmitz, New York Staats Zeitung; Thomas C. Kennedy, Motography; Bert Ennis, Manager Screen Reports; Harris Ennis, New York Clipper, J. F. Farrell, New York Clipper; William C. Stickles, Caroline Cassells, contralto; George W. "HER BITTER CUP"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

VERY ably produced and acted, the full possibilities of this picture have not been realized.

This criticism is not applicable to the entire subject, but to the last reel, wherein the conversion of a woman, hardened to the world is dealt with.

The story bears relation to illustrate the point. Rethna, a child of poverty, lives only to fight the battles of those weaker than herself. Her particular enemy is Burke, a factory owner, who oppresses his workers to a frightful degree.

To gain her ends she enters into a supposed liaison with his son

ONE OF THE MANY TRAGEDIES IN THE FACTORY

Henry. After a year she throws him off and then to further her revengeful ends marries Walter, the second son of Burke.

She uses her money to alleviate the suffering of the workers, and when Walter rebels she tells him she never loved him and that she only married him to avenge her people.

By this time Henry, now a drug field, returns. In a vision he sees Rethna crucified by his own hands. He awakes and is frightened and goes to her home to see if his dream is true.

Rethna, burned in rescuing old Burke from a fire, is recovering and undergoing a reunion with her husband.

Henry departs and there is a leader reading, "The sins of the fathers are visited upon the children," meaning that Henry is the chief sufferer for old Burke's misdeeds.

For what reason Henry indulges in the frightful dream is to our mind not clear.

True, it prevents him from taking actual revenge, but why should such awful revenge be imagined? Then, again, one is at a loss as to the real relationship which existed between Rethna and Henry.

One is liable to question the morality of such a relationship, but a subtitle explains that Rethna did nothing wrong.

If this is true, why should Walter feel so agitated when Rethna imparts to him the nature of this relationship?

He knows his brother to be worthless and the mere fact that Rethna was employing him as a tool to gain her revengeful ends would hardly cause a break between them.

In these respects Kathleen Kerrigan's scenario is weak. In all others it is acceptable. It starts off well, the mad passion of Rethna is motivated from a sincere desire to improve the condition of her people. The contrasts are great and the detail equally well attended to.

Cleo Madison played the lead as well as produced the picture. Her acting is emotional and strong and her work as a director is good. The settings and the light effects deserve unusual commendation.

William V. Mong, Willis Marks, Edward Hearn and Ray Hanford make up an averagely good cast.

"THE SOWERS"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

BLANCHE SWEET heads a typical Lasky cast in this story of Russian intrigue. Her principal assistants are Theodore Roberts and Thomas Meighan. Certainly it would be hard to find in a single picture a stronger array of talent.

When we say that the picture, as a whole, will grip your audience, we are referring especially to the excellent work of the cast, for, although the theme is thrown against the background of a struggle for political freedom in Russia, it must be confessed that, except for a few early scenes, there is nothing profoundly Russian about the atmosphere of the production.

It is really an appealing love story, bounded on all sides by "convenient" situations.

But it assuredly carries appeal, built out of the gilt-edged work of the principals, the beautiful Lasky lighting effects, and careful direction by William C. DeMille.

It is almost entirely an interior picture, and while this precludes the showing of scenes descriptive of the "great unrest," which a subtitle tells us is in full swing among the oppressed Russian peasants, it does make possible a closely compressed story.

Upon this basis DeMille worked, from a scenario by Marion Fairfax, which in turn was based on a novel by Henry Seton Merriman.

The action works slowly toward a climax, easily recognized and powerful, when it comes. Here Karin (Miss Sweet) reveals the hiding place of important papers which contain the revolutionists' plans. She does so to save her beloved Prince

Alexis (Meighan) from further maltreatment at the hands of the secret police.

Then follows quickly the denouement. Count Strannik, of the secret police, escapes with the papers, and goes to a hut where he is to meet the princess, whom Alexis married under compulsion from the czar. Karin's father (Roberts), the girl and the prince follow, and there is a fight in the darkness, the princess being conveniently killed, while Strannik escapes.

Then Karin and the prince are free to pursue the course of their love, which had been interrupted by the enforced marriage of Alexis, and, together with Karin's father, they flee the country.

Despite several flaws in the scenario, some of which we have hinted at, these final scenes, filled as they are with action of a thrilling sort, serve to make the whole entirely acceptable.

Again, we point out that Miss Sweet's work is of rare appeal, Mr. Roberts acts with his usual distinction, Mr. Meighan is convincing, and the subordinate members of the cast—Ernest Joy, Mabel Van Buren, Horace B. Carpenter, Raymond Hatton, and Harold Howard—are thoroughly capable.

The exteriors, though they do not express the conventional conception of Russian scenery, probably because they reveal no "snow stuff," are pleasing. The interiors are rich. The costuming has been carefully looked after.

"BRIGADIER GERARD"

(Red Feather—Universal—Five Reels.)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE.

SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE'S exciting tales told in "The Exploits of Brigadier Gerard" have, in part, at last found their way to the screen in a feature fitting indeed to be based upon the thrilling adventures of the Napoleonic hero.

The period in which the story is laid, combined with the atmosphere of romanticism which shrouds practically every foot of its five reels, is guarantee enough of its powers of fascination.

"Brigadier Gerard" is most certainly the best of recent Red

GERARD SENDS WORD TO NAPOLEON

Feathers. It has the appeal, the acting and the setting, and there are very few faults.

The last reel, perhaps, is the one segment of the picture that falls below the exceedingly high standard maintained by the others.

This gives the appearance of having been cut considerably, and as a consequence there is a point here and there that is not logically proven.

But this is only one demerit in a production that otherwise is far above the average feature offering.

Lewis Waller, an actor of ability and forceful appearance, enacts the title character, the boasting but heroic Captain in Napoleon's army, with a dash and somewhat clumsy grace that captivates at the outset of the picture.

His support is very good. Madge Titheradge, though a little too emotional in the Countess de Rocquelaure's role, registers effectively and besides possesses an alluring beauty that shows to excellent advantage on the screen.

A. E. George's Napoleon is typical and well rendered, while others are Fernand Mailly, Frank Cochrane, Blanche Forsythe and R. F. Symone.

The story portrays the adventure of Gerard and Countess de Rocquelaure in their efforts to obtain valuable papers for Napoleon, which are in the possession of Talleyrand, the ruler of Paris who has turned traitor to the Emperor.

Their path is not an easy one at all, as Talleyrand is a very clever fellow, and the two lovers only win out by a mere mistake when all seems lost.

The plot, though concerning chiefly the adventures of these two, is absorbing at all times. Conan Doyle's stories have been made into a fine scenario and the climaxes are well reached and fully developed.

The direction is fully in keeping with the character of the picture. The costuming, the design of the settings, and the business of the players belong strictly to the Napoleonic period, and the illusion is admirely maintained throughout.

"THE HAVOC"

(Essanay-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

IT will probably be a matter of wonderment to those who saw H. S. Sheldon's original play that anyone would have the temerity to attempt a celluloid version of it.

The director and players must certainly have been appalled at the task of maintaining the interest through the first four reels,

IN LOVE WITH HIS STENOGRAPHER

when only three characters appear, when only a solitary interior is used, and when practically no action takes place.

That this miracle was brought to pass is a substantial tribute to the pantomimic abilities of the leads.

The story exposes the fallacy of free love, and shows the tragic wrecking of three lives through the vacillating affections of a woman. This brief description of the plot suggests the prevalent "vampire" film, but this picture is not of that type.

The woman in this case is not a wanton succubus, but an ordinary, every-day sort of person whose only failing is that of being too susceptible.

A director possessing less delicacy than Arthur Berthelet would have left unchanged, or even emphasized, the necessarily risqué situations of the original play.

Mr. Berthelet has most ingeniously suggested these parts so that they retain all their dramatic value, yet are not in the least offensive. Excellent judgment was also shown in the timely close-up frequently introduced.

Gladys Hanson, formerly Lou Tellegen's leading woman, can express more by a twist of her mouth than does many a twenty-word sub-title. Her acting conveys her moods so perfectly that the dullest can follow them.

Lewis Stone, who will be remembered as the star of the recent play, "Within the Lines," is a finished actor, and brings to the screen his restrained, telling method of putting over his points. There is neither theatricalism nor lack of power in his performance.

Bryant Washburn, a seasoned Essanay favorite, is the third member of the well-chosen cast. He has never done anything better than his delineation of the weak-willed incompetent in this production.

"The Havoc" is not for audiences that want double-barreled action at the expense of naturalness, and a conventional, happy ending that annihilates logic.

It will appeal, however, to the not inconsiderable number of those who appreciate worthy acting, and require something more than mechanical thrills and a saccharine romance for their entertainment.

Craig and Hessert both work in the same office and both love Kate, one of the stenographers. Craig marries her, and invites his friend Hessert to live with them.

Kate is alone much of the time, and so finally yields to Hessert's passion. Craig discovers the infidelity, but instead of shooting them, tells them to get married, stipulating only that he be allowed to live with them.

His presence is a constant reminder of their sin, and so they are unhappy. Craig wins back Kate's love, and when Hessert deserts her, subjects her to the ignominy of once more being his stenographer.

"THE ARYAN"

(Triangle-Kay-Bee—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

WILLIAM S. HART adds another splendid portrait to his gallery of western characters in this C. Gardner Sullivan story. It is simple justice to say that the story itself is one of the best ever seen on the screen, and to its major possibilities Hart does full and ample justice.

It is a picture with a big dramatic idea. Western settings, western atmosphere, western types are the background. They could not be spared. But they are only the background. The theme itself is bigger than they. It goes down deep into the traditions of the race, and as presented here exercises real power over an audience.

The theme is set forth in this subtitle: "Oft written in letters of blood, deep carved in the face of destiny, that all men may read, runs the code of the Aryan race: 'Our women shall be guarded'; and a man of the white race may forget much—friends, duty, honor, but this he will not, he cannot forget."

THE ARYAN HEARS THE CALL OF HIS RACE

Steve Denton becomes a man of hatred when he is tricked out of his money in Ivory Wells' saloon, and make a fool of by Trixie, a dance hall character. He swears vengeance toward the white race and women in particular.

Trixie he makes his slave in a new settlement where there is no other white woman, and this settlement, populated with the "scum of Hell," he rules with the iron hand of a master of men.

Along comes a band of prosperous farmers lost in the desert. They appeal to Denton for help. He refuses. Then Mary Jane steals away from the thirst-stricken camp, and pleads with Denton.

He is finally forced to realize, by the perfect trust she places in him, that after all, he is a white man and cannot refuse help to his own people.

He saves the white women of the camp from outrage at the hands of his followers, and guides the party out of the desert.

Hart's acting throughout is impressive, gathers momentum as the story moves along and reaches genuine power in the later scenes. Bessie Love makes Mary Jane a truly appealing character, and Louise Glaum gives an excellent rendition as Trixie. Minor parts are taken care of by Charles K. French, Gertrude Claire, Herschell Mayall, and Swallow.

The name of the director was not announced, but certainly it should have been. We can recommend "The Aryan" to exhibitors, without reservation, as a Class A picture.

"SUNSHINE DAD"

(Triangle-Fine Arts—Five Reels

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS is De Wolf Hopper's second photoplay, and it is vastly different from his first. Here he is seen as a gay old bird, who spends his time flitting ponderously around cafes, paying court to a young widow, and dodging a crowd of Hindoos who are attempting to recover a diamond band stolen from the shrine of the great god Jujab.

EVERGREEN PROTECTS THE WIDOW

As Alonzo Evergreen, Hopper is called upon to perform all sorts of capers, and his performance lacks nothing of the strenuous. He relies to a large extent upon the sort of "business" for which he was famous on the legitimate stage.

This is supplemented by such favorite slapstick pastimes as cracking a bore over the head with a 'cello.

The pursuit of the diamond band leads to a lot of ingenious complications, and while these are not startlingly original, they afford a number of farcical situations.

Chief of these is a thrilling chase in which the various principals and Leo, the lion, take part. The widow is chased by the lion to a bathroom, where she takes refuge in a tub. Alonzo rescues her for the second time.

Leo, it must be admitted, helps the story wonderfully. He is an exceedingly well trained lion, and his tricks bring hearty laughs, whereas much of the earlier part of the picture doesn't call forth anything more pronounced than smiles.

We believe picturegoers will like the subject as a whole. A thoroughly competent cast, in which Fay Tincher, Chester Withey, Max Davidson, Raymond Wells, Eugene Pallette, and Jewel Carman appear, seconds Mr. Hopper's funmaking.

Settings, lighting and photography are excellent. Edward Dillon, working from a script by Chester Withey and F. M. Pierson, provided skillful direction, which brings out all the possibilities of the farce.

"THE WOMAN'S LAW"

(Arrow-Pathé—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS drama, an adaptation of Mrs. Maravene Thompson's novel, is based on the theory that a mother will stop at nothing to maintain the honor and good name of her child.

Such a theme stands a reasonable chance to be appealing, although in this case there is more dramatic force to the picture than sympathetic appeal.

At times the intensity caused by the development of the story is unusually gripping and the fourth and fifth reels rank away above the others in this respect. On the whole the feature is strong and original.

The adaptors, Harvey F. Thew and Albert S. LeVino, have made a swiftly moving, logical scenario from a novel that obviously presented unusual difficulties. The plot has been worked out well aside from a few incidents that refuse to convince because they are not fully developed.

THE NIGHT OF THE DINNER

But this, we believe, is due more to the insertion of hectic subtitles which the action does not fully justify and which are written in a more emotional tempo.

The results of employing a man closely observant of pictorial possibilities as collaborator on the scenario are obvious and in many ways, both large and small, they will show for themselves.

There is a human-appearing reporter in the picture, too, a character which reflects credit on the scenario writers. He neither carries a stenographer's notebook nor exhibits a deplorable lack of manner while conversing with others by keeping a cigarette shoved in the corner of his mouth.

The detail throughout, however, is just as praiseworthy as the reporter incident, only this last is so often bungled that it behooves us to speak specially of it.

Director Lawrence McGill has carried out his share of the work in consistent and pleasing style. His scenes are well timed and deftly handled as to action, while his settings are excellent and substantial and in one instance a real view of the East River replaces what might have been a colorless backdrop.

Florence Reed as Gail, the wife of a worthless man, rises to telling emotional heights in some of her scenes, while at all times she displays full understanding of her role.

Duncan McRae in the dual role of the husband and his counterpart gives contrasting and appropriate performances.

The one double exposure scene in which Mr. McRae appears twice is excellently handled and timed down to the last instant.

After Orcutt has killed a man, his wife does all in her power to protect the husband for the sake of her young son. In walking through the park she comes across her husband's double, who proves to be insane.

Orcutt escapes, and the double is committed to an asylum. When cured he is released and freed of the murder charge. He rejoins Gail, firmly believing that she is his wife. He wins her love by his kind personality.

The denouement arrives when Orcutt breaks into his wife's house for money. He is shot and killed by the butler, and the other man, pressed by the attorney and a reporter, at length remembers his real identity.

Then with Orcutt out of the way there is nothing left to come between Gail and the man she really loves. The reporter obligingly suppresses his story.

Lorah Rogers, Master Jack Curtis, and Mr. McGill make up a good supporting cast.

"WHEN THINGS GO WRONG"

(Kalem—One Reel.)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE.

ROSE MELVILLE'S creation, the redoubtable slavey, Sis Hopkins, is the sort of character that grows on one. Getting acquainted is her forte, and she loses no time in so doing.

Consequently, when she is seen in "When Things Go Wrong," she appears to even better advantage than she was in the two earlier "Sis Hopkins" releases, because we have now had three thousand feet of Sis, and that much footage has familiarly established her popularity and eccentric "business."

Miss Melville's expressions and her original line of tricks brings her right to the fore in the ranks of screen comediennes.

There are very few, only two or three eccentric comediennes on the screen today—an unusually small number when we call to mind the young army of music hall artists now in the motion picture field.

So there is room and a lot of it for such a player as Miss Melville, who can easily extract humor from her role, and if there isn't any in it, she puts it there.

In the case of "When Things Go Wrong," the Kalem company has furnished an entirely adequate vehicle for the star. It has a story which, though slight, is continuous enough to retain a thread of interest. It also has a generous portion of comedy business, some of which is quite novel and all of which fulfills its mission.

Henry Murdock looms up formidably in the supporting cast. He it was who played Sudden Sam in the first issue, and here he alliterates again as Indifferent Ignatz.

An able tumbler and a capable player in other respects is Mr. Murdock, and his presence adds much to the picture. Others are Arthur Albertson, Mary Kennedy, Richard Purdon, Frank Minzey and Olive West.

The story written by Frank Howard Clark, concerns the adventures of the Newlyweds while entertaining the old folks, who are not on very good terms with one another. Sis helps things along by making cocoa out of pepper, and Indifferent Ignatz creates small riots whenever he intrudes, which is often.

Robert Ellis, who directed, has produced the picture in a finished fashion. Some of the comedy stunts evidently called for trick camera and mechanical effects, and these are handled smoothly.

"AUSTRIA AT WAR"

(Raver Film Corporation—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THESE pictures are a collection of intimate views of the war from the Austrian fronts. They are of especial value, as showing not actual conditions in the field, but actual warfare.

Moreover, they were taken with the permission and aid of the Austrian government, and have been endorsed as authentic by Emperor Franz Josef.

A wide variety of military life is pictured. There are scenes of the fighting at Gorlitz in Galicia, Lupkow Pass, Turka and other points, which have figured prominently in the news.

The action includes charges by large bodies of infantry and cavalry, the firing of siege and field guns, fighting in the trenches, signal scout and aerial work.

One of the most striking scenes is the taking of Lemburg. The capture of great bodies of Russian prisoners, and the operation of the hospital corps are shown in excellent pictures.

The big German guns used to reduce the fortress, and the "Red Devil" hussars, who played an important part in the battle, are paraded before the camera.

The pictures were taken on the battlefields under the personal supervision of Dr. Alfred Pal and Lieutenant Frolich Janos, two of the emporer's staff officers.

The Raver Film Corporation announces that these pictures are but forerunners of a larger subject on the war, now being completed.

"THE TWO-EDGED SWORD"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

SOME tense situations and an element of strong dramatic interest characterize this story of a country girl who sets out to avenge the blasting of her brother's life by a frivolous married woman.

It is distinctly a picture of climaxes, with stretches of "padding" in between, but the total effect is strong, chiefly because the acting of Edith Storey, in the principal role, makes it so.

Miss Storey, always a clever and accomplished actress, has a role which might easily have inspired in the spectator a feeling diametrically opposed to the sympathy it was intended to awaken.

But in Miss Storey's hands this role completely convinces and more than once saves the picture from falling into mediocrity.

The work of others in the cast is well sustained. Josephine Earle, as the superficial wife who lures the country youth, easily takes second honors; Evart Overton does well in a part which might easily have been overdone; Robert Gaillard, as the husband; Logan Paul, as Farmer Brooks; Marion Henry, as Evelyn Langdon; and Mrs. Nellie Anderson, as Mrs. Brooks, all perform acceptably.

A good lesson is taught, the lesson being that revenge is a two-edged sword. After Mary has seen her brother driven to suicide when he discovers that the coquettish woman from the city is the wife of Gordon Allen, a novelist, and not unmarried, as she had pretended for purposes of a summer flirtation, Mary deliberately sets out to avenge her idolized brother.

This she does by getting a position as secretary to the novelist. But the novelist falls in love with her, and she with him, and Mary goes away to her little country home in bitterness.

The heartless wife is injured in an accident, and is taken to

THE RECEPTION

Mary's home. The three finally meet at the brother's grave, where Mary's revenge is completed, and her cup of bitterness filled to overflowing when her better nature compels her to renounce her love for the novelist, and give him back to his wife.

This final scene is quite the most effective in the picture, and offsets several improbable and unconvincing bits of action in the earlier reels. Miss Storey is at her best here, and rounds out a sympathetic impersonation.

Some fine bits of photography, notably a sunset water scene and views of the countryside, are disclosed. Though the story moves slowly, in the main it possesses suspense to a degree, and the denouement cannot be foreseen. George D. Baker, the director, worked from a script written by L. C. Russell.

The settings are excellent, and the lighting good. Summed up, "The Two Edged Sword" is an entirely salable picture, and a clean one, too.

"JOHN NEEDHAM'S DOUBLE"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS picture presents an excellent case where each of the essential components of a production are as near perfect as the most critical could require.

They result in an approximately perfect whole and we can unhesitatingly state that "John Needham's Double," taken from a comparative standpoint, is equal to the best features of the past half year.

There is no need for pointing out a particular class to which it will appeal, for there is no particular class; the appeal that it carries knows no ordinary limitations.

Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley produced the picture, and to them should go the lion's share of credit. Joseph Hatton's play on which it is based was undoubtedly an involved piece of work looking at it from pictorial standpoints, especially when it is considered that there are two characters the exact counterparts of one another.

WASTING THE FORTUNE OF HIS WARD

To produce a picture with twin characters is often attempted and often done poorly. The Smalleys, with the assistance of the scenario furnished by Olga Printzlau, have fashioned their picture as smoothly as if no such characters existed.

There is never confusion resulting from the remarkable likeness, and the double exposure scenes necessitated are perfectly timed and made to look as if natural.

The types picked for the minor players are remarkably good, the settings are excellent, the light effects of assistance to the dramatic force of the story and the photography with the exception of two scenes is decidedly above the average throughout the production.

The story introduces the profligate John Needham, who is guardian of the fortune belonging to young Thomas Creighton. Tom runs away and Needham goes on wasting the fortune of his charge. The time comes when Creighton announces his intention to return and to demand an account of his fortune.

Needham is in great fear but a chance meeting with a distant relative, his exact likeness, suggests a plan. He asks this man, Norbury, to his house and after dismissing all his servants he poisons him.

Leaving him for dead, Needham takes his place. Creighton returns, but only to discover that his supposed guardian is dead.

The denouement is left to be brought on by Norbury's daughter, who tricks Needham into a confession of his true identity. That done Needham takes poison himself.

Void of any variety of love story, "John Needham's Double" retains the suspense throughout. Following the murder of Needham the interest is raised to unusual heights, for one never knows when Norbury will be apprehended.

For the interest which will certainly arise in the first part of the picture, Tyrone Power is to be thanked.

His rendition of the profligate Needham is a master characterization, and as Norbury his contrasting performance is almost startling. Mr. Power does much to make the picture the success it is.

Marie Walcamp as Norbury's daughter, Frank Elliot as Parks, Needham's valet; Agnes Emerson, Walter Belasco, Frank Lanning and Buster Emmons complete a cast of exceptional ability.

"THE HAUNTED MANOR"

(Gaumont-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

ELABORATELY produced, with expensive settings and no end of trouble in the production of effects, it seems to us that this picture leaves considerable doubt as to just what it is all about. The telling of the story shows carelessness, which one is surprised to find in a Gaumont offering.

The locale ranges from India to New York, and the suburban regions nearby, and the contrasting atmospheres have been well registered. Iva Shepard, the featured member of the cast, handles the part assigned to her capably.

As to the story itself: Zoe Trevor, an American adventuress, is the favorite of an Indian Rajah. But she meets a dashing young American artist, and for the first time knows real love.

She casts off the Rajah, who sets a native spy to watch her, and detecting this spy hiding behind a curtain, she stabs him through the fabric, somewhat in the manner of Hamlet and Polonius, believing him to be the Rajah.

The Rajah, however, discovers the murder, and gives her the alternative between marrying him or being prosecuted. She chooses neither, but flees to New York, where, by previous arrangement, she meets, and marries the artist.

Later a realization of her own unworthiness comes to her, and she plans to disappear, in order that the artist may marry Edith, the daughter of a cousin.

She contrives to have it appear that she is burned to death in a garage fire, whereas, she is hiding in the secret recesses of the manor—recesses known only to her and a servant—and is keeping an eye on her husband all this time.

Celeste, a model, who loves the artist, and is jealous of Edith, raises a charge of murder, intimating that the garage fire was Edith's work, and the disappointed Rajah arrives from India to help press the charge.

An angry crowd is about to lynch the artist, when Zoe appears, and by showing that she has not been murdered, leaves the conspirators to appear in their true light.

A servant, who followed her from India, then explains that the stab through the curtain missed the spy, who was killed by the servant himself, and all hands are guiltless of most everything.

Beside Miss Shepard, the cast includes Earl O. Schenck, Henry W. Pemberton, Gertrude Robinson, William H. Hopkins and Olive Trevor. The story was written by C. A. Nelson and directed by Edwin Middleton.

"AUDREY"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

MARY JOHNSTON'S celebrated novel gives Pauline Frederick a role new for her—that of an unsophisticated girl of the woods. Miss Frederick acquits herself admirably, the principal merit of her acting here being the right use of restraint in expressing powerful emotions.

This ability of hers, added to the natural appeal of the character itself and Miss Frederick's beauty, captures the spectator at once.

The story is laid in the South, of course, and this makes possible some beautiful settings, in the choice of which Director Robert G. Vignola exercised excellent discrimination.

A sleepy river with giant, moss-covered trees reflected in the water, and luxuriant semi-tropical undergrowth roundabout, needs only Miss Frederick, attired in Audrey's tattered garb, rowing a skiff, to make the whole a perfect picture.

There are several of these scenes, and they lend distinct charm.

Harriet Ford and E. F. Boddington, who made the adaptation,

AUDREY IS MADE A DRUDGE BY HER FOSTER PARENT

extracted most of the screenable material from the Johnston novel. The story is one of romance, and the picturization has kept well within romantic bounds.

The most striking scenes are those in which the minister before his congregation, unjustly accuses Audrey of being the mistress of her guardian, Lord Haward; the rescue of Audrey from an angry mob, which is intent upon drowning her; and Lord Haward's duel with John Byrd, after the latter has made an accusation of scandal against Haward and Audrey at the ball.

Charles Waldron, who appears as Lord Haward, makes a pleasing hero; Henry Hallam and Miss Lind, as Mr. and Mrs. Darden, render these character parts capably; Margarete Christians, as Evelyn Byrd, Jack Clark, as John Byrd, and E. Fernandez, as Jean Hugon, are entirely acceptable.

In the print shown for review, the photography varied from excellence to mediocrity. The lighting in some of the interiors was very bad.

These are minor defects in a photoplay which can safely be characterized as sure of a welcome from picturegoers.

"THE LOVE LIAR"

(Horsley-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

HERE is something for the girls—Crane Wilbur, in quite the dearest, sweetest part he has had in a caramel moon. He is absolutely enchanting, and a lot of money should be made out of him and his violin in this subject.

Crane now appears as a great musician, the pet of that portion of feminine society which lives only to seek some new idol, and spread affection, gifts and afternoon entertainment at his feet when found.

He is the "love liar," which means, according to a sub-title, a man who imagines himself in love with each pretty face he meets. He meets many, in fact, there are enough pretty girls in this picture to make up for many other deficiencies.

Crane casts off one friendless girl, whom he has basely deceived, to marry Diana, a wealthy member of the Younger Set. With Diana he is happy, until his wandering fancy settles upon her chum Edna.

Diana finds them in each other's arms, there is a scene, then Diana, her love for her husband coming to the front, divorces him, and makes him marry Edna.

After his second marriage, the same thing occurs. He develops an affection for Arlene, a cabaret singer, and neglects Edna for the new love. Then Edna dies, and Diana, the discarded wife, comes to the front and takes care of the baby which Edna has left behind.

HE FINDS A NEW LOVE

Crane spends his fortune on Arlene, who, finding him "broke" goes back to the man-about-Los-Angeles, who was providing for her in the first place.

Crane sinks lower and lower, takes up drink and drugs, and eventually finds himself playing in the orchestra in the cabaret where Arlene is singing.

In a tense scene, in which Crane, maddened by his love for the singer, and her disdain, the musician carries her to the top of a stairway, and shoots himself, falling at her feet. Diana comes in in time to claim the body.

The mountings of the picture are elaborate and attractive, and the photography is of the highest order. Several trick and double exposure pictures, unique in their line, show Mr. Horsley's supremacy in this kind of work.

Nan Christy, Mae Gaston, Ella Golden and Lucy Payton, four unusually pretty girls, do some capable work in support of Crane. Fred Goodwin gives a sincere portrayal of Ludwig, the musician's faithful valet, who marries the girl his master had cast aside.

"THE STRUGGLE"

(Equitable—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

A PICTURE produced with such evident care, ingenuity and intelligence as this must necessarily rank with the more important offerings of the season.

It is one of the newer type of pictures which help to demonstrate the fact that the general tone of film productions is improving.

The idea itself cannot be called new. It is a variation of the desert island type of story, of which we have had several examples in the past, but none have quite reached the excellence of this.

The excellence is more in the telling of the story and in the atmosphere of realism created than in the story itself or in the characterizations.

The scenes of tropical vegetation and seashore were made in Cuba. Nothing has been used but nature itself, and by the expenditure of a little more pains and money, the use of painted drops has been avoided.

The story wholly concerns life in the United States Army. Major Carew, surgeon at Fort Totten, realizing that he is getting past the meridian of life, suffers silently, while Marjorie, whom he loves, marries the younger Lieutenant Ames. He remains the friend of the couple, and when he is ordered to the Philippines, he designates Ames as his aide.

On the ship, en route to Manila, Ames becomes involved in a card game, and when his superior officer reproaches him, he turns and accuses Carew of undue familiarity with Marjorie.

Before Carew has time to reply the ship is torpedoed and begins sinking. Ames thinks only of himself, and hastens to look after his own safety, while Carew rescues Marjorie.

Ames is washed ashore in a leper colony, and forgetting his name and former condition, joins the monks in the monastery. Carew and Marjorie are cast on a tropical island. There they live as best they can, Carew continually fighting with himself and trying to quell the old love.

One can almost measure the passage of time by the degeneration of the clothing of the castaways, so carefully have all the details been attended to.

At length they are rescued; they reach home, and are about to be married. Then Carew is suddenly sent to investigate the leper colony and there discovers Ames.

He struggles with himself, but his better self wins, and he brings the young man back, subjects him to an operation, and restores his memory.

Ame's first recollection is of his charge that Carew and his wife are unduly familiar, and he rises from his chair to attack Carew.

Suddenly he discovers a spot on his arm, and realizes that he is a leper. He ends his life by a plunge from a balcony.

Frank Sheridan and Ethel Gray Terry give carefully studied and finished portrayals of Carew and Marjorie, and Arthur Ashley handles a difficult part well as Ames.

Elaine Ivans has too small a part, but she is a delightful figure, as always, and presents her character strongly. Alfred Loring and Isabelle Vernon are also in the cast. The story was written by Harry Chandlee and was produced by John Ince.

"THE HIDDEN LAW"

(Horsley-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS picture is one of the conventional western type. The plot is rather hard to believe, and there are a number of incongruities which do not help along the conviction. Nevertheless, it has its place and will be a welcome attraction for many houses.

Chief among the incongruities mentioned above are flashes of the New York Evening Telegram, and the Round-Up Gazette. Although the papers are published hundreds of miles and many months apart, the same news headlines appear down in the corner of both, the headlines evidently having been clipped from the New York World. However, it is possible this little slip will not be noticed by the public.

John Carlton, a writer, has been "done" out of his royalties, and forswears mankind, going west to become a lawbreaker. He saves the life of a little girl whose parents have been killed by wild beasts, and takes her with him. She grows up believing him to be her father.

Carlton becomes a bandit and as the "Masked Bandit," strikes terror to the western region where he lives. No one suspects his real identity, however.

Then a young man from the east, out on a hunting trip, meets and falls in love with the girl, and carries her away as his wife, despite the protests of Carlton.

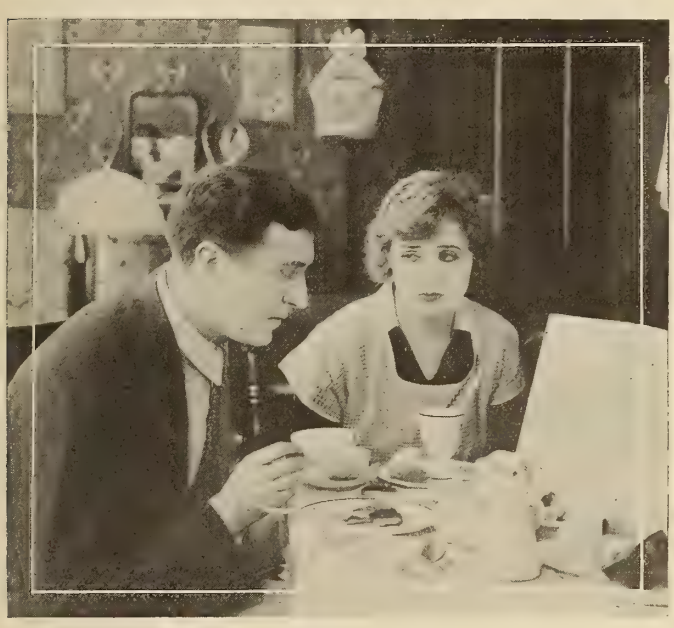
In a newspaper Carlton reads that he is being sought in the east, and that a fortune in royalties awaits him. The girl and her young husband return to keep him company in his lonely cabin, and he resolves to go back and claim his fortune, taking them with him.

There is a happy ending, back in New York, with Carlton a wealthy and respected club man, and the girl and her husband, with a brand new baby, living joyfully under his roof.

William Clifford, Margaret Gibson, Frederick Montague, Doris Baker, Marie Gavette and John Oaker head the cast.

"THE SALESLADY"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)



REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

IT is always interesting to watch, from picture to picture, the growth in effectiveness of a screen player's work, particularly if the player is under the handicap of an indifferent story.

Hazel Dawn, in this subject, reveals a growing command of emotion, and in the one or two scenes in which she is given real opportunity, distinguishes herself in a gratifying way.

Though the story itself fails to hold throughout its length, it has been embellished with enough good moments, and with settings elaborate enough, to create a good deal of interest.

The department store, in which much of the action takes place, is evidently the real thing. There is also a series of scenes centering about the theatre. These are excellently staged, and employ an attractively gowned chorus, besides showing the customary "back stage" views.

SHADOWS

The cast is quite competent. Irving Cummings plays opposite Miss Dawn, and does very well. Dorothy Rogers is exceptionally good as Lizzie, whose love affair with Officer Burke (Arthur Morrison) gives rise to a good deal of quiet comedy. Clarence Handysides is another principal.

It is a story of Helen, a country girl who comes to the city to seek her fortune. She falls into the hands of an impostor, who takes her to a questionable boarding house.

Failing to earn her living by teaching music, Helen gets a job in a department store, and eventually meets Bruce, a rich young idler, whose quarrels with his father compel him to earn his own livelihood.

He gets a room in the same boarding house in which lives Helen, and their love soon leads to marriage. Then Bruce is injured, and Helen goes on the stage, where her beauty attracts Bruce's father. His attentions to her finally make it possible for Helen to effect a reconciliation between father and son.

Frederick A. Thomson, the director, has done his part toward providing a fairly good piece of entertainment. Willard Mack is the author of the story.

"PEG O' THE RING"

(Universal Special Serial—First Chapter)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

LIFE under the Big Top with all its glamour and romance—that is what this latest of Universal serials portrays. Everyone loves a circus, with its clowns, its bareback riders, its acrobats and its animals and when the tent flap is drawn and a peep behind the workings of the sawdust ring is shown, depicting the daily lives of the performers, their sorrows and joys, all so very different from the mere sham affected before an audience, then the attraction grows even greater.

There is not a man who has not wished once in his earlier years to run away and join Barnum and Bailey's or Ringling Brothers, and once that wish grips it never lets go, as witness all the old folks that crowd the ring whenever the circus comes to town. "Peg o' the Ring" will have a universal appeal for this reason.

Incidentally this is the third appearance of Francis Ford and Grace Cunard in a Universal serial. The reason that this pair has been selected speaks for itself.

If they were not popular they would not be selected and so they must be popular. Miss Cunard besides playing Peg and in the first reel of this instalment also appearing as her mother

THE WOUND PROVES FATAL

La Belle, is the author of the serial. Mr. Ford directed and in the two reels in hand his work is most efficient.

Comedy relief in the shape of the antics of the clowns in the rings is inserted between the main scenes of the story.

The synopsis follows. La Belle, an animal trainer, is secretly married to Dr. Lund, owner of the circus. One night while in the tigers' cage she is mortally wounded by an angry beast.

In the hospital she becomes a mother and after leaving an envelope with a faithful clown to be delivered to Peg on her twenty-first birthday she dies. Lund refuses to care for the child.

Twenty years later, Peg is the star performer of the circus. Lund has married again and his son (Francis Ford), a doctor who practices with mysterious devices and instruments, meets and falls in love with Peg, not knowing that she is his half sister. Lund's wife learns of this fact however, and both she and her husband try to prevent the affair from going further.

At a reception in Lund's home, Peg and young Lund repair to the garden by themselves. Twelve o'clock arrives and Peg is suddenly seized with a wild fit of anger, caused by the wounded condition of her mother when she was born.

She attacks young Lund and mistreats his mother before she departs for the city in company with the old clown.

Her lover follows in his automobile and just as he swings from his machine to the swiftly moving train the instalment stops and as all first instalments do, it leaves one in a high state of excitement.

Full of action, all of it convincing enough to warrant great interest, these two reels set the serial off on what might be guessed to be the high road to success. With the tremendous distributing organization of the Universal behind it, it certainly ought to travel that road.

As for photography and settings, they are very good. Peter Gerald, Mark Fenton and Jean Hathaway appear in the supporting roles of chief importance and render appropriate performances.

The idea and the stories for this serial were furnished by General Manager Joe Brandt of Universal. Without a doubt Mr. Brandt hit upon a theme that offers excellent story-telling possibilities.

Mr. Brandt is no novice at the game either. Accustomed to study the wants of the exhibitor, he deserves to receive the faith of those to whom the serial will go.

Remember that Mr. Brandt was an important factor in the production of that Universal serial now drawing to a close.

"FOR THE LOVE OF MIKE AND ROSIE"

(L-Ko-Universal—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

CONTROVERSIES between the Irish and the Jews have long possessed humorous possibilities and present indications point to the future success of such conflicts.

However, "For the Love of Mike and Rosie," though centering about this clash of races, is void of the conventionality of the past and has little to do with the future save for its individual prospects which seem unusually promising.

It is a funny picture and needs not the assistance of decorative adjectives to strengthen its significance.

Henry Lehrmann, the man who put the L in the L-Ko organization, who awaits a good opportunity before thrusting his comical figure before the camera lens, features himself in this picture.

Mr. Lehrmann has a strong line of business, peculiar to himself. He has a humorous series of facial expressions and many eccentric little bits of action that bring laughable response from an audience.

Mr. Lehrmann is the Jew in the case and the Irishman is played in an equally capable manner by Dan Russell, whose exaggerated swagger and weird make-up gets over in fine style. Louise Orth is the girl over whom the two gentlemen come to blows, but neither one wins her, as the picture ends in a riot.

The immediate cause of the riot is a boxing match between the Irishman and the Jew. Boxing matches, when burlesqued, are to our previous recollections quite dull, but Mr. Lehrmann's affair is arranged and carried out excellently.

Interspersed between glimpses of the ring wherein the fight is in progress are scenes displaying the efforts of a gentleman in high hat, loose clothing, little mustache and slight cane, to view the fight without a pasteboard.

THE EVENTFUL MEETING OF TWO GREAT MEN

This actor is surprisingly funny, considering the origin and adaptation of his make-up, and his appearance aids in no small measure in putting the laughs in the fight.

The film, however, is not all fight. The business done at the outset is funny to the extreme and the plot is holding. All in all, we can unhesitatingly say that "For the Love of Mike and Rosie" is a highly laughable and acceptable comedy.

"GYPSY JOE"

(Triangle-Keystone—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

A VEIN of human interest, built around some barnyard scenes in which Gypsy Joe, an orphan child, and a calf appear, makes this what might be called a slapstick-drama.

There are a number of thrilling stunts, of course, and there is a fair amount of burlesque on the "gypsies-stealing-the-child" melodrama of the old school. These three elements are combined to make a thoroughly pleasing offering.

Joe Jackson "gets over" in good style as Gypsy Joe. Fortunately, he does not have to rely entirely on stunts for his comedy. Instead, he is permitted to pause occasionally and do some acting in a more quiet vein.

Betty Marsh, as the orphan child, is exceedingly clever, and good impersonations are given by Dora Rogers, Lew Morrison, Elizabeth De Witt, M. De La Parelle and "Shorty" Hamilton.

The action moves with typical Keystone rapidity, and includes whirling about one of the characters on a windmill, the crash of a human projectile into a kitchen, rolling one of the villains over a cliff in a barrel, and the like.

After all, however, the stunts are more or less incidental, and are introduced to speed up the action. We should say that "Gypsy Joe" offers several kinds of comedy in one, and a little human interest, as we remarked before. Charles Badger directed.

"THE HAND OF PERIL"

(Paragon-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

IN this subject, we have a picture which no one need hesitate to recommend heartily; no exhibitor need fear booking it, for it has the breadth of appeal which will commend it to audiences of every character.

It is a gripping story, elaborately mounted and produced with artistic feeling and grasp of its possibilities. It is melodrama, with plenty of rugged action, and the desperate characters which we know so well in these stories, brought to the front and developed to their greatest possibilities for entertainment purposes.

Maurice Tourneur, who adapted and produced Arthur Stringer's story, has made everything direct and clear; this, too, although there are several situations rather difficult to express on the screen.

Mr. Tourneur has used one striking feature: he shows the complete interior of a seven-room house in one scene. An elaborate set has been constructed, representing an entire house, with the side nearest the camera removed.

By this means he is able to show the action going on in several rooms in different parts of the house simultaneously.

There are also several striking water views, and the action of a band of criminals along the water front has been reproduced with unusual logic and conviction.

House Peters gives a very acceptable portrayal of Kestner, a secret service man, who unearths a band of counterfeiters, headed by the desperate Lambert.

One of the principal members is Maura, who believes she is Lambert's daughter, whereas in reality she was stolen when a child, and brought up by the counterfeiter; she has developed into the cleverest engraver of counterfeit plates in the country.

Kestner falls into the hands of the band, but Maura saves him. The counterfeiters move to new quarters, and Kestner trails them, gaining entrance to the house in time to save Maura from another member of the band who seeks to force his attentions upon her.

There is a terrific fight in the house, which is shown in the big seven-room scene mentioned above. Lambert appears and kills the man who was annoying Maura, then escapes from Kestner. Kestner later captures him after a pistol battle on the wharves in the dark.

Maura is induced to give up the old life, and is taken by Kestner to live with him and his mother.

The work of June Elvidge as Maura is possibly the best in the picture. Doris Sawyer, as "Bull's Eye" Cherry, handles a small part in such a way that one would be glad to see more of her. Ray Pilcer and Ralph Delmore also give excellent character studies.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT OF KANSAS UNIVERSITY FURNISHES PICTURES TO SCHOOLS

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Kansas City, Mo., March 24.

THE extension department of the University of Kansas, at Lawrence, through its director, F. R. Hamilton, recently announced that Kansas schools can secure moving picture reels for service from that body.

This department has heretofore supplied the educational institutions with stereopticon slides, and from now on the moving picture reels will serve as an adjunct to this service.

Over sixty towns have been receiving the benefits of the department, and it is expected that more will join now that moving picture reels have been added.

SCENES FROM WILLIAM FOX PHOTOPLAYS FOR APRIL: "BLUE BLOOD AND RED," "A MODERN THELMA," "A WIFE'S SACRIFICE," AND "BLAZING LOVE"

"A WIFE'S SACRIFICE"

(William Fox—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

ROBERT B. MANTELL is the central figure in this swiftly moving story of domestic intrigue. He is seen as Count De Moray, who is made the innocent victim of a plot, drawn by a brother and sister (Stuart Holmes and Genevieve Hamper). These two alienate the count from his wife, who sacrifices herself in order to save the name of her mother from dishonor.

The plot is fully developed as to complications, and introduces as incidental characters such screen favorites as Claire Whitney, Walter Miller, Genevieve Blinn, little Jane Lee, Walter McCullough and Louis Rial. These players assist the principals to make the whole effective and convincing, despite the fact that the material is rather clumsily handled in the beginning, and some of the sub-titles are unnecessarily melodramatic. The main situation is well defined, however, and Director J. Gordon Edwards brings out its dramatic points skillfully.

Mr. Mantell makes a really pathetic figure of the victimized count, and again demonstrates his sure command of screen technique. Miss Hamper is particularly well cast as a scheming social climber. Special mention should be made of Walter Miller's work. It is excellent.

The picture was made in Jamaica, which has been drawn upon for both French and Oriental settings, and with complete success in both instances. Some beautiful tropical backgrounds come into view, and the interiors have been planned and constructed so that they harmonize almost perfectly with tropical surroundings.

The production is upon a very serious, almost tragic plane throughout, but Mr. Edwards introduces a happy bit of comedy relief in having little Jane Lee dance one of the better known Oriental dances to the accompaniment of a hand organ. The audience at one of Mr. Fox's New York theatres hailed this incident with delight. It is one of those touches of nature which only the more skillful directors know how to introduce in a picture, but they are always acceptable and always bring instant response from an audience.

The total effect of this subject is very good. It has some strong dramatic moments. The character created by Mr. Mantell inspires real sympathy. These two elements in themselves are enough to carry the piece safely into the regard of picture-goers.

"THE CYCLE OF FATE"

(Selig-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

MANY directors seem to think that they have done their full duty when they have assigned the one or two most important roles of a production to adequate players, evidently considering that the strength of the principals will blind the audience to the fact that the subordinate parts are taken by miscast and unsuitable players. The fallacy of this policy is that one inept or poorly chosen actor creates an impression of unreality that spoils the effect of actuality that the cast is trying to create.

It is not often that one sees so carefully selected a cast as that of "The Cycle of Fate." The team-work of the players is very nearly faultless. All the characters are distinct entities, yet they are all homogeneous and supplementary.

Marshall Neilan, who directed the picture, also wrote the story. He realized that the great number of coincidences would require delicate handling to prevent their seeming impossibility. He devised motivations so logical that these coincidences seem most reasonable and natural. The plot moves slowly at first, and then accelerates its pace rapidly, unfolding many situations of real intensity.

Since this is a crook play one expects to see the usually laborious attempt to inject local color by an interminable footage of sordid, exaggerated, tenderloin scenes. Instead, just enough of this background is utilized to suggest the atmosphere without side-tracking the action.

This is one of the best underworld films extant.

Twins, a boy and girl, are both born with a red scar on their left hands. Being orphaned, and harshly treated by his guardian, the boy runs away, and becomes known in the city as "Red Hand," a notorious crook.

His sister Maybelle is the teacher of a country school. Through the influence of Mame, a consumptive girl whom Red Hand loves, he resolves to reform. Aldrich, a gunman, happens to meet Maybelle, and persuades her to go to the city with him, intending to sell her as a white slave.

This purpose is defeated by her brother, who recognizes her by the scar on her hand. Maybelle is given a position as social secretary to the mother of the police surgeon. This surgeon is a friend of Red Hand, and advises him to take his girl to Arizona to cure her. Red Hand decides to make one haul to get the money for this trip, but he is caught. When he tells the detective the facts he is allowed to go. Maybelle marries the surgeon.

In the cast are Edith Johnson, Bessie Eyton, Wheeler Oakman, Al Filson, Lewis Cody, Marion Warner, Fred Hearn and Marshall Neilan.

"BELGIUM"

(Beacon Film Corporation—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS subject is evidently part of a propaganda—the intention no doubt being to awaken interest in and sympathy for Belgium in her scourge of war. In this object it should prove successful as it presents the pathetic side of the war, as Belgium has seen it, thoroughly and effectively.

By far the greater part of the film is of the pageant type, presenting a connected history of the nation, from its separation from Holland early in the nineteenth century, down to and including the present war.

Historical events of the reigns of Leopold I and II are shown by carefully staged and costumed scenes, and the events of the reign of the present king are pictured by actual views of King Albert and his staff. From this time on the film is a sort of patchwork of scenes in the war zone.

Military parades, the rush of troops to the colors, the defense of several Belgian towns, and the havoc wrought by shells make striking views, which have a pronounced educational value.

Allegory has been deftly worked through the scenes of actual warfare, Belgium being typified by a classically-gowned girl, with shield and drawn sword. Pierre Mali, Belgian consul at New York, and Louis de Sadeleer, Minister of State for Belgium, sent as special agent by King Albert to President Wilson, attended the private showing of the picture in New York.

LENORE ULRICH, STAR OF THE NEW PALLAS-PARAMOUNT, "THE HEART OF PAULA," AND SCENES FROM THE PLAY

"THE HEART OF PAULA"

(Pallas-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

A PICTURE of distinct appeal, with some unusually beautiful settings, tinting and photography, is here presented with Lenore Ulrich in the stellar role.

Most of the action takes place in a Mexican frontier town, the town itself being utilized as a background.

The picture thus gains a certain timeliness in view of the present relations of the United States and Mexico, especially as the short shrift methods of Mexican revolutionists are exploited.

Miss Ulrich has a congenial role, and makes an appealing and engaging figure of Paula, a Spanish girl whose love for a handsome American (Forrest Stanley) is the pivot of the plot.

She is almost a perfect type for the part, and while she does not rise to emotional heights, her work is uniformly finished and quite certain of acceptance by picture-goers.

The rest of the cast is very good and fully equal to the demands of the story. Velma Lefler, a remarkably pretty woman, appears as the wife of an American engineer (Jack Livingston); Howard Davies is seen as Emiliano Pacheco, a guerrilla leader, and Herbert Standing is also in the cast.

The Pallas people took two endings—one tragic, the other happy—and asked the reviewers present at the New York trade showing to select the one which, in their opinion, was the stronger. The vote resulted in a tie, demonstrating, among other things, that either denouement is apt to be satisfactory to picture-goers.

In the happy ending, Paula is saved from Pacheco by the American, after she has won the latter's freedom by consenting to give herself to Pacheco. The American kills the guerrilla in a midnight fight in the guerrilla's home, whither the Spanish girl has gone to fulfill her bargain.

The tragic ending calls for the suicide of Paula, just as Pacheco is about to claim her.

"REVELATIONS"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture De Luxe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

METHODICAL Americans when in Paris fascinated by the happy-go-lucky bonhomie of the Latin quarter and Montmarte, and breezy Americans are awed by the stiff formality of the European nobility. Since the characters of this play are Parisian bohemians and German aristocrats, the film should appeal to a large circle. While Arthur Maude, the director, was not successful in transferring to the screen the spirit of the continental art student and patrician in its entirety, he yet has caught enough of it to satisfy.

The story is neither unusual nor especially strong, yet the suspense element is carefully nursed, and carries the interest. Judicious pruning of unduly prolonged scenes would speed up the action without weakening them.

The director evidently went to some pains to obtain the proper atmosphere, great care being shown in the exteriors and interiors. Mr. Maude is more successful in handling ballroom scenes and other crowd pictures than intimate tet-a-tetes. A more frequent use of close-ups would have added punch to several episodes.

Constance Crawley first takes the part of a young girl, and then is seen after an interval of several years. She is more suited physically to portray the older woman.

While her work has an occasional tinge of theatricalism, it is usually well conceived and executed. Arthur Maude is the most brilliant player of the large cast, and is consistently good. Prominent also are Nell Franzen, Sylvia Ashton, William Carroll and Madeline Fordyce.

Von Kellar, a German noble studying in Paris, meets Magda, a girl of fine family who has run away from home. Magda becomes his mistress, but before her baby is born Von Kellar's father dies, and he leaves to assume his title. After suffering severe hardships, Magda becomes a famous singer, and many years later goes to Von Kellar's native city to sing. At a reception in her honor she meets her father, who forgives her.

But the father, discovering Von Kellar's former relations with his daughter, demands that he marry her. This he consents to do on the condition that the child's existence be kept a secret. Magda refuses this condition, and her father is about to shoot her when he is seized with a paralytic fit and dies.

"BOBBY BUMPS GETS A SUBSTITUTE" IS PARAMOUNT RELEASE FOR MARCH 30

"BOBBY BUMPS GETS A SUBSTITUTE," the Paramount-Bray cartoon for March 30, is by Earl Hurd and pictures "Bobby Bumps" in an endeavor to "put it over" his father when he is compelled to take music lessons.

Bobby places the pup on the piano and instructs him to run up and down the keys.

So Bobby tiptoes down to the pantry, and is just invading the jam-jar, when the cat, annoyed by the music, tries to stop the pup. Then Bobby's father discovers what is going on, and Bobby is forced to beat a rapid retreat from the pantry. Finally he ends in bed, with the pup listening on the outside to "His Master's Voice."

VITAGRAPH INSTALLS NEWS SERVICE DEPARTMENT TO DISTRIBUTE MAGAZINES AND OTHER "COPY"

TO meet the constantly increasing demands made by the unusual number of feature films now being released by the Vitagraph company, together with the fact that the most famous theatrical stars and photoplay favorites are now appearing in these films, a special department has been organized to distribute press material and magazine stories.

The new organization is known as the news service department, and the intentions are to have it live up to its title in every sense of the word. The efforts of the news service department will not be directed toward obtaining Vitagraph publicity, but will aim to render service to all publications, enabling the latter to cater to the needs of their readers in more attractive manner.

Among the staff is James W. Beckman, former secretary to the late Elbert Hubbard; Garrett Cupp, a well-known newspaper man; Tom Bret and Frank Koch, magazine writers; Dee Selwyn, familiar with theatrical and other press agentry; Raymond Callagher and others.

An important part of the new service will be to supply publications with the most artistic photographs obtainable. The new department occupies the office of the former publicity department.

"BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" SHOWN AT REX, VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Vancouver, B., March 24.

THE first Canadian showing of the Vitagraph spectacle, "The Battle Cry of Peace," took place at the Rex theatre in Vancouver on March 7, opening a run of a week at this house, after which it goes to the Globe theatre for a similar period.

Considering the very stormy weather prevailing during a part of the week, the Rex did a good business at prices of fifty cents and one dollar. Matinee prices were half these amounts.

CLEVELAND PHOTOPLAY COMPANY CAPITALIZED AT $50,000 TO MAKE FEATURES

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Cleveland, O., March 24.

THE Cleveland Photoplay Company has been incorporated with a capital of $50,000. The president is B. E. Vanderhoop, a New York man who came to Cleveland a few months ago and announced his intention of establishing a $2,000,000 industrial film corporation.

Joseph Curl is secretary and a director of the new concern. The offices are at 506, Euclid Building, Cleveland.

A motion picture training school has been etablished in connection with the new venture, and the officials are trying to start a scenario contest for Cleveland authors.

While it is intended to make feature films, Mr. Vanderhoop states that the principal business of the company will be to make industrial films and to take motion pictures of weddings, parties and electoral campaigns.

A studio is to be built at Rocky River, near Cleveland.

ROTHACKER OPENING POSTPONED UNTIL AFTER MAY 1

DELAYED deliveries on steel and special equipment materials caused by abnormal conditions for which the war in Europe is directly responsible, makes necessary the postponement of the official opening of the new laboratory and studios of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company in Chicago, originally scheduled for early in April.

The buildings proper are completed, and the general equipment such as perforators, printers, drums and tanks will be installed by April 15, but special cranes, carriers and labor-aaving devices will not be delivered until a later date, and from present promises and indications, it is Mr. Rothacker's belief that the new laboratory and studios will not be completely in operation until sometime between May 1 and 15.

In the meanwhile, the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company maintains its present plant at top speed.

SCENES FROM "THE HUNT" AND "THE DESPOILER" (Triangle)

"AT THE FRONT WITH THE ALLIES"

(Hippodrome—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

THIS picture covers a wide range in locale. Scenes are shown in the majority of the countries at war in Europe. Canadian troops are seen in an English encampment; King George reviews soldiers with General Joffre at his side; snow-covered battle fields of Russia and Austria, with the last bivouac of the dead, strewn in winrowed lines or piled in ghastly conical heaps, give the people far removed from the scene of conflict fearful glimpses of war's grim horrors.

Batteries of heavy artillery in action flit by, while in contrast we get scenes where more quiet prevails—the leisurely loading of deadly shells. Soldiers are seen placing wicked looking projectiles in long rows with the same nonchalance one would expect only in a brickyard.

An armored automobile, daubed with paint streaks in imitation of foliage for deception of air scouts, is seen in action. Part of the film is taken up with scenes of actual fighting, said to be taken "somewhere at the front."

Among these is a night attack, rendered very thrilling by the constant explosion of huge shells and a charge and countercharge of troops fighting desperately for the possession of a strategic trench.

NEW THEATRES IN CONNECTICUT

RAYMOND JODOIN, town clerk of Sprague, will shortly erect another picture theatre on the site of the former house in that city. He will also manage the place.

Norwalk parties are to open a new picture house in Fairfield during the coming summer.

BILLIE BURKE PICTURE FOR RELEASE IN DENVER ON MAY 8

H. H. BUCKWALTER, manager of the Klein-Edison Exchange, reports that the release of the Billie Burke feature in this territory will be on May 8.

Mr. Buckwalter predicts the theatres on Denver's Great White Way to be nearing the twenty-five-cent admission price. As Denver was the last city to raise from five cents to ten cents admission, it is likely to be the first in the inter-mountain district to create the twenty-five-cent basis. This will mean that the neighborhood theatres of Denver will go to ten cents.

Mr. Buckwalter alos stated there is no doubt in his mind but what this will be put into effect by January 1.

POPULAR PICTURES CORPORATION TO HOLD TRADE SHOWING

IN spite of the bad weather last Tuesday many buyers were present at the trade showing held by the Popular Pictures Corporation, 218 West Forty-second street, New York, Andrew J. Cobe, president.

A number of pictures with good marketable qualities were snapped up by the representatives of out-of-town firms and the men purchasing for local business.

Another showing for states rights men, held on next Tuesday, will consist of a large number of pictures novel in subject and offered at attractive prices.

CHAMPION SPORTS COMPANY OFFERS PICTURES OF WILLARD-MORAN FIGHT

MOTION pictures of the recent Willard-Moran fight are offered by the Champion Sports Exhibition Company, which has its headquarters in the Longacre building, New York. These pictures, besides showing the big bout round by round, also show intimate views of the contestants' training quarters, and their activities in preparation for the battle.

They thus supply a complete history of this famous fistic contest. The pictures are more than five reels in length.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR THE BUSY EXHIBITOR

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"Three Friends." (Biograph. Mon., April 3.)—This reissue has a story a little out of the ordinary. Three bachelors form a club, which is broken up when Tom marries.

Joe, angry, refuses to forgive Tom, and when Joe is made foreman of the shop, he not only discharges Tom, but gives him a bad name. The little family is in sore straits when Bill returns to the town and learns what has happened.

He remonstrates with Joe so effectually that Tom gets his job back, and the bachelors' club, reunited, meets regularly in Mrs. Joe's parlor.

In the cast are Henry Walthall, Lionel Barrymore, Jack Dillon, Blanche Sweet and Harry Carey.

"Paths That Crossed." (Biograph. Three reels. Wed., April 5.)—An old story has been given a rather new "twist" and several novel complications are introduced in this release.

Mandell deserts his wife and baby daughter Ruth, goes to the city, and under another name becomes wealthy and prominent.

He pays court to a wealthy widow, Mrs. de Lisle, who, all unknown to both, is the childhood chum of Mandell's deserted wife.

Clyde, the widow's son, despises Mandell and attempts to prevent the marriage with his mother. In the meantime, Ruth has gone on the stage and Clyde has fallen in love with her.

In urging on the marriage, in the hope that Mrs. de Lisle will disinherit her son, Mandell comes to blows with Clyde, and the fact that they are married comes out.

Mrs. de Lisle, distracted, sends for her old chum, and Mandell, calling on the widow, is confronted by his wife. He finds himself in the hands of the police.

Charles H. Mailes, Adelaide Woods, Claire McDowell, Vola Smith, Jose Ruben and Hazel Henderson are the chief members of the cast.

"I Will Repay." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., March 25.)—Will be reviewed in next week's issue.

"Under Royal Patronage." (Essanay. Three reels. Tues., April 4.)—This re-issue not shown for review. In the cast are Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne, Thomas Commerford, Bryant Washburn, and E. H. Calvert.

"Canimated Nooz Pictorial No. 8." (Essanay. Wed., April 5.)—Split reel release, the first half being an animated cartoon burlesque of the animated weeklies, and the latter half made up of Western scenic.

"The Lightbearer." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., April 8.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. The rector of a fashionable church decides that he can do more good in the slums, and consequently opens a mission in a tough neighborhood.

The district is dominated by Grogan, a saloonkeeper who terrorizes with his fighting ability. The rector decides that the only way to oust Grogan is to beat him in a fist fight, and this he does.

The fighting parson then cleans up the district, winning the love of Rose, a girl of the slums.

Prominent in the cast are Richard C. Travers, Betty Brown, Chester Beery, and Jack Dale.

"Almost a Heroine." (Kalem. Fri., March 31.)—Another "Sis Hopkins" release, greatly superior to the general run of comedies. Sis has a pet pig named Baby. It is kidnapped and she causes wild confusion by informing the married couple that Baby has been stolen.

As the real baby is in Grandma's company, a fine state of affairs prevails until the pig is found and the real baby is returned. Henry Murdock, Arthur Albertson and Mary Kennedy support Rose Melville as Sis.

"From Altar to Halter." (Kalem. Tues., April 4.)—Ham and Bud proceed to get married in this comedy, and Ham is the tyrannical husband while Bud submits meekly to his mannish wife.

Things take the opposite turn in time and the contrasts are laughable. Ham and Bud can do better, but withal this comedy has many real laughs in it and it will be thoroughly enjoyed by the followers of Ham and Bud.

"Trapping the Bachelor." (Kalem. Wed., April 5.)—An Ethel Teare comedy which is far better than all previous releases featuring this attractive comedienne.

In fact "Trapping the Bachelor" can take its place with the few good comedies of the week, and there are many poor ones.

The plot is the strong point, it being cleverly worked out and produced. Victor Rottman, Jack MacDermott and Mrs. Davenport support Miss Teare.

"The Record Run." (Kalem. Sat., April 8.)—The old plot concerning the controversy between railroads for the privilege of carrying the mail has been revived here, and to very good advantage.

The subject has a physical thrill and works up to it in sustaining fashion. The picture is quite the best of the last half dozen "Hazards of Helen." Helen Gibson, supported by True Boardman and Percy Pembroke, are the principals.

"A Sister to Cain." (Lubin. Three reels. Thurs., March 23.)—This drama, done in the west from a scenario by Julian Louis Lamothe, is unusual in both theme and treatment.

While its basic idea evolves itself into just another version of the eternal triangle, it is so heavily disguised by original development and excellent acting that it will be surprising if the picture meets with anything but great success.

The cast, including Helen Wolcott, Alan Forrest, George Routh and Jay Morely, deserves full credit. The photography is excellent.

"Love One Another." (Lubin. Sat., March 25.)—A Billie Reeves picture that is put out as a comedy but ends in being just a thousand feet of film. Mark Swan certainly wasted little energy on this picture. Scraps are about all there is to the reel.

"Otto, the Soldier." (Lubin. Mon., March 27.)—David Don is made the butt of jokesters here. They tell him that war is declared and he is obliged to dress up in uniform and go out to fight.

The thing is burlesqued to an absurd degree, and while there are some laughs in the first part of the picture, taken as a whole, it can hardly be called good.

"The Devil, the Servant, and the Man." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., April 3.)—This picture teaches a good lesson, even if the moral is rather obvious.

If one pauses to analyze the motivation, it does not always seem logical, but the average patron will be too much occupied with the action to question the raison d'etre of the episodes.

The introduction of the devil, though not a new device, is an effective touch.

Prominent in the cast are Kathlyn Williams, Guy Oliver, Lillian Hayward, Jean Fraser, Vivian Reed, and James Bradbury.

Dr. Foster, a successful surgeon, incurrs the enmity of Thelma Gordon, an adventuress. She plans to ruin him, and after making him her slave, she stimulates his craving for liquor.

Foster's wife and child do their best to bring the misguided man to his senses, but without avail.

One night Foster dreams that the devil enters the room, and leading him to a cafe, shows his wife in the arms of her paramour.

Foster shoots his wife, and is about to commit suicide when he wakes to find it all a dream. Awed by this experience, he decides to lead a decent life.

"Along the Border." (Selig. Sat., April 8.)—This Western has plenty of action, and while the plot is along usual lines, it holds the interest.

The cast is capable, and the riding stunts that are introduced are exceptionally good. Tom Mix and Victoria Forde are the principals, supported by Sid Jordan, Joe Ryan, and Joe Simkins.

A band of Mexican outlaws capture Williams, a ranchman, and Vicky, his daughter, intending to hold them for ransom.

Vicky escapes, and returns with Tom Martin, her cowboy fiance, and some of his men. After an exciting fight the Mexicans are killed.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Revelations." (American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe. Five reels. Week of March 27.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Paul's Political Pull." (Falstaff. Tues., Mar. 28.)—This is a diverting comedy, with little substance to it. Paul's two brothers treat him roughly, and shoulder all their burdens onto him.

One day a letter comes saying that their uncle's $500,000 estate has been left to the one of the three who does the best work during the month of August.

The two brothers try various jobs, but are "fired" from all. Paul recalls his only friend, a "ward heeler" and goes to him. The friend gives him a job, keeping the snow off the steps of the city hall for the month of August.

Paul's month is spent in an easy chair, with servant's to supply refreshments and beautiful girls to entertain him. He keeps the snow off the steps effectually, and wins the legacy. Riley Chamberlain heads the cast.

"Ways of the World." (American. Two reels. Mon., April 3.)—There is a very large number of improbabilities in this drama, and the frequency of the coincidences that occur would weaken the play greatly were not the attention distracted from them by the excellent acting of Vivian Rich, Alfred Vosburgh, and George Periolat.

Essentially the plot is familiar, but there are enough twists given it to fool the wiseacres. The skillful directing speeds up the action and does much to heighten the effect of the anaemic material.

Mary Morrison, an heiress, finds that she must marry to inherit a fortune. She marries Wentworth, a farmer, giving him a thousand dollars for his trouble.

Later her extravagance dissipates a large part of her money, so Blake, her lawyer, and Wentworth conspire to teach her a lesson. They pretend to invest her holdings in oil stock and then tell her that she has lost it all.

She goes to work in the same restaurant where Wentworth is employed, and they fall in love with each other. Later she is told of the deception, and she and Wentworth spend their honeymoon on a farm that Mary has purchased for their home.

"Bungling Bill, Detective." (Vogue. Tues., April 4.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Bungling Bill gets a job as hotel detective, and tries to eject a Western bad man who is a guest.

Many lively encounters ensue, until Bill steals the desperado's wallet and makes his escape while the bad man is shooting up the hotel.

The cast is composed of Paddy McQuire, Jack Gaines, Louise Owen, Jack Connelly, and Mert Sterling.

"Billy Van Deusen's Muddle." (Beauty. Wed., April 5.)—There are a number of amusing incidents in this polite comedy. The cast, which has appeared in scores of similar farces, knows how to handle the situations to bring out their greatest comedy value. The plot is clever and reasonably original.

The players are John Steppling, John Sheehan, Carol Halloway, Queenie Rosson, Dixie Stuart, Dick Rosson, and Mary Talbot.

Grace and Walt, a newly married couple, engage in a spat. Leuter, a briefless lawyer, convinces Grace that she should obtain a divorce, and advises her to ensnare Billy Van Deusen for a co-respondent.

Then Leuter tells Walt of his wife's alliance, and offers to be his council. The wily lawyer collects fees from both warring camps, until his duplicity is finally discovered and a happy reconciliation effected.

"Bonds of Deception." (American. Three reels. Thurs., April 6.)—A strong yet convincing story, good acting, competent directing, and sterling photography make this a worth-while release.

Most effective are the judiciously balanced melancholy and light incidents. Edward Coxen and Winnifred Greenwood make an agreeable pair of leads, admirably supported by Virginia Fordyce, a charming child actress, and George Field, Jack Farrel, and Dick La Reno.

Will Baring, son of a stately old aristocrat, and the husband of Mara, a devoted wife, is sentenced to life imprisonment.

Rather than allow Mara to learn the truth, Will's father persuades Gifford, managing editor of a newspaper, to print an account of Will's death in an accident.

Some time later Gifford and Mara fall in love with each other, but Gifford cannot speak of his love, because he knows that her husband is still living. But Will dies in prison, so Gifford is free to marry her.

"The Winning Punch." (Cub. Fri., April 7.)—Jerry (George Ovey) has unusual opportunity for his characteristic comedy in this reel. After arranging a clandestine meeting with his girl, he is ousted by Hank the Terrible Swede.

That evening Jerry notices an announcement of a boxing bout, and the Terrible Swede's weight is given as 95, instead of 195, by a typographical error. Jerry decides to take him on and win the prize, not knowing who he is.

In the ring, the Swede pounds him unmercifully, until Jerry finds a couple of iron weights which he stuffs into his gloves. With these he knocks out the pugilist, and wins a bag of gold, but the police arrive before he has time to enjoy his victory.

As usual, Jerry finds himself in a cell. George George, Jefferson Osborne, Hazel Cole, Louis FitzRoy, Artnur Mund, Arthur Jackson and Gordon McGregor are also in the cast.

"Two Bits." (Mustang. Two reels. Fri., April 7.)—A common type of story has here been molded into an acceptable offering, mainly through Frank Borzage's directing and the acting of Anna Little, Jack Richardson, and Frank Borzage. The locations were well selected and beautifully photographed.

Hardeman, a United States marshal, visits the cattle town of Red Gulch to capture counterfeiters who are operating there. He at first suspects "Two Bits Bess," a flower girl, but falling in love with her, is loath to believe her guilty.

He finally sets an ingenious trap, and finds that the counterfeiters are Jed, his rival in love, the sheriff, and the sheriff's deputy. After taking his prisoners to a federal prison he returns to marry Bess.

"Under Azure Skies." (Mustang. Three reels. Sat., April 8.)—Not shown for review.

"Art and Arthur." (Beauty. Sun., April 9.)—Not shown for review.

"Knocking Out Knockout Kelly." (Vogue. Sun., April 9.)—This slap-stick comedy is undeniably funny, but it is the reverse of subtle. Audiences that enjoy seeing a man shot in the seat of the trousers ought to be satisfied with this picture, for this prank is featured and repeated several times.

Paddy McQuire with his facile and wierd physiognomy leads the cast, which also includes Priscilla Dean, Arthur Moon, and Jack Gaines.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"The Red Circle." (Last episode. Two reels.)—"Judgment Day" brings this serial to a close. June after being brought up on trial for the crimes she has done is released in the care of her guardian because of the many good deeds she has wrought while under the influence of her better self. The romance of June and the detective ends happily.

"Siberia, the Vast Unknown." (Pathé. Third issue. Split reel.)—This interesting half reel shows further views of Siberia. They are very well photographed and contain a strong educational and artistic interest. On the same reel with "Some Views of Singapore."

"Some Views of Singapore." (Pathé. Split reel.)—On the same reel with "Siberia, the Vast Unknown." An entertaining topical with a score of pretty views taken about this sea coast city.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Graft." (Universal Special. Seventeenth Episode. Two reels. Week of April 3.)—Here Harding is introduced as mayor. There is an exciting attempt to kill him in a mystic's den, but, thanks to the presence of Dorothy Maxwell, he comes out alive.

The conspirators bribe a carpenter, who is to erect a reviewing stand for the mayor, to loosen the supports.

An inebriate, befriended by Harding, hears of the plot and at the crucial moment rushes in to warn him.

At the same time the ward boss accuses Harding of murdering the mystic, but the inebriate takes the blame for this and is immediately attacked by the boss.

They fight out onto the platform, which collapses, carrying them both to their death. This episode is entitled "The Queen of the Prophets."

"Two Men of Sandy Bar." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., April 3.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of March 25.

"How Times Do Change." (Nestor. Mon., April 3.)—A husband and a lover get their watches mixed and naturally the wife and sweetheart don't like the idea of some other woman's picture in the watches.

The complications of this plot are handled nicely and the laughs are plentiful. Al Christie directed Lee Moran, Ethel Lynn, Billie Rhodes and Ray Gallagher in the leading parts.

"Lord John's Journal." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Number Five. Tues., April 4.)—"The League of the Future," as this number is entitled, evidently brings the series to a close.

In it Lord John works on a murder case, and his discoveries show that the members of the Grey Sisterhood and the villainous Rameses are behind it all.

They are apprehended and the love affair of Lord John and Maida culminates happily.

This last instalment is perhaps the best of all. The story is clear, well worked out and there is little prefatory action of reference to former numbers.

"The Town that Tried to Come Back." (Imp. Tues., April 4.)—Somewhat old in respect to theme, but truly laughable in respect to treatment, which is of the best sort.

A waitress comes to town, and after swindling all the males departs much richer, leaving the town much poorer. Eileen Sedgwick and Victor Fotel are in the cast. Roy Clements directed.

"For the Love of Mike and Rosie." (L-Ko. Three reels. Wed., April 5.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"A Little Fraud." (Victor. Wed., April 5.)—Mary Fuller is always pleasant to look at, but this picture is weak. It is not convincing because Miss Fuller doesn't look like a boy and, besides, the story is not logically worked out.

Much of the picture is given over to comedy which is pleasing, if we forget the unconvincing story. Lucius Henderson directed.

"The Eyes of Fear." (Laemmle. Two reels. Thurs., April 6.)—A story laid in the Canal Zone, that centers about a murder. The wife making light of her reputation to shield her husband of the crime is the central incident, but later the real murderer is apprehended.

This makes an average release, not as clever as the recent of Rupert Julian's direction, but produced with care and intelligence. Julian, Elsie Jane Wilson and Yona Landowska play the leading parts.

"Hungry Happy's Dream." (Big U. Thurs., April 6.)—Guy Hedlund, author and director of this animal comedy, strained himself not in the least in either effort. A tramp dreams of setting an entire zoo free, and that is about all there is, except quite an unearthly rumpus created by the animals that is somewhat funny but not sufficiently so. Paul Pourgeois is the lead.

"The Still Voice." (Rex. Fri., April 7.)—Another story of the jealous husband and how he was finally brought to his senses by thinking of his coming child.

J. Grubb Alexander, author, and Ben Wilson, director, have made this old theme appear very convincing, and while it is extremely familiar it manages to interest.

Wilson and Irene Hunt are the leads, while Charles Ogle is the third angle.

"A Leap Year Tangle." (Nestor. Fri., April 7.)—A boarding school romance that registers in some places, but the laughs are quite sparse. The picture hasn't the punch that Christie's Nestors usually have. Eddie Lyons and Betty Compson head a large cast.

"Behind the Mask." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., April 8.)—A romantic comedy by Grace Cunard and Francis Ford in which both of the director-authors appear.

It is laid in an imaginary kingdom, and as one of its original points, disregards altogether any attempt to create an illusion of royalty and court customs.

Grace Cunard has a good many scenes to herself, which she fills with her typical sort of comedy-business that seems to take well. The story is flighty and imaginary.

"His Highness the Janitor." (Joker. Sat., April 8.)—The janitor of the hotel assumes the baron's place so that his master's guests will not be disappointed, and the results are uproarious.

William Franey is seen at his best as the impostor, while others are Gale Henry, Lillian Peacock, Milburn Moranti and Charles Conklin. Gale Henry wrote the story, while Roy Clements replaced Allen Curtis as director.

"Mignonette." (Imp. Two reels. Sun., April 9.)—Only a fair drama, concerning a lost opera and the love affair of the musician who wrote it. Harry Benham, playing the lead, doesn't always convince, but the story has been ably directed.

It carries the suspense during its development, but said development is not done in the most convincing manner possible.

"Bill's Wife." (Laemmle. Sun., April 9.)—A comedy-drama showing how hubby speedily got tired of the night life and his rather fast companions and sought the loving company of his wife.

This subject is rather indefinite, and while it will please some, and doubtless create a true impression, it is not strong. Fred Church and Myrtle Gonzalez appeared under Lynn Reynolds' direction.

Extract from an Article in the New York Dramatic Mirror, Saturday, March 4

STAGE VERSUS SCREEN

A Prophetic Dip Into the Future of the Motion Picture Art
by Henry MacMahon

"At the other extreme, grandiose, historical and nature subjects will always be most happily represented on the Screen. Already the motion picture has put the old-fashioned stage spectacle out of business. Painted lath and canvas and the narrow cockpit of the indoor stage cannot compare with the new art's shadow-graphs of outdoor Nature, of MULTITUDES IN BATTLE OR IN FESTIVAL, OF INFINITELY VARIED ACTION AMID EXQUISITE LANDSCAPE AND SEASCAPE SURROUNDINGS. A maker who can produce a 'Birth of a Nation,' or a 'Quo Vadis,' a 'Cabiria' or a 'NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER' will reap the very highest rewards of production."

I draw the attention of the exhibitor and the public to my forthcoming production of "A DAUGHTER OF THE GODS," with ANNETTE KELLERMANN in the title role.

It's a CORKER

We have prepared Wonderful paper ONE and THREE Sheets.

Telegraph how many prints you can use in your territory.

We happened to have a company looking for "atmosphere" along the border when Villa attacked Columbus. We decided to back the daring press photographer, W. Kendall Evans in securing these interesting and authentic pictures of hunting bandits in Mexico.

We stand behind these pictures and have placed our enormous plant at Jacksonville, Florida, and our organization throughout the country behind his efforts.

Knowing the public will want to see these pictures as quickly as possible, we have decided to sell the pictures to first come first served customers throughout the country.

We own the negative (the name is registered) and can offer you every protection.

Gentlemen:

I have just installed two of your Model 1-A 1916 Motiographs and I think that they are the best that money can buy and they put up a wonderful picture.

I was a strong believer in ——— - -, but I have changed my mind for good reason, (Motiograph), so good luck to you and I know I will have it with them here at the Elks.

Your first order will convince you that the Motiograph is the Bish buy today

Please send me 1/2 Gallon of your Motiograph Oil and let me know how much it is, I will send you a check.

Yours truly,

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

By J. H. Hallberg

76—What is the most common cause for a burn-out or short circuit in a choke-coil or transformer?

Ans.—There are several causes for a burn-out and the most common is the overloading of the windings by forcing too high amperage through the coils.

In a perfectly designed and constructed transformer or choke-coil with normal usage and when operating it on the circuit for which it is intended, there is small chance of burn-out.

However, when through error or unforeseen cause the voltage is too high for the coil, then a considerable increase in the ampere flow will take place, and due to the excessive current, heat is generated within the copper windings which will soon char the cotton insulation.

It is likewise true that if the line voltage is low the coil is often subjected to overload because the operator must produce illumination at his arc. If the voltage is too low to secure proper carbon combustion at the arc, then in order to get the illumination it becomes necessary for the operator to put the carbons so close together that the transformer or choke-coil is then subjected to almost a short circuit.

In other words, a transformer which normally delivers 35 volts at the arc with 50 amperes flowing with 110 volts on the line, would probably have to force 60 or more amperes over the arc if the line voltage dropped to 100, due to the carbons being kept closer together in order to secure any light at all.

These are facts which the average party connected with installations of this kind does not always take into consideration and it is a very common mistake to assume that if the voltage is too low it does no harm to the transformer.

As a matter of fact, the low line voltage is more injurious to the transformer, and it is subject to greater abuse with low line voltage, than with a higher voltage.

77—What other causes are there for burn-out in transformers and choke-coils?

Ans.—It is possible that the cotton insulated wire which the manufacturer has to purchase in the open market, may not be perfectly insulated at every point.

If a very small piece of the wire should be poorly insulated due to a splice in the cotton on the wire, or due to a bruise or injury, then during the winding such injury may not be discovered, and as the layers of the coil are put on there will be due to this cause, a weak spot.

It has been stated that in order to avoid vibration within the coil, it must be a solid homogeneous mass, and to secure this condition the coils are insulated with special compounds and baked hard at high temperature before using.

All coils are not, however, insulated and baked in that manner and therefore the individual wire layers which are constantly subjected to a vibrating strain, purely mechanical, induced by the always changing magnetism due to the frequency of the current, will soon wear the cotton insulating the different turns of wire from each other.

It takes only a very small bare spot on two turns, not larger than the point of a pin maybe, to close or form a short circuit of one or more turns in the coil.

With D. C. flowing through the coil this would have no material effect on the operation of the coil excepting that its magnetism would be reduced to the extent of the few turns short circuited or cut out, but with A. C. flowing through the coil surrounding an iron core there is another and much more important effect from a short circuit than the mere loss of the power of one or more turns of wire in the coil.

The presence of the iron core under the excitation of an A. C. will induce local currents within the short circuited turns of the coil of such tremendous volume that the wire can melt just the same as will a lead fuse when subjected to a short circuit.

The heating of one or more turns when short circuited being great enough to melt the copper will, of course, destroy the cotton insulation not only on one or more turns, but on the adjacent turns and as a result the fuse will blow and the coil is then put out of business.

78—How can one judge the reason for a burn-out in a choke-coil or transformer?

Ans.—By reference to the foregoing explanation it is evident that if there is a structural error or weakness in the design or construction of the coil or transformer the trouble will appear almost immediately or very shortly after it is put into service.

I do not wish to make the broad statement that if a coil or transformer should burn out soon after installation that it is due to an error on the part of the manufacturer, because the apparatus may have been injured in handling, by the transportation company or when making the installation, but an immediate break down is a reasonable indication that the fault is due to a weakness within the apparatus itself.

Whenever the fuse blows (providing the fuse is large enough to cover the apparatus under full load), then it is safe to assume that there is a short circuit or other difficulty in the windings of the transformer or coil.

On the other hand, if the break down occurs comparatively long time after the installation of the coil (by a long time I mean two or three months) then the trouble from overheating is undoubtedly due to either low or high line voltage or the apparatus is not used on the kind of current for which it is intended, or otherwise overloaded.

79 Is there such a thing as depreciation or loss of power in a choke-coil or transformer?

Ans.—To all practical purposes and intents a choke-coil or transformer when properly installed and used remains constant, as far as its efficiency is concerned, for an indefinite period.

There is no such thing as a coil or transformer losing power due to its age. There is no depreciation in the transformer or choking values.

The only injuries which can happen to a properly designed and used transformer or coil would come from overheating, due to causes already mentioned, or maybe magnetic vibration has developed on account of the loosening up of clamps or wedges which are intended to keep the core and coil solid and from vibrating.

If a transformer or choke-coil should overheat and you cannot remedy or change the operating conditions, or the current supply, then there is only one thing for you to do, at least temporarily, and that is to apply a ventilating fan or other means for removing the hot air generated by the windings and the iron core.

In large transformers for power plants, it is a common and practical proposition to force air by means of blowers through transformer, motor or generator windings.

On transformers as used on the poles there is commonly used oil between the windings and the outer casing to quickly radiate the heat generated by the windings and the core, but of course, in the case of a moving picture machine choke-coil, or transformer, the remedy would be to use an ordinary fan motor.

WISCONSIN THEATRE SUPPLY COMPANY, MILWAUKEE, MOVES TO LARGER QUARTERS

THE Wisconsin Theatre Supply Company of Milwaukee has been forced to move on account of its growing business to larger and more commodious quarters.

A whole floor has been taken by Manager A. Langford at 310 Wells street and is being fitted up with a complete machine shop, offices and show room as well as an exhibition room.

SPECIAL DOUBLE LAMP CONTROL MADE POSSIBLE BY ARRANGEMENT OF CONTROLLER

IN the early days of motion picture projection the proprietor of a theatre succeeded in satisfying his audience with only one motion picture machine, having an intermission of a minute or two between each reel.

Now, however, the production of feature films and the more exacting demands of the audience call for the installation of two motion picture projectors, so that continuous performance can be given on the screen without the annoying break in a continuous story projected on the screen.

Furthermore, the modern showman knows the value of saving time and, therefore, the rule, rather than the exception, is to put in two projectors.

Where two projecting machines are installed for best results and continuous operation on the screen, the installation of a double lamp control is recommended, by means of which when one machine is operating the current at the arc of the running machine may be adjusted at the will of the operator.

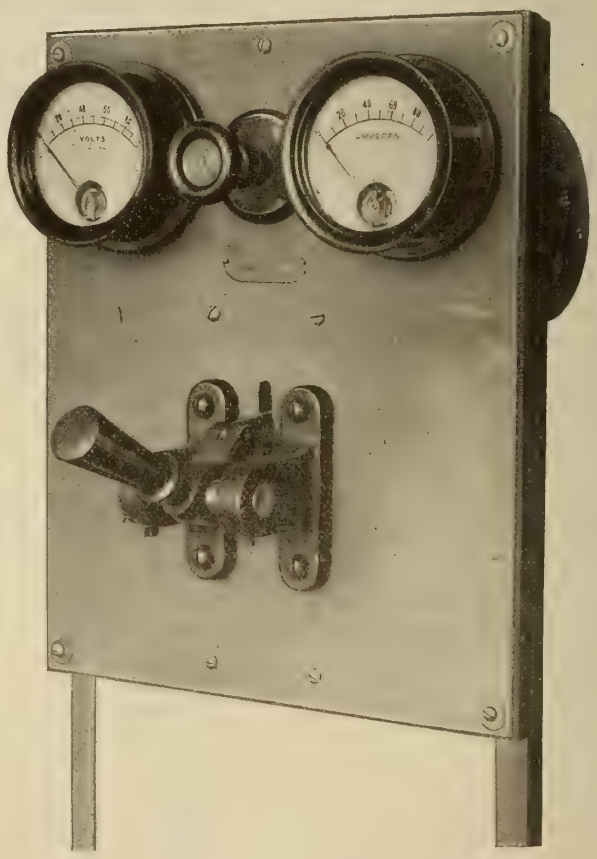

FIG. 1. SWITCH IN (1) LAMP POSITION

For this purpose a controller is mounted on the switchboard, the handle of which projects between the two instruments in Fig. 1, which also illustrates the switch handle in the upper one-lamp position with back view of the same switchboard shown in Fig. 2, as the switches stand for single lamp operation.

When it is desired to start Machine No. 2, the switch handle is moved downward, which automatically changes the motor generator from a single to a double lamp machine, without interruption of illumination on the screen.

After this change has been made in the position of the switch the second arc may be struck, enabling the operator to get the "spot" for the second machine ready to dissolve the second reel into the tail-end of the first one, giving the continuous performance which is so much desired on the screen.

The switchboard is designed so as to have no live contacts or parts on the front of the panel. The instruments are of the highest quality and have large figures with open scale, easily read.

Both these and the control apparatus are beautifully finished in black enamel and the switchboard makes a handsome addition to any installation.

Directory of New Theatres

This department is designed to be a weekly guide to all sales, leases, construction and remodeling of photoplay theatres. If you are building, selling, leasing or renovating, kindly communicate it at once for publication.

CALIFORNIA

J. J. TULLY has purchased the Bear theatre at 825 West Third street, Los Angeles. Mr. Tully has been an exhibitor there, having recently sold the Arlington theatre to Frank Burke.

The New Central theatre at 1629 Central avenue, Los Angeles, which has been closed for some time, is now being conducted by J. C. Gladson.

Edward Mozart, who recently disposed of the Academy theatre, has purchased the Georgia house of nine hundred seats at the corner of Georgia and Ninth streets, Los Angeles.

The Fairyland theatre at Twenty-fourth and Hoover streets, Los Angeles, has been sold to A. Laond by C. H. Thomas.

The Owl theatre at 1042 West Temple street, Los Angeles, which has been dark for several weeks, is now under the management of Simon Probus.

Another Los Angeles theatre which has been closed for several months is the Hoover at 931 South Hoover street. It is now being conducted by E. K. Harrison.

The stock season at the Alcazar theatre will come to an end during March, and for several months this house will be given over to moving pictures.

The first offering of this kind at this popular San Francisco theatre will be Kolb and Dill in "Glory," a ten-reel production.

As the theatrical career of Kolb and Dill centered largely in that city where they won renown it is anticipated that their first appearance in moving pictures will draw large crowds.

The Marquis theatre at Oakland has been taken over by J. Hellman.

F. R. Kirkland is now conducting a moving picture theatre at Terra Bella.

The Oak theatre has been opened at Stockton by F. C. Ellis. This is a house of small capacity.

The Garden theatre has been opened at Winters by A. C. Rattenbury, who has several houses in the vicinity.

The Lyric theatre at San Jose is now being conducted by G. M. Thompson, who purchased the house from C. Morse.

A moving picture house is to be erected at Martinez for Rogers and Jones.

CANADA

The Beaver theatre, Toronto, one of the largest houses in that district, has been sold for $130,000 to an unknown party.

The Park theatre at Bloor and Lansdowne streets, Toronto, has been reported to have been sold for $175,000. Manager Lochrie would neither confirm nor deny this statement. The Park has one of the best family patronages of the city and represents a very large investment.

The Strand theatre in Vancouver has been relinquished by William Hansher, who is now confining his attention to his other house, the Edison in New Westminster, B. C. The Strand is being conducted by J. D. McPhee, attorney for the owners of the property. J. P. Pitner, former manager of the house, is now in charge of the Star theatre at Trail, B. C.

Thomas Nagle, who formerly conducted the Star theatre at Rossland, B. C., has located in Vancouver, and the Star is being run by Mr. Hackney, the owner of the house.

J. Harvey has succeeded George Delasala as manager of the Majestic theatre at Prince Rupert, B. C.

COLORADO

Several new theatres are under construction in this territory. Among the largest is the Photoplay of Antonito, managed by T. F. Mulvaney.

A new theatre is being built in Bridgeport.

FLORIDA

The Republic theatre, Jacksonville, has been leased from T. V. Cashen, Jr., by P. W. Hutchinson, who will run the latest pictures obtainable.

ILLINOIS

The Strand, the new motion picture theatre at Tuscola, has just opened. It is thoroughly modern in every way and was completed at a cost near $15,000.

The F. and H. Amusement Company plans to open a new motion picture theatre in Decatur.

The Ideal theatre, Lemont, has been purchased by William J. Nelson and Otto C. Lindenan. Mr. Nelson is an old hand in the picture business, having formerly been connected with William L. Kelley of Joliet in the management of the Tedens Opera House at Lemont.

Lindenan, though new in the picture business, has had much straight commercial experience, and the two men expect to give Lemont a fine exhibition. A Minusa screen will be added to the theatre's equipment and a new projecting machine has been purchased.

INDIANA

J. W. Shawcross, manager of the Princess theatre, Rensselaer, has installed a new $2,000 Seeburg pipe organ orchestra instrument.

The Hugh Rapp and Company has leased ground at Crawfordsville for one year, and will open an airdome as soon as the weather is warm enough.

IOWA

M. B. Bryant of Waterloo is remodeling a building in Sioux City into a theatre that will seat 1,000 people. He is spending $5,000 on the improvements and will open the house about May 1.

Anderson and Kless will soon open the Model theatre at Sioux City. This is a house seating eight hundred and costing about $7,500.

KANSAS

H. P. Wright, owner of the Grand, Iola, will soon be able to start the showing of feature pictures. He has been unable to do this previously on account of lack of facilities, but with the enlargement of his booth and the addition of two new machines, he will introduce this class of plays to his patrons.

J. P. Kelly, owner of the People's theatre at Garnett, recently sold his interest to F. C. Nelson. Following this sale, Mr. Kelly purchased the Majestic at Osawatomie from R. R. Root.

Roy Buford has purchased the Strand theatre at Arkansas City, and now owns two houses there, having under his control, also, the Rex.

The Victor theatre in Kansas City, which has been under the management of J. F. Rose for some time, has been purchased by T. C. Wynn and R. L. Evans. Both are experienced in the theatrical line, Mr. Wynn having been in charge of the Victoria at Kirksville, Mo. They will do some remodeling soon, but will not have to close the house.

KENTUCKY

The Star theatre, Barbourville, which has been closed for some time, reopened March 18, with former Manager Davidson in charge. The house has been newly painted, an elevated floor put in and opera chairs installed.

R. M. Munford and Russell Hargan have purchased the motion picture equipment of Leming and Herron and have leased the Opera House at Hodgenville, which opened March 18. Shows will be given two days a week. Admission is ten cents.

The second Street Amusement Company has announced that it will open its new theatre at Second and A streets, Louisville, about April 15. The house will be known as the Arista.

LOUISIANA

The Miller Music Company is remodeling the Dumaine Theatre No. 2, at 108 North Jefferson Davis Parkway, and it will open about April 15 under a new name. The Miller Music Company is a new concern in New Orleans, and it is definitely understood that this is only the first of their ventures in motion picture theatre construction in New Orleans.

Bertrand Kiern has opened the Happy Hour theatre in New Orleans.

The Empire, a new picture house, has been opened at 1010 Canal street, New Orleans.

MAINE

John Goodwin, head of the Acme Amusement Company of Hallowell, has just taken over the Palace theatre in Bangor from Charles M. Stern, who has been handling it in connection with his managership of the Universal Film exchange there. Mr. Goodwin had the theatre renovated to some extent.

MICHIGAN

Clare Hoffman and Graham Hoffman, who now operate the Palace theatre, Detroit, have organized the Colonial Theatre Company, capitalized for $250,000, to erect a 2,000-seat theatre at Woodward and Sibley streets, to be devoted to motion pictures with a few acts of high-class vaudeville.

Work will start within sixty days and the theatre is to be completed by next fall. The building will be three stories high and will have stores and offices. A portion of the capital stock will be offered for sale to the public.

MISSOURI

The Apollo, 3227 Troost avenue, Kansas City, announces the opening of its new $10,000 balcony, seating three hundred people. The opening of this gives the Apollo a seating capacity as large as that of any of the city's suburban theatres. Another feature is the introduction of a four-piece orchestra in place of one pianist. A change soon to take effect is the replacing of women ushers by young men.

The Barrymore, Thirty-ninth and Summitt, Kansas City, has been sold to Harry Meyers, who has redecorated it, made other improvements, and opened it to the public.

After being dark for nearly two years, the Gem theatre at Carl Junction has been reopened.

Harry Schmidt, former owner of the moving picture house at Bolkow, has sold that place to George Montgomery, who is now in charge.

Carl A. Barnert, who for the past year has had charge of the house at Booneville, has relinquished his claim there and gone to Salisbury, where he purchased the theatre. He has installed new equipment at the latter place, including a Powers 6-A machine.

I. H. Hopkins and Joe Silverman, proprietors of the Emerald theatre at Thirty-sixth and Prospect, Kansas City, are contemplating the erection of a new house for that theatre. It will be located in the same vicinity and will have a seating capacity of eight hundred, nearly three hundred more than the present house.

NEBRASKA

Proprietor Joe Kohlberg of the Farnam theatre, 1417 Farnam street, Omaha, has established a Wurlitzer pipe organ and changed his pictures from program to features. He held a grand opening Wednesday, March 22, when he changed the pictures, started the organ and raised the price from five cents to ten cents admission.

M. B. Moore is building a new house, not yet named, at Tekamah.

M. C. Freed, proprietor of the Thelma, at Pender, has just completed spring remodeling at his place. The theatre has been given a fine big lobby among other improvements.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rousek of Schuyler are joint managers and proprietors of the Dome theatre there. Their house, the first in Schuyler, seats four hundred and twenty people and is modern in every way. Recently when floods interfered with railroad traffic to their town Mr. Rousek traveled by flatboat, freight train and afoot to get the needed films.

NEW MEXICO

The Star theatre of Chama, which was recently destroyed by a cyclone, is being rebuilt by G. I. Keel. The new theatre will have a seating capacity of three hundred.

Keel has also started work on a new theatre in Alvardo, which is to be a duplicate of the Chama house and will go under the same name.

OHIO

The Manhattan theatre, Cleveland, formerly owned by Ben J. Sawyer, president of the Cleveland branch of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors League, has been taken over by the Manhattan Circuit Company.

The Duchess theatre, Euclid avenue, Cleveland, is again controlled by Harry D. Bulkley, the owner. It is expected that the Duchess will shortly be reopened as a motion picture house. In the meantime, motion pictures are being shown Sundays only, the house remaining closed all the week. Mr. Bulkley was recently in New York making arrangements for the reopening of his house.

The Wonderland theatre, Springfield, has been sold by James Funderberg to Nelson Jeffreys and H. G. Musselman, both of Piqua. Mr. Funderberg bought the Glick theatre at Piqua a few weeks ago and will move there to manage the house.

PENNSYLVANIA

A. J. Burgum, an old-time showman, who formerly handled features on the fifty-fifty plan, is now managing the Lyric theatre at Duquesne. This house is owned by Albert Maloy, who is in business at Duquesne.

Charles B. Goldstone, Philadelphia, former proprietor of the Rittenhouse, Franklin and Garden theatres, sold the Garden on March 16 to F. H. Arnold of Reading.

The Garden at Fifty-third street and Lansdowne avenue is one of the newer neighborhood houses which have sprung up in all directions in the past year or two.

With a capacity of five hundred it has all the improvements of the large down town theatres. It has been redecorated in the past year. A large Seebring organ has recently been installed. Features are run with a maximum price of ten cents for evening performances. The Franklin Theatre was recently sold by Mr. Goldstone to G. Nelson Webb.

TENNESSEE

New management has taken charge of the Victoria theatre, located at Fourth avenue and the Arcade, Nashville. The building has been remodeled. During the spring the new management will overhaul the front of the theatre, putting in a new entrance.

Winter and Block have rebuilt the Royal theatre at Chattanooga, increasing the seating capacity to eight hundred.

Thomas S. Wilcox is having plans drawn for a new $5,000 moving picture theatre to be built at 116 East Ninth street, Chattanooga.

TEXAS

E. L. Malone will open a new picture house at Oak Cliff, near Dallas, early in April.

The Star, for negroes only, which has been closed for some time, has been reopened at Dallas.

E. W. Copley will soon open a new moving picture theatre in Dallas. One side will be a regular motion picture theatre, while the other side will be devoted to a children's playground.

Joseph C. Clemmonns has leased the Elks theatre in Port Arthur.

Tiefel Brothers are building a moving picture theatre for C. H. Dyar at Hereford, to cost $10,000.

The manager of the Royal, at Cuero, has enlarged his theatre to four hundred capacity.

H. O. Daniels is opening a second theatre in Yoakum, which will seat five hundred and will be ready for business early in April.

Henry Richards has opened a new moving picture theatre at Lyford.

H. V. Simpson has sold the Queen theatre, at Aubrey, to Cox & Sharrett.

E. E. Belcia has sold the Park theatre, Jacksonville, to John Morris.

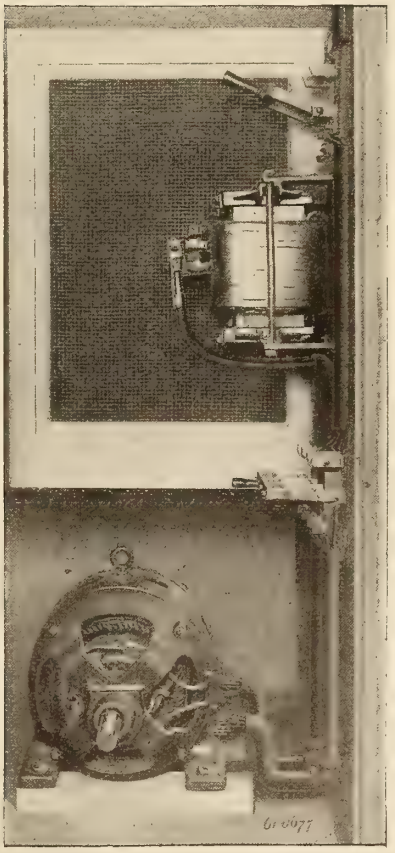
Kirksey Brothers have purchased the Mission theatre at Midland.

WISCONSIN

One of the most modern theatres in the State is the new Mikadow theatre, recently opened at Manitowoc by John Mikadow of that city. The theatre, which opened March 4, seats eight hundred, and is under the management of C. R. Coney.

R. A. Grundy has opened a new picture house at Estelline.

Projection
is better when you use—



The Wagner WHITE LIGHT Converter

It produces a WHITE LIGHT of intense brilliancy, which will bring out all the details of your films. The light is steady and does not tire the eyes of your patrons. These are the important elements of good projection.

The White Light Converter combines the alternating current motor and the direct current generator in a single machine. It is, therefore, compact and comparatively light in weight. It may be installed in most projection booths. The cost of maintenance is lower than other devices for similar service.

Wagner Quality

The Wagner Converter is quickly and easily installed, and is simple to operate. It requires very little attention. Reliability is an important characteristic of this device.

PROJECTION TALK IMPRESSES MEMBERS OF THE WINNIPEG LOCAL

V. Armand, Box 2102, Winnipeg, Can.—Enclosed you will find the sum of five dollars for which kindly send to my address two copies of "Motion Picture Electricity" by J. H. Hallberg.

Best success for your Projection Talk in Motion Picture News. Our Local No. 299 is interested in Motion Picture Projection Simplified, which in our opinion is a greater educator than any motion picture handbook on the market.

Editor's Note.—It gives me great pleasure to acknowledge this letter from Mr. Armand. It proves that he and the other members of the Winnipeg Local are students and appreciate what others are trying to do towards the betterment of motion picture projection.

It has always been my aim to produce the best results and to assist the operator wherever it is possible to do so.

You operators, yourselves, can materially assist this department by asking questions. Put your problems before us and we will be only too glad to solve them. There is no charge for these services.

QUESTION AND ANSWER DEPARTMENT COMMENDED BY THOSE WHO KNOW ITS MERITS

Louis Jana, 1758 W. Fifty-first street, Chicago.—Your Question and Answer department has been recommended to me and I would be very grateful if you would help me out. I will send whatever is charged for the service.

Editor's Note.—It is not necessary for you to send any money to me. All you have to do is to write to Motion Picture News and ask your questions through the Projection Department and they will be answered to the best of my ability without charges.

UNLESS A VERY SMALL SPOT IS CARRIED A BLUE GHOST APPEARS IN CENTER OF SCREEN

L. K. K., Troy, N. Y.—I have a blue ghost in centre of picture unless I carry a very small spot. The following is the data on my installation:

First—Powers 6-A. Two wing shutter.

Second—5½ inch E. F. B. and L. lens; eighty-five-foot throw; diameter of lense aperature, one 7/16-inch.

Third—Condensers, 7½-inch focus.

Fourth—Electra carbons, ⅝-inch cored, top and bottom.

Fifth—110 volt, 40 cycle, 3 wire system.

Sixth—Ft. Wayne Compensarc, 60 cycles.

Seventh—Upper carbon set back ⅛ inch behind the lower.

The biggest spot which I can carry when a clear field is obtained is about 1¼-inch diameter on the aperature plate, but for some reason the spot is off center, almost 3/16-inch.

I think the F value of my objective is too small. As for the 60 cycle Compensarc it does not heat up so the core volume must be big enough for 40 cycles. On the highest step I needle the carbons so I am getting enough current. The plate says, 30-40-60 amperes at lamp.

I experiment quite a bit with electricity and in order to convince the "boss" of the value of D. C., I am going to make an "electrolytic" rectifier with four 5-gallon crocks. I plan to have 1,200 square inches of aluminum surface and an equal iron surface.

About how long can I draw 30 amperes before the solution boils? I suppose the scheme isn't practical, but I am going to try it anyway and I would appreciate any suggestions you might have to make.

Ans.—Your machine and shutter equipment is A-No. 1 for your condition. The 5½-inch E. F. motion picture lens equals a back focus of about 4⅛-inch and it seems that at the 1 1/6-inch opening or aperature, your condenser combination should be not less than 7½ inches in the back and 8½ inches in the front and your lamp house should be all the way back; that is, the distance from the centre of the condensers to the aperature should be between 21 and 22 inches.

I am not sure but what you ought to use two 8½-inch condensers for better results. As a general rule a perfectly uniform field of light with A. C. cannot be had excepting at the sacrifice of illumination which naturally follows the use of higher focus condensers.

The ⅝-inch cored carbons which you are using are too small. You should use not less than ¾-inch diameter carbons for better results.

Your Ft. Wayne Compensarc made for 60 cycles operating on 40 cycles may not get hot but at the same time it will pass considerably more current than it is rated for and I would be safe, I believe, in guessing that you are getting 33 1/3 per cent more amperes through your Compensarc than the nameplate signifies for 60 cycles.

In other words, on the high notch you would be getting around 80 amperes instead of 60 and so on down the line. My advice to you would be to run the Compensarc on one of the lower notches or use larger carbons, either ¾-inch or ⅞-inch diameter both soft cored.

The setting of your carbons with the upper one, ⅛-inch behind the lower may serve your purpose. I would, however, set the lower carbon straight up and down and the upper one slanting backwards, about the same angle as used for the regular D. C. setting, but I would have the upper carbon fairly well above the lower; not behind it.

The spot which you refer to as being small when you get a clear field, will be increased by the use of the higher foci condensers and if your lamp house moves over correctly on the slide rods, there is no reason why you should not get the spot in the centre.

The fact nevertheless remains that your crater will not always burn parallel with the surface of the condenser and it is possible that by shifting the lamp so that the spot is slightly to one side or the other of the aperature on the machine, you will get a better or flatter field of light on the screen, and that cannot be overcome excepting by making the spot larger and the new condensers recmended will do this.

The foci of your objective has nothing to do with your proposition as it is up to you to provide the proper condenser combinations, arrangement of the arc and the distances between the arc and the condensers and between the condensers and the aperature to suit the foci of your objective or projection lens.

I do not wonder that your 5/8-inch carbons needle, when you use your 60-cycle Compensarc on 40 cycles, as the overload is evident.

I am somewhat interested in your proposed experiment with an "electrolytic" rectifier, using aluminum and iron plates in bicarbonate solution or similar solution which has been used for the purpose.

I have personally had a great deal of experience along these lines and at one time I did put out an electrolytic rectifier, but I found to my sorrow and expense that the system is not practical.

I even went so far as to import a 50-ampere rectifier from France which uses four tanks, each one of which is almost 24 inches square, holding many times more liquid than you propose and in which the elements or electrodes are aluminum and lead.

While I could secure D. C. with this device, the efficiency was so low as compared with motor generators that there was nothing to it and the experiments were abandoned.

If you would like to buy this imported rectifier from France, which cost me two hundred dollars, I will sell it to you for fifty dollars. It is in just as good condition today as it was when new and it will serve for a demonstration just as you want.

However, if I were in the position of your "boss" I don't believe I would spend any money on experiments with electrolytic rectifiers, but I would invest right away in a good motor generator or other device for changing the alternating into direct current.

MOTOR GENERATORS DESIGNED TO OPERATE ONE PROJECTOR ARC.

F. W., Washington, D. C.—I have carefully followed the development of devices for changing alternating to direct current as required for moving picture and stereopticon arc lamps. I have observed that the leading manufacturers build their motor generators to operate one arc on the generator without resistance in series.

But when two arcs are to be operated they usually recommend a rheostat in series with each arc and the two lamps and in multiple with each other across the terminals of the generator, which I understand at that time delivers about seventy volts.

What I want to know is, why should not the generator be made for a higher voltage so that the two arcs could be operated in series with each other on a higher voltage when it is necessary to operate both arcs at the same time, and then the voltage could be lowered when it is required to operate only one arc, and in that manner dispense with the rheostats.

I have had some electrical experience with arc lights in particular and it seems to me that this could be done but I am not sure that there is any advantage in doing it. Would you please inform me through MOTION PICTURE NEWS about these things?

ANS.—You are correct in stating that the more important manufacturers have designed motor generators to operate one projector arc on a motor generator without rheostat in series with the arc. When two arcs are to be operated the generator windings are changed so as to make the voltage nearly constant and keeping it at about 70, so that two arcs may be operated, each one in series with a small rheostat but in multiple with each other and with the generator.

The reason for sticking to this design is a matter of manufacturing cost as well as efficiency.

It is the easiest thing in the world as far as the generator is concerned, to produce a dynamo directly connected or belted to a motor which will permit, for instance, one arc of 50 amperes at 50 to 55 volts to operate upon the generator without rheostat in series with the arc and to connect in series with the first mentioned arc lamp another similar arc lamp with a switch short circuiting the arc normally, but the generator characteristics to be such that when you put the carbons together on the second lamp and you open the switch which short circuits the arc and then slowly separate the carbons on the second arc, the generator will automatically maintain the amperes at approximately 50, but will give DOUBLE the voltage.

In other words, with both arcs burning, the generator would give between 100 and 110 volts at 50 amperes, giving you two 50-ampere arcs in series on this specially constructed constant current generator, but with one arc short circuited the generator will give only 50 to 55 volts at 50 amperes for the one arc.

As far as the cost of the generator is concerned, it is if anything, more expensive than the type adopted as a standard. It possesses no advantages as far as operating is concerned and the efficiency of the generator is maximum only when both arcs are operating.

If you stop to consider that a moving picture exhibit requires two arcs for only a very short time during the performance, you should rather select the type of motor generators which will give maximum efficiency when one arc only is operating.

In the early experiments which I conducted a good many years ago, I first designed a generator along the principle you refer to which was used in the early days of arc lighting when two or more lamps were operated in series and which method was patented by Edward Weston.

I, as a matter of fact, operated a plant in Ottumwa, Iowa, where one of the Weston generators was installed for the operation of two 55-volt arcs in series for the lighting of a store and the generator was so designed that one arc could be switched off in just the manner you describe you would like to do it for a moving picture installation.

It Was All Right in the Early Days

In those early days, that method of operation was satisfactory, but now, we are looking for higher efficiency and therefore, the loss of about 10 per cent. which develops in such a generator as you mention when operating only one arc or in other words, when it is operating at half load, is unnecessary and a great waste of power.

To be sure, it looks pretty to have an installation consisting of an A. C. motor, directly connected to a generator which is of such type that a complete short circuit can be put across the brushes and to which two separate arcs can be connected with a switch short circuiting each arc and arranged so that when you open the switch on arc No. 1 and separate the carbons it will light and keep a steady flow of current of 50 amperes at 50 volts.

Then when you want to cut in the second machine, you open the second switch, which short circuited the second arc, and then slowly separate the carbons on that lamp and you have two 50-ampere arcs at 50 to 55 volts each in series.

That all sounds well and looks beautiful, on paper, but when you consider the economic feature, then you will find that you are paying for about 500 to 600 watts more current every hour you operate than is necessary, to accomplish the same results through other means, such as are established today.

The real way for you to secure high efficiency and perfect results, is to install two separate motor generators, one for each projector of the right capacity for each machine.

Then you have a system in which there is absolutely no interference and when machine No. 2 is not required you are not wasting power as the motor generator for machine No. 2 can be disconnected and stopped until it is required again for warming up the lamp and to center and focus the arc to be cut in when machine No. 1 gets to the tail end of its reel.

The installation of two motor generators also gives you a duplicate system which insures you against shut-down and is conducive of the very highest possible economy from every point of view and the very small extra investment is easily warranted by the results.

For general service, however, the modern well developed motor generators which operate, one arc with maximum efficiency, and two arcs at slightly lower amperage while transferring from one picture to the other, are giving splendid satisfaction from all points of view.

EIGHT HUNDRED COUPLES MAKE MERRY AT SECOND ANNUAL BALL HELD BY OPERATORS IN DENVER

EIGHT HUNDRED couples were present at the second annual dance of the Operators Union, No. 230, of Denver, Colo., given at Cadwell Hall. City officials and stars of the legitimate stage and screen were present.

Evelyn Nesbit and Jack Clifford represented the Orpheum Theatre, Denver. The Denham stock company was represented by Eva Lang, Herbert Delmore, Arthur Holman, Marjory Foster and Manager O. D. Woodward and his wife.

John Predari, Jack LaZar, Gladys Fisher, Merle Herstrom and Arthur E. Hoffman, president and general manager of the Hoffman Film Company, represented the Comet Brand Moving Pictures made by the Hoffman Film Company of Denver.

Alexander Nesbit, commissioner of safety, and several other city officials were represented. C. W. Werthan, attorney for the operators' union, was also in evidence.

The big feature of the ball was the electrical display, and a novelty of the evening was the Movie Rag, originated by Messrs. Thomas, Shields, Dooley and Kopsho.

Homer E. Ellison, Jr., a son of a moving picture theatre manager of the same name, played a prominent part in the management of the ball, which proved to be the most successful financially of any ball ever given by the film men of the Denver territory.

WAGNER ELECTRIC MANUFACTURING COMPANY BEGINS WORK ON TWO BUILDINGS FOR ST. LOUIS PLANT.

THE Wagner Electric Manufacturing Company has started construction on two new buildings to augment their present factory group on Plymouth avenue, St. Louis.

Building No. 1 is 140 x 90 feet, with an open bay spanned by a traveling crane of fifty feet, with galleries of twenty feet in width on either side of this bay. This building will be devoted to punch press operations. The frame work will be of structural steel, with an all metal roof having a longitudinal skylight down the center.

Building No. 2 will be 106 x 90 feet and be devoted to various operations involving the production of small parts, including small punch press work. This building is of reinforced concrete construction and fireproof throughout.

The new structures will be connected by a tunnel with the main section of Plant No. 1. Contracts call for the completion of No. 1 by April 21 and of No. 2 by June 2.

The designing of these buildings was done by the Condron Company of Chicago, and the reinforced floors of concrete in Building No. 2 are to be built under the patented Acme System of the Condron Company.

Virtually the entire exterior wall area of both buildings is glass, insuring unexcelled day-light working conditions on every floor.

A large part of this plant will be devoted to the manufacture of the White Light Converter, which is being especially designed and built for picture theatre use.

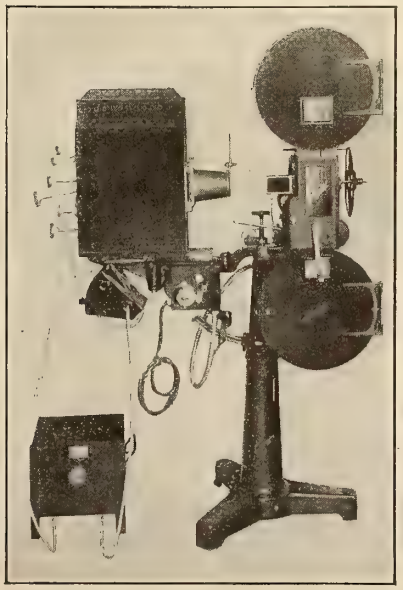
OPERATORS IN VANCOUVER SEEK CHANGE IN LICENSE FEE

EFFORTS are now being made by Vancouver Local No. 348, I. A. T. S. E., to bring about a change in the manner of taxing operators in British Columbia, and establishing an adequate provincial examination.

In place of the present fee of five dollars for a city license and one dollar for a provincial card (with fifty cents added for attorney's fee), it is planned to do away with the present city license altogether, and increase the provincial one.

An applicant would have to pay five dollars before taking the examination. If he passes he will be required to pay an additional five dollars before receiving his license, while if he fails the original five dollars paid will be forfeited.

The union is now in communication with Premier Bowser in regard to the matter, and it is hoped that in the near future a special examination room will be fitted up at the court house, with the leading projection machines, motor generator and other equipment at hand.



It is suggested that the examining board consist of the city electrician, chief of the fire department and members of the union.

STRAND, BALTIMORE, RECENTLY OPENED, LACKS NOTHING FOR COMFORT OF PATRONS

BALTIMORE'S newest motion picture theatre, the Strand, on Howard street, near Mulberry, Baltimore, was opened to the public for the first time the early part of last week.

The theatre was built for the Howard Amusement Company. It has facilities for handling about seven hundred persons each performance.

The structure is well decorated; the exterior, which is of cream stucco, is embellished with a large bronze marquis.

The decorations of the main auditorium are in rose, gold and old ivory, the walls being paneled in old rose satin damask. The floor covering is of Wilton velvet, matching the satin wall panels.

The lighting effect is totally indirect and invisible and is effected by rays from the coves. The Swartout automatic ventilating and cooling system has been installed.

This enables the air in the house to be completely changed every twenty-one minutes. A concert organestra has also been installed, and this is the first of its kind in the South. Warren Hackett Gailbraith, a Scotch musician of some note, presides at the console of this instrument in recitals and accompanying the pictures.

A ladies' room and a gentlemen's room have been provided on the first floor.

The house opens at 11 a.m. No expense has been spared in securing perfect flickerless projection.

A Minusa Gold-Fibre screen, Simplex projectors, with specially constructed lenses, arc-controllers, motor generator and electrically operated film rewinders, cleaners, splicers and all other equipment have been installed.

LYRIC AND THE CRYSTAL THEATRES OPEN IN INDIANAPOLIS

THE Lyric theatre, Indianapolis, operated by Barton and Olsen, which opened Sunday, March 19, with the Paramount program, replacing the popular-priced vaudeville, played to large audiences the following Sunday. George Beban in "An Alien" was shown.

A stage setting, representing Japanese tea gardens, has been put in and music is provided by a seven-piece orchestra.

The Crystal theatre, Indianapolis, reopened Sunday, March 19, with "Forbidden Fruit," an Ivan production. The theatre has been rebuilt throughout, and is now one of the most attractive photoplay theatres in Indianapolis.

The theatre was rebuilt in six weeks, and presents a pleasing and restful appearance and the seats are very comfortable. One of the provisions of the house to be commended is the fact that there is more room between the rows of seats than required by law, which adds to the comfort of patrons and makes it easier for pessons getting in and out.

The seats have been tinted a silver gray to match the decorative scheme of the rest of the interior finishings. Two large, forty-eight inch, heavy duty exhaust fans, which are capable of changing the air every two and a half minutes, together with eight ceiling ventilators, comprise an adequate ventilating system.

The theatre now seats 750 persons, all seats being on one floor. A new type of curtain has been installed, which is said to do away entirely with eyestrain. The operator's balcony is absolutely fireproof and holds a bank of new machines of the latest model.

The Camera

Cameras Are Now Made for Special Exhibitor Needs

Day Is Over When Picture Theatre Managers Must Send to Nearest Large City for Cameraman in Order to Get Films of Local Events—Many Secrets Supposed to Be Known Only to the Professional Need Not Remain Hidden to the Inquiring Amateur

THE wide-awake exhibitors in all parts of the country are manifesting great interest nowadays in making local pictures. Formerly when an exhibitor desired a local event filmed a cameraman was secured from the nearest large city at great inconvenience and expense.

The cameraman's services cost a young fortune and, in addition, the developing and printing, generally taken care of by the cameraman, was charged for at a pretty stiff rate.

Conditions in this respect are different now and greatly in the exhibitor's favor. The makers of cameras and apparatus have foreseen his wants and there are now on the market a large number of moderate priced cameras which are simple of operation and yield dependable results.

The value of the well produced local picture is recognized by all exhibitors, but we propose in this article to help the exhibitor to make a success of the purely mechanical end, the successful photographing of the various events or scenes which he wishes to portray.

As the exhibitor cannot be expected to know as much about photography in general, and the faults and failings of raw film stock in particular, as the professional cameraman, we will explain the most frequent causes of failure, and tell how to avoid or remedy them.

Static Trouble in Negative Sometimes Avoidable

Static electrical discharges on the film, which is the bugbear of all cameramen, is a common source of film failures. Quite frequently static troubles in negatives can be avoided.

The commonest causes of static marketings are due to careless handling of the negative stock in loading the camera. The back or celluloid side of the film may easily become charged with static by friction of the film against itself in rewinding the roll, or by inserting the roll of negative stock into the camera magazine without having put a spool in the center of the film roll.

As the hole in the center of the roll of film is larger than the spindle in the magazine the film will tighten down on itself when the camera is operated. This rubbing of the various layers of film against each other can easily electrify the film.

Still another frequent cause of static getting into the negative stock is the practice of twisting the film roll in the hands, to make the hole in the center larger to facilitate inserting the magazine spool. A roll of film is frequently charged with static before any pictures have been taken on it from one or more of the above causes.

When the camera is now operated, the rapid striking of the film by the claws, at the gate of the camera, where, of course, pressure is applied to the film by the tension springs or pressure plate, causes the static electricity to discharge in a series of minute flashes, which of course leave black streaks of varying size and pattern upon the negative images.

It should be understood that static troubles are greatly aggravated by excessive cold and dryness. The use of Eastman's X Back film has been found to greatly reduce film failures chargeable to static.

By loading and unloading the camera magazines in a warm and preferably somewhat moist room much will also be accomplished toward banishing static troubles. Such a room is always the best to handle raw film in.

The roll of negative stock as it comes from the manufacturer has the emulsion side innermost, just right for loading the magazine. To obviate the necessity of any rewinding operations, the photographer should get his magazine spools turned down to just the size of the wooden plug which comes in the center of a roll of negative stock.

Rewinding Operations Obviated

Then when loading a magazine just slip out the plug in the film roll, put in one of the magazine spools, fixed as recommended, and put the roll in the magazine. If these suggestions are followed it is not likely that any static faults can be charged to the film in the supply magazine.

Examine now the gate and film track of the camera. If the film channel and aperture plate are velvet covered, it will be well to remove this velvet. The velvet can be removed by applying a wet cloth and letting it soak through.

Then the velvet can be peeled off. The channel and aperture plate must now have a thorough cleaning, after which the aperture plate should be given a high polish with crocus cloth.

Look now to the pressure plate and the tension shoes, which support the film where the claws engage it. These should bear just hard enough on the film to keep it flat at the aperture for good even focus.

An excess of tension on these parts is sure to invite static discharges. Carrying out these suggestions is sure to greatly reduce static troubles, and in many cases will cure them entirely.

Another defect most always in evidence in motion pictures taken by amateurs is the unsightly scratches running for several hundred feet or throughout the entire subject. Nothing can mar the appearance of a film more than these scratches.

They are caused by an emulsion accumulation on the aperture plate. This or some other particle of foreign matter on the plate will scratch all film run through the camera, until removed.

The aperture and film channel must be kept scrupulously clean and highly polished. Any emulsion which has gathered on these parts may be removed by gentle rubbing with a moistened cloth.

As a goodly part of the pictures taken by exhibitors will be those of parades and events showing action, a few words as to the placement of the camera to get a pleasing effect will not be amiss.

How to Photograph Moving Objects

It should be borne in mind that people marching, autos and wagons should never be photographed passing directly in front of the camera at right angles. To photograph things thus merely results in giving the objects a dizzzy, blurred appearance when viewed on the screen.

Processions and vehicles in motion should be photographed coming toward the camera and passing off to the side of the view. A pleasing result may always be secured in this way.

As regards the proper opening for the camera shutter one-third of the circle will be right for most work. In the southern part of the country, wherever the light is excessively bright, or in photographing very rapid action, such as horse or auto racing, use one-quarter of the circle shutter opening.

Lens stops must, of course, be a matter for individual testing, and experiment, as climatic and other conditions vary somewhat in different sections of the country.

MINNEAPOLIS MAN WANTS INFORMATION ON DEVELOPING AND PRINTING PROCESSES

FROM a Minneapolis firm of opticians comes the following: "Can we obtain information from you or through you with reference to the mechanical work necessary to develop print and finish moving picture films?"

These subjects will be dealt with fully and in detail in the Camera Department in forthcoming issues, but an outline of laboratory procedure will be given here, as a guide to those who may have under consideration developing and printing motion picture films on a small scale.

The apparatus for developing negatives and positives is the same. The film is wound on frames or racks and then immersed in tanks containing the developing solutions, hypo and wash water. At least three tanks should be employed.

There are two forms of racks and tanks in common use. In the large laboratories of the film producers and those catering to the trade, a rectangular frame of wood, light in construction, is used and the film is wound spirally around it.

There are generally rows of pegs at the top and bottom of the rack or frame to keep the film from overlapping as it is wound from top to bottom on the rack.

With this form of rack a tank in the form of a trough about five feet deep is used, made of cypress wood. These tanks are made to hold from one to six racks or frames of film.

The frames are kept from touching each other by stripps or partitions attached to each side of the tank, on the inside, and running up and down.

This form of tank will require about forty-five gallons of developer to each frame of film, which in these days of high priced chemicals is some consideration.

There is another style of frame, however, known as a horizontal or "pin frame." This is composed of two pieces of wood or brass fastened together in the form of a cross. On the uppermost side pins or pegs are inserted from the center of the frame to the outermost extremity of each of the four arms.

The film is secured to one of the innermost pegs and wound around and around the pegs until the outermost pegs are reached, when the frame is completely wound with the film.

It is now immersed in a shallow circular tank of galvanized or enameled metal which requires only a few quarts of developer to submerge the frame.

Development can be judged by raising the frame occasionally, a handle being affixed to the center. These flat metal tanks come in sets of three which may be placed one within the other when not in use.

After development, fixing and washing the films may be dried on the frames if necessary but the better plan is to transfer them, after washing to a drying drum, the same being a fairly large cylinder of thin wooden slats, mounted through the center on an axle so that it may be revolved, for even and quick drying of the film.

Some sort of a frame or horse is necessary to mount the racks of film upon, so that they can be rotated when transferring film to the drying drum. The rectangular frame is the easiest to transfer film to the drum from.

As regards the printing of positives a printing machine is in many respects similar to a projector mechanism. It employs a claw instead of an intermittent sprocket to move the film.

There is a shutter with one blade to cut off the light during film movement. On a double bracket at the top are mounted the negative roll and the roll of positive stock.

The gate or door differs from a projector in that, instead of tension springs on the edges of the film only, there is a plate, usually ruby glass, which presses the films tightly together, over their whole width.

An incandescent globe in the back of the apparatus furnishes the printing light and can be moved closer or further from the film to accommodate different negative densities. Some printers have means for taking up the printed film and some have not.

The development of positive film is along the same lines as negatives, but a much brighter dark room light can be safely used with positive stock.

For the best results a differently compounded developer should be used for negatives and positives, the characteristics of which will be known by all familiar with photographic work.

All of the apparatus described is readily procurable and this department stands ready to advise in fuller detail, on such articles, at any time.

PENNSYLVANIA INSPECTOR GIVES INSTRUCTION TO DEPUTIES IN MOTION PICTURE THEATRE SUPERVISION

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Harrisburg, Pa., March 21.

LEW R. PALMER, chief inspector of the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry, called into his office today the deputy building inspectors from all parts of the state to instruct them, among other things, in their duties with regard to the inspection of motion picture theatres.

This action created some concern among theatre owners of the state who feared there might be a disposition on the part of the department to place more rigid restrictions on building regulations for motion picture theatres.

When Mr. Palmer was asked about this he assured the representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS that there is no intention to make any alterations in the present building code as affecting theatre construction, as recently prepared by the State Industrial Board.

The purpose of the conference, he said, was simply to coach the inspectors with regard to the features of the present building standards.

Theatre men of Pennsylvania felt especially apprehensive lest there might have been some plan to make the present code compulsory. Assurance was given at the time the code was adopted that the department of labor would not exercise its legal right to prescribe a compulsory code so long as theatre men showed a disposition to comply voluntarily with the standard.

It is understood that the department is satisfied that the theatre owners have been showing a proper spirit of co-operation with the state authorities in this matter, such as makes it unnecessary to make mandatory rules to govern the construction of theatres, and there seems to be every reason to believe that the voluntary code will continue in force.

WILL ENLARGE CHATTANOOGA THEATRE

IN connection with extensive improvements which are planned by the Signal Amusement Company on its motion picture theatres, it is understood that the Crescent theatre, 812 Market street, Chattanooga, will be extended the length of the block.

It will have a seating capacity of 900, and will be one of the most attractive and up-to-date film houses in Chattanooga.

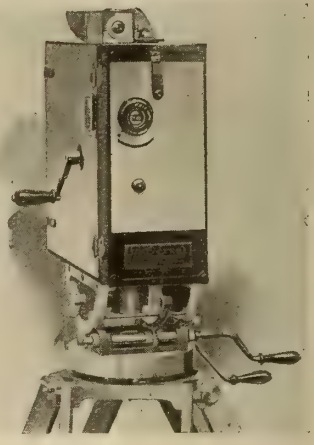
Work of rebuilding the Crescent will be started at an early date. The theatre will have a balcony which will seat 200 people. When completed the name of the theatre will be changed to the Imperial.

W. H. Wassman and Roy C. Shelton, two of the largest moving picture operators in Nashville, have combined their interests into one company and will operate in future under the name of the Wasshelton Operating Company.

Application for a charter was filed by the new concern with the county register. The capital stock is placed at $5,000. The incorporators are W. H. Wassman, Roy C. Shelton, A. T. Levine, W. H. Levine and N. O'Donnell. The company will control several of the largest moving picture theatres in Nashville.

$125,000 THEATRE PLANNED IN PHILADELPHIA

THE contract for the new theatre to be erected at Germantown avenue and Venango streets, Philadelphia, has been awarded to Ketcham and McQuade. The Hoffman Company are the architects, and the building, a one-story brick, stone, concrete and terra cotta affair, is to cost $125,000. Mrs. J. Effinger, the owner of the new house, already owns one successful Philadelphia theatre, The Leader, at 4102 Lancaster avenue, which is under the management of her son, Herbert Effinger.



The Imperial, a theatre of 1,000 seats, at Second and Poplar streets, Philadelphia, Jack Rosenthal proprietor, is contemplating the placing of a large Kimball organ in the near future. The theatre charges five and ten cents.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

Temperamental Illustrations for Serious Moments

Musical Numbers Must Be Divided Into Certain Degrees of Gravity and Solemnity Before Programming Becomes Simple—Use Waltz as the Point Dividing Frivolous and Serious Numbers, as It Is Very Flexible—This Pliancy Makes the Waltz Indispensable to Picture Players.

THE most difficult task in setting musical programs for feature photoplays, as found in getting the proper temperamental illustrations for the more serious moments illustrated on the screen.

To do this, it is first necessary that your musical numbers be divided into certain degrees of seriousness, after which contrast programming becomes simple.

In picture playing it is wise to use your waltz as the point, dividing your frivolous and serious numbers. The waltz is a very flexible number and can be made frivolous or serious at the will of the player. This makes the waltz an indispensable number to picture players.

Serious music can be divided into eight possible degrees. One, the waltz; two, light romantic; three, romantic; four, heavy romantic; five, pathetic; six, heavy pathetic; seven, heavy, and eight, plaintive.

Number one needs no explanation, other than its adaptability to any of the eight above mentioned degrees, when using lento, minor or oriental waltz movements.

Number two is better obtained by 6/8 movements of moderate tempo. Numbers suggesting out-door temperaments or numbers played in the upper registers are good.

Number three should be numbers played in the middle register of similar temperament as number two, but should contain legato played movements.

Number four should be numbers of slower tempo, the theme being carried through the composition in the lower registers. For romantic appeals, numbers written in major keys should always be used.

Necessary for Pathetic Appeals

For number five or pathetic appeals, numbers having positive legato phrasing with short modulations into minor chords should be used. When the minor strains are more lengthy, the number becomes a heavy pathetic number, designated as number six.

It should be remembered that pathetic appeals are always better obtained in the middle and lower registers. In these registers, legato movements are more appealing.

Number seven, or numbers known as heavy numbers should have positive dramatic effects. These numbers are better known by their short unfinished themes and their modulations into many different chords with slight or no preparation at all. Such numbers are always slow numbers and are found only among the classics of our greatest composers.

Numbers with conflicting themes or movements played simultaneously, will also create heavy effects. Number eight or plaintive numbers, must be very slow, and should be numbers in minor keys throughout.

To obtain the degree of seriousness desired, it is not only necessary to be familiar with the screen action, but also the number preceding or succeeding such action.

For instance, if you were playing a light, frivolous 2/4 number, you could then by contrasting, obtain a very serious appeal, suitable for the most quiet love scene by the use of a romantic number, known above as number three.

Should a serious appeal be desired after a waltz lento movement, it might be necessary to use a number five or number six number; namely, the pathetic or heavy pathetic for obtaining the proper contrast, and adding appropriate importance to the succeeding serious scene.

For numbers one, two and three, the very opposite is quite often true; namely, certain waltzes have a more serious appeal than light romantic or romantic numbers. Consequently, numbers two and three could be used as relief numbers for number one, when such a condition is apparent in your program.

In building up your music to the higher degrees of seriousness, it might be well to remember that one, two and three are numbers which are flexible and can be appropriately used as pivot numbers, from which both your light or frivolous, and your more serious effects can be gradually obtained.

Whenever possible, it is more effective to get the greatest possible contrast in your musical program.

ANS.—It has been necessary for me to discontinue sending out any plots at all, to be perfectly fair with all our readers.

I am glad to note that you are one of us who think musical programs or plots are necessary to better picture playing.

The music plots of three or more of the features you mention have been given in this department of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and by looking over your back numbers, you will find them.

18.	Desc. (Hy.-Path.) XXX.....	"Told at Twilight" (G. Schirmer and Company)..
19.	Waltz Lento (Classy Leg.) XX.....	"Destiny" (G. Schirmer and Company).....	To End.

Note: In music plots each reel of film is divided into 10 units of time, each unit denoted by one X representing about 1½ minutes. Consequently when a number is designated by XX it plays about 3 minutes, XXXX about 6 minutes, etc. When no X appears after musical description it means that the number is very short and does not play a minute or more. When cues to stop numbers are in quotation "——" it means that the cue is reading matter or sub-title. All other cues are action on screen. All segues should be made quietly and clean. When quick segues or abrupt stops are necessary it will be mentioned in Cues or Notes. When the time of each 1,000 feet of film is less than 15 minutes there will appear less than 10 X's in each reel. To get the correct time of projection for each reel, multiply the number of X's appearing in each reel by 1½.

Effect Note: During No. 17 a pistol shot is the only essential effect.

Music Notes: This picture affords excellent opportunities for the playing of an exceptionally good musical program. Note that Nos. 5, 6, 12, 18 and 19 have no cues to stop and can consequently be played concert, when numbers of stated appeal are selected. Abrupt segues are not necessary. Serious music must be used throughout. No. 1 can be a light legato number. No. 2 should be concert waltz with a short introduction. Nos. 5, 7, 8, 10, 12, 15 and 18 must be slow numbers having a dramatic effect as well as a romantic or pathetic appeal, as designated in plot. No. 3 is an intermezzo-trot as is used for dancing. Nos. 6, 9, 13 and 19 are all slow waltzes, played legato, so as to maintain a serious or romantic appeal. No. 11 can be a medium light number. A moderate 6-8 number is good. No. 14 can be a light 2-4 number. Nos. 4, 16 and 17 are melodramatic numbers as suggested in plot.

The picture can be excellently illustrated musically on the organ.

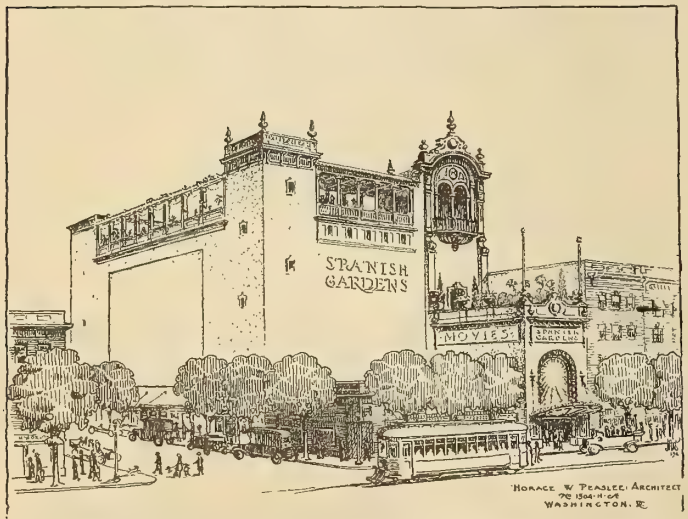
Spanish Gardens $100,000 Theatre for Washington

Amusement Structure Will be Located on Fourteenth and Irving Streets, With Seating Capacity of 4,500, Including a Roof Garden of 2,000 Seats—The Architectural Style Will Make it Distinctive—Covered Pavilion for Refreshment Seekers is Part of Plan



AT LAST Washington, D. C., is to have a motion picture theatre that is not only "something different" but something novel and at the same time something beautiful, comfortable and altogether practical.

This is the Spanish Gardens to be located on Fourteenth and Irving streets, in the residential section in the midst of an established motion picture settlement.

Work will commence next month and occupation is promised late in the summer. It is estimated that the cost will be $100,000 and from the indications of the plans these figures appear conservative.

The company responsible for the Spanish Gardens is the Federal Amusement Company, the local fiscal representatives being G. L. Stabler and R. W. Power, both men who know what they are doing and are anxious to give the national capital a motion picture house worthy of favorable praise from its constant flow of visitors.

The general type of the theatre will be an auditorium 85 by

THEATRE · FOR · THE · FEDERAL · AMUSEMENT · COMPANY

150 feet, with a seating capacity of 2,500, including the balcony. There will also be an open roof garden with a capacity of 2,000.

Two Theatres Run at Same Time

The two theatres may be run at the same time, making a capacity of 4,500, or they may be operated separately, as the management or the weather may deem best.

It is to the architect, Horace W. Peaslee, that this new departure in design and comfort is due, for Mr. Peaslee is a young man comparatively fresh from architectural studies in Europe. He is thoroughly alive to the fact that motion pictures are here to stay and that the American public demands more comforts from the motion picture theatre than from the stage structures.

Mr. Peaslee is as interested over the Spanish Gardens (a name of his suggestion) as if it were a palace. "I mean to make this a theatre where beauty and comforts will go hand in hand; a theatre where I will want to go myself for enjoyment."

There will be a definite style of architecture—that of the Spanish Renaissance—with its tower and attractive balcony. The stucco walls, arches, and columns will be highly ornamented with definite designs, colored tiles and illuminations in keeping with the period. The large circular marquise promises to be a novelty in color and design.

The entrance lobby on Fourteenth will be fifty feet by thirty feet. The passage will not be obstructed by the ticket booth, which will be placed to the side under the ornamental staircase, leading to the balcony and boxes. On the opposite side will be a moving stairway to facilitate entrance and exit of patrons. Display posters will be neatly arranged in wall panels. No easels will be used.

For the benefit of the balcony and box patrons there will be a mezzanine promenade made possible by the penetration of the under side of the balcony by the vaulted ceiling of the foyer. This makes use and beauty of an otherwise homely aspect in the usual theatre construction.

Roof Garden and Promenade for Balcony Patrons

The balcony patrons will also be given another comfort in the form of a roof garden and promenade over the entrance lobby. Here under trellises and behind lattices refreshments will be served continuously.

The seats of the auditorium will be roomy with broad aisles. There will be a spacious promenade in the rear. Ventilation and lighting will be in the hands of experts, who will have the comforts of the patrons always in mind.

The walls and interior decorations will be restful in color and beautiful to look upon. They will have a definite scheme and not be merely put there to fill up space.

The stage will be ample for a large orchestra and desired decorations. It will also accommodate sets for special occasions. The screen will have a novel setting, to be made known later.

The chief departure in the Spanish Gardens and that which gives it its name will be the roof garden, whose canopy will be the starry heavens.

Here is where comfort and pleasure and an "at home" feeling will reign supreme and here is where Mr. Peaslee has given the Capital of the Nation what it has wanted in a picture theatre.

The central part will be for seats only, but for those who wish to enjoy refreshments while watching the pictures, there will be an elevated promenade provided with tables. There will also be a covered pavilion for refreshment seekers, so arranged as to permit unobstructed view of the screen.

The Roof a Veritable Garden

The entire roof will be converted into a veritable garden, with its pergolas, lattices, flowers and vines. Here Mr. Peaslee promises to work out some novelties found in Spain that will be a delight. Situated as the Spanish Gardens will be on Mount Pleasant hill, the breeze will have full sweep.

Mr. Stabler and Mr. Powers will provide an excellent orchestra. The best features only will be shown, at a uniform admission of ten cents, with the exception of the boxes. There is every reason to believe that the picture patrons of Washington will welcome the Spanish Gardens.

A THEATRE A DAY RECORD FOR NEW HOUSES IN WISCONSIN

A THEATRE a day, or seven a week, is the record for new theatres set in Wisconsin during the past seven days.

Plans for exactly seven new houses have been announced by builders and architects, the costs ranging all the way from $7,500 to $30,000.

Builders, exhibitors or exchangemen could give no particular reason for this sudden and remarkable activity in threatre building other than that good business conditions and a very bright future warranted this building.

A strange feature of this activity is that but one of the seven houses reported is to be built in Milwaukee. All the others are to be erected in the smaller cities, not one of whose population exceeds the 20,000 mark. The majority of the towns range around the 10,000 mark.

One of the towns, Muscoda, only boasts of 743 people. Architect F. L. Kronenberg of Madison has completed plans for the erection of a theatre for Fred Paulick of that city. The building will be two stories and basement, 50x100 feet, have vacuum steam heating, a sound proof floor and metal ceiling.

At Marshfield, G. A. Krasm, 326 S. Central street, has completed plans for the remodelling of a store for a photoplay theatre. The building is owned by Kleiner, Lang and Scharmann, hardware dealers. The present building is of reinforced concrete and is 30x77, but an addition will be 30x80 feet, two stories high, and when completed the theatre will have a 500 seating capacity.

At Antigo H. E. and P. J. Hanson, proprietors of the Palace theatre, have instructed Architect H. T. Liebert, Wausau, to take figures for a solid brick theatre, with cut stone and terra cotta trimmings. The building is to be 45x180, two stories and basement, have hot air heating, composition roofing, and probably terrazzo floors. When finished the building will cost about $20,000.

Ripon has selected Architect Henry Auler of Oshkosh to prepare plans for a new city hall, armory and theatre to cost between $30,000 and $40,000.

The Madagin-Lauerman Company, Marinette, is having plans prepared for the erection of a photoplay theatre on Main street of that city to be leased by Asher Brothers, proprietor of the Bijou theatre. The building is to be of solid brick, 90x120, with a seating capacity of about seven hundred.

In Milwaukee B. S. Scheiderer is preparing plans for the erection of a photoplay theatre for J. R. McKinley at Stevens Point. The building is to be of solid brick or brick and tile construction, one story and part basement, 40x130 feet. It will have furnace heating, a fan ventilating system, tar and gravel roofing, stone trimming, a stage and indirect lighting.

The theatre is expected to cost about $7,500 and will have a seating capacity of five hundred. The Kroening Construction, 708 Majestic Building, is taking figures for the erection of a photoplay theatre in that city, costing about $20,000, to be built on Fourteenth avenue and Mitchell street.

$100,000 THEATRE FOR SUPERIOR, WIS.

A NEW $100,000 motion picture and vaudeville theatre, with a seating capacity of 1,200, will be built in Superior, Wis., by M. S. and B. J. Cook, proprietors of the New Grand, Duluth, and Frank N. Phelps.

The building will be of brick, concrete and steel, and modern in every detail, with the latest system of ventilation and will be absolutely fireproof. There will be playrooms and a nursery for children, rest rooms for women, and smoking rooms for men.

FEDERAL SIGN SYSTEM OF KANSAS CITY COMPLETING ELECTRICAL ALPHABET SIGN

THE Federal Sign System of Kansas City is making much headway with an electrical alphabet which it is leasing to theatre owners for announcing subjects.

The Prospect and Gillham have been using them for some time and several others are soon to adopt these signs.

NEW RIALTO THEATRE, BROOKLYN'S LARGEST FILM THEATRE, IS OPENED MARCH 18 WITH "NE'ER-DO-WELL"

BROOKLYN'S largest theatre devoted exclusively to the exhibition of high class moving pictures—the Rialto—at Flatbush avenue and Cortelyou road, in the Flatbush section, was opened on Saturday night, March 18, before an audience of more than two thousand persons, drawn from the immediate vicinity.

The Rialto, completed at a cost of $125,000, has a seating capacity of more than two thousand. The house was built expressly for high-class photoplay exhibition.

For the opening night and several days thereafter, the principal attraction was a picturization of Rex Beach's novel, "The Ne'er-Do-Well," the Selig-V-L-S-E ten-reel feature.

The policy at the Rialto will be the exhibition of productions of the Famous Players' Company, the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company and the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company on the Paramount Program.

EXTERIOR OF THE RIALTO THEATRE, FLATBUSH, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

The program will not be unlike that of the Strand theatre, New York. There will be high-class musical selections between the screen presentations, and the feature pictures will have the accompaniment of a symphony orchestra.

The Rialto is a beautiful structure, substantially built, and complies with all the latest requirements of the building laws. It is provided with more than the usual number of exits, and a special effort has been made by the management to give to the place an atmosphere in keeping with the whole environment of the Flatbush section in which it is situated.

In addition to the presentation of Paramount Pictures, the stars of which include Mary Pickford, Geraldine Farrar, Marguerite Clarke, Blanche Sweet, Fannie Ward, Pauline Frederick, Leonore Ulrich and many others, provision is made for the exhibition of specially elaborate productions as they are made.

Access to the auditorium is through an inner lobby past doors of plate glass and mirrors. There is a wide, broad foyer behind the orchestra seats, with retiring rooms off from it and special provision for women and children.

The Rialto lacks the old-fashioned stage. There is, however, an extra large space for the orchestra, and in place of a stage there is a platform designed for concert numbers. Leading from the platform are passages to dressing rooms and retiring rooms for the musicians, lecturers, singers or other entertainers.

The executive offices for the management are on a mezzanine floor over the lobbies and under the balcony, being reached from the lobbies by separate stairs.

Thoroughly fireproof, and with every provision for the comfort and safety of its audiences, the work of construction and interior fittings was almost entirely the product of Brooklyn firms.

The architect was R. Thomas Short; the builders, the Herz Construction Company. The structural iron work was furnished by Reichner & Penner; the first and damp-proofing was done by the H. W. Johns-Manville Company and the Brooklyn Fireproof Sash & Door Company; the ventilating system was installed by the Typhoon Fan Company, and Automatic Ticket Selling & Cash Register Company equipped the ticket office.

There are two Powers' 6-B, with booth equipment from the Picture Theatre Equipment Company.

Manager Robert Robertson is to be congratulated on the policy of the house, which promises "photoplay productions of the very highest calibre, with a program consisting of musical and artistic embellishments of the best type."

"RETURNED SOLDIER" COMPETITION A FACTOR IN STRIKE SITUATION IN CALGARY.

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Vancouver, B. C., March 24.

AS the result of the refusal of the managers of the Allen, Bijou, Monarch, Princess and Isis theatres in Calgary to sign the new agreement offered by the operators' union, containing a closed-shop clause, it was decided that a strike would be called in the houses named. On March 13 the operators at these theatres refused to go to work until the agreement was signed, and the managers quickly got into action.

For several weeks a large class of men who have been wounded and discharged from the army have been taking lessons in operating from an instructor who had installed a projection machine in the basement of the Empress theatre.

It is said that the managers had been expecting a strike for some time, and took steps to point out to Secretary William Alsdorf of the Returned Soldiers' Association that positions would be open for competent operators if the expected trouble developed.

After a hasty conference by the managers these men were communicated with by J. B. Cronk, of the Allen theatre, and quickly went to the houses affected, which had been forced to close for about an hour, but which were open for business again shortly after noon.

It is stated that the new men are giving satisfactory service, and that the class of which they were members recently passed the provincial examination with an average grade twenty per cent. higher than any previous class.

In a statement issued by Joseph T. Aaron, secretary of the operators' union, he said: "We went personally to Mr. Alsdorf, and offered to teach all the returned soldiers free of charge, whereas in the other cases they have been paying twenty-five dollars each for a private party to teach them.

"So far as the returned soldier is concerned, we had no opposition whatever to them. We all had the intention to admit any returned soldier who was competent without any admission fee. As far as the agreement which we presented to the managers to sign is concerned, it in no way prevented the returned soldiers from obtaining employment at the theatres, as we have taken the matter up with Mr. Alsdorf, and we are and always have been willing to give positions over to returned soldiers as soon as they were competent."

While Secretary Alsdorf admitted that the union had made the offer to teach the men operating, he stated that they would all have had to start in as apprentices, and continue as such for a period of several months before it would be possible for them to secure a union card and become full-fledged operators.

As most of them were unable to support themselves without pay for so long a time, said Mr. Alsdorf, they decided that it was to their advantage to take the private instruction at twenty-five dollars.

INTERSTATE FILM COMPANY OF PHILADELPHIA ORDERS MINUSA GOLD FIBRE SCREEN

V. R. GARRICK, general manager of the Interstate Film Company of Philadelphia, has placed an order with the Minusa Cine Products Company of St. Louis for a Minusa Gold Fibre screen to be placed as soon as possible in his projection room of his thearte.

As Mr. Garrick's theatre is one of the most important in Philadelphia for the exhibitors to congregate and see the latest releases, he desires to present these in the best manner possible, and he felt that his pictures were losing a great deal of their detail and beauty when shown on the ordinary cloth screen he has been using.

SPECIAL DOUBLE LAMP CONTROL MADE POSSIBLE BY ARRANGEMENT OF CONTROLLER.

The panel measures 15 inches wide by 18 inches high and requires a space of about 10 inches from the wall. Angle iron legs are furnished to support the panel about 5 feet from the floor, and upon the angle irons there may be mounted an emergency switch to throw the arcs on your A. C. transformer or other emergency device.

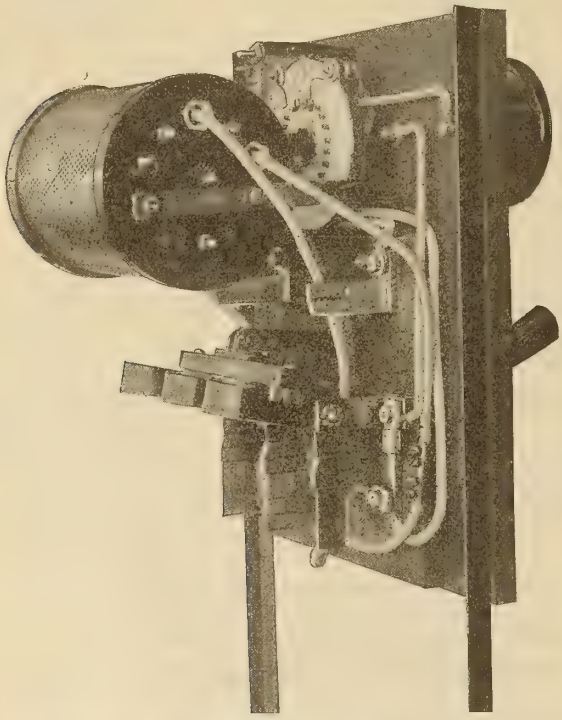

FIG. 2. BACK VIEW OF COMPLETE SWITCHBOARD WITH SWITCH IN ONE LAMP POSITION

Upon these legs there may also be mounted, if required or necessary, the starting box for the motor generator, if it should be installed in the booth.

The arrangement for this special double lamp control is the design of J. H. Hallberg.

ELINOR BEGINS MUSIC REHEARSALS FOR "RAMONA" OPENING IN NEW YORK

CARLI D. ELINOR, musical director of "Ramona," which W. H. Clune, the Pacific Coast film magnate, and his associate, Lloyd Brown, will present at the Forty-fourth street theatre, New York, beginning the first week in April, is now in New York with a number of his men.

Mr. Elinor will immediately begin the work of orchestra rehearsals, as the music of "Ramona" is a most important feature of the presentation of the cinema-drama.

General Manager Brown, who originated the practice of "cueing" dramatic music to the moods of important photoplays, is authority for the statement that in the "Ramona" score there is a theme for every character and this theme is varied according to the mood of that character at the moment.

Thirty musicians in the orchestra pit and twelve more on the stage will provide the accompaniment.

SEVERAL THEATRES UNDER CONSTRUCTION IN WISCONSIN CITIES

ARCHITECT F. W. ANDREE, Milwaukee, is preparing plans for a moving picture theatre to be erected somewhere in the state for J. R. McKinley. The building is to be of brick and concrete construction, fireproof, one story and basement, seating capacity of 700, 40 x 150, steam heated and composition roofing.

A. Summers and Son, 16 N. Division street, Janesville, are the general contractors for the theatre to be erected by the Janesville Improvement Company, and are taking figures on ornamental stucco, decorating, metal canopy and tile floor. The owners will buy electric fixtures, projector and cork carpet.

Diddel and Swanson, of Wausau, are taking figures for the erection of a new theatre according to the plans of J. E. Baggstrom. The structure is to be of brick, one story, 25 x 70 furnace heating, metal ceiling and composition roofing.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY MOVES TO MALLER'S BUILDING, CHICAGO

THE Amusement Supply Company of Chicago has found it necessary to move to larger quarters in order to handle its increased business.

The company will occupy its new offices in the Maller's Building about April first. This company handles every kind of equipment for moving picture theatres, and the patrons of this concern will be afforded a better opportunity to inspect the extensive line of goods on display.

The Maller's Building now houses fourteen film concerns.

These Comedy Features in one reel present

LILLIAN BROWN LEIGHTON
with
"NAPOLEON THE GREAT" and "SALLY HIS MATE"

These chimpanzees with the human brains are naturally funnier than any human beings can possibly be and in addition are as clever as any comedians on the screen or stage. They are supported by other well known fun makers.

The act now playing small time vaudeville billed as Napoleon (a chimpanzee) and Little Hip (an elephant) is not the original act of that name. Little Hip died in 1915 in Australia, and the genuine "Napoleon the Great" is appearing exclusively in E. & R. Jungle Film Company comedies. Emulation is the sincerest form of flattery.

EXTRA MEASURE

V. L. S. E. asks nothing more than that future promises shall be judged by past performances.

However, as a taste of the "extra measure" which the immediate future holds in store for Big Four exhibitors, this excerpt from an interview with the General Manager of the V.L.S.E. will provide reason for increased confidence and satisfaction:

Big Features Coming.

"We have many other big pictures coming, such as the Edna May picture, in seven reels; the three Rex Beach pictures, of the Lubin Company; the William Gillette pictures, 'Sherlock Holmes' and 'Secret Service,' from Essanay; the E. H. Sothern pictures, another great production from Selig, and a nine-reel feature, 'The Dawn of a New Day,' which is the first picture the man who directed it ever expressed himself as being entirely satisfied with."

To those who have not yet availed themselves of the superior drawing strength of Big Four productions, this statement will be rich in its significance of the returns to be derived from an alliance with this company.

Such an alliance, it is to be remembered, is always predicated on the best interests of the exhibitor—the "open booking" policy which leaves the exhibitor free to choose that which is best suited to his patronage, and to pay a price commensurate with each film's individual box office value

V. L. S. E., Inc.,

Gentlemen:—

If I have seemed negligent in not adding my expression of appreciation of your features to the enormous vote of confidence which is evidently being extended to you, it is your own fault.

Your pictures have been packing them in so, and I have been so busy, that I am way behind in my mail.

How different this is from my experience before booking V. L. S. E. Then I was up against the proposition of having the most beautiful theatre in the North-west for its size, a location right in the heart of the city, the finest pipe organ in the country and--no business.

I had tried mixed programs, special features, in fact almost everything for over a year but to no avail.

Remembering the solicitation of one of your representatives, I decided as a last resort to give your features a trial.

I only wish to heaven that I had done so long ago, as you have turned a dead one into the best paying proposition in the country.

Pictures like "The Great Divide", "Island of Surprise", "The Misleading Lady" and "The Rosary" are, not only from a box office standpoint, but for sheer entertainment, supreme in achievement.

It is a real pleasure to express my appreciation for the class of pictures you are releasing, and to heartily advise any exhibitor in need of a "money maker" to use your incomparable product.

Sincerely yours,

W. M. Abrahamson

Dorothy Gish in Little Meena's Romance

For the week of April 9th the TRIANGLE-Fine Arts Play will be a picture of particular merit—"Little Meena's Romance"—a play that has that irresistible touch and romantic atmosphere that the public so much appreciates. Dorothy Gish, the popular star, has the leading role, and Owen Moore plays the masculine lead.

Everyone will appreciate that fine sense of romance that is so ably expressed in this latest TRIANGLE Picture. Never for a moment does Dorothy Gish allow your patrons to forget the sweet innocence of the little Pennsylvania Dutch girl.

Dorothy Gish plays the part of Meena Bauer, a little Pennsylvania Dutch girl brought up by a wealthy but frugal father to know nothing of life but scrubbing floors and washing dishes. Into her life there comes a handsome Count, a wealthy young man who through lack of funds is forced to become a peddler of a clothes-wringer.

Then as usual there will be two Keystone Comedies that are guaranteed to drive dull care away.

If you are not already a TRIANGLE exhibitor why not use the attached coupon and secure information in regard to the presentation of these pictures?

What Do The Mergers Mean?

MANY exhibitors have written and a few have called at our office to ask the facts beneath the rumours of mergers with which the daily press has been deluged the past few days.

THESE exhibitors have good reason to inquire.

Some have heavy investments and are in control of the situation in their respective towns, which control might be upset through a very broad merger, or through some merger which might swing a legitimate house into the picture field.

Other exhibitors evidently assume that the American Tobacco capital, so widely hinted at as back of reported mergers, means ownership of theatres along the lines and on the scale of the United Cigar Stores.

* * *

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has said nothing of mergers because there was nothing to say.

The time has evidently come, however, to clear the air as far as possible to explain why there is no definite news.

In the first place, the association of American Tobacco or Standard Oil or any big corporate capital with the suggested mergers never had nor has the slightest foundation of fact. We may entirely dismiss the idea and all that goes with it of country-wide chains of theatres like cigar stores.

This is simply a case of newspaper imagination run riot.

ALSO quite as imaginative are the various mergers reported, particularly the newspaper report given wide circulation and which includes in one grand group about every producing and distributing company in business.

This is all newspaper talk.

An attempt to effect a considerable merger has been made. But the chances are nine to ten against its consummation. It has been found an exceedingly difficult piece of business.

* * *

SMALLER mergers are talked about and are much more likely to happen. This much, at least, the exhibitor may know—that nothing approaching a monopoly is imminent or possible. Those best informed do not believe that monopoly will ever be possible in this industry and art which in their combined essentials differ so greatly from every other industry.

As a matter of fact, the possibility of monopoly was very thoroughly investigated six months ago by one of the greatest banking houses in the world and dismissed as impossible.

The smaller mergers—smaller as regards numbers of companies concerned—are quite apt to happen and the definite news may be announced at any time.

But these may in no wise alarm the exhibitor. They are no different than the groupings of producers and distributors that have been happening right along in this industry. They will, in fact, prove beneficial to the exhibitor, since they will naturally be formed with the idea of making a better product and selling it more economically.

Such mergers, in other words, are brought about for good business purposes and good business must have, as its chief object, the greater prosperity of the exhibitor.

SEVERAL weeks ago MOTION PICTURE NEWS raised editorially the question of merger. Over-production, extensive production and excessive cost of distribution were such that, in our estimation, the industry was trembling.

There were but two solution to the serious situation, we suggested: one, a merger to control production and the cost of production and to diminish the absurd cost of distribution; the other, a plain and ruthless struggle for existence which only the fittest would survive.

WE are evidently at a crisis, and mergers seem to be the more natural and popular solution. Producers and distributors seem to favor this course. The groupings that may result will naturally be brought about through several companies having common aims and policies. This will help greatly to standardize the product, a result which is very much to be desired.

* * *

WE have for too long a time been making footage instead of pictures. Theatres have been compelled to run on mere footage, or at least partly on mere footage, or they have paid for footage to get here and there a picture.

The greater public won't digest this footage any longer, any more than they will read cheap literature. Those who continue to make and distribute footage must be content with the fewer houses and the smaller public which is really content with cheap pictures, cheap newspapers and cheap magazines.

* * *

PRODUCING mergers which will be able to turn out as consistently good pictures each week as a good weekly magazine is consistently good—and this demands a single and harmonious policy — will solidify themselves and elevate the whole industry. Which, after all, brings us back to a former slogan of this publication, a slogan which is undoubtedly the conscious or unconscious object of this present era of evolution—namely, "Fewer pictures, better pictures, longer runs."

VOL. XIII April 15, 1916. No. 15.

The Exhibitors and the Board of Trade

WE want to call the attention of every exhibitor to the organization of the Brooklyn exhibitors, the news of which appears in this issue, to the excellence of their principles as set forth in the preamble to their constitution and to the fact that their very first step is that of securing co-operation with the State League and the National League and with the Board of Trade.

We wish also to call attention to the resolution of the Exhibitors of Northern Ohio and to the letter of Sam Bullock of that organization; also to the co-operation with the Board of Trade already firmly and enthusiastically established by the state exhibitors' organizations of Kansas, Minnesota, Maryland, North Carolina and Michigan.

Further, we call attention to the resolution, as published in this issue, of the Board of Trade, tendering full co-operation with the National League in the holding of the Trade Exposition in New York and in the combating of censorship, and offering to the treasury of the National League a liberal percentage of the profits of the New York show.

AN outsider, any impartial person, it would seem, would view the situation optimistically. He would say that the motion picture industry was to be congratulated upon its evident unity of organization, that unity so essential to the progress and prosperity of any industry.

He would say that the Board of Trade was working primarily and successfully for exhibitor co-operation and in the exhibitor's interest; and he would say that the exhibitors everywhere recognized that close co-operation with a national and joint body like the Board of Trade was very essential to their own and to the interests of the trade in general.

AND yet underneath the surface there are indications in a few places of an animosity toward the Board of Trade; and just recently there was advertised a New York Exposition to be held with the obvious purpose of rivalling and injuring the New York exposition previously announced by the Board of Trade. This exhibitors' exposition may be reannounced.

What is the antipathy due to?

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has watched patiently and sympathetically the relations between the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and the Motion Picture Board of Trade, urging and encouraging co-operation and cordiality, and seeking to discover precisely what were the causes for grievance, the grounds for a breach.

We have yet to be enlightened upon that latter point. We have never heard, directly or indirectly, one definite, concrete reason for the attacks which several men who are exhibitors, and one or two who are not, have considered it necessary, or expedient, to make upon the existence and the activities of the Board of Trade.

IF they have any, we offer our columns for their expression. If any such reasons exist in fact, MOTION PICTURE NEWS desires to be of every possible service in having those reasons first understood and then removed.

The Board of Trade is precisely what its name implies—a board of the motion picture trade of America, with a membership including all branches of that trade, and with especial provision made for exhibitors.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has identified itself with the exhibitors' cause on every proposition since its foundation.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS led and won the fight for exhibitor unity at Dayton two years ago this summer. It has fought censorship for the exhibitor when no other journal concerned itself with the question.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has more freely and severely critcised the manufacturers, whenever it believed they deserved criticism, than any other trade journal.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS is an exhibitors' journal, maintained to help the exhibitor in his bread-and-butter business. We believe in and we will struggle for exhibitor organization. But we are not the official organ of any Local League, or State League or National League or the Board of Trade.

It is our function and our purpose to assist every branch of this industry and to encourage unity of organization among all branches.

We stand for this and we deplore and shall attack any move from any source in the opposite direction.

An Unfortunate State of Affairs

IT is extremely unfortunate, in the opinion of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, that the New York Exhibitors League should have elected to hold an exposition during the week preceding the Board of Trade Exposition at Madison Square Garden, in direct competition with that latter event.

Its effect upon the industry as a whole is bound to be the reverse of what is needed at this time. It will incite to dissension where there should be co-operation; it will provoke competition where there should be unity; it will make harder the achievement of the aims both of the Exhibitors League and the Board of Trade.

The affair is unnecessary, and any action which tends to produce such results as this one will, at this stage of the struggle for unity, if unnecessary is also inexcusable.

Paramount, Metro, Mutual and Lasky Not in Merger

B. B. Hampton, a Vice-President of American Tobacco Company, Who for Several Months Entered Into Informal Discussions with Various Film Men with View to Consolidation of Various Picture Interests, Declares That Newspapers Brought Into Situation Names of Many Concerns with Whom He Had Conducted No Negotiations

BENJAMIN B. HAMPTON, one of the vice-presidents of the American Tobacco Company, about whom the various rumors regarding mergers of large motion picture interests have centered for the past few weeks, has made a statement to MOTION PICTURE NEWS which clears the atmosphere considerably.

At the same time official denials of any connections with proposed mergers have been made, on behalf of their respective companies, by President W. W. Hodkinson of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, President Richard A. Rowland of the Metro Pictures Corporation, President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation and Samuel Goldfish, vice-president and executive head of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company.

Mr. Hampton's statement follows:

"For several months I have been conducting informal discussions with various moving picture manufacturers, looking towards a consolidation of various motion picture interest.

"In these discussions I have represented no corporation or individual but myself.

"So far, the matter has reached only the stage of preliminary plans. So many items must be taken into consideration, the project is one that may never materialize.

"The Lubin interests are not controlled by P. S. Hill.

"Relative to Mary Pickford, I have no statement to make.

Rumors Originated in Chicago

"The stories of a large merger originated in Chicago. Newspaper men advise me that these stories started with some one connected with a moving picture concern with whom I have had informal discussions.

"The newspaper reports brought into the situation the names of a great many concerns with whom I had had no discussions. This is unfair to these concerns.

"At no time have my plans contemplated anything like a large consolidation. Six or eight companies—producers and distributors included—were all that had been considered at any time.

"My relations with the producers and distributors with whom I have conducted informal discussions have been most pleasant, and from the little I have learned of moving picture conditions, I should say that the industry is in a very flourishing, profitable and satisfactory condition except for the fact that some form of consolidation is undoubtedly needed to provent overproduction with the consequent unfortunate results on players, producers, distributors, exhibitors and authors.

(Signed) "BENJAMIN B. HAMPTON."

President Hodkinson of Paramount said: "Newspaper reports connecting Paramount with mergers are unwarranted by facts. We have not even deemed it necessary to reply to them. Paramount does not need a merger. We are going right ahead along the definite and established lines of Paramount policy.

"We are working far ahead along these lines. A systematic field campaign, of which I cannot as yet speak, is now fully under way to define and increase our efficiency. In the trade it is not even known that the campaign is going on.

"Our policy is to be of greater service to exhibitors and to ourselves. Any merger that would help to bring about these ends and that would be identical with our policy we would, of course, regard favorably.

"It is comparatively an easy matter," continued Mr. Hodginson, "to see who is making money and who is not. Mergers are needed in some quarters. I could indicate these. Probably they will happen.

Construction Work Needed

"So far as the whole situation is concerned, a great deal of constructive work is needed. Not the least of this lies with the exhibitor. He must learn this fact: that if he expects good pictures he must pay for them, and must make it profitable for the manufacturer to produce them, and in order to pay for them and also pay himself he must give these pictures the run they are entitled to. This is plain business sense; and like any business rule it is bound to come into being."

President Rowland of Metro said:

"I am not a prophet nor the son of a prophet, but I rise to remark that the motion picture industry will not be sewed up into a combine now or any time in the future because there are elements in the business that defy combination.

"In the first place motion pictures are not a business in the same way that the making and selling of automobiles and tobacco or farm machinery are businesses. It is an amusement enterprise rather than a business and its artistic elements are dependent upon newly created brain products, which must be fresh and different with each succeeding week.

"No amount of capital can control such an enterprise or keep it tied fast. Under present conditions the only possible combine that could hope to succeed would be a theatre merger which would include the majority of picture theatres in the United States. And with this effected, and sewed up, there is nothing to prevent private capital in any city in the land from putting up opposition houses.

"Some of the concerns may want to get in under cover because they can't keep up the pace and they desire to adjust their affairs before the sheriff gives them the hearty handshake. Metro is making money —we confess it—and we are moving rapidly along safe lines. We see no reason for turning our successful business into a pot with others less successful.

"Personally I would like to see some of the timid ones get together. I believe their lives might be much happier and their rest at night much more peaceful. But as for Metro, we have just gone by our first milestone. We are too full of life and vigor and enthusiasm to want to sit in with the rocking chair fleet.

No Rocking Chair Fleet for Rowland

"We are in business chiefly because we like it and perhaps that's one of the reasons why we have been successful. If we exchanged our live organization for a collection of stock certificates in a gigantic combine I fear we would spend our declining years papering our walls with the handsome steel engravings.

"Our word to the combine makers and the dealers in combine rumors is—go to it. Anything that promises added zest to an already lively game will make the next few years worth while.

"We speak in no spirit of boastfulness, but we feel fit for a fray."

Official denial of any connection with any proposed merger of motion picture interests was made by John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, upon his return to New York from Chicago, whence emanated the report that a number of the greater motion picture concerns, including the Mutual, were to combine. This report alleged that Charles Chaplin and Mary Pickford were to appear in the motion picture releases put out by the combine.

"This report is absolutely unfounded," said Mr. Freuler, "and without the shadow of a basis in fact. There is absolutely no reason why the Mutual, the name of the corporation, should have been used in this connection. The Mutual as a substantial, prosperous distributor of motion pictures is not interested in any way in such a move on the part of its competitors as this report announced. The Chaplin pictures will be released precisely as has been announced, through the Mutual Film Corporation.

"The report connecting the Mutual with this rumored merger was the conception of a Chicago newspaper writer who did not even have the courtesy to ask me or any official of the Mutual Film Corporation for confirmation or denial. It may be said emphatically that not only is the report untrue but that neither the Mutual nor any one connected with it has even been approached with reference to any such merger."

Lasky Not Negotiating

One of the interesting points of view expressed was made by Samuel Goldfish, vice-president and executive head of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, who declared:

"I don't know how much truth there is in the reported achievements of promoters who are rumored to be rolling the film industry into one big package to cure all of its business difficulties, but I do know, so far as the name of our firm has been connected with these reports, the statements are absolutely without a real foundation.

"The motion picture business is now undergoing a severe test, brought about by overproduction, a condition foreseen by companies fully prepared by efficient economical foundation to meet it. The unfit producers will be weeded out, particularly the overcapitalized unfit that are operating on the public's money and are not guided with an earnest and keen sense of obligation to supply the public with photoplays of merit, not to mention dividends.

"So far as the reports concerning the Lasky Company go, I can say that we are not concerned, except in the widespread publication of fictitious salaries said to be paid to stars. I can liken the star situation best to a bull market where prices are at the very top. Continued reports in this respect are unsettling the whole industry.

"It is inevitable that some changes in the business are coming soon, but if they are to be for the best they will concern the staple, economical companies.

GASNIER RETURNS FROM CUBA

L. J. Gasnier, president and general manager of the Astra Film Corporation releasing through Pathé, has returned from Havana, Cuba, where he spent severals weeks.

ELLA HALL IS THE LEAD IN "LAND OF MAKE-BELIEVE"

Ella Hall has the leading role in "The Land of Make-Believe," a Bluebird production just completed at Universal City. The scenario is by Calder Johnstone and the direction by Robert Leonard.

"Cinderella" forms the basis of the photoplay, and Miss Hall is seen as the poor little girl. There is a large supporting cast.

Chaplin in Burlesque "Carmen" from V-L-S-E

Picture Is Set for Immediate Release, and Is the Second Four-Reeler Featuring the Famous Comedian—Subject Will Be Marketed on Open Booking Policy

THE V-L-S-E announces the immediate release of Essanay's new four-reel production, a burlesque of "Carmen," with the great and only Charley Chaplin as star.

At any time the appearance of Chaplin in a new role is something of an event in filmland, but his presentation in a four-reel comedy is such an unusual occurrence that it bids fair to rank as a genuine sensation. This is only the second time that the famous comedian has starred in a four-reel picture, the other occasion being his appearance in "Tillie's Punctured Romance," last year.

Thanks to the open booking policy of the V-L-S-E, the distribution of the Chaplin "Carmen" picture will mean that every exhibitor throughout the country will be given an opportunity to obtain this much-desired attraction for his house.

There is no doubt as to the eagerness of the motion picture public to view the world's greatest mirth maker in a new bid for popularity, and the fact that the fun will be of an extended type, keeping the favorite disporting himself before the camera for four reels, is a sure guarantee of the feature's success.

Those who viewed the film in private are a unit in declaring it to be one of the most wildly amusing productions yet screened for the purpose of enhancing the gambols of the inimitable Charley. The weirdly burlesqued tale of the well-known opera furnishes the comedian with a wealth of opportunity to exhibit his peculiar abilities.

"Romeo and Juliet" Is Coming from Metro

Picture, Featuring Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, Will Be Film Contribution of the Company to the Shakespearian Tercentenary Celebration

A NOTABLE contribution to the Shakesperian Tercentenary celebration will be the screen version of "Romeo and Juliet," which is now being completed by the Metro Picture Corporation with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in the stellar and name parts.

The production was begun last August, immediately after Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne arrived in New York from California, and the many scenes have been made from time to time when these two stars were not engaged in working on other and current Metro pictures.

John W. Noble, who is directing the Bushman-Bayne features, is producing "Romeo and Juliet." Days were spent in long automobile trips scouring three states for proper locations. The best costumers and technical experts were employed to fashion the picturesque costumes worn in the production.

Several of the costumes are reproductions of those worn by E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe on the speaking stage.

Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne believe the picture will mark the greatest achievement of their career in the silent drama. They have given over their holidays—and many times worked long into the night—that the picture would prove an artistic success. It was produced on a plan wholly devoid of the usual hurry and rush so common in the making of many motion picture feautres.

Metro did not spare any effort or expense to insure it being a crowning event, as it was realized that the newer art would be in competition with the older art, and subjected to a critical analysis.

FOX MAINTAINS WIRELESS ON PACIFIC ISLAND FOR APFEL COMPANY

What is said to be the only wireless plant in existence operated to keep a motion picture company in communication with the mainland is that on the Santa Cruz Islands in the Pacific, where William Farnum and his company are making the new photoplay, "Battle of Hearts" for William Fox.

Director Oscar C. Apfel arranged for the wireless plant and for a daily news service during the stay of the company on the islands. There is no other means of communication, except a launch which makes the forty miles across once a week.

Board Proposes 25 Per Cent. of Receipts for League

Resolution Provides for Appointment by Exhibitor Body of Three Members to Co-operate with the Organization in Making Exposition in Madison Square Garden, May 6-13, a Success—Unity of Action of Two Bodies in Combating Censorship Desired

THE directors of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America met last Thursday at three o'clock to consider matters of importance in connection with the First National Motion Picture Exposition at Madison Square Garden, May 6-13.

Present at the meeting were: J. Stuart Blackton, Vitagraph Company of America; Robert H. Cochrane, Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Nicholas Power, Nicholas Power Company; J. N. Brulatour, Eastman Kodak Company; Walter W. Irwin, Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay Inc.; P. A. Powers, Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Samuel L. Rothapfel, Rialto Theatre Company; William A. Johnston, MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and J. W. Binder.

Harry Cochrane, general manager of Madison Square Garden, reported through the executive secretary that there was no doubt of the great success of the exposition with the public.

"The exposition will have the greatest drawing power of any ever held here," Mr. Cochrane said. "It will be a real exposition of the motion picture industry and art and at the same time will have the greatest entertainment value possible for the American people."

A special committee made up of Messrs. Irwin, Johnston, Rothapfel and Power reported on a proposition from the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America in reference to the exposition.

This proposition was that the net profits of the exposition should be divided as follows: Twenty-five per cent. to the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, 25 per cent. to the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and 50 per cent. placed in a fund to be administered by a committee of six—three from the Board of Trade and three from the Exhibitors' League.

Proposition Is Rejected

The proposition as submitted was voted down. Thereupon J. W. Binder, executive secretary of the board, introduced a resolution renewing the board's original offer to set aside 25 per cent. of the net profits of the Trade Show for the benefit of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. The resolution was adopted.

The resolution provided for the appointment by the Exhibitors' League of a committee of three to co-operate with the Board of Trade in making the exposition a success.

It provides also for the appointment of a committee by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America which shall confer with the Board of Trade to secure unity of action of the two bodies in combating censorship and other legislative evils.

The resolution reads:

WHEREAS the members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America have cordially co-operated with the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., in fighting censorship and in solving other problems incident to the industry at large, and

WHEREAS the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., desires to make due and proper recognition of this splendid co-operation, therefore be it

RESOLVED that the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., hereby renews its offer to the National Organization of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America to share with the latter organization the net profits that may accrue to the Board of Trade from the Trade Show to be held at Madison Square Garden, New York City, from May 6 to May 14, inclusive, on the following basis:

Twenty-five per cent. of such net profits as above described to be paid to the treasurer of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America within sixty days after the close of the Trade Show without condition, other than that the money be used in extending the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and in co-operating with the Board of Trade in its fight against censorship, whether Federal, State or municipal.

RESOLVED FURTHER that the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America be invited to appoint a committee of three to represent the National Organization of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America in its relations with the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., prior to, during the Trade Show and until the money above described shall have been paid to the treasurer of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America as hereinbefore provided.

The name of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America shall be printed on all advertising matter relating to the Trade Show to be issued hereafter in as prominent a place and as large type as are the names of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America and Madison Square Garden.

RESOLVED FURTHER that the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America be invited to appoint an additional committee which shall confer with the executive committee of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., and secure unity of action of the two bodies in combating censorship and other legislative evils.

It has been announced that Samuel L. Rothapfel, vice-president and general manager of the new Rialto Theatre Company, will direct the artistic features of the exposition.

He will introduce features of music, decoration and entertainment never before attempted in so large a hall, according to the announcement.

Eastern "U" Companies May Go to West Coast

Superior Weather Conditions in California Induce Officials to Seriously Consider Permanent Location of All Producing Forces in Film City

WITH the return of P. A. Powers from Universal City, Cal., to the New York offices of the Universal, the likelihood of the transfer of all theEastern producing forces of that company to the Western film plant is rumored. Mr. Powers is known to strongly favor this upheaval.

The reasons for this shift would be many. Weather conditions around New York forbid the clear photography obtainable in the sunny climate of California, and it will be remembered that Universal City was only located on its present site after serious consideration of various other localities on the Pacific Coast.

The facilities for picture production in Universal City are naturally larger and more complete than those existing at the West Fort Lee and Coytesville, N. J., studios, and it is probable that the transfer of the Eastern forces to the West would eliminate much of the cost of the manufacture of the pictures.

The number of persons in the employ of the Universal in the East is in the neighborhood of 600. This includes the stars, Violet Mersereau, Matt Moore, Jane Gail, King Baggot, Mary Fuller, Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips, William Garwood, Edith Roberts, Hobart Henley and Stanley Walpole, together with a large list of stock players, such as Augustus Phillips, Joseph Girard, Allen Holubar, Joseph Granby, Lionel Belmore and others.

The directors, Lucius Henderson, Henry Otto, Robert Hill, and the director-players, such as Ben Wilson, would naturally be included.

If this transfer takes place, and while it is not a certainty, the rumor comes from a reliable source, it would mean the renting of the $400,000 studio recently erected at West Fort Lee, N. J., to house the major portion of the Eastern talent. This studio is considered one of the most complete of its kind in the East. The older studio at Coytesville would also be turned over to another party.

R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of Universal, is another executive believed to be very much in favor of the removal to Universal City.

To center all the companies under one head is undoubtedly the cause for consideration of such a move. Much overhead expense would be abolished and the company would also be able to proceed without the assistance of such a large force of subsidiary players.

VITAGRAPH SEEKING LOCATIONS IN CHATTANOOGA?

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 1.

That there is a possibility of the Vitagraph company taking advantage of Chattanooga's wonderful natural scenery and staging some of its productions on Signal Mountain came to light last week when Naomi Childers, the beautiful and talented young screen artist, with Camillus Kessler, also of the Vitagraph company, were in consultation with C. E. James, of the Signal Mountain properties.

Both Miss Childers and Mr. Kessler were enthusiastic about Signal Mountain scenery. Last summer a company of Essanay actors spent several weeks on Signal Mountain, during which time a number of pictures were taken.

HOWARD AND DANTO JOIN SHERRY FORCES

Two additions have been made to the forces of W. L. Sherry, New York City. Tom Howard, secretary of the New York State League, is associated with the company as city representative.

Harry Danto, two years with Pathé, recently made connections with the Sherry organization.

PAY-IN-ADVANCE PLAN IS STILL OBJECT OF PROTEST

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, April 1.

While many leading exhibitors in the San Francisco territory have expressed themselves as being heartily in accord with the new pay-in-advance rule of the exchanges, especially those who have in the past had unfavorable experience with questionable competition, there are many who have come out in open opposition to the proposition.

The argument against the plan that is usually advanced is that their credit standing in the community is destroyed, and that their business is placed in an unfavorable light.

Most of this opposition has developed locally, exhibitors in the country districts complying with the new rule without protest.

Exchangemen point out the fact that if exhibitors do not desire to pay for a week's service in advance they have the privilege of paying for the film when it is taken out of the exchange, or in the case of express shipments, when it is delivered to them.

BRADY ENLARGES SCOPE OF FILM ACTIVITIES

William A. Brady has arranged to assume active control of the manufacture of all the films produced by the World Film Corporation, the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation and the Paragon Films, Inc., which include the moving pictures of the Premo Film Company, the Frohman Amusement Corporation and the Triumph Film Corporation. This arrangement is in no way to interfere with Mr. Brady's activities in the legitimate drama.

In making this ammouncement yesterday Mr. Brady said that plans were under way for the erection of another motion picture theatre on Broadway to seat 5,000 persons and to be the largest of its kind in the country. It will be devoted to releases made by the above companies.

"One of the immediate results of my taking this step," Mr. Brady explained, "is that I will be able to take motion pictures of my New York plays and release them in the smaller cities where the original companies of the plays can never go. This will provide a substitute for the No. 2, 3 and 4 companies."

Selznick Plan Attractive to Screen Stars

Opportunity to Realize Ambition to Become Heads of Their Own Production Companies Appeals to Many Big Players, It Is Announced

SINCE the organization of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation and the announcement that Lewis J. Selznick, is president, intends to create a group of similar companies, each named after and headed by a film star, both Miss Young and Mr. Selznick have been besieged, it is announced, by many stellar lights of the screen, all eager to grasp this opportunity to realize their greatest ambition.

"If I were at liberty to mention names," said Mr. Selznick to an interviewer this week, "I could give a list of stars who have sought to sign contracts with us that would surprise the whole industry.

"We are negotiating with a number of the established favorites of the profession and will be able to make a definite announcement shortly."

Miss Young, who is the first woman to have a motion picture producing corporation organized in her name, has been the recipient of letters and telegrams of congratulation from fellow players of prominence. Many of these have urged her to exert her influence to interest Mr. Selznick in the proposition of organizing producing companies in their name.

Miss Young is an enthusiastic supporter of the new Selznick plan and is giving every encouragement to her friends among the picture stars by way of helping them achieve their ambition.

Each of the separate production companies will distribute its output through the Selznick exchanges, now being organized in big cities of the country. Further details of the plan will be announced later.

Mutt and Jeff Company to Offer Weekly Release

Concern Establishes Its Own Exchange at 1600 Broadway, New York, and Arranges to Exploit Creations of Famous Cartoonists

BY special arrangement the Mutt and Jeff Film Company has made an agreement with Bud Fisher, the famous cartoonist, to handle a weekly release of five hundred feet in which the two comic characters are starred.

The first issue has been shown at the Strand Theatre, New York, and scored a distinct success. It was also shown to members of the staff of the New York World at their annual dinner March 25, and won the approval of the newspapermen.

The company has established its own exchange at 1600 Broadway, where the main office is also located. The Chicago Branch office is at 207 South Wabash avenue, in charge of J. L. Freidman, vice-president of the concern.

The Mutt and Jeff cartoons are now running in more than a hundred newspapers in the United States, Canada, England, Cuba, South America, and Mexico. Mr. Fisher announces that he is going to introduce some new ideas of animated cartooning in the screen versions of Mutt and Jeff.

UNIVERSAL'S REGULAR ADVANCE ADVERTISING SERVICE PROVES HELPFUL

The Universal Company, Toronto, has a regular advance advertising service and press matter delivery that is calculated to help exhibitors in their advertising. This is what Mr. Gribble of New Hamburg, Ontario, says of it: "I am pleased to get your hints on advertising. I make use of a lot of what I get from your press sheets."

This service is entirely free. It is the aim of the company to continue to make advances and improve as time goes on.

Six Cleveland Exhibitors Run Picked Programs

Picture Bill Selected by the Civic Committee of the Federation of Women's Clubs and a Special Committee of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League Gets Trial—Women Pick Friday, Saturday and Sunday as "Family Nights"

Special to Motion Picture News

Cleveland, O., April 1.

SIX Cleveland exhibitors already have undertaken to run the "family" or "balanced" programs to be selected by the civic committee of the Federation of Women's Clubs and a special committee of the North Eastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

The undertaking was given in writing by the managers willing to give the project a trial after four delegates from the federation had more minutely detailed their scheme at last Tuesday's meeting of the exhibitors' league.

The days chosen by the women for the presentation of the family programs are Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

They ask that each house agreeing to present the selected programs shall continue the experiment for from six to eight weeks, in order that the exhibitor may get the cumulative benefit of the systematic advertising of the women' clubs and apply the test of dollars and cents only after the public as well as the exhibitors have had an opportunity of judging of the value of the idea.

Friday is the day favored by the exhibitors whose names are attached to the federation's form, but the women want to make use of Saturdays and Sundays at least equally with Fridays.

Pick Friday, Saturday and Sunday

The argument of the women is that Friday nights and Saturdays and Sundays, being the times at which the families mostly patronize the motion picture theatre, are the only logical days on which to try out their experiment.

Equal use of the three days, they point out, not only meets the idea they had in mind in working out this scheme, but also solves film cost and advertising problems.

Bertelle M. Lyttle, chairman of the committee working out the family program idea, told the exhibitors at Tuesday's meeting that the first program had been selected and they hoped to make a start with their plan next week-end.

The first program, one six reels long, she said, contained a business drama, comedy and educational and pictorial films.

"It is nicely balanced, something that will interest members of the family not matter what their age," Miss Lyttle said. She explained that the federation didn't want a cent out of the scheme.

"Our whole idea is to help the patrons to get the best the pictures afford and we want to make the family or balanced program commercially profitable to the exhibitor," she added.

Miss Lyttle said the women did not want people to misunderstand their purpose. "We ask that the programs shall have no overemphasis of bad manners and no bad morals. We do not say 'no bad manners,' we say 'no overemphasis of bad manners,' which is rather different," Miss Lyttle said.

Mrs. W. C. Weber declared that the child was a natural imitator, and as a mother she was particularly anxious not to have her boy imitating the "smart Alecky" ideas of some of the films.

"We want to keep our impressionable children away from exaggerated types. If we could have just one program a week in each neighborhood that is warranted free from objectionable features we would be doing a service to the parents," Mrs. Weber said.

Time and Quality Balance

Mrs. D. Morgan said the women were trying to arrange programs balanced as to time and quality. She protested against the idea that they were trying to select pictures that sermonized or were of the "goody-goody" order.

She said they were looking for both fun and good drama. "What we are asking is that the bad in pictures shall not be made funny. If it is bad, make it bad. We want fun, but clean fun; if we have tragedy, we want cause and effect shown; in our plant and animal life films we want the subjects to be true and technically correct," Mrs. Morgan said.

Genevieve Cline, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs, said the thing they wanted emphasized was that the programs be family programs and not the "educational" or censored entertainments some were expecting.

"Club women are not old-fashioned or straightlaced in regard to matters of amusement," Miss Cline said.

"The moving picture is the biggest power in the country and the women have a right to see that its influence is exerted in a right direction. We are not trying to 'uplift.' What we are doing is to try to inspire a better taste in our people."

Miss Cline said what the Drama League had been to the theatre the women's clubs some day would be to the screen. "We have over 15,000 members in Cleveland, so we are not a force to be ignored," she pointed out.

A proposal to bulletin the good photoplays and to ignore the bad ones was one of the suggestions Miss Cline said the women's clubs had had under consideration.

League Members Promise Help

Members of the league promised to assist the women in carrying their ideas to a successful issue. Exhibitors will assist the women to choose programs that will not be more expensive than the houses agreed upon can stand.

It was stated that many manufacturers and every Cleveland exchange had promised to co-operate with the federation in every way possible. Exchanges will make special arrangements with exhibitors to enable them to switch services in connection with this plan.

At the same meeting President Ben J. Sawyer read a letter asking the league's indorsement of arrangements for the Motion Picture Board of Trade's trade show in New York May 6 to 13.

The letter provoked a lot of discussion and some personalities. Eventually the following motion submitted by Samuel Bullock was adopted unanimously:

"We, the North Eastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, recommend the heartiest co-operation between the Motion Picture Board of Trade and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League in all things pertaining to our mutual welfare; however, we are not sufficiently familiar with the details of the matter mentioned in the letter from Mr. Binder to our president and we prefer to leave the matter in the hands of the national executive for settlement."

Lower House in Maryland Passes Censor Bill

Action Was More in Nature of Compliment to Delegate Bryant, Responsible for Its Introduction, But Measure Will Be Scotched in Senate

Special to Motion Picture News

Baltimore, April 1.

IN the wee sma' hours of Tuesday, March 28, the Maryland House of Delegates, in session at Annapolis, Md., passed the Maryland Motion Picture Censorship Bill by a vote of 62 to 26.

This was a surprise to the motion picture exhibitors of Baltimore, yet they are confident that the measure will be killed in the Senate.

The motion picture men have every reason to believe that the Senate does not look with favor on the measure, and the bill is getting more and more unpopular in Baltimore every day.

The Baltimore newspapers are fighting against it, hand in hand with the motion picture exhibitors and he motion picture public. The only excuse for the passage of the bill is the fact that it is the only measure introduced by Delegate Bryant, who is the Democratic floor leader of the House of Delegates.

The passage of the bill through the House was more of a compliment to him. In the Senate a courtesy of this kind, of course, is not considered, and with the unpopularity of the measure it is confidentially believed that the Senators will vote it down.

KITTY GORDON, THE WORLD FILM STAR, IN THREE STRIKING COSTUME POSES

TRADE SHOWING IN PRINCIPAL CITIES OF "ALSACE"

Reports have been reaching this country by almost every mail of late concerning the screen adaptation of the play entitled "Alsace," by Gaston Leroux and Lucien Camille.

Arrangements have already been made for its early appearance in the United States.

There is evidence of a growing impatience among exhibitors to actually see for themselves how many of the claims coming from oversea can be substantiated.

The Authors' Film Co., Inc., intends to conduct trade shows in the principal cities throughout the country, with the idea of giving both exhibitors and state rights buyers an opportunity to draw their own conclusions.

THREE CARLOADS OF PAPER FOR "SOCIAL PIRATES" HERALDS

An official of the Kalem Company states that three carloads of paper have already been delivered to the printer to keep up with the demand for heralds on the first and second issues of "The Social Pirates," and that worthy is making frantic calls for more.

The Kalem heralds are in two colors, of unusually large size and because of the unprecedented quantity in which they are being turned out are supplied to exhibitors at a price lower than the average herald of half the size.

Butt with the paper market in its present soaring condition Kalem is beginning to worry over the next trip into the mart to secure car load lots.

KLEINE MOVES TO GODFREY BUILDING, NEW YORK

Last week saw a moving day for George Kleine's Forty-second street, New York, rental offices when the entire organization formerly located at 226 West Forty-second street, removed to its home in the new film building at Forty-ninth street and Seventh avenue.

This change of address was made necessary by the increasing demand for a more centrally located exchange, and anticipations of great activity with the Billie Burke serial.

The new offices cover approximately thirty thousand square feet of space in this latest and most modern of structures. The quarters have been so laid out that the utmost in speed and accessibility is obtained.

Film and poster departments are now maintained on the same floor with the booking offices so that the exhibitor is put to a minimum of inconvenience in completing his whole errand.

The new Godfrey building was especially constructed for the film interests of Manhattan, and is so designed as to afford every possible requirement even to the installation of special high-speed elevators for poster and film boys.

FEINBERG AMUSEMENT CORPORATION WIRES FOR 6,000 FEET OF NEGATIVE ON MEXICAN SITUATION

The dozen or more cameramen who have been working along the Rio Grande for the past few months, late last week found themselves the storm center of a regular runaway film market.

Four days after the Columbus, N. M., raid purchasing agents representing a number of eastern and western companies appeared in El Paso, Columbus and other border points and lively bidding ensued with the freelancers holding out for top prices.

Most of the available negative was snapped up at around two dollars and three dollars a fott.

Rare scenes brought as much as five dollars a foot.

One concern, the Feinberg Amusement Corporation, Fitzgerald building, New York, actually telegraphed several thousand dollars to El Paso in order that its representatives could pay spot cash for about six thousand feet of negative. This lot was taken over at an average price of about two dollars a foot.

"THE NE'ER-DO-WELL" BREAKING RECORDS ON PACIFIC COAST

Sol Lesser, who is handling "The Ne'er-Do-Well" through his own exchanges on the Pacific coast, advises that the reports he is receiving from his branch managers surpass anything he anticipated of the picture's popularity.

"I felt confident of big results," said Mr. Lesser, "knowing that 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' was one of the biggest productions in recent years, and I thought 'The Spoilers,' which I handled in this territory, would hold the record for some time to come, but the volume and length of the bookings and the return engagements on 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' have eclipsed this record.

"For example, in the large cities such as San Francisco, Los Angeles, Oakland and Sacramento, where the very biggest productions only play four days to one week, 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' has played three weeks, and in every instance is booked for a return.

"In the smaller towns where a feature plays for one day 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' is run from three days to one week."

NEW YORK LEAGUE COMPLETES EXPOSITION PLANS

Motion Picture News is in receipt of the following communication from the headquarters of the M. P. E. L. State of New York, 218 West Forty-Second street, New York:

"Final arrangements have been completed by the Motion Picture Exhibitors League for their Third Annual Exposition to be held at Grand Central Palace, May 1 to 6.

"Many innovations will be embodied in this exposition. This is the only exposition which is officially endorsed by the organized exhibitors and the only one which they will attend.

"The number of unsolicited contracts already in their hands proves conclusively that the industry at large, including the film manufacturers, exchanges and supply and accessory people are heartily endorsing this show."

Feist Advises Exhibitors Against Long Shows

World-Equitable Man, Back from Visit to Cities in East and Middle West, Warns Against Tendency of Many Managers to Think More of Quantity than Quality to Draw Patronage—When the Former Is the Chief Consideration Entertainment Vanishes

EXHIBITORS will find much that is worth their careful and serious attention in the experiences of Felix Feist, of the Equitable Motion Picture Corporation. Mr. Feist is just back in New York from a tour of the principal cities of the East and Middle West, during which he made a careful study into the complaints and ills of the exhibitor and their causes.

Mr. Feist has drawn a lesson for exhibitors from his investigation, and sums it up in one sentence: "Mr. Exhibitor, don't spend so much of your time in the box office; get out into the theatre and projection room, and know what's going on."

Mr. Feist's trip took him to Boston, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Omaha, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Dallas, Memphis, New Orleans, Atlanta and Washington.

In each of these cities he visited not only the largest theatres, but the outlying houses; talked to exhibitors and exchangemen, and drew up a summary of the complaint from both sides—and he found plenty.

Some of these he was able to adjust on the spot, but he considers that by far the most important fruit of his trip is the knowledge gained of conditions, which can be turned to the mutual advantage of exhibitor and producer.

His Own Worst Enemy

"The exhibitor is his own worst enemy," Mr. Feist said to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"The exhibitor forgets the other fellow; he is too busy watching the nickels and dimes come into the box office and kicking about the way in which the films, photographs, paper and lobby displays come to him, to pay any attention to seeing how they leave him after he is through with them. If the exhibitor would go up to his machine room once in a while, and note what his operator is doing to the film, he will understand why he sometimes gets such terrible service.

"In one exchange, while I was present, a five-reel film came back, and out of the 5,000 feet 750 was so torn at the sprocket holes as to be useless.

"Consequently, it was impossible to send it out, and as it was the only print of that subject available at the moment, some exhibitor who had booked it was disappointed. What could the exchange do? The fault was that of the careless exhibitor who forgot about the other fellow.

"Often the lobby displays are not returned at all; others are returned mutilated. I have seen large card photographs for the lobby, folded over—broken, of course—and stuffed into the film case.

"It is merely a case of reciprocity. The exchange cannot give perfect service unless the exhibitors will co-operate, and they can only do this by giving a little intelligent care to what is being done by their employees.

F. F. FEIST

Received Same Film Three Times

"It is true that the exchange is also often at fault. I recall meeting an exhibitor in a Dallas exchange. He came in while I was there and said: 'Well, it's happened again. The ——— company has sent me the same film for the third successive time. I'm just going to keep it this time, and save express charges.'

"In the South they call the failure to get a film which has been advertised a 'blow up,' but there would be few or no 'blow ups' if the exhibitors were as eager about returning the films as they are about getting them.

"In the South, also, I found the system of 'trolleying' being practiced extensively. One man will book our films, and the man in the adjoining town, which is connected by trolley, will not; the first man sets his show half an hour early, then rushes the film over to his neighbor by trolley, and they divide the rental between them.

"The same practice prevails here, only I think they call it 'bicycling' in the larger cities.

"In many sections I found exhibitors killing their own patronage by giving too long a program. The advertising ran to quantity, and nothing was said of quality. 'We give eight reels,' or 'Our show is ten reels long,' were common announcements.

"These exhibitors drive away the better class of trade—that class which appreciates a good picture, and attract a poorer and rougher element, which only wants quantity for its dime.

"Many exhibitors, also, are giving a long program merely to hold the audience in his own house, and prevent its visiting a nearby competing theatre.

"Exhibitors seem to be getting away from the fact that their sole duty is to supply entertainment to the public; when they fail to entertain, they fail to fulfill their place in the scheme of things. When quantity is the watchword, entertainment vanishes.

"Overproduction has had much to do with this situation. Manufacturers are making so many pictures that they are not making good pictures and the exhibitor is not getting the value out of his features.

"I believe the public is sour on the 'off-color' pictures. The change came suddenly about six months ago, and such pictures of this character as do go out, are hurting the receipts of the exhibitor, and the standing of the industry.

"For our part, we will have nothing more to do with this class of picture. We're through even with paper which carries anything suggestive.

"The sole object of my trip was to find out just what is wanted so we will be able to give it. In one word, what is most needed is the co-operation of the exhibitor with the exchange and manufacturer.

"I want to repeat what I said before: Mr. Exhibitor, don't spend so much of your time in the box office."

"CIVILIZATION" IS TITLE OF INCE TWELVE-REELER

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, April 1.

The premier of the twelve-reel Thomas H. Ince peace spectacle is to be given at a Los Angeles theatre about the middle of April, according to a decision made this week. Following this showing it is the plan of the owners to introduce it on the Broadway across the continent.

Two previous productions from the Ince plant, "The Alien," adapted from "The Sign of The Rose," with George Beban; and "Peggy," the Triangle Kay-Bee subject starring Billie Burke, were both given a showing in Los Angeles many weeks prior to public exhibition in any other city.

Another important decision reached is with regard to the title of this subject, which originally was known as "He Who Returned." This title was thought to be misleading and ambiguous, and the subject has been definitely named "Civilization," which although of a satirical nature, best conveys the thought behind the production.

DOUGLAS, PATHE DIRECTOR, AT BALBOA STUDIOS

W. A. S. Douglas, director of production for Pathé, is now at the Balboa studios in Long Beach, California, supervising the production of an important release for the Pathé program.

PEGGY HYLAND, ENGLISH ACTRESS OF NOTE, JOINS FAMOUS PLAYERS

Following closely upon the announcement that Valentine Grant was soon to appear in a Famous Players-Paramount picture, there comes the news of another addition to the ranks of the Famous Players in the person of Peggy Hyland, who will soon make her film debut on this side of the water under the auspices of the producing company in the presentation of well-known plays and players on the screen.

Miss Hyland's first vehicle has not yet been decided upon, as careful study is being given to the selection of a subject.

Though new to American audiences, Peggy Hyland is a popular British actress, having won conspicuous personal successes both on the stage and screen in her native country.

PEGGY HYLAND

On the stage, Miss Hyland first appeared with Cyril Maude at the London Playhouse, subsequently playing the leading role in "The Little Cafe." Later she appeared at the Duke of York's in "The Yellow Jacket."

Miss Hyland's first screen role was in "The Love of an Actress," which was followed by "John Halifax, Gentleman," and "Lochinvar." Just before she sailed for America to become a Famous Players star, Miss Hyland appeared in a film presentation of Tom Robertson's play, "Caste," in which she played the difficult role of Esther Eccles.

MIDNIGHT FIRE GIVES REALISM TO "MAN FROM MANHATTAN"

A midnight fire, the glow of which could be seen for miles, promises to add greatly to the realism of "The Man from Manhattan," J. Edward Hungerford's five-reel picture of country newspaper activities now nearing completion under the direction of Jack Halloway at the American Film Company's Santa Barbara studios.

William Stowell, Rhea Mitchell, Jack Prescott and Warren Ellsworth are in the cast.

Brooklyn Exhibitors Form Local Association

Organization Adopts Initiative and Recall—Constitution Provides for Dismissal of Executives by Two-Thirds Vote of Entire Body If They Prove "Dead Ones"

ABOUT three weeks ago eight exhibitors in Brooklyn, N. Y., met at the Sumner theatre with the idea of forming an exhibitors' association. Following an adjournment and with the understanding that each exhibitor present was to bring others, a meeting was held on March 20 at the Duffield theatre at which forty exhibitors were present.

At this meeting the following temporary officers were elected: William Brandt, chairman; William Hollander, vice-chairman; L. Lesselbaum, secretary; Michael Flynn, sergent-at-arms; and Julien Loeb, treasurer. A committee on constitution and by-laws was appointed and the meeting adjourned.

On March 27, seventy exhibitors met and adopted a constitution with the following preamble:

"The purpose of this Association shall be to promote the interests of those persons, firms and corporations engaged in the business of exhibiting motion pictures in Brooklyn and Long Island; to reform abuses relative to motion picture exhibiting and the industry in general; to secure freedom from unjust and unlawful exactions; to diffuse accurate and reliable information as to the standing of motion picture exhibitors and manufacturers; to procure uniformity and certainty in the customs and usages of the motion picture industry and of those having a common trade, business, financial or professional interest therein, to settle differences between its members; to co-operate for the improvement of all conditions relating to the business and to promote a more enlarged and friendly intercourse between all those engaged in the motion picture industry."

At this meeting a committee of seven was appointed to visit the headquarters of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the State of New York to bring about a close co-operation between the state and the local organization. This committee reported back at a further meeting which was held on the Regent theatre, Brooklyn, for Monday evening, April 3.

In the new Brooklyn organization there is evidence of unusual strength and future success. The principle of organization is that suggested in recent editorials in Motion Picture News, namely, of co-operation with the state body of exhibitors, the national body and with the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America.

The Brooklyn exhibitors show their earnestness in adopting the initiative and recall as regards their officers. To quote from a communication: "We do not propose to permit officers who are deadwood to control the destinies of this organization and so we have provided that upon just complaint these may be removed by a two-thirds vote of the entire body."

The preamble to the constitution of the Brooklyn organization may well serve as a model for new organization of exhibitors elsewhere.

The following Brooklyn theatres, all of them representative theatres of New York state and Brooklyn, are included in the new organization:

New Albany, Marcy, Century, Alhambra, Nostrand, Cleveland, Paramount, Old Post-Office, Throop, Classic, Kingston, Mt. Morris, Park, Miller, Vermont, New Singer, Broadway Lyceum, Globe, Marathon, Duffield, Oxford, Norwood, Levines Miller, Montauk, Foster's Globe, Sumner, Fulton Auditorium, Sheridan, T. N. F. Flatbush, Concord, Colonade, Regent, Kermans, Garden, Powell, Whitney and Parkway.

Educational Side of Pictures Is Strong Factor

"Sooner or Later Cameras Will Be Installed in Every School Building in Country as Instruction Aid," Is Declaration of Col. William N. Selig

THAT the educational side of motion pictures is assuming great importance is the belief of William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, who said in a recent interview:

"I believe that sooner or later there will be motion picture cameras installed in every school building in this country, and why not? Can the boards of education afford to be long without this equipment? Seemingly not, for already many of our foremost institutions of learning are equipped with motion picture cameras which are proving vital aids in the curricula.

"The history of the United States can be taught by correctly picturizing the lives of our great men, the epochs of our history, and these films can be aided by proper selections from the news reels which very often contain scenes that are worthy of preservation for future study.

"These days the producer takes every care to see that his atmosphere is historically correct. In "The Crisis," for example, we spent several weeks studying proper costuming of the early sixties.

"We sent to Washington, D. C., for copies of newspapers published in the late fifties or early sixties, so that when it was necessary to show a newspaper on the screen, that newspaper would be a publication really published at the time of the action of the story."

Discussing the subject of clean pictures, Mr. Selig said: "In my estimation, the greatest menace to the future of motion picture art today is not the censor, nor the mediocre pictureplay, but the so-called daring picture.

"Manufacturers who insist on releasing unclean or startling and daring productions are not only a menace to the motion picture art, but they are a menace to civic honesty and to morality."

HIS "TRAILER," FAR FROM BEING BEHIND, IS AN "UP-FRONT" IDEA

Charles R. McCauley, chairman of the Actors' Fund committee on cartoons and animated announcements, is preparing what is known as a "trailer" reading with an appropriate drawing that will make up twenty-five feet of film. These trailers are to be sent out free of charge attached to all outgoing releases of films.

"Motion Picture Campaign for the Actors' Fund of America—National Tribute Day May 15,"

Over 100 Highest Paid Men and Women With Hearst

Large Assemblage of Creative Genius Brought Under Direction of Single Motion Picture Manufacturer as Part of International Film Service Staff—Every Writer, Artist, Dramatist, Illustrator and Cartoonist Under Contract with Hearst Publications Is Now Part of Publisher's Enlarged Film Interests

WHAT is probably the largest assemblage of creative genius ever brought under the direction of a single manufacturer of motion picture films has been announced by Edward A. MacManus, general manager of the International Film Service, whose entrance into the Film Exchange field was recently effected.

Every writer, dramatist, illustrator and cartoonist now under contract with any and all of Hearst's publications, becomes, according to this announcement, part of Mr. Hearst's enlarged moving picture interests.

This affects over one hundred of the highest paid men and women of talent in the country. Among those who now become collaborators in this motion picture enterprise are:

Rex Beach, Jack London, Robert W. Chambers, Louis Joseph Vance, Gouverneur Morris, Arthur B. Reeve (the great detective story writer, creator of Craig Kennedy), Dr. Charles Parkhurst (the eminent preacher writer), E. Phillips Oppenheim, Booth Tarkington, Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, George Ade, Rudyard Kipling, John Temple Graves, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Maurice Maeterlinck, Charles W. Goddard (the world's greatest motion picture serial maker), Basil Dickey, Rufus H. Dewey, John B. Clymer, Rudolph Block, Herbert Hancock, Bruno Lessing (the creator of Jewish character stories).

It is interesting to note that among the cartoonists of the Hearst organization are:

Tom Powers, Tad, George MacManus (Bringing up Father), Hal Coffman, Opper, Herschfield, Herriman, Cliff Sterrett, Tom MacNamara (Us Boys), Windsor MacKay, Leon Searl, A. Moser.

In the Hearst organization are such illustrators as:

Charles Dana Gibson, Harrison Fisher, Henry Hutt, Penrhyn Stanlaws, Nell Brinkley.

"But," Mr. MacManus says, "It is not Mr. Hearst's intention to confine himself to the talent now under contract with him, great and versatile as this talent is according to the highest standards of motion quality. Mr. Hearst purposes to secure anywhere, at all times and at the proper price the biggest brains and imagination the country affords to raise the motion picture film to levels it has never known before."

Men Grouped with MacManus

In the organization that Mr. Hearst has selected to handle the details of the enterprise, Mr. MacManus, who has been the moving spirit of the International Film Service, is the general manager. Grouped around him there are Mr. J. K. Burger, Joseph Engel, Frank H. Vine, John F. Bowman, George H. Atwood, George R. Allison, E. W. Sweigert, E. W. Dustin, Fritz B. Wathne, B. F. Lyon, H. D. Knappen.

Mr. Burger will be in charge of the exchanges. For the initial intensive work ten cities have been selected as exchange centres, New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Atlanta, Boston, Washington, D. C., Philadelphia, Pa., St. Louis, and Pittsburgh.

Each exchange will be complete in itself, absolutely independent and the duplicate of headquarters in the number of men employed and the facilities at their disposal.

New York will be under the jurisdiction of Joseph Engel. Boston, under Frank H. Vine, who has been helpful for many years to exhibitors in his past work with Eclectic, World, and General Film Corporation. Chicago is in the hands of John F. Bowman. He is known to his local exhibitors for his work on the Chicago Examiner, and lately on "The Exploits of Elaine," "The Goddess," etc. Los Angeles is under George H. Atwood, one of the pioneers of the film industry. He has managed the offices of Boston, Albany and Dallas, and Phoenix, for the General Film Corporation and has been in charge of Philadelphia for Pathe. Atlanta will look to George R. Allison, the original path-finder of the South for big feature productions. Allison fits into the Hearst organization because he has the newspaper idea, as well as motion picture production. Philadelphia exchange is under the management of E. W. Sweigert, known to the field for his work with the Eclectic and General Film. E. W. Dustin, who heads the St. Louis Exchange, has been in the amusement business for eighteen years. He has been the producer, exhibitor, the exchange man and therefore, he can look at all sides of the fence, and particularly appreciate the viewpoint of the exhibitor. The Capital City, Washington, D. C., is under the jurisdiction of Fritz B. Wathne. B. F. Lyon, in charge of Pittsburgh, is a comparative newcomer in the film industry. He has been in Pittsburgh but five months and since his arrival he has become the confident of every Pittsburgh theatre man. The San Francisco office is in charge of H. L. Knappen. Mr. Knappen was formerly a newspaper man of wide experience. His most recent newspaper work was as editor and advertising manager of the American Photoplay Weekly, of Salt Lake City. He was serving in this capacity when he decided to enter the motion picture business. In 1915 be became identified with the Pathe Exchange, Inc., representing that company in northern California and Nevada with headquarters in San Francisco.

Three Japanese Players in a David Horsley Film

Kuran Kotani, Sumi Yamamoto and Hana Tanaka Cast with Crane Wilbur for "The Conscience of John David," Mutual Masterpicture Released on April 24

THREE players new to David Horsley productions have been included in the cast supporting Crane Wilbur in his next picture, "The Conscience of John David," which is to be released April 24 as a Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition.

They are Japanese actors, named Kuran Kotani, Sumi Yamamoto and Hana Tanaka.

Though "The Conscience of John David" is a play of America, the Japanese characters have important places in it, particularly the part for which Kuran Kotani is cast.

Kuran Kotani, Sumi Yamamoto and Hana Tanaka have had considerable acting experience. The former was on the speaking stage before his camera debut, and although only twenty-three years of age, he has been appearing professionally for twelve years.

He began his career in Japan, playing in his own tongue that which, when translated, would be "The Slave Child." A few years later he came to this country and attracted the attention of Virginia Harned, who engaged him to play juvenile leads.

William Courtney was also attracted by his performance and took him over for a long engagement.

When Thomas H. Ince started to produce a number of dramas which called for Japanese characters, Mr. Kotani was appreached and induced to abandon the legitimate stage for the silent drama.

His engagement at Inceville was long, and he appeared always in juvenile leads.

His best picture while connected with the New York Motion Picture Corporation was "The Typhoon."

D. W. Griffith then came along with an offer to Kotani at the time preparations were being made for the production of "The Fox Woman."

In this piece Kotani not only played the leading juvenile part, but because of his knowledge of Japanese habits and customs he was called upon to look after the technical end of the picture.

"The Sable Lorcha" was another of the Fine Arts productions in which Kotani was prominent.

Sumi Yamamoto and Hana Tanaka are also known on the screen principally through their recent association with the Japanese American Motion Picture Company.

ZUKOR WILL VISIT BIG CITIES

Accepting the invitation of many of the largest exhibitors in the country to visit their theatres, Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Company, left Saturday on the Twentieth Century on a tour which will embrace every principal city in the United States.

This is the first time that Mr. Zukor has left the Famous Players studios in New York since his visit to the Coast studios of his company before they were closed last spring.

Mr. Zukor's first stop will be Chicago, where he will probably remain for some time after his arrival, making a study of film conditions in that central city, which, through its geographical position, most truly reflects screen influences upon the country at large.

GARDA POLOTSKOVA MAKES FIRST SCREEN APPEARANCE IN "LOVE'S TOLL"

Madame Garda Polotskova, talented actress and dramatic dancer, will be seen for the first time on the screen in Daniel Carson Goodman's coming photodrama, "Love's Toll," shortly to be released by Lubin through V-L-S-E.

MME. POLOTSKOVA

She will appear in the role of a Russian dancer, and will give a portion of her famous Salome dance. Auguste Rodin, the greatest living sculptor, is among the large number of artists both here and abroad who have praised Polotskova's beauty.

THOMAS A. EDISON MAKES DONATION TO ACTORS' FUND

Among the personal contributions received by Samuel Goldfish, chairman of the executive committee, for the Actors' Campaign for the Motion Picture Fund, is one received from Thomas A. Edison for $250.

This is Mr. Edison's private donation, in addition to what he has contributed with the officials and members of the motion picture division of the Edison Company.

The check was accompanied by a letter from L. W. McChesney, manager of the picture division, who states that C. H. Wilson, vice-president of the company, has found instant response to the appeal for the cause.

GOLDSTEIN RECOVERS FROM ILLNESS

Joseph M. Goldstein, president of the Exclusive Features, Inc., has fully recovered from a serious operation, after being away from his duties for the past four weeks, owing to a serious illness.

The first thing Mr. Goldstein did on his return to the office was to advise Moe Streimer to buy "The Unwritten Law." After competing with others for the picture, the Exclusive Features, Inc., was finally successful in obtaining the photoplay.

Exhibitor Kemble Will Be Producer Kemble

Head of Corporation Bearing His Name Intends to Enter Field to Make Good Pictures, Without Stars with Big Reputations, for Rentals Averaging $25 a Day

OF considerable interest to exhibitors is the advent of exhibitors into the business of picture production. William H. Kemble, of the Kemble Theatres Corporation, 587 Fulton street, Brooklyn, N. Y., with several associates, is the theatre operator, who believes that he is in a position to grant the needs of his fellow theatre operators.

H. Clark Mooney, long an exhibitor and associated actively in Mr. Kemble's enterprise, spoke simply and directly on the subject of this producing concern to a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"Our aim," he said, "is to produce a good picture that the small exhibitor who is limited to a certain rental expenditure can easily and profitably book. A good story, well produced, consistently enacted, attractively titled, and for which we will furnish catchy paper, is our plan.

"Of stars, so called, we will have none. We believe that the public cares little for a star who has been heralded as drawing a price ten times that of the President's. They want good acting all around, and this coupled with a good story with a strong punch is sufficient to meet their demands.

"The exhibitor who caters to a transient public must have paper that jumps out at the passerby. That is his major salvation and the paper must bear a magnetic title, otherwise the passerby will go down the block and get an attractively titled picture.

"Our plans are so laid down that the cost of production as compared with feature production of the present will be incomparable. It will enable us to offer our features of five reels to the exhibitor for say twenty or twenty-five dollars a day, instead of fifty and a hundred.

"We will produce in Brooklyn," continued Mr. Mooney, "and if the present plans materialize, our first feature will make its appearance in six weeks' time at the most.

"Besides producing for ourselves we intend to look elsewhere for suitable features, which we will buy outright—negative rights for the United States, and all.

"The long experience which Mr. Kemble, myself and others associated with us have had in the exhibiting field is responsible for our step along these lines. We are sufficiently acquainted with the exhibitors' needs to cater to them and we have their confidence.

"Our stock will be sold to exhibitors mainly—we have reserved a portion for this purpose. Consequently the exhibitor who holds stock will be pulling for himself, and others who know him will have confidence in our company.

"But bear in mind," concluded Mr. Mooney, "that we are not going to employ a star whose salary would stagger a bank president. It seems a bold step, perhaps, but it is taken along sane lines, lines which I believe will be ultimately followed throughout the business before long."

Mr. Mooney is also sponsor for the statement that providing the Kemble producing company is successful in New York State, similar producing organizations will be formed in other localities throughout the country.

Raver Gets Rights to Official War Pictures

"Fighting in France," Taken by Order of the General Staff of the French Army for the National Archives, Offered on State Rights Basis

HARRY R. RAVER, president of the Raver Film Corporation, recently closed with the representatives of the official French war pictures, "Fighting in France," for the handling of this subject for this country. Mr. Raver will release these pictures on the state rights plan.

It is a six reel subject taken by the order of the General Staff of the French Army for the National Archives of France. They were secured by the New York World through its correspondent, E. Alexander Powell.

Under the auspices of the New York World they played to long runs in both the Fulton and Forty-fourth Street theatres and in the Keith theatres in New York and Brooklyn.

These pictures were presented in other cities by such leading papers as the Chicago Daily News, Boston Herald, Philadelphia Ledger, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Montreal Star, Quebec Chronicle, Ottawa Journal, Winnipeg Telegram, Minneapolis Tribune and the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

"Driftwood," the Ocean picture which is being marketed by the Raver Film Corporation, will not be released on a program. The persistence with which some attempted to qualify to the contrary would make it seem that this rumor was true, nevertheless it is vigorously defied by President Raver himself.

He admits, however, that several programs were considering it and some of them had made offers that would have meant a very substantial profit.

"It is believed," remarked Mr. Raver, "that 'Driftwood' is a picture that should be given a broader recognition than it would receive on a program. On the open market basis it will receive the individual attention of the state rights purchasers, and will have the big success that its worth demands.

"It is true that we could have sold this picture to a program. Several of them, in fact, made splendid offers. To dispose of it in this manner would hardly be in accordance with the policy established by this company.

"The open market is badly in need of just such strong pictures as 'Driftwood,' and in the long run it will mean a more profitable avenue for us, and certainly bigger returns to the purchasers of territory."

GLIMPSES OF THEDA BARA, THE WILLIAM FOX STAR, AS SHE APPEARS IN REAL LIFE

STRIKING POSES OF A FAMOUS SCREEN STAR IN OFF-SCREEN MOMENTS

MYRTLE STEDMAN PICKED FOR LEADING LADY WITH GEORGE BEBAN

For the portrayal of the chief supporting character to George Beban, the well-known delineator of Italian parts, the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company has selected Myrtle Stedman.

In "Pasquale" Miss Stedman is called upon to enact a role that affords her ability as an actress many opportunities to assert itself. The photoplay presents a drama of modern life among the poor Italians of the slums and offers George Beban another vehicle in which to display his histronic ability.

Another factor in the support of the star is little Helen Eddy, the girl who was signed for a permanent engagement at the Morosco studios immediately following her initial rehearsal in a small part, which was applauded by the actors and studio employees who were watching her.

Other Morosco players who have distinguished themselves in recent screen plays and who appear in the "Pasquale" cast are Page Peters, Jack Nelson and Nigel deBrullier.

TRIANGLE ARTISTIC INSEPARABLES IN COMING RELEASES

Pictures are now being completed for the Triangle at the Fine Arts studios to present two established combinations of players later in the spring.

Dorothy Gish and Owen Moore seem to be artistically inseparable, as do Mae Marsh and Robert Harron. Little has been given out regarding the Gish-Moore starring piece except that it will give the players an environment entirely different from the atmospheres of "Betty of Graystone" and "Little Meena's Romance." Comedy will be plentiful, it is said.

The Marsh-Harron picture is based on the well-known serial, "The Little Apache." When shown on the screen the picture will be called "A Child of the Paris Streets." Miss Marsh plays the role of an innocent young girl brought up in the Apache section of Paris.

Her romance, into which a young American artist enters, furnishes the basis for the story. Grant Carpenter, the author, has achieved considerable fame with his serials and short stories and has already received advance royalties from three New York managers, with prospect of Broadway production next season.

Preparedness 'Pinions in Paramount Pictographs

Screen Vizualizes Views of Frederick Palmer, War Correspondent; Henry Reuterdahl, Naval Expert; and Major-General Wood on Preparation for Defense

IN an effort to picture in a vivid manner how defenseless the United States is at the present time, three eminent citizens, Frederick Palmer, war correspondent; Henry Reuterdahl, naval expert, and Major-General Wood, have been utilizing the motion picture screen during the past three months.

Of immediate importance in the minds of millions of American citizens when the Paramount Pictographs were first conceived was the subject of "preparedness for defense." Paramount in its endeavor to give its patrons the best obtainable, introduced in its first releases of the Pictographs a series of visualized articles on "Preparedness," under the editorship of Frederick Palmer, of whom it has been said, "He has seen more war than any other American citizen."

Under his guidance, there has been pictured the absolute inadequacy of our infantry, cavalry and artillery, together with comparative pictures of what our conditions should be for our present needs.

There are shown the methods in use in the United States War College, where the picked men of our army are trained in military science.

President William W. Hodgkinson, of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, has, in these pictures of "visualized thought," seen one of his fondest dreams come true. He says that "they are a university where industry, manners, charity, politics and vital public questions can be portrayed, and in such a manner that they will be pleasing to the audience, making people think and think deeply and of important things.

"Their thoughts will mold their characters; their characters will eventually be the character of the whole nation; and it is the character of our men that rules the nation.

"It is our design to make these Pictographs a truly national forum of the people, open to every man who has a real idea to impress upon the public mind; it never is to be a partisan organ, but always to be an educator and molder of opinions in the true sense of the word."

National Board Eliminates Word "Censorship"

Organization Will Be Known as the National Board of Review—Change Is Made to Do Away with Implied Official Control Repugnant to American Ideal of Freedom

THE National Board of Censorship will hereafter be known as the National Board of Review.

The elimination of the word censorship, and the substitution of the word review, are in the interest of a more accurate description of the nature of the Board's work. The word censorship has come to imply a type of official control and supervision which is repugnant to the American ideal of freedom, and the National Board announces that it does not care to have its name associated with the kind of bureaucracy that works in secret and enforces its decisions on the public without giving the public a chance to decide for itself.

The National Board believes in the free expression of ideas in the press, the theatre, and the motion picture. It acts in a consulting capacity of manufacturers, who voluntarily submit their films to the Board and agree to abide by its decisions.

It also sends out a weekly official bulletin to exhibitors and city officials throughout the country.

Many towns and cities have given up their local censoring committees and accepted the advices of the National Board. Among the cities that have adopted the findings of the National Board as a guide to the pictures suitable to be shown in their theatres are New York, Boston, Los Angeles, Duluth, Minneapolis, Spokane, Providence and other cities.

All the leading cities of the country are maintaining co-operative relations with the Board, it is announced.

The statement announcing the change of name says: "The work of the Board will continue to be what it has been—to formulate and express public opinion on motion pictures, review pictures for manufacturers with recommendations for changes and eliminations, and keep the country through local officials and exhibitors, posted on the pictures to be seen."

TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS MORE FROM LOS ANGELES FOR ACTORS' FUND

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, April 1.

In the neighborhood of two thousand dollars was added to the amount raised by the California committee of the Actors' Fund Association to go toward the million dollar endowment, Wednesday evening, when a dinner dance was given at the Huntington Hotel, Pasadena, the wintering place of many wealthy people from the East.

During the serving of the dinner, a cabaret was given by some of the most prominent people of film land, including DeWolf Hopper, Mae Murry, Harry Williams, Harry McCoy, Lena Baskette and Ruth Roland, of the film colony, and Earl Carroll, author of "So Long Letty," "Canary Cottage," and other comic operas.

The big feature of the cabaret was the closing number, a short sketch entitled "In 1999," a satire on equal suffrage and its effect upon society, written by William C. deMille, of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, who also played the leading part, supported by Frances Ring and Minette Barrett.

Prior to the dinner, and during the dance which followed, Anita King, Edith Johnson, Mae Bush, Fay Tincher, Marguerite Gibson, Marjorie Daw and Mae Gaston served the committee as flower girls.

PRETTY VAMPIRE (ON THE SCREEN) LOUISE OWEN SIGNS WITH VOGUE

Louise Alva Owen, vampire (on the screen) is the pretty, brunette girl who plays "heavies" in Vogue comedies under the direction of Jack Dillon.

LOUISE OWEN

Miss Owen is the athletic type who would much rather take long walks in the foothills than sit at home doing embroidery or playing with the cat.

Prior to her signing with Vogue, Louise acted important roles in both comedy and drama companies on the Pacific coast, and is graduated from Broadway, having played in several Winter Garden productions.

Shakespeare and Bacon in a Thanhouser Film

Visualization of Both Is Novelty Offered in Contribution to the Centenary Celebration from New Rochelle Studios—Florence La Badie Plays Lead

FLORIDA sunshine and northern snow furnish variety to the Thanhouser program for the month of April, and Florence La Badie and Gladys Hulette carry the happy burden in the New Rochelle five-reel offerings.

Of interest is the release on the twentieth entitled "Master Shakespeare, Strolling Player." This is Mr. Thanhouser's contribution to the Shakespeare Centenary Celebration, and Florence La Badie will be seen in the star role.

GLADYS HULETTE—FLORENCE LA BADIE

Without being a play from the pen of the Bard of Avon, it nevertheless brings into play the characters he made famous. Around Miss La Badie, as a girl of today, revolves the Baconian controversy. In writing the scenario Philip Lonergan hit upon the novel plan of visualizing Shakespeare and Bacon. They both "appear personally," and the direction of Frederick Sullivan brings them to life startlingly, as he also does the characters from Shakespeare's plays.

At the same time the offering is not a costume piece, for the events about Miss La Badie blend the world of today with that of Shakespeare's time. There's U. S. Army posts and action on the Mexican border, lending all the novelty that could be desired.

Another five-reeler is Lloyd Lonergan's story, "The Traffic Cop." This stars Gladys Hulette. To make it, Director Mitchell worked in conjunction with the police department of New York and secured some concessions which make the film really a civic drama.

There are laughs in abundance in the April Falstaffs. Director Ellery has struck a fast comedy gait and his sure-fire keeps him to the fore as an expert in legitimate comedy. From Florida, Director Howell contributes laughs via Riley Chamberlin, Walter Hiers, Louise Emerald Bates. The Oscar and Conrad Company, Cooper and McNish will now take the southern trip for a change of atmosphere.

Mr. Thanhouser will soon announce a new five-reel offering, made by Ernest Warde, featuring Mlle. Valkyrien (Baroness Dewitz). The Baroness will hereafter appear in five-reel features almost exclusively.

Work Progressing on "The Woman Who Dared"

Beatriz Michelena, Whose Acting in "The Unwritten Law" Caused Favorable Comment, Will Be the Star in Subject from Studios of California Motion

WITH work progressing rapidly on "The Woman Who Dared," the second of their "Better-than-Program" feature photoplays, it is announced that General Manager Alexander E. Beyfuss, of the California Motion Picture Corporation, is marshaling his forces for another invasion of the East to sell State rights.

With the release date on the picture assured for some time in May, the invasion is likely to begin within the next few weeks.

Mr. Beyfuss is now at the company's studios in San Rafael, Cal., having returned to the Pacific Coast from New York to long ago, after having disposed of the rights on "The Unwritten Law."

The manner in which the sales end of "The Unwritten Law" was handled occasioned not a little favorable comment.

Mr. Beyfuss, it was observed, simply dropped into New York with everything he needed in his business right at his fingers' ends—and everything he had was of the best.

In a general way it may be said, indeed, that most of Mr. Beyfuss' sales work had really been done before a state rights buyer was even approached. It is in the marshaling of his sales forces along these lines that Mr. Beyfuss is now actively engaged in behalf of "The Woman Who Dared."

The new picture is also to have Beatriz Michelena as its star. The story deals with diplomatic intrigue in the courts of Europe, and the scenes which are being devised in California, both in the studio and outside, are being carefully selected to secure the proper European atmosphere for the coming production.

The Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors, who officially viewed "The Unwritten Law," with Beatriz Michelena, a few days ago, suggested only the elimination of two subtitles. Otherwise the picture was passed as offered.

DE LINSKY, WOUNDED IN WAR, IS IN "KISS OF HATE" CAST

Lieutenant Victor DeLinsky, retired from the Russian army after being wounded seven times, plays a prominent role in "The Kiss of Hate," a forthcoming Metro feature picture in which Ethel Barrymore is starred.

It is a story of Russian romance and intrigue and the lieutenant was quite valuable to William Nigh, who directed the production, because of his knowledge of Russian official life.

KALEM COMEDY AND DRAMA: SCENES FROM "ROMANCE AND RIOT" (SIS HOPKINS), "THEIR TAKING WAYS" (ETHEL TEARE), AND "THE GOVERNOR'S SPECIAL" (HAZARDS OF HELEN)

MILLARDE, JUVENILE SCREEN ACTOR AND NOW A DIRECTOR, JOINS KALEM COAST STAFF

An addition to the producing staff is the latest move of expansion at the Kalem studios in California, at Glendale and Hollywood, Harry Millarde having left New York last Thursday to join the staff located there.

Mr. Millarde, for years one of the best known of screen juveniles, but in recent months becoming still better known as a director, is expected to produce comedies at the Coast studios, since the humorous subjects are at present forming the larger part of Kalem's program releases.

Director Millarde has returned to the Kalem banner after granting himself his first vacation following three years of work before the camera. Not yet in his thirties, Mr. Millarde is one of the younger generation of screen producers.

He entered the screen world following a successful career on the stage that included appearances with such stars as Robert Mantell, Walker Whiteside and Elsie Ryan. Mr. Millarde's screen debut was made with the Kalem Company and he speedily gained recognition among picture juveniles.

A year and a half ago his talents as a producer were recognized and since then he has devoted practically all his attention to directing. Among the well-known Kalem features to his credit are "The Siren's Reign" and "The Destroyer."

Shriners Appear on Screen for Universal

Members of Imperial Council Cast for a Melodrama, "The Sheriff's Wife," a Comedy, and Pose for the Animated Weekly—Turner and Clements in Charge of Direction

MEMBERS of the Imperial Council of the Shriners were entertained in a unique manner during their visit to Universal City, March 18 and 19. They appeared as creen actors in a western comedy drama and a typical western melodrama, and were filmed also in several pictures for the Universal Animated Weekly.

The melodrama, entitled "The Sheriff's Wife," was written by Otis Turner, who also directed it, assisted by Hal Clements.

Both Turner and Clements are Shriners, and they worked with an all-Shriner cast, the four principal roles being in the hands of W. S. Brown, of Pittsburgh, as the sheriff; William Washburn, of St. Paul, the sheriff's wife; O. W. Burdats, of Wheeling, W. Va., the tramp, and Dr. David Cave, of Dallas, Tex., the sheriff's son. Other members of the Imperial Council made up the supporting cast.

The scenes of this story were made in a specially constructed mining town, and Noble Turner succeeded in investing the situations with so much humor, it is said, that the thousand spectators were convulsed with laughter.

After their unique task as actors was brought to a finish, the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine headed their automobile caravan for Pasadena and other surrounding towns, and later journeyed to Santa Monica, one of the beach communities, where they took dinner at Nat Goodwin's cafe.

On March 20 they participated in an elaborate banquet tendered them by Al Malaikah Temple at the Hotel Alexandria, Los Angeles.

Here the "melerdrammer" made by Nobles Turner and Clements at Universal City twenty-four hours previously was thrown upon the screen and was received with howls of delight by the members of the Imperial Council and of Al Malaikah Temple.

The film was presented to Imperial Potentate J. Putnam Stevens by Vice-President Davis, of the Universal company, and it will be shown at the various Shrines visited by the Imperial Council.

Week of 17th Brings Two Famous Players Subjects

"The Eternal Grind" Features Mary Pickford and "The Innocent Lie" Stars Valentine Grant —Filipino River Shown in Burton Holmes Travelpicture

HEADING the Paramount program for the week of April 17 are "The Eternal Grind," another Mary Pickford film in five reels, and "The Innocent Lie," also a five-reel picture, in which Valentine Grant will be featured.

Both are productions of the Famous Players Film Company. Paramount audiences will have an opportunity on Monday to see the actress playing the role of the overworked little slave of the factories. "The Innocent Lie" is a Thursday release.

The three single-reel releases on the same program for the week of April 17 will be the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travelpicture "Up and Down the Pasig River: the Filipino Thames," a new and remarkable series of films in the Paramount Pictograph; and the Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoon "Farmer Al Falfa's Scientific Dairy Farm."

Films showing the comparative ease with which a hostile power might capture New York are contributed by the twelfth release of the Paramount Pictograph for this week to the cause of "Preparedness."

An animated map made under the direction of Frederick Palmer, noted war expert, shows the point at which an enemy might land near Boston, capture the Springfield arsenal, overrun New England and capture New York.

Other Pictograph material includes more "Better Babies" propaganda; "The Hazards of Happifat" (Trickids Serial); another psychological test by Professor Hugo Munsterberg, and the first of a series entitled "The Old and the New," "No. 1, Candles to Electric Lights."

Civic Heads of Big Cities Boost Actors' Fund

Mayors from Coast to Coast Act as Honorary Chairmen on Local Committees Raising $500,000 for Home on Staten Island, N. Y.—Screen Actresses Donate Checks

OFFICIAL support is being given the motion picture campaign for the Actors' Fund of America in every city in the country, and more than 500 mayors are acting as honorary chairmen on the committees doing local work for the cause.

In the larger cities an intense rivalry has begun, each trying to make the contribution from their own city the largest. Chicago, with Mayor Wm. Hale Thompson at the head, has organized a systematic plan for its committees and already predicts that its share will be well above $100,000; in Pittsburg, which is governed through its aldermanic council, the Screen Club is actively in charge of the campaign.

Mayor Thomas B. Smith, while honorary chairman for Philadelphia, is giving all the assistance in his power to Sigmund Lubin, the active chairman. James M. Curley, mayor of Boston, also has given active aid in the campaign that has been begun in that city.

Among the other mayors who have written enthusiastically of their pleasure in helping the work to Samuel Goldfish, chairman of the executive committee in New York, are Daniel W. Wilbur, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Thomas L. Raymond, of Newark, N. J.; Oscar B. Marx, of Detroit, Mich.; Gerhard A. Bading, of Milwaukee, Wis.; J. E. T. Bowden, of Jacksonville, Fla.; James B. Balch, of Kalamazoo, Mich.; Edwin W. Fiske, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; George R. Lumm, of Schenectady, N. Y.; Frank J. Rice, of New Haven; Wallace G. Nye, of Minneapolis; George M. Wright, of Worcester; Clifford G. Wilson, of Bridgeport, Conn., and George J. Karb, of Columbus, O.

These are but a few of the cities represented, but they indicate the wide range of support and the spirit that exists from coast to coast, in the Far West and through the Rocky Mountain states.

Especially the activities of the local committees are bearing fine fruit, while California has voluntarily taken upon herself a state-wide campaign that will be productive of liberal returns, because of the many film studios located in the Golden State.

Already more than $5,000 has been sent from Los Angeles with the statement that this is only a small beginning.

In the southwest one day's donations from film actors from a studio in San Antonio netted $109.

Returns of this kind so early in the campaign assure its success in its purpose to raise $500,000 by May 15 as a permanent endowment for the Actors' Home on Staten Island, N. Y.

May 15 has been designated National Tribute Day, when a part of the gross receipts of all motion picture theatres in the country is to be donated to the fund.

Each mail brings individual contributions, many of which are from persons not connected with the dramatic profession, to Chairman Goldfish, and the campaign treasurer, Commodore J. Stuart Blackton.

An instance of this non-professional interest came in the form of a personal check for two hundred and fifty dollars from Thomas A. Edison who had already contributed in a professional sense as the head of the Edison studio.

Many splendid performances and benefits are being arranged. The first of these was the big benefit given by Mary Pickford at the Hippodrome, New York, Sunday March 26.

On April 2 Theda Bara, in a scene from her latest film, "The Eternal Sapho," acted with all of the scenery, props, actors and camera and added several thousand dollars to the fund. Miss Bara also donated two hundred dollars cash.

Among other large contributions was one hundred dollars from Pearl White and Chairman Goldfish has been notified that many other large individual contributions will be made later by film stars.

DRA-KO STARTS PRODUCTION OF NEW COMMERCIAL ADVERTISING CARTOONS

The Dra-Ko Film Company, Inc., is announcing in this issue the installation of a new department for the production of animated, commercial and advertising cartoons. The company has under contract Frank A. Nankivell, formerly of Puck and other well-known publications, who is devoting his entire time to this department.

Two of Mr. Nankivell's reels were recently shown at the Strand theatre, New York City. This is one of the largest and most select picture houses in the country, and it was because of the quality of the humor in the cartoons of Mr. Nankivell that they were selected by B. A. Rolfe.

Very gratifying results are said to have been produced, in the short time that the Dra-Ko Film Company has been working on this idea.

Kopfstein Organizes Pacemaker Productions

Company Will Make Nine-Reel Features, Beginning with "Anyman's Wife"—Serials Are Also Planned for Distribution Through Independent Exchanges

JACQUES KOPFSTEIN, until recently director of publicity and advertising to the Ivan Company, is at present engaged in organizing the Pacemaker Film Productions, which will manufacture special productions to be released through independent exchanges throughout the country.

Mr. Kopfstein is best known as the organizer of the Screen Advertising Association. It was this company of which Jacques Kopfstein was president, through which the motion picture advertising campaigns of national advertisers were engineered.

For the purpose of the organization of the Pacemaker company, Mr. Kopfstein is linking up independent exchanges in each territory into a co-operative stock company. This will assure the exchanges which become members of the organization not only a regular release, but also a voice in the producing company's policy.

Several of the exchanges that have responded to a request for their opinion as to the feasibility of a co-operative producing company are enthusiastic in their replies and state that it is just what is needed to cope with prevailing market conditions.

Mr. Kopfstein believes that the time is now ripe for the production of features of a length over six reels which can be booked in a theatre as a play and his plans include the immediate manufacture of "Anyman's Wife," an original photoplay in nine reels.

Serials also are planned by the Pacemaker company in the belief that they will prove profitable to the exchanges who have never had an opportunity heretofore of distributing and exploiting a serial.

As soon as permanent arrangements are made, the Pacemaker Film Productions will take offices in one of the buildings devoted to the film trade. In the meantime, the offices of the company are 116 Nassau street, New York City, where Mr. Kopfstein's permanent personal offices are located.

Modern Monna Vanna in "Woman of It," Premo

Picture Will Serve as Starring Vehicle for Carlyle Blackwell, Ethel Clayton and Paul McAllister—Knowles Is Directing Lawsche Play for Screen

IN "The Woman of It," which the Premo Film Corporation has under production, a modern Monna Vanna will be portrayed, with Carlyle Blackwell, Ethel Clayton and Paul McAllister in the principal roles.

Harley Knowles, the Premo director general, adapted the Lawsche play for the screen, and is also producing it.

The policy of the Premo is to present acknowledged stars in subjects appropriate to their abilities, and this plan was followed, it is announced, in casting players for "The Woman of It."

Past Premo photoplays, which have been produced under this policy, include "The Master Hand," starring Nat Goodwin, a World Film release; "The Greater Will," which starred Cyril Maude, and is released by Pathe; "The Devil's Toy," which starred Adele Blood, Edwin Stevens and Montagu Love, an Equitable release; and "The Supreme Sacrifice," in which Robert Warwick appeared.

"MUSTY SUFFER" BOOKED FOR ALL HOUSES ON LOEW CIRCUIT

Contracts were closed last week by George Kleine's New York booking office, which provide for the appearance of George Kleine's "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer" in all the vaudeville and picture houses of the Marcus Loew Circuit.

The American theatre, New York, plays the first feature comedy in its history with "Musty Suffer."

The booking, which covers the entire Marcus Loew Circuit, was made after a try-out with one of the episodes of the series.

"The Mishaps of Musty Suffer" comprise ten one-reel comedies.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

WHY NOT A SPECIAL FOLDER ADVERTISING YOUR SPECIAL CHILDREN'S SHOWS?

JUST as we had begun to think that probably no exhibitor in the country had issued a separate folder or house organ devoted exclusively to children's performances, along comes evidence to prove that we were wrong.

It is a four-page folder, neatly printed, put out by Manager Lou C. Smith of the New Kingston Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y. His enterprise is deserving of special notice, because it shows intelligence and farsightedness in advertising this important phase of exhibiting.

Manager Smith started his Saturday children's performances on April 1, and the folder is an announcement of the innovation and a statement of his policy in this connection also. Two of the four pages are reproduced herewith. The other two are given over to the child feature for the opening day—"Rip Van Winkle," and the supplementary picture, Pathé Weekly. The whole is printed on light green stock, and is quite attractive, showing the printer's art.

We commend to exhibitors the idea of special advertising for children's shows, especially if you feel your house organ is not large enough to warrant devoting a page of it to the subject. The cost of a folder similar to the one Manager Smith issues is not great, and the return should easily justify the outlay.

When you issue a separate folder of this kind you at once impress your patrons with the importance you attach to children's matinees. They know you are in earnest.

The children themselves will surely take greater interest in the matinees if they are made to feel that they are the objects of special attention.

"PEGGY" WEEK IN PORTLAND, ORE., GETS BIG NEWSPAPER SPACE

Manager E. J. Myrick, of the Columbia Theatre, Portland, Ore., is a live advertiser. The result of his effective publicity methods was recently demonstrated in the record breaking crowds which came to see "Peggy" during its week's run at the Columbia.

The Portland newspapers gave generous space to the event. The Journal ran nearly a half page, with photographs of Billie Burke and of the crowds in front of the theatre, together with a story descriptive of the photoplay and the Columbia's great success with it.

HOUSE ORGAN SERIES No. 27: SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT FOR CHILDREN'S SHOWS

Every attention and every precaution will be taken for the Little Folks.

Parents can rest assured that this matter will be given the personal supervision of Manager Lou C. Smith.

While the programs will be selected for the special benefit of the "Little Folks," they will be found highly entertaining to the grown-ups and they will be welcome with the little ones, and everybody is sure to be pleased.

Come and make merry with the "Kiddies."

"LITTLE FOLKS"

At the "Little Folks" Saturday performance parents are assured by Manager Lou C. Smith that only the highest class of pictures will be presented, in keeping with the policy of the New Kingston Theatre. The programs will be selected for "The Little Folks" and will comprise picturizations from children's books, fairy tales and travelogues, which will be entertaining, amusing and instructive.

ISSUED BY THE NEW KINGSTON THEATRE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

G. A. R. POST HELPS HIM BOOM "BATTLE CRY OF PEACE"

Jay Emanuel, of the Ridge Avenue Theatre, Philadelphia, pulled off a good stunt when his theatre played "The Battle Cry of Peace."

Emanuel is particularly friendly with G. A. R. Post Winfield Scott No. 114, whose headquarters are in his neighborhood. In fact, so much do the veterans appreciate the yearly benefits allowed their post at this theatre they have made Emanuel an honorary member of the post.

On the two nights when the "Battle Cry" was played, the post, headed by its commander, John L. Boyd, marched to the theatre in a body, one hundred strong, dressed in full uniform. There speeches were made on Preparedness. The post loaned all of their flags, carriages and guns to decorate the lobby of the theatre, and all of the employes donned khaki uniforms for this occasion.

To fully advertise this event, 50,000 circulars were personally delivered around the large section reached by the theatre, by boys in uniform. Ridge avenue being a business, as well as residence section, caters to a multitude, all of whom tried to get in at the same time, it seemed.

DETROIT MANAGERS CO-OPERATE TO CUT ADVERTISING COSTS

The managers of the Majestic, Broadway-Strand and Washington theatres, Detroit, have entered into an agreement whereby for the ensuing three monthe they will not use over six inch ads on Sundays and over one inch on weekdays. The plan will be given a thorough test to find out whether it is necessary to run a big ad each week—and whether a six-inch ad will not produce as good results as one twice the size—providing the three leading houses use the same size space.

If the plan works out the managers of each house will profit to the extent of not less than $8,000 per annum—the saving the first week being at least $200 to each manager.

DOOR KNOB THROWAWAY USED BY BAY STATE EXHIBITOR

N. Hoffman, manager of the Columbian Theatre, Maplewood, Mass., advertises by means of a throw-a-way. It is a fair-sized card, printed on medium heavy stock, with a string attached, and is hung on the door knob of a patron's home.

The Columbian is a theatre of 400 capacit, situated in a town of about 5,000.

HOW A BUFFALO EXHIBITOR CATERS TO SELECT CLASS OF PATRON—THE AUTOMOBILIST

THERE are undoubtedly many exhibitors who have done many things to cater to that select class of patron, the automobilist. There have been ideas advanced as to the best methods of "luring" this much desired patronage to the theatre, but one of the best noticed recently is that inaugurated by Manager I. M. Mosher of the Palace Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., who in a recent advertisement in the Buffalo Motorist, the official organ of the Buffalo Automobile Club, says in an attractive setting:

PALACE THEATRE,
Main St. at Shelton Sq.
SHOWING THE BEST in MOTION PICTURES.

CARS CHECKED AND PARKED
under the care of a uniformed attendant
On Church and Erie Streets, directly opposite Theatre.

The idea is a new one and has "taken hold" with many automobilists. Mr. Mosher has placed a man in an attractive uniform at the point mentioned in his ad, who checks the auto upon its arrival and watches it until its owner returns from the theatre. The Palace is fortunately located across from a large public square which has room for many automobiles. Another point which has met with the approval of autoists attending the Palace is that there is no tip required for the Palace attendant to watch their car.

The Palace is getting more auto trade than ever before. It might be remarked that under the management of Mr. Mosher, who came from New York several months ago to manage the Palace, that this theatre is enjoying an era of unprecedented prosperity. The service now includes the Fox, Metro and V-L-S-E, all first run, while the price of admission remains ten cents.

IOWA EXHIBITOR SPECIALIZES IN STUNT ADVERTISING

C. L. Matson, advertising manager of the Grand Opera House at Ft. Madison, Iowa, has been attracting a good deal of attention outside his state, through his advertising plans. He is watchful and alert for the novel stunts that hit people when least expected, and that thus call attention strikingly to the subject of his exploitation.

He is particularly fond of attiring models in the garb of characters in the pictures, and having them parade the streets; and recently made an especial hit by sending out a fat man in immense chaps and cowboy attire, with a donkey loaded with camp paraphernalia, representing "Chimmie Fadden Out West."

Another of his plans that has worked with especially good results has been the decoration of the window of some store to suggest the picture advertised. A different class of merchandise is selected for each picture, one which can be adapted to the subject matter, and the unexpected appearance of such a window always arouses attention and comment.

UNIQUE AD. FOR "FLYING TORPEDO" IN NEW ORLEANS

Ernst Boehringer, manager of the Triangle Theatre in New Orleans, sat down and scratched his head when the proposition of uniquely advertising "The Flying Torpedo" occurred to him. "Why not build a genuine flying torpedo?" he said.

And he set a member of his mechanical staff to work. Soon there was evolved a tin torpedo that he swung high into the air, and directly under the bright lights that flash the name of the current bill at the Triangle for blocks around.

The people commenced inquiring, and once you get the public talking about anything you've got 'em nailed. At least, that's what Mr. Boehringer said, and he ought to know, for his theatre has been consistently crowded since it was turned from a legitimate house into motion pictures.

"GOOD ORDER" CARDS DISTRIBUTED IN BROOKLYN THEATRE

Joseph Forster, of the Globe Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., issues a couple of small cards, intended to aid the maintenance of good order in his house. The first card is aimed at "mashers," and reads: "Owing to the Attendance of Children, the Management Will Consider It a Great Favor If You Remove Your Arm."

The second says: "Please Refrain from Loud Talking As It Annoys Other Patrons."

SPECIAL SETTING FOR "NE'ER DO WELL" IN CLEVELAND

Although his seating capacity is well under 800, P. F. Woda signed to run "The Ne'er Do Well" three weeks at the Orpheum theatre, a Cleveland downtown house that is rapidly forcing its way to the front.

By running high-class films and making important structural alterations, Mr. Woda has completely changed the tone of the Orpheum. He has introduced a number of novel features for the run of "The Ne'er Do Well."

The lobby has been lined with artificial plants similar to those found in Panama scenes of the canal, and the locks have been painted as new stage decorations and blue, red and yellow electric lights peeping out through the foliage, together with "moonlight rays" striking the water of the canal, give the theatre a most appropriate and effective appearance.

The price of admission has been raised to 25 cents for this attraction, but the audiences are getting bigger each day.

EFFICIENCY IDEAS ADOPTED BY NEW ORLEANS EXHIBITOR

A live idea adopted by G. B. Mars, well known suburban exhibitor of New Orleans, is the maintenance of a stock room on an efficiency basis. Not only is an elaborate stock kept on hand at all times, but every item on the supply list is tabulated and a record kept of the date on which the operator used up his last carbon, etc.

Mars carries his efficiency ideas to the extent that if a dozen supplies are needed each week, he makes all his purchases by the gross, finding this method cheaper in the end.

BRIEF HINTS FOR BUSY EXHIBITORS

Are you showing anti-censorship slides at your theatre? This you should do, for censorship threatens your welfare just as it threatens the welfare of every other person in the industry.

Fighting censorship by arousing the active sentiment of your patrons against it is as live a wire stunt as you can possibly set in action. Censorship menaces your business. Censorship menaces the favorite amusement of your patrons. Tell them these things.

Why not run a paragraph or two in every issue of your house organ on the evils of censorship?

If your local, or your state censors ban a picture you wanted to show, why not tell your patrons about it in your house organ?

Fight censorship with a little of Mr. Wilson's "pitiless publicity." The house organ is an excellent place in which to be pitiless toward censorship.

Censorship is the producer's fight, yes. But, remember, no producers, no exhibitors.

Censorship is your fight, too.

MAKING YOURSELF RESPONSIBLE FOR THE PICTURES YOU SHOW

Do you make yourself personally responsible to your patrons for the quality of the pictures you show? Apparently George Bleich, of the Empress theatre, Owensboro, Ky., does. Here is one of his "Straight Talks" to patrons printed on the first page of his house organ. It is good advertising:

"Many of my patrons know it to be a positive fact that when they ask me personally as to the quality of a show that I do not hesitate to say it is good, great, ordinary, or poor, just as the case may be. The same thing applies to any items in my advertisements appearing over my name. If I personally urge your attendance to see some particular picture that is one you should not miss; the invitation should be heeded.

"Another thing: Are you in doubt sometimes as to whether one of our pictures is worth while? Worth leaving home to see? If you are, go to your telephone and call up this theatre and ask how the show is. Any of my employees will give you dependable information—they are instructed to answer candidly and truthfully. Isn't this decidedly fair? Try it out."

Looking Ahead With The Producers

SIX FIVE REEL FEATURES UNDER WAY AT AMERICAN STUDIOS FOR MUTUAL RELEASE

SIX five-reel features, to be released as Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, are at present under way at the American studios in Santa Barbara, Cal., under the direction of Arthur Maude, Donald MacDonald, Rea Berger, Edward Sloman and William Russell.

First of the six productions to be released by the Mutual will be "A Courtesan," a gripping sociological drama based on a novel theme, which Mr. Maude is directing.

In this five-part feature the leading role, that of a woman who suffers and sacrifices for the love she bears her only son, has been given Eugenie Forde, who since her portrayal of Hagar, the gypsy queen in "The Diamond from the Sky," has appeared in several of these De Luxe features filmed at the American studios.

Miss Forde's supporting cast in "A Courtesan" is composed of Hal Cooley, Al Fordyce, Charles Wheelock, William Carroll and Nell Franzen.

"The Abandonment," another of the Masterpictures, De Luxe, is being filmed under the direction of Donald MacDonald and features Helene Rosson. "The Abandonment," from the pen of Kenneth B. Clarke, is woven around a young physician who neglects the girl he is engaged to marry.

El Forrest Taylor appears in support of Miss Rosson in the role of the young physician. Others in the cast include Harry Von Meter and a number of American players.

"The Overcoat," a forthcoming Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe, which Rea Berger is directing, with Rhea Mitchell in the stellar role, is from an original scenario written by J. Edward Hungerford.

Miss Mitchell portrays the part of Belle, a denizen of the night life. William Stowell appears in the part of an ex-convict, a former rich man's son, who when down and out is defended and befriended and reclaimed by the girl.

Edward Sloman is the director and Kenneth B. Clarke the author of "The Reclamation," another of the De Luxe features under way at the Santa Barbara studios.

"The Reclamation" presents Winnifred Greenwood in her initial appearance as a star of these five-part De Luxe features. Franklyn Ritchie, a recent addition to the American studios, appears in her support.

William Russell is directing as well as starring in the fifth of the De Luxe features now under way at the American studios. "The Secret Mating" is its title and the cast includes, besides Mr. Russell, Charlotte Burton, Leona Hutton and others. "The Secret Mating" is based on the struggles for supremacy of a group of Wall Street capitalists, during which Russell brings about the financial downfall of the man who had set out to ruin him.

Second of the features being screened under the direction of Edward Sloman is entitled "None So Blind," from the pen of Julian Lamothe. Winnifred Greenwood is the featured player.

A number of smaller-length features are also under way at the American studios for early release through the Mutual. Principal among them is "The Return," a two-part Mustang drama by James D. Douglas and Karl Koolidge, featuring Arthur Acord, supported by Nita Davis, Clarence Burton and Lawrence Peyton.

"Pierre Brissac, the Brazen," is the title of another two-reeler now under way. It was written by Kenneth Clarke, especially for Edward Coxen, who appears in the title role. Thomas Ricketts is directing it and Coxen's supporting cast includes Lizette Thorne, George Fields and other notables.

Mr. Coxen and Miss Thorne are also the co-stars of "The Masterpiece," a third two-part subject, which is being filmed under the direction of Mr. Richetts. Marguerite Nicholas, the new American Mutual beauty, makes her first appearance in this release.

The scenes of the production are laid in New England and the theme is woven around the entanglement in divorce proceedings of an artist and his pretty wife.

Frank Borzage, in a cowboy role, and Anna Little, the "darling of the plains," as a dancehall girl, are the featured players in "The Awakening," another two-reel feature, set in a strong Western atmosphere.

This picture will be released under the Mustang brand. Jack Richardson, famous "heavy" of the American-Mutual studios, contributes one of his best efforts in this stirring story of ranch life.

In addition, work is all but completed on several single-reel comedy pictures which are to be released by the Mutual at an early date.

EDNA MAY, OF "BELLE OF NEW YORK" FAME, HEADS THE VITAGRAPH PLAYERS

EDNA MAY, the former "Belle of New York" star, in the seven-part special Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, "Salvation Joan," heads a list of representative Vitagraph photoplays.

"Mr. Jack's Hat and the Cat," the latest of the one-part comedies of "The Escapades of Mr. Jack" series, featuring Frank Daniels, now being released through the V-L-S-E; a single reel comedy-drama, "The Hoyden"; "Susie, the Sleuth," another thousand feet of laughs and the three-part dramatic Broadway Star Feature, "The Other Way," make up the program.

Another V-L-S-E release on April 10 is "Mr. Jack's Hat and the Cat," in which Frank Daniels has the time of his life in his effort to lose his wife's pet cat.

He gives it up as a bad job when on his last attempt the cat returns with her "happy family." In this "escapade" Mr. Daniels is supported by Rose E. Tapley, C. Jay Williams produced this adventure.

"The Hoyden," a one-part comedy drama in which Mary Anderson and Webster Campbell, supported by Otto Beninger and Edith Reeves, portray a story of everyday life and show the trials and tribulations experienced by two young girls in their struggle for existence.

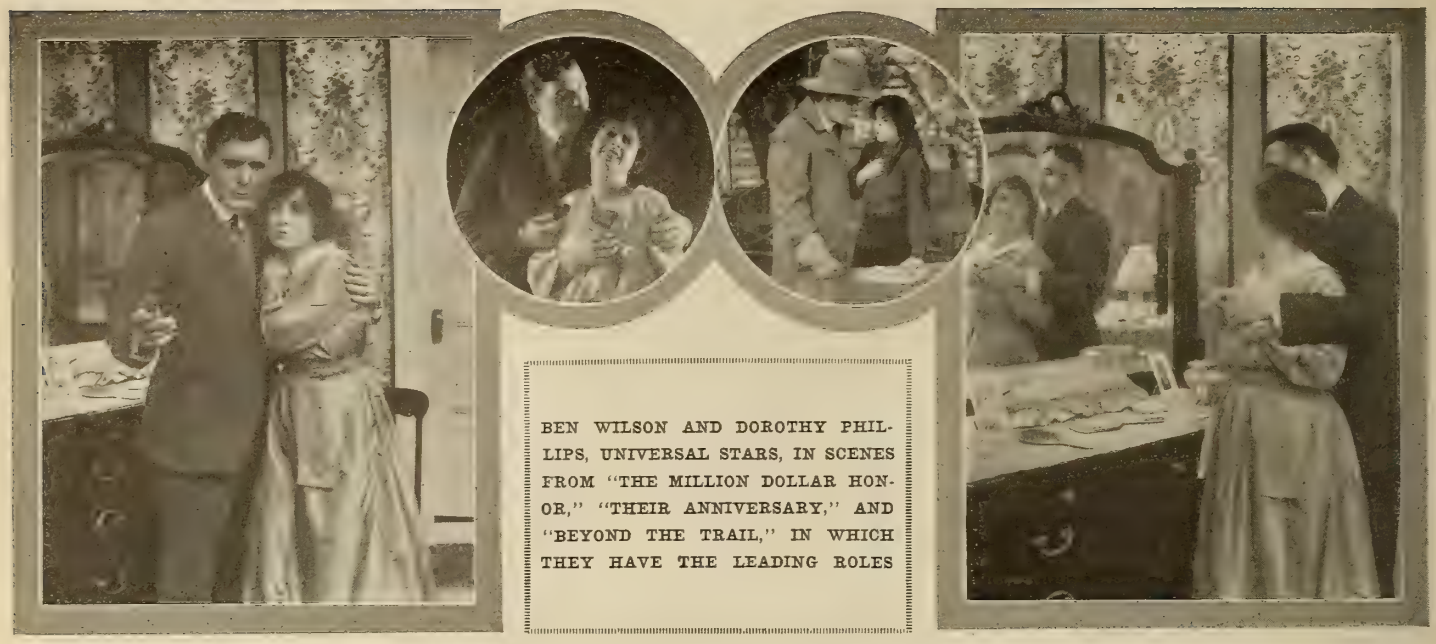
Dave Smith directed the action of this story by William E. Wing. This photoplay will also be released on April 10.

Kenneth S. Webb is the author of "Susie, the Sleuth," a single reel comedy, listed for April 14, in which Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno furnish many funny situations.

Miss Storey as a "would-be" detective and Mr. Moreno as her lover and professional admirer are seen to exceptional advantage. George D. Baker supervised.

On April 15, the western division of the Vitagraph Company gives us a three-part dramatic Broadway Star Feature, of which Fred. W. Hiller is the author and William Wolbert, the producer.

Mary Anderson and Webster Campbell are supported in its enactment by Corrine Griffith, Anne Schaefer, Otto Lederer and F. W. Hiller.



"BIG JIM GARRITY" FIRST PATHE VEHICLE FOR EDESON

"Big Jim Garrity," the five-part Pathe Gold Rooster release for April 18, shows for the first time Robert Edeson in a Pathe picture. Mr. Edeson, as the big-hearted, big-bodied foreman of a Southern mine, is always convincing and forceful.

He is supported by Eleanor Woodruff, who for some time starred in Pathe productions; Carl Harbaugh and Lyster Chambers.

Lyster Chambers will be remembered for his work in Pathe's "At Bay," and Mr. Harbaugh used to be in the Pathe stock company in Jersey City.

George Fitzmaurice directed the picture, which is adapted from the A. H. Woods success of the same name.

BEN WILSON AND DOROTHY PHILLIPS, UNIVERSAL STARS, IN SCENES FROM "THE MILLION DOLLAR HONOR," "THEIR ANNIVERSARY," AND "BEYOND THE TRAIL," IN WHICH THEY HAVE THE LEADING ROLES

UNIVERSAL WILL SPILL A BAGFUL OF LAUGHS IN WEEK OF 17th BESIDES STRAIGHT DRAMA

THE Universal program for the week of April 17 presents a varied assortment of photoplays.

On Monday, April 17, Cleo Madison is presented in "Her Bitter Cup," a five-reel Red Feather drama for which the poster department is issuing two six sheets with four-sheet streamers to be used for combination sixteen sheet or separately; two three sheets and two one sheets as well as special window cars.

On Tuesday, April 18, Herbert Rawlinson will be seen with Francelia Billington in "The Best Man's Bride," a two-reel Gold Seal drama. Victor Potel and Jane Bernoudy are in the Imp comedy, "Love Laughs at Dyspepsia," which is released on the same date.

"Royal Love," a three-reel Victor drama, is the piece de resistance on April 19. On the same day the L-Ko comedy, "'A Meeting for a Cheating," with Billie Ritchie and Dan Russell, and Number 16 of the Universal Animated Weekly are released.

The baseball season soon commences and the Big U comedians have put on "Oh! What a Whopper!" a two-reel comedy of the diamond, which will be released on April 20.

"The Gambler," a Laemmle drama, with Fred Church and Myrtle Gonzalez, and the Powers split-reel novelty, "The Toyland Villain," and an educational are released on the same date.

King Baggot is featured with Edna Hunter in "The Haunted Bell," a two-reel Imp mystery drama which will be released on April 21.

Joe Martin, the famous Universal Ape, appears in a Victor drama, "A Strange Confession," and on the same date Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Betty Compson spill a bagful of laughs in the Nestor comedy, "Eddie's Night Out."

Harry Carey is starred with Olive Fuller Golden in "The Passing of Hell's Crown," a two-reel Bison western drama, which will be released on April 22, together with the Joker comedy, "Just Yet, But Not Quite," with Ernest Shields and Marcia Moore.

On Sunday, April 23, Ben Wilson with Clara Beyers are featured in "His World of Darkness," a three-reel Rex drama. On the same day little Billie Jacobs and Olive Johnson appear in the L-Ko comedy, "Little Billy's School Days."

During the week of April 17 the nineteenth episode of the Universal Special Feature, "Graft," will be released. Richard Stanton, Jane Novak and Glen White play the leading roles in "The Photo Badger Game," constituting the latest two-reel episode written by Hugh C. Weir and Joe Brandt.

NOAH'S ARK COMPLETENESS IN SELIG ANIMAL SUBJECT

Practically every species of animals contained in the Selig Zoo has been used in the filming of "Into the Primitive," a five-reel subject just completed by Director T. N. Heffron, which stars Kathlyn Williams, supported by Guy Oliver and Harry Lonsdale. This is spoken of at the studio as a drama of unsual merit.

"FOLLY OF SIN," GREAT NORTHERN RELEASE WITH JOAN PETERSON

The next release of the Great Northern Film Company, 110 West Fortieth street, New York, will be a five-part production, "The Folly of Sin," with Joan Peterson, and Messrs. Wieth and Tolway in the leading roles.

The story deals with the price exacted from devotees of forbidden pleasures.

PASIG RIVER IS WELL SHOWN IN BURTON HOLMES PHILIPPINE TOUR

THE tenth and eleventh releases of the Paramount Burton Holmes Travelpictures conduct the spectator to the Philippines, for a tour of the Pasig River, and Bildid, the Filipino Sing Sing.

From Laguna de Bay, a lake about fifteen miles above Manila, the Pasig flows down to the city and then through it to Manila Bay. Mr. Holmes takes his fellow travelers up the river and back again, showing them en route villas, tropical shores which give bathing facilities for the water buffalo; Fort McKinley, Manila's bridges, and the vast numbers of cascos used to convey cargoes to canals which are fed by the waters of the Pasig.

Bildid is known as the model prison of the Orient, where three thousand prisoners are made over into useful citizens. Mr. Holmes conducts his audience on a complete tour of the prison, showing its workings in detail.

In addition, views are shown of the cockpits where the great national sport of the Filipinos, cock fighting, with its accompanying vice of gambling, have started many a young Filipino on the road which ends inside prison walls.

GAUMONT "HAUNTED MANOR" SET FOR APRIL 3 RELEASE — THREE RELEASE DATES SCHEDULED FOR GAUMONT

Mutual Masterpictures, de Luxe Edition, which will come from the Gaumont winter studios at Jacksonville, Fla., in April, are 'The Haunted Manor," with Iva Shepard in the star role, and "Feathertop," with Marguerite Courtot making her star bow in her second five-reel feature.

"The Haunted Manor" will be seen on the screen April 3. "Feathertop" will come two weeks later, April 17. Following these two will come "The Quality of Faith," to be released May 1. In this photoplay Alexander Gaden and Gertrude Robinson are the stars.

FOUR RELEASES A WEEK, WITH FEATURED HEADLINERS, IS KALEM CONTRIBUTION TO GENERAL PROGRAM

FOUR releases a week, each with a featured headliner, is the Kalem announcement for the coming month's issues on the General film program.

These releases, which include three one-reel comedies and a single-reel "Hazard of Helen," are in addition to "The Social Pirates," released as a special through General Film.

"Romance and Riot," "A Double Barreled Courtship" and "A Lucky Mistake" are three of the "Sis Hopkins" comedies announced for early release. In the first-mentioned subject, released April 14, Sis is the center of attraction for the police chief and the police force, both men being bitter rivals in their attempts to pay her attentions.

The love affairs of the young lady of the house and the arrival of an escaped burglar for whom a large reward is offered are responsible for the plot.

Sis finds herself in a peck of trouble in "A Double-Barreled Courtship" through changing places with a pretty visitor to the house where she has just accepted a position.

At the completion of "A Lucky Mistake," which was released on April 28, Miss Melville wrote to an official of the Kalem company:

"I think you would call this a 'Hazard of Sis' had you seen me running for two Jacksonville blocks after a speeding automobile for one scene of this picture. The director says I looked funny, but I didn't feel that way."

"The Race for a Siding," released April 15, and "The Governor's Special," which follows on April 22, are two coming one-reel "Hazards of Helen" that are said to furnish strong opportunities to that daring star.

In the former she races downgrade on a runaway box car and later leaps to a speeding engine on an adjoining track. Helen Gibson combines the railroad feats with some of the daring horseback riding that has proven so popular in "The Governor's Special."

An Ethel Teare comedy is promised for April 19 with the release of "Their Taking Ways," which finds a Mr. and Mrs. Raffles deftly trimming each other.

"Millionaires by Mistake," promised among coming "Ham and Bud" comedies, shows those comedians in the sudden possession of a million.

BEATRIZ MICHELENA MAKES PROGRESS ON "WOMAN WHO DARED" AT SAN RAFAEL STUDIO

REPORTS from producing headquarters at San Rafael, Cal., indicate that work is progressing upon the picture adaptation of Beatriz Michelena in C. N. and A. M. Williamson's "The Woman Who Dared," now being filmed by the California Motion Picture Corporation.

The story is one of intrigue and diplomacy in high European circles and matches the wits of a woman against those of statesmen and an intricate system of secret service.

Miss Michelena in the role of The Woman finds new opportunity to evidence her dramatic versatility, especially since the part differs in many respects from any she has yet played on the screen.

It is gratifying to hear that her gowns in this picture will be of uniform splendor. Not until "The Unwritten Law," just released, did Miss Michelena ever have opportunity to appear on the screen gowned to the height of fashion and the added charm it gives her natural beauty makes a repetition highly desirable.

It is also stated in the Pacific Coast reports that the sets arranged for the production have been many weeks in the making. Care, it is said, has been given to details intended to achieve the European atmosphere.

Andrew Robson and William Pike are two names of prominence mentioned in the cast.

"The Woman Who Dared" has already been announced by the California company as its May release. It is to be produced on an elaborate scale and to follow "The Unwritten Law" on the regular schedule of features.

WARWICK AND FRANCES NELSON APPEAR JOINTLY ON APRIL 17 IN "HUMAN DRIFTWOOD," WORLD

ROBERT WARWICK and Frances Nelson, two of World Film's leading artists, appear jointly in the April 17 release on the World program, in "Human Driftwood," while the Equitable issue of the same date will offer Carlyle Blackwell in "The Shadow of Doubt," supported by a new leading woman, Jean Shelby.

"Human Driftwood" is a story of both the South and the North, and Director Emile Chautard, after taking his company to Florida for some tropical scenes, turned back north and gathered in "snow stuff" fifty miles from Saranac Lake.

Blackwell and his company, under the direction of Ray Physioc, journeyed to Moose Jaw, Manitoba, and there amidst the actual surroundings, described by the author of "The Shadow of Doubt," a series of what are said to be sensational scenes was staged.

The new Blackwell subject gives the star the role of a man with a dual nature, and is said to contain a great number of dramatic moments.

It represents the newer idea of blending stage and screen stars followed by World-Equitable.

TRIANGLE-INCE COMEDY IS WILLIAM COLLIER IN "THE NO-GOOD GUY"

Convinced by Billie Burke's success in "Peggy," made under his direction, Thomas H. Ince has decided to produce more light comedy features at Culver City for the Triangle.

His next release will be William Collier in "The No-Good Guy," a C. Gardner Sullivan story. It required only projection room showings to reveal to Ince that he was on the right track, and Collier was at once re-engaged for another five-reeler.

Collier has the character of Jimmy Coghlan generally recognized as being "no good." He goes on the water-wagon, but his stay is so short that a stop watch would fail to record its length. After a long session in a gay cafe he undertakes to drive his automobile home with several friends aboard the car.

The trip ends in a department store and Jimmy, arrested for reckless driving, gets thirty days in jail. But his uncle is a power in politics and Jimmy obtains his freedom on his promise to go to work.

He becomes a detective and gets a black hand case. His uncle proves to be the man higher up and Jimmy disowns him.

Enid Markey, Charles K. French and Walter Edwards are prominent in the cast. Edwards directed the picture under the supervision of Ince.

BORZAGE WORKING ON "TWO BITS" FOR AMERICAN

Frank Borzage's first production since returning to the directing staff of the American Mutual Company is entitled "Two Bits," from the pen of Karl Coolidge, well-known author of fiction and motion picture plays.

Mr. Borzage impersonates a U. S. marshal named James Hardeman, who is assigned to round up a counterfeiting gang in the California mountains.

Anna Little, in the title role, is a charming little orphan who depends for her living upon the sale of flowers at "two bits" per bouquet.

Jed Simpson, sheriff of Red Gulch, in which character Jack Richardson appears, is the chief counterfeiter.

"ALONG THE BORDER," SELIG, ON GENERAL, APRIL 8, OF TIMELY INTEREST

"Along the Border," a Selig one-reel drama released through General Film service on Saturday, April 8, is a timely production. Tom Mix stars in this picture play which carries the atmosphere of the Mexican border.

To make the story the more interesting, it can be stated that many of the scenes were filmed along the Mexican frontier in localities which are now in the public eye because of the Mexican situation now confronting the United States.

In brief, the plot centers about the adventures of Americans who are taken captives by Mexican bandits and who escape through the bravery of a girl.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

THE week has been a busy one out at the Vitagraph, Bay Shore studios. The most important work in hand is the making of a five-reel feature, the title of which has not yet been decided upon.

Director Ralph W. Ince is in charge, and his cast, which includes some of the best known of the Vitagraph people, is headed by Lucille Lee Stewart and Huntley Gordon. Mr. Ince himself is reported as considering this picture one of the most important he has ever tackled.

Frank Currier is busy directing a new Edward Montagne comedy, which is now nearing completion and will be released as another of the "Freddy" series. "Slapstick" methods have been eliminated, but George O'Donnell, who is playing the lead, has evolved some excellent comedy.

The famous bowling club organized during the Winter by Lucille Lee Stewart to help while away the long evenings is about to disband with the approach of warm weather.

During the Summer there are so many things to be done in the open along the Great South Bay that the Vitagraphers, all of whom have taken a keen interest in the bowling club, will forsake that pastime until the frosts return.

Robert B. Mantell, Genevieve Hamper and one of the companies of players who for four months have been at work on feature films at William Fox's Rose Garden studios at Kingston, Jamaica, returned to New York last week.

Back to the Old Town

Among the returning players are Stuart Holmes, Louise Rial, Genevieve Blinn, Henry Leone, Claire Whitney, Walter Miller, all of whom will be quickly at work again in other Fox productions under way or about to be started in the several Fox New Jersey studios.

Mr. Mantell and Miss Hamper express delight with their reception in Jamaica, where they and the other Fox artists were made much of by the "official set" of Kingston.

While in Jamaica, working under Director J. Gordon Edwards, Mr. Mantell, Miss Hamper and their company completed four five-reel features, some of which already have been released, with the remainder soon to follow.

So anxious was Director John Adolfi to complete the latest William Fox photoplay, "A Modern Thelma," that he missed the wedding of his niece at New Rochelle, N. Y., last week. This is the play in which Vivian Martin and Harry Hilliard are featured.

The release date was advanced, and to complete this picture Mr. Adolfi put in twenty-one straight hours of hard work. He then took a nap of three hours and finished up the play in time to catch the 6 o'clock express for New Rochelle. Tired out, he dozed off and when he awoke he was going through Stamford, Conn., sixteen miles away from New Rochelle. He got back to New York after midnight.

Signs of Spring have been discovered at the William Fox studio in Fort Lee. Tom Burrough, who is shortly to appear with Theda Bara in "The Eternal Sapho," saw a flock of wild geese honking along to the northward.

A Cropper for Peerless, Fearless Girl

Pearl White, heroine of Pathe's "The Iron Claw," came very near to taking one chance too many last week. Sheldon Lewis, playing the Iron Claw, was to stand on the runningboard of an automobile going at high speed and, without any let-up in speed, seize "Pathe's peerless fearless girl" as she stood in the road and throw her into the tonneau.

The stunt was pulled off. The rehearsal was perfect, so, satisfied, Director Edward Jose called "camera" and the car came tearing down the road. Mr. Lewis was tired, however, from the exertions of a day that would have taxed a dock-walloper. He grabbed the lady and tried to hoist her into the car. Then his strength gave way and the blonde-topped heroine fell to the ground under the wheels of the car, which shot over her body.

Miss White's gown caught in one of the wheels, dragging her for yards along the road. When the automobile was finally stopped and Miss White helped to her feet it was found that she had miraculously escaped serious injury, but it took a doctor to fix up her cuts and scratches.

George Fitzmaurice, Pathe director, who made "Via Wireless," "At Bay," "New York" and "Big Jim Garrity," has always been noted for the amount of realism he puts into his pictures. In the feature he is now putting on he wanted to get a good, realistic fight for one of his scenes and went down into New York's Ghetto to get the proper material, securing the services of some well-known gunmen as fighters to add realism.

They went through their paces for a rehearsal, but Fitzmaurice was not entirely satisfied. He started them off again, but this time, too, the fight lacked enough realism to suit the producer.

Quick Action from Prize Offer

This rather exasperated him and he was at his wits' ends for something to make them fight. Finally he announced that he would offer an extra day's pay to the man who fought hard enough to get hurt.

Ambulance surgeons came around on the jump to patch the belligerents up.

George B. Seitz, scenario editor for Pathe for several years, and now one of the officers of the Astra Film Corporation, has become the captain of a schooner.

The Astra needed a vessel to blow up in one of the episodes of the new serial they are making for Pathe. Ownership papers couldn't pass without the signature of the ship's captain, and this particular hooker hadn't had one for three years. Seitz therefore became the legal captain, and as such figures in the bill of sale.

The Equitable Company, now at Saranac Lake, under the guidance of Director Edwin August, and featuring Edna Wallace Hopper, Frank Sheridan and Muriel Ostriche, wired and lighted a square mile portion of the lake for a tremendous skating scene, which came near being a tragedy.

Edna Wallace Hopper, playing the leading role, went through the ice and was taken out of the water almost frozen. A slight cold resulted, but a day later she was back and the scene was taken.

Director Knowles and his company appearing in "The Woman of It," were allowed to use the Boys' Club skating rink during their visit and the local authorities extended every effort to make the night scenes staged by John Ince for "The Tyranny of Love" a success.

The natives and visitors all consented to remain off the lake until the director signalled them to come on. There were over 300 skaters, and all obeyed Mr. August's directions, so that the scene was staged with a most natural effect.

Miss Hopper's fall through the ice and her consequent rescue were photographed and made part of the story.

In addition to Miss Hopper, Frank Sheridan, Ruby Hoffman, Muriel Ostriche, Macey Alexander Francis, Phillip Hatkin, Frank Pendell and Eddie Rouse are at the lake.

Mild Mannered Horse in Cast

At the Famous Players studio Eleanor Hallowell Abbott's celebrated story, "Molly Make-Believe," is being filmed under the direction of J. Searle Dawley, with Marguerite Clark as the star. As little Molly is a country girl, barnyard scenes were necessary, and, of course, a large assortment of barnyard animals and fowls were provided.

As a result a stable was erected in the studio, where the old family horse, a pet pig and some chickens were assembled. Miss Clark, who is a great lover of animals, was delighted when she learned that Mike, a well-trained bulldog, was also scheduled to appear in her support.

There are many delightful scenes in which Miss Clark figures with her dumb associates, among the most humorous of which is that in which she and her small brother feed the pig from a baby's bottle. The scene was not accomplished until the porker had registered his protest against the indignity in no uncertain terms.

In addition to the star, the cast includes Edwin Mordant, J. W. Johnston, Mahlon Hamilton, Gertrude Norman and Master Dick Gray. The photoplay will be released on the Paramount program April 10.

Though Mary Pickford is now playing the star part in "Hulda from Holland," the little Famous Players star has not fully recovered from the long session of making her first seven-reel production, "Poor Little Peppina." Of course she talked with an Italian accent during the filming of "Peppina," and now that she is playing the Dutch girl, she frequently lapses into the Latin accents from force of habit.

Accent Might Knot Telephone Wire

So her conversation during some of the scenes is a remarkable conglomeration of English, Dutch and Italian.

Tiring of reading spring poems in the papers and sneezing between verses, Hazel Dawn has packed her trunk and departed for Georgia, where this spring business is much less apt to be a practical joke. Of course while enjoying the warmth the Famous Players star will work on her next Paramount picture.

A number of scenes for "Love's Toll," the new feature now in production by Lubin, have just been filmed in the celebrated ice gardens atop the Hotel Biltmore, in New York. A number of high-salaried skaters were employed as extras, and they added a distinct dash of atmosphere to the scenes.

For another scene from this same subject, the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House in Philadelphia was utilized for four days. In this scene the principals, including Rosetta Brice, Richard Buhler and Crauford Kent, were surrounded by the combined beauty choruses of three musical comedy companies, then playing in Philadelphia. One of these choruses was taken from the "Around the Map" production.

How the people of Canada, rich and poor alike, enjoy themselves with their thrilling sports during the long winter season has been pictured by Essanay camera men and a series of highly interesting films is now being shown.

Most of the pictures were taken at the Chateau Frontenac, the most famous hotel in Canada and one of the show places of the Western Hemisphere. The rich of the Dominion and the United States are pictured tobogganing, skiing, skating and playing hockey. In addition, all the champions in the various lines of sport have been photographed in action.

The film is being released in split reels with Cartoonist Wallace A. Carlson's Canimated Nooz Pictorial and with Vernon Howe Bailey's Sketch Book.

"Yellow Menace" in Jacksonville

Edwin Stevens, Florence Malone, Marguerite Gale and twenty others have left for Jacksonville, Fla., to begin a production of a sixteen-episode serial picture entitled "The Yellow Menace," under the direction of Aubrey Kennedy.

The picture will be sponsored by the Serial Film Company, of which William Steiner is general manager. A newspaper serial story will be made of this picture by Louis Tracy, the well-known English novelist, who wrote "The Wings of the Morning," "Captain of the Kansas" and other popular novels.

Burton King, the Metro director, who has just finished "Souls of Flame," in which Clifford Bruce is starred, for Popular Plays and Players, has commenced work on a new picture, with Edmund Breese in the leading role.

The picture, "The Spell of the Yukon," calls for many scenes of the great frozen north, as the action is located in Alaska, and to find these locations Director King, accompanied by Dale Hanshaw and Wallace Clifton, took an automobile trip up through the Sleepy Hollow region.

They found all the snow they wanted—more, for their automobile was stalled time and again and it required fence rails, planks, crowbars and jacks to get it out of the drifts.

Harry Revier, who has just returned from the Coast, has joined the forces at the Popular Plays and Players studio.

Director Revier made an enviable reputation while with Lasky at the Hollywood studios.

Le Guere Still with Metro

Contrary to published reports, George Le Guere will begin work on a new production shortly for the Metro program, which will be produced by the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc. Mr. Le Guere's contract calls for at least two more five-part productions for Metro.

On account of not having a scenario available for Mr. Le Guere, several weeks ago Metro loaned the young juvenile to the Eastern Company, of Providence, R. I., to make one feature production for them. Mr. Le Guere has now finished work on this feature and again is on call by the Metro studio.

Leander de Cordova, one of the best known young men in the theatrical profession, both as an actor and manager, who recently turned his talents to motion pictures, has been made an assistant director at the Rolfe-Metro studio and will be associated with Charles Horan.

Mary Moore, of the illustrious Moore family, which includes Tom, Owen and Matt Moore, Mary Pickford and Alice Joyce, is working in the forthcoming Quality-Metro, "A Million a Minute," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are starred.

In one part Miss Moore, who is exceedingly young and attractive, plays the role of Mr. Bushman's mother, but it is when Mr. Bushman is a baby in the photodrama.

Lester Cuneo, who formerly played the heavy leads in Metro plays with Francis X. Bushman, and who gave up motion pictures recently to take up a banking career in Chicago, has again returned to pictures and will be seen with Harold Lockwood and May Allison in "The Come-Back," a forthcoming Quality-Metro five-part production. Mr. Cuneo has been working before the camera for more than eight years.

Margery Dale, the youngest daughter of Alan Dale, the noted dramatic critic, has made her debut in motion pictures at the Popular Plays and Players studio in "The Scarlet Woman," with Mme. Petrova in the stellar role. It will be an early release on the Metro program.

She Has Saved 5,000 Lives

With more than half a century of romance behind her, during which time she saved more than 5,000 lives aboard vessels in disasters off Hatteras and the Banks, the Woodbury, one of the most famous vessels in the United States revenue service, last week made her way to a mooring in the Hudson River off 116th street.

During the voyage from Portland, Me., where the Woodbury had been laid up for some time, her decks and cabins were once again the scenes of romantic action, but this time only in the land of Make-Believe.

The Woodbury is now the property of the Metro Pictures Corporation, and the first scenes staged for the screen aboard this famous vessel were for the five-part Metro feature, "Dorian's Divorce," in which Lionel Barrymore and Grace Valentine appear.

Mme. Petrova had some very interesting moments leading a full-sized leopard through a cafe scene in "The Scarlet Woman," a new five-part feature now being made for the Metro program by the Popular Plays and Players. It was easy to see that the animal was not wild about getting into motion pictures.

Hamilton Revelle, who is starred with Marguerite Snow in "The Half Million Bribe" on the Metro program, has purchased a hydroaeroplane, which he has installed in a hangar near his studio in Fourteenth street near the Hudson River. He intends to use the flying machine for his recreation and for taking photographs in the air. Incidentally, he hopes to use it in a Metro photodrama at no distant date.

Out at Universal Heights, Director Ingram is doing a Chinatown picture for which he required a dozen real chinamen. Now there are agencies in New York City that furnish any sort of extra people—excepting Chinese. The reason lies in the timidity of the Chinaman to hire himself out to enterprises that are mysterious to him. That is why he will rarely work for "Melican man" (except to launder his shirts!), and of all the "Melican man's" business there is none so foreign to him as the theatrical employment agent's.

But Ingram would have real "Chinks." He went down to Chinatown himself to get them. But the Chinamen could not get into their heads what a moving picture studio was. The reply of each was fifteen minutes in duration, but stated by the interpreter as the single word, "No." Ingram went back to Universal Heights hoping Japan would swallow China whole.

Actor Like "Melican Man"

When Ingram reached the studio there were his Chinese! Assistant Bill Dyer did it. He had made a canvass of the neighboring laundries—all of whom do moving picture actors' wash—and easily picked up a dozen Fort Lee Chinamen who knew all about moving picture studios and were glad to get a feel of moving picture money.

King Baggot and the Imp Company are in Savannah, Ga., doing a number of scenes for a five-reel production entitled "Half a Rogue," based on a novel by Harold MacGrath. The picture is being staged under the direction of Henry Otto, who has jumped into prominence since the production of "Undine."

Richard Garrick, who is directing the co-stars, Alexander Gaden and Gertrude Robinson, in the Gaumont Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe, "The Quality of Faith," cast himself for the role of Baker, the strike-leader in the factory strike scenes.

However, the mob scenes assumed such vast proportions that Mr. Garrick found all his attention would be required for the task of directing.

Accordingly he surrendered the role to John Mackin. These factory scenes are being taken in Atlanta, Ga., whither a score of the players were taken from the winter studios at Jacksonville, Fla.

A special car was required to move one of the Gaumont Mutual stock companies from Jacksonville, Fla., to St. Augustine. In the quaint old Spanish city an ideal location was found for East Indian street scenes required in "The Haunted Manor." To secure the much coveted atmosphere Director Edwin Middleton used several hundred extra people. These were recruited in St. Augustine. Camels were se-

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 1.

UNIVERSAL Director Otis Turner is engaged in filming a two-reel subject which portrays immigrant life in America. Lois Wilson is the foreign born girl who comes to America, arriving on the day her former sweetheart, who has sent for her, is tricked into wedding the daughter of his employer.

Harry Carter takes the part of the immigrant, Bertram Grassby the employer, and Maude George is the feminine heavy. The story and scenario was written by Mr. Turner and F. McGrew Willis.

"The Height of Her Ambition" is a one-reel subject showing how a stage-struck wife was quickly cured of the desire to scintillate in the theatrical firmament. Myrtle Gonzalez appears in the featured part of this subject which was written and is being produced by Lynn Reynolds, and the other characters are taken by Fred Church and Jack Curtis.

The 101 Bison company is producing "The Rescue," a decided melodrama in which Marie Walcamp is dragged by a horse she has been riding, and is rescued by an engineer, who jumps from the engine's cab to the horse and stops it.

This is but one of the several punches of this subject, in which two brothers are rivals for the hand of the same girl. Lee Hill and L. C. Shumway play the parts of the brothers, and others in the subject are E. N. Wallock and Gypsy Sontoris. The direction is by Henry McRae.

"Cage Man" by Jaccard

How a convict is brought to realize the uselessness of his attempt to secure revenge is shown in the two-reel photoplay being made by Director Jacques Jaccard entitled, "The Cage Man." G. Raymond Nye is featured in this as the convict, Roberta Wilson is his wife, and Hayward Mack appears in the role of the doctor, a former rival of the convict, and later the good samaritan.

Roy Clements, who has been directing the Universal Joker comedy company during the absence of Allen Curtis, has completed "A Perfect Match," a one-reel subject built about the triangle wherein a shrewd German employs a fortune teller to aid him in winning the girl's hand against odds.

Director Curtis has resumed his position with the company, and is now filming "A Wife for a Ransom," in which the undesirable sweetheart of the wealthy farmer's daughter forces father to forget his objections and permit him to have the daughter in marriage. William Franey, Lillian Peacock, Milburn Moranty and Gale Henry appear in these two subjects.

Harvey Gates has written "The Emissary," in two reels, which is being produced by the Universal company under the direction of Cleo Madison, who also plays the leading feminine part. Opposite her is Edwin Hearne. William Mong appears in the role of the husband who permits a vampire, taken by Marguerite Whistler, to win his affections, and then induces him to "railroad" his wife to an insane asylum.

A physician learns the woman is not insane and aids her to liberty. She is successful in winning back her husband, which so angers the vampire that she kills the husband. Following this a love affair develops between the physician and the widow.

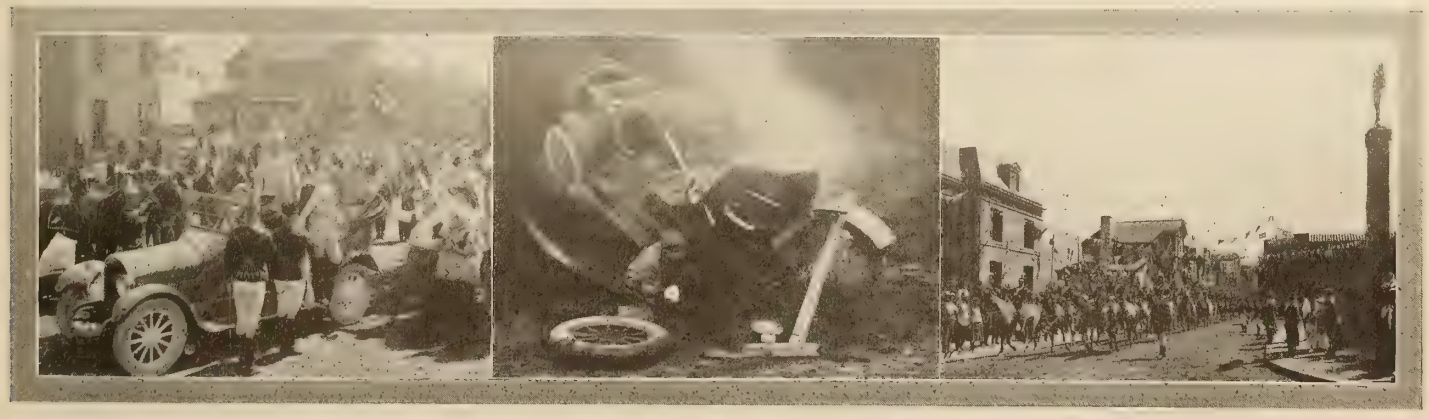
Two Men Sent to Border by "U"

General Manager H. O. Davis has assigned two additional people to the work of securing up-to-the-minute views of the American Mexican invasion, in the persons of Beverly Griffith, who will act as manager, and Gilbert Warrenton, the cameraman. The two left Universal City last week, and will tour to the location of the American troops by auto.

Frank V. Strauss, publisher of a large number of theatre programs in New York, and his family were guests at Universal City during the past week and spent two complete days there.

An unusual fight scene between strikers and police was staged by Director Jay Hunt of "U" City, at the oil fields near Los Angeles last week for the five-reel subject, "The Wheels of Power." In this, all police who appeared are members of the Los Angeles department.

Players, directors and all concerned with the production of the next Douglas Fairbanks-Fine Arts subject, promise a real novelty in this. The story deals with the futurists' theories, and the costumes will be of similar character.



The subject is known under the working title of "The Quest of The Only Girl." Douglas Fairbanks as the hero, goes from a position in society into the underworld, finds the girl and returns with her to society. A big scene in this is the fight between Fairbanks and W. E. Lowry, which required fully an hour of fighting to film.

Bessie Love has the featured feminine part, and others in the cast are Joseph E. Singleton, A. D. Sears, and Alma Rueben, late of the Vitagraph company.

Fairbanks' Song Makes London Hit

Douglas Fairbanks of the Fine Arts Company, has just been advised by Raymond Hitchcock that the song he wrote for Hitchcock entitled "I'm So Gosh-Darn Tough," is making a big hit in London, and arrangements have been completed for its introduction in this country in the next Shubert-Garden attraction. The song is one of the West, and was written by Fairbanks while he was on the Mojave Desert making scenes for "The Good Bad Man."

Wilfred Lucas, Fine Arts star, is devoting his mornings and evenings on a fruit ranch purchased in the vicinity of Glendale, California. This contains great orange and grape-fruit orchards, and the actor is now having a beautiful home built there, superintending this when he is not playing in scenes for the Fine Arts version of "Macbeth," in which he appears in the part of Macduff.

Raymond Wells of the Fine Arts stock company has been selected as producing director by the Los Angeles Business Men's Association, which will stage "Julius Caesar," in a natural out-of-door amphitheatre in the foothills at an early date.

A number of well known photoplayers will take part in this, including DeWolf Hopper, Tyrone Power, Douglas Fairbanks, William Farnum, Theodore Roberts, Lillian Gish, and Constance Collier.

The coming Fine Arts subject now being filmed by Director Paul Powell and starring Dorothy Gish, will show this Fine Arts player in a number of scenes taken at her private gymnasium at her home. The director decided it would be more satisfactory to make the scenes need in this gymnasium, as Miss Gish would be thoroughly familiar with the equipment used.

The story for this play is a preachment against the efforts of inefficient societies to bring about reforms which are frequently found to be more injurious than the evil itself. The scenario is by Bernard McConville, a former San Francisco newspaper man, who built the plot about reforms attempted in the Golden Gate underworld district.

Mestayer Contemplates Change

Harry Mestayer, who has been starred in Selig productions, made during the past year, will be at liberty at the expiration of his present contract on May 1, and is now considering several offers made him by some of the larger producing organizations.

Mr. Mestayer will be remembered as the star in several Selig V-L-S-E releases, including, "The Millionaire Baby," "The House of a Thousand Candles," "I'm Glad I Raised My Boy to Be a Soldier," "The Buried Treasure of Cobra," and has several releases for their near future.

Mr. Mestayer was on the legitimate stage the greater part of his career, and his work in pictures has given him an equally desirable position in filmdom as he acquired behind the footlights.

The work of filming the three-reel subject entitled "The Test of Chivalry," scenario for which was prepared by Emma Bell, was taken up by Director William Robert Daly at the Selig studio. The featured part is that taken by Fritzi Brunette, the role being that of the wife of a miner who is badly mistreated by her brutal husband.

Following his death and her assured happiness, she makes a sacrifice in order that the former sweetheart of the man she learns to love may become his bride. Practically every member of the cast has a good part in this. Edward J. Peil plays the most important part opposite Fritzi Brunette, and the other members are Vivian Reed, J. A. Bradbury, William Scott and Frank Clark.

The Selig animal show, which consists of five acts and is now one of the leading attractions at the San Diego Exposition, where it is contracted to remain for sixteen weeks, opened with very excellent business, and proved to be one of the biggest attractions for the California Exposition.

More than forty thousand people visited the grounds on the reopening day of the exposition, and the Selig entertainment played to big business. Superintendent John Robinson of the Selig zoo, is very much pleased with the outcome.

Swickard Takes Staff to Horsley

The producing staff of the Horsley studios is to be increased by two additional companies, one of which began production last week. Charles Swickard, late director for Thomas H. Ince, has been engaged to have charge of productions made by this organization, which will specialize in two-reel dramas, featuring Marguerite Gibson, with Francis McDonald in the male lead.

Mr. Swickard brought his producing staff with him from the NYMP studio, these including William Nobles, cameraman, and Alvin Neitz as assistant director.

Another producer is to be engaged within the next few weeks and another producing organization will be perfected.

The Cub comedy company of the Horsley studios is filming a one-reel subject entitled "The Conquering Hero," which features George Ovey as a "dashing flirt."

A most spectacular scene was photographed near Silver Lake last week for "The Conscience of John David," a coming Horsley-Mutual Masterpicture. The horses on which Crane Wilbur and Louis Durham were riding, became uncontrollable, and in a scene in which the two players were to ride past each other, the horses dashed together.

Wilbur escaped without injury, while Durham was thrown from the horse and the flesh from one side of his face was badly lacerated, making it impossible for him to put on make-up for some time.

The Horsley studio is soon to have a baseball team. Louis Durham, former pitcher for the Brooklyn and New York Nationals, will occupy the box, and other bush league players now in the producing staff will have other positions.

"Play Ball!"

B. H. VonKlein, business manager of the studio, formerly coach at Washington and Jefferson colleges, is whipping the team into shape, and will soon issue a challenge to other studio organizations for games.

Players of the Biograph, Universal and Fine Arts studios are planning on organizing a baseball team in the very near future.

"Fit for the Burning" is the title of a subject to be made in two or three reels now being filmed under the direction of J. Farrell Macdonald at the Biograph. The cast includes Vera Sisson, Charles Mailes, Gretchen Hartman, and Charles Pearle. The subject is of a semi-underworld character, wherein one woman makes a sacrifice in order that her sister may retain her place in society.

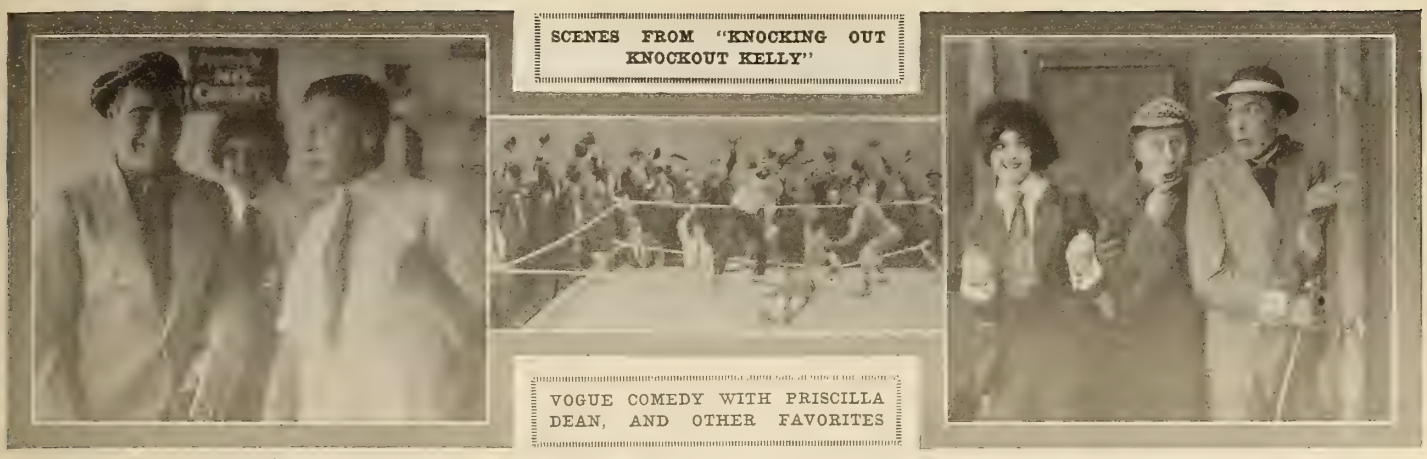
R. H. Hammer, vice-president of the Biograph company, has arrived in Los Angeles on his annual visit to the producing plant here. He was accompanied to the West Coast by W. L. Gray, superintendent of the Biograph laboratories, who has been in the East.



Mr. Hammer will remain at the West Coast for several weeks, and it is expected that he will shortly make an announcement with regard to the intention of the company to continue production on the Coast, or whether the staff will be sent back to the New York studios.

Last "Girl and Game" Episode Finished

The last episode of "The Girl and the Game" Mutual serial filmed by Director J. P. McGowan for the Signal Film Corporation has been completed.

The last scenes to be made were that of a fast passenger train crashing into a taxicab. The scenes were very satisfactorily made, and a very realistic crash was secured without the injury of anyone.

Preparations for the filming of the ten-reel subject, "Whispering Smith," from the story of the same name by James Spearman will be made as speedily as possible, and this will be completed within the next two months.

Director McGowan has not picked the cast for this subject, but it is understood that practically all who took part in the "Girl and the Game" serial will appear in this.

Murdock MacQuarrie has finished the filming of "Nancy's Birthright," which features Edith Sterling, Norbert Myles, Millard Wilson and the director, and the subject has been shipped East.

Mr. MacQuarrie severs his connection with the Signal with the completion of this subject. He has not made any statement regarding his future plans.

Thomas G. Lingham has been engaged by Producer J. P. McGowan to appear in one of the principal parts of the forthcoming Signal subject, "Whispering Smith."

Mr. Lingham has been with the Glendale Kalem company for the past two years, and is a former legitimate stage actor. Another recent addition to the McGowan producing staff is Paul C. Hurst, also from the Kalem staff.

The cast announced for "Whispering Smith" includes J. P. McGowan in the name part, Helen Holmes in the role of Marion, the heroine, and the supporting cast will include Leo Maloney, Sam Apfel, William Brunton, N. Z. Woods, G. H. Wisschusen and Messrs. Lingham and Hurst.

"Mebbe" a White Elephant, Too

The Signal Film Corporation is to have a zoo, an involuntary beginning having been thrust upon the producing company this week when Helen Holmes signed an express receipt for a mysterious crate from New Orleans. It was found to contain an opposum.

Later members of the staff contributed three additional pets to the zoo, a bull pup, a collie, and a spitz. The staff is now looking for parties having a white elephant.

Stage space at Universal City has again been found insufficient for the demands of the twenty-six directors, and an additional exterior stage 75 x 300 feet is being constructed. This will occupy the space between the first exterior stage built in the front half of "U" City and the row of dressing rooms, thus increasing the size of this stage from 100 x 300 feet to a width of one hundred and seventy-five feet.

This will give the studio six stages of the following sizes: 175 x 300 feet, 100 x 200 feet, 90 x 200 feet, two 100 x 300 feet, and the other 75 x 200 feet, or a total of approximately one hundred and fifty thousand square feet.

Director Frank Lloyd of the Pallas-Morosco studios is working in connection with the scenario department in preparing his next story. Mr. Lloyd recently filmed "David Garrick, adapted from the play by the same name by Thomas Robertson, which is to be the early May release from this studio.

The cast for this has just been announced, and includes Dustin Farnum as Garrick, Winifred Kingston as Ada Ingot, Herbert Standing as Simon Ingot, Frank Bonn as Squire Chivy, Olive White as the aunt, Mary Mersch as Fannie Lacy, and Lillian Yeamans Titus as Arminta.

This will be the screen debut of Miss Mersch, who has had considerable experience on the legitimate stage. Last season she was with May Robson, and was the original athletic girl of "The College Widow."

Edna Goodrich, who has been engaged by the Morosco-Pallas companies, has arrived at the studio, and will be starred in the next picture to be produced. This will be taken up during the coming week.

Napoleon a Home Breaker

Napoleon, the E. & R. Jungle Film Company's chimpanzee-comedian, was featured last week in "The Home Breaker," he playing the name part. It is a story of a maiden aunt with wealth who bequeaths a great amount of her earthly possessions to her pet, a chimpanzee named Sally, the inheritance being of the nature of an endowment that the party named have an income.

A nephew wishing to secure the money borrows another chimpanzee from an organ grinder, and getting the two together, causes the breaking up of the maiden woman's home and, of course, changing the channel for the inheritance.

This picture has been made by Director J. J. Franz, with Lillian Brown Leighton as the aunt, Ralph McComas the nephew, and Lillian Hamilton the wife.

Arthur Powellson, cameraman for the E. & R. Jungle Film Company, who has the distinction of being the only photographer who has made a picture in the Mormon Temple at Salt Lake City, has received a flattering offer from this church to make a series of motion pictures.

Mr. Powellson, however, has declined the offer, and will remain with his present employers.

Director Rube Miller, of the Vogue Films staff, is laid up in the hospital as the result of an injury received recently when he stepped on a nail while directing a scene at the beach. Blood poisoning has developed, and several operations have already been made.

"The Mix-Up at Rudolph's" is the title given the picture now being made by Director Jack Dillon at the Vogue studios. This deals with the situations arising in a ladies' tailoring establishment which causes many complications that will round out good laugh situations.

This company has just finished filming the beach picture, "Bungling Bill and King Neptune," which has some very remarkable water scenes, and introduces a new feature on the screen which has been termed deep sea dancing, performed by ten beach beauties who appear as Neptune's daughters.

"Bungling Bill" is the part taken by Paddy Maguire, and the other members of the company are Jack Gaines, Arthur Moon, Rena Rogers and E. J. Lowry.

Climax Studio Released for Mutual

New records for studio construction have been made at the plant formerly used by the Climax company, which has been leased by Manager H. P. Caulfield for the Mutual-Chaplin company.

In one week numerous improvements have been made here, and the former stage enlarged to 100 x 150 feet. With the completion of the stage it is possible for the producing company to begin work. Mr. Chaplin and Vincent Bryan have prepared the first scenario, and the direction will be in charge of Chaplin, assisted by Leo White.

Two cameramen have been engaged—Billy Foster, formerly head of the photographic department at Universal City, and Rollo Totherol, who recently came to the West Coast.

The Rolin Film Company has christened the new stage at the new producing plant at 5819 Santa Monica Boulevard

AT THE HORSLEY STUDIOS: STAGE AND VISITORS' GALLERY—APPROACH TO MAIN BUILDING—NEW ANIMAL ARENA

in the production of another episode of the "Lonesome Luke" series which features Harold Lloyd.

The plant consists of office, dressing rooms, property room and scene docks, and a stage 100 x 150 feet. The new producing plant is located on the lot immediately adjoining that occupied by the Pacific Film laboratories where the Rolin laboratory work is taken care of.

"Love and Brass Buttons" is the title of a Christie-Nestor comedy just being completed by Director Horace Davey, which deals with the love affair of the Irish. Harry Rattenberry appears in the part of Patrick O'Tolle, a patrolman, and Gus Alexander doing the flirtatious role of Bridget Mahoney, Pat's sweetheart.

The patrolman becomes the hero of the hour when he is called to the home by the wife of the chief of the police when there is a burglar alarm. He finds his son there, hid in the closet by the chief's daughter, the chief having objected to the young man's attentions.

The patrolman proved equal to the occasion by convincing all there were five men he had to lick, and they proved too much for him, and so his son got away. Others in this are Billie Rhodes, Neil and Ed. Burns, and Stella Adams.

Triangle Points Sharpened Up

Director Al. Christie is filming "The Wooing of Aunt Jamima" with Stella Adams in the name part. This story is laid around the old triangle, but the principal reason for the wooing of the pair of suitors is the big inheritance that has fallen to the aunt. Ed. Burns, who has been with the Christie company for some time, has been given a very excellent part in this, and appears as the uncle, one of the suitors.

The Aztec period, Wm. S. Hart's Triangle Kay-Bee feature, has been shipped to New York, and will be one of the early releases on the Triangle. This subject required almost two months for filming, and cost in the neighborhood of fifty thousand dollars.

Much of the expenditure was for the very remarkable settings made for sixteenth century scenes in the land of the Aztec. The cast for this includes Dorothy Dalton and Enid Markey, and the story was by Monty M. Katterjohn, who has contributed a scenario which Mr. Hart is now working with.

The current Hart production is laid in the Kentucky mountains, and deals with a feud which extended over a long period. One of the big thrills for this subject was a very dangerous leap made by a rider and horse across a twenty-foot chasm in the mountains near Inceville.

Mr. Hart declares this to be one of the most dangerous feats he has ever undertaken for motion pictures. The scene was made near Santa Monica, and at a time when scores of people were passing on the Coast road which leads past the Inceville studios.

The making of the scene caused a blockade in the narrow thoroughfare, and fully three hundred people witnessed the performance of the thriller.

Africa and New York Touch Elbows

Director Walter Edwards has taken up the filming of a story having scenes in the African jungle and New York City. This is from the pen of Monty M. Katterjohn, and has as its star William H. Thompson, who has just finished the last scene in a sea picture which will serve as a Kay-Bee contribution to the Triangle program.

Five hundred extras were at war last week in the mountains at Inceville when Director Reginald Bark made battle scenes for the next Kay-Bee subject in which H. B. Warner will be featured. This gives Warner his first actual experience in film battles.

Raymond B. West was at sea last week literally, where he was directing scenes for a subject starring Bessie Barriscale. A palatial yacht was secured for these scenes, and the company is enjoying the diversion. William Desmond is appearing in the male lead in this subject, which is from a scenario by C. Gardner Sullivan.

William Collier has definitely decided to take out additional insurance or get out of pictures. Last week he maintained it was a relief to get away from the Keystone studio, but this week, in a burlesque early Western period subject, he was nearly smothered.

His part was that of lying under a number of mattresses and blankets, on top of which a score of Indians rested. The native Americans piled on before the comedian had time to protrude his head, and in the noise and hub-hub his cries for air were not heard.

The cafe at the Culver City Ince studio was opened to the members of the producing staff last week by Business Manager E. H. Allen. The new dining room occupies a space one hundred feet square, and has sufficient accommodations to seat four hundred people.

The Keystone comedy which required snow scenes and was made at Truckee has been completed and titled "The Snow Cure." The star of this is Ford Sterling, who for the first time in more than three years appears in a role minus the German chin piece.

He plays the part of Dr. Koulem, who conducts a sanitarium and treats patients with imaginary ailments. His cure is to get them all in his mineral water plunge, and then liberating a hungry bear among them.

Safe to say that all discover they are very active. A most marvelous bathing suit parade is shown in this picture, the patients taking the lead through the great drifts in the mountain country.

A decided Western comedy, introducing Chester Conklin as a very bad gunman, has been titled "Bucking Society." A scheming lawyer, Jack Henderson, and Dora Rogers, a vampire, learn that Shorty Hamilton, the juvenile of the cast, will inherit a great sum of money if he marries by a certain time.

The two plan a fifty-fifty proposition and go to the Western town, but here the bad man proves to be a good one and drives the crooks out; also helps to bring about the marriage of Shorty and his sweetheart, played by Luella Maxim. There is about a half reel of dare-devil riding in this picture.

"Plant" Oil for "Salad" Youth

Fred Mace again appears as the station agent in Keystone's "An Oily Scoundrel." He inherits a quantity of money, and is sold a piece of land by crooks who have "planted" oil. While the villagers are giving him the merry ha! ha! he angrily throws down a spade which cracks a rock, and a wonderful gusher starts gushing.

In the excitement the agent is notified that the railroad auditor is due that evening to go over his books, and he rushes off to the bank to replace the money he has taken from the cash drawer to pay for the land.

The crooks learn of this, and from an aeroplane and automobile dash bombs at a locomotive Mace is using to get back to the station. His daughter has been tied to the tracks by the crooks, and the juvenile turns the switch, and the locomotive crashes through a building behind which the crooks are in hiding. Charley Arling is the leader of the crooks, and Earl Rodney the juvenile.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

MRS. AGNES EGAN COBB postcards from Columbus that things are going swimmingly on her western trip. "This is going some," she writes. "Started out March 13, made six cities in ten days and did good business in each—Phillie, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Cincinnati and Columbus. All alone, too."

Lieutenant Victor De Linsky, the Russian actor, who has just finished the juvenile heavy lead, opposite Ethel Barrymore in "The Kiss of Hate," for Metro, has commenced work on a new picture for the World, at the Paragon studios. He is being directed by John Ince.

Lo, the followers of Arthur James are legion. W. A. Bach, of the publicity department of the Universal Film Company, of Toronto, sends us this.

Our only criticism is that it has required 271 words to join the titles of the Universal releases.

If someone will send us one of similar length which has required only twenty-five such conjunctions, we will print it.

Except for such as one we are finished with these offerings:

"The Sons of Satan" were congregated in the "Garden of Lies," intent upon a "Frame Up." As they sat in the semi-darkness of the "Autumn" night, "Under Southern Skies," the "Sphinx" arose to address them, but a slight noise outside the garden wall attracted their attention and held them still.

However, upon investigation, it was found to be "Just Jim," "The College Orphan," who had made "Love's Pilgrimage to America," but in "Colorado" had been stricken blind.

At this point, "The Earl of Pawtucket," familiarly known as "A Little Brother of the Rich," reminded them of the "Jewel" they so coveted.

After much discussion it was decided to let "The Nature Man" take the "Long Chance" to secure the gem, aided of course by "The Man Inside."

With this rendering of the "Lords of High Decision," they repaired to the "Pool of Flame," where the "Supreme Test" of their ability and ingenuity would take place.

From the hidden waters of the pool, the chosen man armed himself with "Drugged Waters," and they passed on up the "Primrose Path."

In the big house, adjoining, in which the attempt was to be made, there was great "Scandal."

It seems that "Judy Forgot" "Mrs. Plums Pudding," and that the irate mistress had made the "Path of Happiness" seem far away to that "Knight of the Range," the chef.

Taking advantage of the commotion and anxious to secure the stone before the arrival of "Father and the Boys," "The Man of Shame," as he was aliased, slipped through the window, which happened to be in the nursery; but lying in the crib before him was a baby that reminded him of his own "Fatherhood" so forcibly that he bowed his head, and kneeling, cried to heaven, "'Judge Not—Judge Not' this 'Soul Enslaved,'" and forthwith abandoning his quest for the gem, sprang through the window, crying to his companions, "Fly, fly," 'The Campbells Are Coming,'" and disappeared in the dark.

The next morning, however, he might have been seen at the shop of "My Old Dutch," a fence for stolen goods, pawning "Landon's Legacy," a solid gold eagle, which he had taken from the mantelpiece in his flight.

was obtained by us at great expense, merely to set ourselves right. People will be doubting that there is a Clara Kimball Young next.

Ilean Hume, of Metro, held up the camera for thirty-five minutes while playing in "The Kiss of Hate" last week. Her only excuse was that she had stepped out to get married, but Director Nigh was unable to get her to mention names.

Latest of those to swing hard on the censorship idea is Oscar Apfel, Fox director, now at work out on the Coast. In one of the Hearst western papers, last week, he opened a broadside on the Little Guardians of Morals, declaring that parents who are so wrought up over the danger to their children's morals will find a more fruitful field at home, where seeing that their daughters are not endangered by the street corner Romeos should provide them plenty of employment.

Virginia Pearson, the popular and successful young cream-bather of the Fox studios, has taken off her complexion mask long enough to write a book for young girls, to be called "The Book of Knowledge of the Movies."

It is for private circulation and copies will be issued only to those who write in and ask for them. Miss Pearson is known as the "Modern Cleopatra."

McLEOD A RECENT VISITOR AT FOX EXCHANGE, KANSAS CITY

A recent visitor to the office of the Fox company in Kansas City was H. S. McLeod, traveling auditor.

Mr. McLeod, who stopped there on his way to New York City from Dallas, commented on the satisfactory business conditions of the present time.

WE'RE GOING TO TRY TO LOOK MODEST WHILE YOU READ THIS TRIBUTE

A tribute to MOTION PICTURE NEWS is paid by George L. Cox, well known director, who with ten players, was in New Orleans recently taking scenes which will appear shortly in "Uncle Sam's Babies," the philanthropic film being produced under the auspices of well known Chicago women.

"MOTION PICTURE NEWS is one of the few trade papers which I notice is flattened down on the desks of film men," observed Mr. Cox, "and this is a sure indication that the paper is read and not cast aside unopened, as is the case with so many class journals.

"To my mind, your paper is departmentized just enough. Perhaps a little more would be too much. Film men nowadays don't want to wade through a lot of stuff that is not intended for them, but which is prepared especially for men outside of the exhibition and exchange end of the business.

"These observations, in short, are the result of a trip, which has taken me over the entire country. I am convinced that exhibitors swear by MOTION PICTURE NEWS as by no other paper, and also that they have every reason for their preference."

James Cruze Joins Metro for "The Snowbird"

Actor Who Plays in Subject Starring Mabel Taliaferro Is Credited with Nine Years in Screen Drama—In 1915 Made Tour of Leading Picture Theatres in Country

JAMES CRUZE, screen artist and director, has joined the Metro forces and will make his first appearance on the Metro program in "The Snowbird," a five-part play starring Mabel Taliaferro, which is being produced by the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc.

Mr. Cruze was happy to join the Metro family for many reasons, not the least of them being the fact that his charming wife, Marguerite Snow, is one of Metro's most prominent stars.

Mr. Cruze has been in motion pictures for more than nine years, and is perhaps best known for his finished performance as the reporter in "The Million Dollar Mystery," a serial produced by the Thanhouser company.

Miss Snow was also in this serial, and it was while both were engaged by the Thanhouser company that a romance in real life began which resulted in their marriage.

Mr. Cruze has appeared in scores of pictures, including the serial "Zudora," afterwards the "Twenty Million Dollar Mystery." He made his first appearance before the camera in "She" with Thanhouser in 1911.

Among some of the other features in which Mr. Cruze played the lead are "Joseph in the Land of Egypt," "The Legend of Provence" and "Adventures of a Diplomatic Free Lance."

In 1915 he made a notable tour of the leading motion picture theatres in America, and completing the trip on the Pacific Coast, he accepted a position as a director with the Palo Alto company.

Mr. Cruze has had an interesting and unusual career. As a boy he joined an Indian medicine company and toured the entire country. Later he formed a small stock company, producing both modern melodrama and Shakespearean productions. Afterward he appeared in many big stage productions, including "The Heart of Maryland," under the management of David Belasco.

"Gloria's Romance," Kleine, a Society Play

Billie Burke "Motion Picture Novel," Set for Release on May 22, in Twenty Feature Chapters, Is Replica of Daily Life in Circles of the Elite

"GLORIA'S ROMANCE," the title by which the new motion picture novel from the pen of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes, is to be known, is to be released, as already announced, through the George Kleine Exchanges and May 22 has been set as the release date of the initial chapter.

The story of "Gloria's Romance" will unfold a delightful society novel, in which Billie Burke will appear as Gloria Stafford, a wealthy society girl, and during the action of the story the star will be given an opportunity to wear a number of stunning frocks especially designed for her by Henri Bendel and Lucile.

Already the opening installments of the screen novel are completed at the George Kleine studios in New York City, and work is rapidly progressing on the scenario prepared by Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes.

"Gloria's Romance" is to be a society play in which Gloria Stafford, the youthful and vivacious daughter of a millionaire, will win her way straight to the hearts of those who will follow her screen career as no other Hughes heroine has ever been able to do. And surely there is no star better fitted to portray such a role than Miss Burke.

The Kleine serial, which is to be offered in twenty feature chapters, will depend for its success on literary merit, as both Mr. Kleine, the producer, and the authors are determined from the start that the picture must present life as it is—that the situations must be logical.

With Billie Burke in the leading role, an all-star cast headed by Henry Kolker, and with Walter Edwin, Mr. Kleine's chief director, in charge of production, the exhibitors may feel confident that an offering far out of the ordinary is being prepared for their patrons, the Kleine forces believe.

KENTUCKY DRAMA FOR WARWICK FROM FINE ARTS

A drama laid in the hills of Kentucky is being written by Granville Warwick, of the Fine Arts scenario department, especially for Lillian Gish. Alan Dwan will direct the filming of this as soon as the continuity is completed by Roy Summerville.

IMMORTAL "CASEY AT THE BAT," WITH DE WOLF HOPPER, IS FINE ARTS PLAN

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, April 1.

That famous baseball reading, given more than eight thousand times by De Wolf Hopper, according to the comedian's own figures, is to be filmed for the screen, with Mr. Hopper appearing in the part of Casey.

This has been decided by Production Manager Frank E. Woods, of the Fine Arts Studio, and scenario is now being prepared by William E. Wing, who will collaborate with the comedian.

The subject will be made in five reels. Fay Tincher, who has appeared in other Fine Arts subjects as leading woman opposite De Wolf Hopper, may not appear with the comedian in this subject, it being the present intention of the production department to star Miss Tincher in another subject to be made at the same time.

Scenario for this is now being worked out by members of the producing staff, and as it will be some months before the subject is released, no information is given out regarding it.

It is freely predicted at the studio that "Casey" will prove a very excellent subject, as Mr. Hopper has established a national reputation for the reading of this. Since coming to the Coast, more than six months ago, he has not attended a public dinner but what the insistent crowds forced him to give this reading. J. C. JESSEN.

Tax Equalling Each Admission Proposed for Paris

Special to Motion Picture News

Paris, March 20.

MORE trouble may be predicted shortly for the kinema proprietors in France. It is of course a well known fact that all places of amusements in France have to pay eleven per cent. of the gross takings to the so-called Poor Rates Society.

It is easily understood that such a big tax taken off the gross receipts very often affects the existence of an establishment.

They do not ask you, if you are making any profits. An official of the society controls your receipts at every show, and immediately after counting the tickets, he presents you with a receipt representing eleven per cent. of the receipts.

Next to this quite heavy tax comes the "Droits d'Auteurs" (Authors' Rights).

On the day of an opening of a new establishment an official of the society calls to have a look round your theatre, and the next day the manager gets a communication, saying that the Society of Authors has decided to tax your theatre at from 100 to 1,000 francs a month.

No use protesting, they have decided and you have to abide by the decision, or else no music can be played at your theatre. As nearly all the musicians belong to this society, they will not play unless they are authorized by the organization.

A well-known member of Parliament has just submitted a proposition to the House to put on a so-called amusement tax. He proposes the tax to amount to the prices of admission.

It is to be hoped that such a proposal will never be accepted by Parliament, as it would lead to the closing of all theatres and kinemas.

One of the greatest successes achieved by cameramen consists of three films taken in Salonica.

The first one is a review, arranged by three well-known French officers with the army in Salonica, and played by the French soldiers. Some of the scenes are irresistibly funny; some of the "poilus" are dressed as women; one plays a part of a "prima ballerine," which scene is most amusing.

The next film is a Carnival Cavalcade, also arranged by the French soldiers, which takes place outside Salonica. It is impossible to describe this picture—it is comic to the extreme and a big success.

The third one is a huge circus performance, built and enacted by the same soldiers, and is also very good.

These films have proved an enormous draw to the kinemas for the last three weeks.

The great "Cabiria" film has done marvels in Paris. No film has ever achieved such a success, it has been shown three hundred times in succession at the Vaudeville theatre. Next week it will be replaced by "Mexico."

M. Harry, a well-known film renter, has shown for the first time in Paris "The Prisoner of Zenda," the London Film Company.

The film has made a very big hit.

Another film sure to go well everywhere is "Belgium's Independence." It was shown last Saturday and made a very good impression.

We are to have one more excellent film with Madame Regina Badet. It is called "Vendetta."

Mr. Arditti, well known in the trade, has secured the world's rights to a film with Lina Cavalieri in the principal part. The film is called "Epouse dans la Mort."

The great serial film "Mysteres de New York" has proved such a big draw at the French kinemas that Pathé has decided to run another series, I am told, for another six months at least.

"Paillasse," after the well-known opera, has been produced by an Italian firm. The picture was shown last week in Paris.

The film business in Italy is greatly hampered by government restrictions. No films must leave the country without passing the censor. The censor has his seat in Rome, and as the majority of films are produced at Milan and Turin, every film has to go to Rome and be returned to Milan or Turin before it can be dispatched outside the country.

This means a great loss of time and endless trouble to the manufacturers. Many of them prefer not to sell any films abroad under such circumstances.

Most of the films produced in Italy are of a patriotic nature. The very same scenes are often found in different films of different firms.

A most extraordinary judgment has just been rendered by a Rome court of justice.

In 1914 Madame Bertini, the great Italian diva, signed an agreement with the Tiber Film Company, by which she agreed to act exclusively for this firm for a period of two years. A short time after, Madame Bertini was offered a big salary by the Cæsar Film Company, which she accepted.

The former company began proceedings against Madame Bertini and the Cæsar company, claiming 50,000 francs damages.

Last week a judgment was rendered rejecting the claim of the Tiber company and ordering it to pay all costs.

FORTY-YEAR OLD "LEGIT" HOUSE IN AUSTRALIA TURNS TO SCREEN DRAMA

Special to Motion Picture News

Sydney, N. S. W., Feb. 29.

ON Friday evening, February 18, the new Australian Picture theatre was officially opened by Mr. Minahan, M. L. A. The new house, which holds over a thousand people, was crowded out, and hundreds of people were unable to secure admittance.

A fine and varied program was given, including the "Fighting Kid" (in which George Ovey makes his first appearance in this city), "Simple Polly" (Universal) and "The Heart of a Painted Woman" (Metro).

This fine five-reeler was generously applauded, and if the future features put out by Metro keep up to the standard set by this, they should become as popular here as in America and England. The managing director, W. Brown, has secured the first run of the Metros, and the next release is "The Shooting of Dan McGrew."

For the second time this year Sydney has the exeprience of watching the effects of a vigorous advertising campaign in connection with moving pictures. Competition has become so keen that it takes a good picture, strongly advertised, at the present time, to secure the necessary patrons.

The campaign is mainly between J. C. Williamson, Co-operative Exchange, J. D. Williams (Australasian Films), and Waddingtons. The subjects being advertised include "Carmen," "Girl of the Golden West," "Heart of a Painted Woman," and "The Juggernaut." Australasian Films, Ltd., have secured the Triangle plays and have inserted big advertisements in all the daily and weekly newspapers, announcing the fact that they will shortly be releasing these films.

One of the most notable events in the history of motion pictures in Australia occurred on Saturday 19th inst., when the Theatre Royal, the oldest existing playhouse in Sydney, was converted into a permanent picture theatre. The record of the Royal covers forty years and includes a portion of the famous Bernhardt season.

J. C. Williamson's have achieved wonderful success, both in the features, the products of the Fox Film Corporation, and

JUST stop a moment and try to grasp, if you can, the magnitude of those figures. $720,000.00—nearly three-quarters of a million dollars in CASH PAID ADMISSIONS, in eleven weeks' time to see PAVLOWA, The Incomparable. The world's records smashed into smithereens—former facts and figures completely shattered as regards the colossal amount of money paid to see PAVLOWA. And, mind you, this stupendous sum was taken in in two cities in the almost unbelievable short space of 11 weeks. In still another city in FOUR performances OVER $25,000 IN CASH was taken in. In another city over $11,000 was taken in in ONE SINGLE PERFORMANCE. And remember also that PAVLOWA had none of the countless wonders, none of the lavish splendor, to back her up as presented in that magnificent spectacle that defies all description—"The Dumb Girl of Portici," produced by Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley by arrangement with Max Rabinoff.

Imagine if you can—conceive if you have a brilliant imagination what PAVLOWA'S extraordinary drawing power must be—what immense personal magnetism and personal popularity she must possess to draw any such almost unbelievable CASH returns. The Press and Public of Chicago pronounced PAVLOWA in "The Dumb Girl of Portici"—the superimposing achievement and unquestionably greatest accomplishment of the silent drama. To State Rights Buyers, the one extraordinary opportunity of a lifetime is now offered.

UNIVERSAL

Mightiest Program on Earth

TO build your business on a rock you must be assured of such regular weekly service as the Universal Program alone can give. Producers come and go; producers spend millions of stage money in producing the "one, two and three reelers that will revolutionize the industry"; producers go up like a rocket and come down like a stick; producers holler their heads off about their wonderful stars—people who cannot measure up to 500 capable actors and actresses in Universal studios who never see their names in print. When you book from such producers you are on the road to ruin. Protect yourself, your good name and your fortune by playing the one safe program—the MIGHTY UNIVERSAL—which week after week releases more great plays, more novelties, more genuine stars, more capable actors and actresses, under the finest directors, more crowd-getting, money-making, punch photo plays than all other programs combined. If it isn't too late tie up to the Universal Program NOW—if you can't get it NOW—watch your chance and get in on it at the first opportunity. Write your nearest Universal Exchange or the Home Office at the address below.

Mary Fuller in "Thrown to the Lions." Cabaret life drama from the story by Wallace Irwin. Thirteenth Red Feather Production. Directed by Lucius Henderson. Released April 24. Granting that people don't like to be "preached at," it must be admitted that they do like "to be shown." This big and thrilling emotional drama shows the cabaret life along the "gay White Way" and the dangers that confront an ambitious girl in a great city. Metropolitan characters abound and the scenes—the cabaret—the stage—behind the scenes—are not only the essence of realism, but as such they will prove a revelation to those unfamiliar with Broadway, the most famous street in the world. This picture is truly tremendous. Its prologue alone will make it famous. Scenes in ancient Rome, with Christian maidens literally thrown to the lions to make sport for the degenerate Emperor Nero, are depicted with a fidelity that will bring gasps of admiration and thrills of suspense from your patrons. Produced by any other concern this would be considered big enough to be labeled "special feature." Take a little tip from thousands of successful Exhibitors and book this quick.

"The Other Half," with G. Raymond Nye and Roberta Wilson. Two-Reel Gold Seal Emotional Drama. Directed by Jacques Jaccard. Released April 25. The boy's aristocratic papa didn't think the girl was of good enough family for his son. And when you consider that her father was "Blackie" Connors, a notorious dive keeper, you'll admit you might have hesitated yourself. But when "Blackie" stole the old man's rental records and disclosed more vile sources of "tainted money" than "Blackie" himself could show—well, there's the most surprising climax you ever saw.

"Bill's Narrow Escape." Billie Ritchie in Two-Reel L-KO Komedy scream. Released April 26. How're ya goin' ta describe a laff? Huh? How're ya goin' ta even remember a coupla thousand places to laff in a coupla thousand feet of funny fillum? Huh? You can't. But you can book this smashing, screaming comedy, and give your patrons the treat of their young lives. Do it.

"Miss Blossom," with Myrtle Gonzalez, Val Paul and Fred Church. A Romance of Springtime. Two-Reel Laemmle. Directed by Lynn Reynolds. Released April 27. Shad was only "po' white trash," but he was ambitious for an education. Fred's blue blood did not curb his brutal and contemptible nature and the clash of these two strong characters, rivals for Blossom's hand, makes one of the most beautiful as well as one of the strongest romantic dramas ever released on the Universal Program, which means the best in the entire world. Book this for profits and for the pleasure you will give your patrons.

"Why Mrs. Kentworth Lied." Three-Reel Victor De- tective Drama with Matt Moore and Jane Gail. Directed by Matt Moore. Released April 28. Her husband was shot by a burglar. Her gems were missing. She was found standing over the wounded man with a revolver in her hand. She wouldn't admit the shooting, but she was evidently shielding the burglar. The house was full of detectives. Who was the guilty man? Though you are told early in the picture, you can't get the reason why Mrs. Kentworth lied till the big climax comes which will surprise and delight every one who sees it.

"The Torrent of Vengeance," with Lee Hill and Ora Carew. Two-Reel 101-Bison. Directed by Henry Macrae. Released April 29. Bigger, more sensational, more daring and more truly realistic than any moving picture ever shown—is the very least that can be said about this startling, thrilling, gripping picture of a flood that destroyed a town. Every scene is actual and real. You see a town swept away before your very eyes. Men, women and children; horses and cattle, houses and buildings, automobiles, bridges—all are doomed before the mighty torrent. The dramatic situation and story is as intense as the tragic flood scenes and the whole is the most stupendous spectacular picture of its kind ever released. Don't fail to get this—it is a picture in a thousand.

"Through Flames to Love," with Harry Benham and Edna Hunter. Two-Reel Imp Romantic Drama. Released April 30. A married man ain't got no business foolin' around a young girl, but, gosh, Edna's so sweet and lovely ye have to admit the feller's got provocation. However, she was wise to his tricks and when she "spurned him" he tried a dirty trick for revenge. It was a darned good thing Harry came along and saved her, otherwise he wouldn't have won the prettiest screen bride and you would have missed a climax that's as effective as it is unusual.

Activity Is Spring Tonic for World-Equitable

All Four Studios Controlled by the Corporations The Scenes of Busy Picture Making—Fifteen Directors at Work Indoors or on Locations

THE World-Equitable now has almost a score of productions in the making, and fifteen directors actively engaged on one or more productions.

The World-Equitable concerns now controls four studios. The Paragon studio and the Peerless plant at Fort Lee, N. J., are two producing centers of the company; the Equitable studios at Fifty-second street, Manhattan, and Amity street, Flushing, L. I., are the other two plants directly controlled by the World and the Equitable; while the Crystal plant in the Bronx and the Premo plant on Fourteenth street, New York City, produce directly for the dual alliance.

Of the directors now busily engaged, Tourneur, Capellani, Chautard, Ince, Taylor, Durkin, O'Neill, Physioc, Crane, Thornby, Vale, Lederer, August, Knoley and Powell are either at the studios or on locations.

At work with these directors or awaiting immediate call to the lens are twenty-six foremost players.

Among the twenty-six players permanently allied with one of the two producing concerns are:

Gail Kane, Robert Warwick, Alice Brady, Ethel Clayton, Holbrook Blinn, Clara K. Young, Carlyle Blackwell, House Peters, Doris Kenyon, Clara Whipple, Jane Grey, Kitty Gordon, Arthur Ashley, Frances Nelson, Mollie King, Muriel Ostriche, June Elvidge, Doris Sawyer, Johnny Hines, Gerda Holmes, Frank Sheridan, Edna Wallace Hopper, Charles J. Ross and Edwin August.

John Mason, Bruce McRae, Adele Blood, Edwin Stevens, Jane Grey, Julius Steger and other stars of note.

Maurice Tourneur is completing "The Closed Road,' with House Peters and Barbara Tennant in the two principal parts, at the Paragon studios, where John Ince is working with Kitty Gordon on "The Greatest Test."

Miss Gordon spends half her time at the Paragon studio with Ince and then flits to the Peerless studio, where Director Thornby is putting the finishing touches on "Her Maternal Right," in which Kitty Gordon will next be seen.

The final stages of "The Feast of Life" is being done at the Paragon studios with an all World-Paragon cast, including Doris Kenyon, Paul Capellani, Bob Frazier and headed by Clara Kimball Young.

Miss Young spends part of her time at the Peerless studio with Director S. E. V. Taylor, who is producing "Cossette," in which Miss Young will head an all-Equitable cast.

Edwin August is handling the all-star cast of players, including Frank Sheridan, Edna Wallace Hopper and Muriel Ostriche in Equitable's next three star picture, "The Tyranny of Love," at the Equitable Fifty-second street studio, where Director James Durkin recently completed "By Whose Hand?" with Miss Hopper, Mr. Ross and Miss Ostriche.

Barry O'Neill is producing a dramatic romance with Holbrook Blinn, Alma Hanlon and Eleanor Woodruff in the principal parts, and is staging the exteriors at Electric Park, Baltimore. Upon his return he will work at the Paragon studios.

Frances Nelson is working on "The Older Sister," with George Lederer directing, aided by the author, Herbert Hall Winslow, while Frank Crane is completing the interior setting of "The Call of Love" at the Paragon plant with Mollie King in the star role.

Travers Vale returned from Florida this week to the protecting shelter of the Peerless studios, guiding Alice Brady and Arthur Ashley through the intricate scenes in "The Grubstakers," while Gail Kane, whose popularity leaps by gigantic bounds, is busily engaged on "The Other Sister," with Frank Powell directing.

Robert Warwick, recently seen in "The Supreme Sacrifice," is working under the direction of Emile Chautard in "Sudden Riches," in which he will have the support of an all-World cast of stock players.

John Mason begins work this week at the Crystal plant where Triumph Features are made, in another production along the same dramatic lines of "The Reapers" and in which, in all probability, Clara Whipple will co-star as she did in "The Reapers."

Essanay Installs Fire Prevention System

Smoke Eating Squad Is Formed and Thoroughly Drilled to Combat Flames at First Alarm—While Precautions Seem Perfect, Company "Knocks Wood" in Its Steel Building

WITH the opening of its new studio which is now in full running order, Essanay has established a fire prevention system which makes the danger of fire almost negligible. The system extends not only to its new studio, but throughout its two other studios.

The new studio itself is practically fireproof, being built entirely of brick, steel and concrete. The only wood to be found is in the office furniture and the partitions between offices.

In the old building great steel vaults have been built for the storage of anything that is in the slightest degree inflammable.

Steel doors have been constructed between all departments so that even if flames did break out the fire could be isolated and fought in one section without danger of spreading.

A fire squad has been established and thoroughly drilled to answer at the first alarm, in order that action may be taken before it would be possible for a city fire company to begin work.

A system of electric bells in all departments will send the alarm to any part of the vast building at a moment's notice.

The building also is equipped with up-to-date patent fire extinguishers and chemicals which are ready for immediate use. Stand pipes have also been established throughout all departments with hundreds of feet of hose, and capable of throwing a stream of more than one hundred feet.

This is for use of the fire squad in case the chemicals prove insufficient, which under the present system seems unlikely. Essanay is also "knocking wood."

MARIE DRESSLER AND HITCHCOCK SUBJECTS ISSUED AS 2-REELERS

Marie Dressler in "Tillie's Tomato Surprise" and Raymond Hitchcock in "A Wonderful Wager" and "The Ringtailed Rhinoceros" furnish star leaders in short comedy photoplays.

Each of these productions is now issued as two-reel subjects by the Lubin Company.

Forty Year Old "Legit" House in Australia Turns to Screen Drama

in the elaborate character of the surroundings. A small but capable orchestra, under the guiding hand of M. Slappoffski, supplied music for the first picture, "Carmen," embracing nearly the whole of the operatic scores.

The boxes have been elaborately decorated with roses, and an artificial garden on the front of the stage shows illuminated crystal fountains. The big theatre was packed at both the afternon and evening sessions. The film of "Carmen" is a wonderful production and reflects the highest credit on the painstaking care on the part of the director, Raoul Walsh. It is hard to believe that such splendid reproductions of Spanish scenery were really built and photographed in America.

The productions screened at the Royal will be shown in all of the capital cities of the Commonwealth before being released to the smaller exhibitors. "The Plunderer," with William Farnum, is the next attraction at this theatre.

"Julius Cæsar," the Cines Company's six-reeler, which has been reduced to four parts in this country, proved a great draw at the Lyceum this week.

At the Globe theatre last Monday a four-reel travel film, entitled "Across Australia," was the feature. This picture was taken by Francis Birtles, known throughout the country as "The Overlander." The various scenes in the picture showed main incidents of the ill-fated Burke and Wills' exploring expedition which left Melbourne in the year 1860.

Some of the outback scenes are remarkable, showing vast spaces of saltbush plains and sandy deserts. A duststorm scene is one of the effective scenes which serve to make this picture an interesting scenic.

"Sealed Lips" (Equitable) at the Crystal Palace is by far the best version of Gray's novel, "The Silence of Dean Maitland," yet shown here.

"The Bachelor's Romance" is one of the best Paramount comedy dramas seen in this city for some time.

Keystone State Forbids Anti-Censorship Slides

Legal Department of Pennsylvania Makes Declaration Against Use of Words Criticizing Censors—Managers Call Attention of Public to Menace of Censorship

Special to Motion Picture News

Harrisburg, Pa., April 1.

THE Attorney-General's Department of the State of Pennsylvania, which always has thrown the full weight of its influence on the side of the State Board of Motion Picture Censors, as against the motion picture industry, came forth today with the flimsiest sort of an excuse to explain why the censors have put the ban on a slide which attacks censorship and calls on the public to urge Congressmen, State Legislators and others in authority to "demand a free screen."

While admitting that the censors have refused to pass such slides, Deputy Attorney-General Kun declared today with much show of indignation that it was not because the slides constitute an attack on the censorship board, as had been widely declared by the press throughout the state, but that the slides had been rejected by the censors simply because the additional words "Approved by the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc.," were printed in connection with the anti-censorship appeal.

Here is the wording of the slide which the Attorney-General's office admits the censors have barred:

"Political censorship of moving pictures is becoming so serious as to threaten to ruin the whole industry. If you believe in the freedom of the screen, just as you believe in the freedom of the press, won't you write your Congressman, your State Representative and your Mayor and demand a free screen?"

Stories were printed widely in the newspapers of the state calling attention to and in many instances criticizing the action of the censors in refusing to permit such a purely legitimate appeal to the voters to be thrown upon the screens. Statements in the press went so far as to suggest that the censors when they suppressed the slide were prompted by a desire to forestall an unheaval of public sentiment against the work of their board. It was pointed out, however, that under the censorship law of Pennsylvania there not only is absolutely no authority given to the censors to prevent the showing of "advertising slides," but that on the contrary specific permission is given to display such slides without interference. This even Mr. Kun was practically forced to admit, in the opinion of motion picture men, when he beat about for the explanation he advanced today in defense of the suppression of the slide, not on the ground that the censorship board had any right to suppress it because of its subject matter, but solely on the ground that Motion Picture Board of Trade's approval was attached to the bottom.

"The statement that the appeal for public support of the fight on censorship was censored out of existence, is not true," is the way that Deputy Attorney-General Kun put it. "In connection with the notice the film-makers attached to the bottom of it the additional words, 'Approved by the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc.,' and whatever that alleged incorporated board is it has no authority to approve anything that goes on a film in this state.

"It is true that the board of censors refused to approve the notice with that line attached, and until the notice is submitted with the line removed it will not be approved. The publication of the story has created a false impression, and it was done to discredit the Board of Censors. The statement that the Board of Censors is to be prosecuted in connection with striking out the objectionable line is too silly to require an answer."

Attorney-General Kun has been assigned by the State to defend the motion picture censors in connection with all litigation directed against them.

"QUALITY OF FAITH" SET FOR RELEASE ON MAY 1

Following Marguerite Courtot in "Feathertop," an April 17 Mutual Masterpicture, Gaumont releases as its next five-reel feature "The Quality of Faith." This will reach the screen May 1, with Alexander Gaden and Gertrude Robinson as co-stars.

They were last seen together in "As a Woman Sows." Prominent in their support are Lucille Taft, Charles W. Travis, John Reinhard, Henry W. Pemberton, Alan Robinson and John Mackin. The production is being directed by Richard Garrick.

The Gaumont company, making this Masterpicture, went to Anniston, Ga., to film the strike scenes in a cotton mill. The exteriors were taken at Jacksonville.

Nearly a thousand extra people were employed in the rioting. These were ridden down by mounted police, giving the exact representation of how a mob is handled by officers and how it fights back.

Film Men on Coast Promise Lower Freight Aid

Problem, Agitating Members of the Industry in West, and Receiving Attention of California Committee of Board of Trade, May Soon Be Solved

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 1.

MANY coast accessory dealers, producing studio managers and others connected with the industry on the West Coast, have promised their aid to the California Committee of the Motion Picture Board of Trade in the matter of securing a readjustment of freight and probably express rates on shipments from east to west coast points.

This matter has been receiving the attention of the California Committee, and in the near future all Eastern manufacturers will be asked to take this matter up with the Transcontinental Freight Bureau for adjustment, railroad officials advising that the matter can be more speedily adjusted if appeal is made by the shippers.

Following the enlargement of the committee from one of five members to one of fifteen, Mabel Condon, Los Angeles correspondent of the Dramatic Mirror, who has served as chairman since the appointment by J. W. Binder, executive secretary, tendered her resignation, and the committee selected officers for the year at the regular meeting held March 23.

J. C. Jessen, News Los Angeles manager, was named chairman and Miss Condon secretary, by unanimous vote of the members of the committee. The other members are: Kenneth O'Hara, New York Motion Picture Corporation; Kenneth McGaffey, Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company; Carlyle Robinson, David Horsley studios; Doris Schroeder, Vitagraph Company; Bennie Ziedman, Fine Arts studio; M. G. Jonas, Universal Film Manufacturing Company; D. Whiting, Rolin Film Company; H. O. Stechhan, Balboa Company; Clarke Irvine, Moving Picture World; William E. Wing, photoplaywright and editor of the Script; Fred Palmer, Keystone Film Company, and Ford I. Beebe, Signal Film Corporation.

Fifteen Stars in April World-Equitables

Talents of Some Developed Through Long Association with Film Plays and Others Were "Weaned from the Speaking Stage"—Kitty Gordon Subject Appears on April 17

FIFTEEN stars, either developed through long association with film plays or weaned from the spoken stage, characterize the releasing units of the World-Equitable program during the forthcoming month.

April 3 Alice Brady and a Frohman cast, headed by Jack Sherrill, will be seen in "Then I'll Come Back to You," while John Mason and Clara Whipple will appear at the same time in "The Reapers."

Robert Warwick and Frances Nelson will appear jointly in "Human Driftwood" as the regular April 10 release, while Equitable will offer Carlyle Blackwell in "The Shadow of Doubt."

April 17 brings Kitty Gordon in her second World Film production, "Her Maternal Right," and Equitable, on the same date, will release its first three-star picture "By Whose Hand?" in which Edna Wallace Hopper will make her camera debut and in which are co-starring Charles J. Ross and Muriel Ostriche.

April 24 Equitable will offer Bruce McRae, the distinguished Broadway star, and Gerda Holmes in Richard Le Gallienne's "The Chain Invisible."

During the same week the World Film Corporation will offer Edwin August as star and director of and in "The Social Highwayman," in which Ormi Hawley will handle the principal feminine role opposite him.

Jane Grey in "The Surrender" will characterize the program of the Equitable concern on May 1, with "The Feast of Life" as the World Film contribution on the same date. "The Feast of Life" was produced by Paragon with Clara Kimball Young, Doris Kenyon and a Paragon cast.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

BUFFALO EXCHANGES PREPARE FOR BALL ON MAY 15, UNDER AUSPICES OF SCREEN CLUB

THE Screen Club of Buffalo was started by a dinner participated in by all the employees of the various exchanges of Buffalo, about four weeks ago. The idea was immediately taken up with great acclaim and weekly meetings were held to whip the organization in line, and now, after five weeks' work, the charter has been closed.

The officers are: Daniel Savage (Paramount manager), president; G. H. Christoffers (Mutual manager), vice-president), and Frank S. Hopkins (Universal manager), secretary and treasurer.

The board of governors are: J. M. Sitterly (Popular), three years; B. J. Brandon (Mutual), three years; C. Taylor (Metro), two years; J. L. Muhlhauser (World), two years.

The club now consists of forty members, and invitations will be sent out to the exhibitors in the city of Buffalo to also become members; also to exhibitors and others in the industry in the immediate vicinity (eighty miles or so) to become non-resident members.

The house and publicity committee and the entertainment committee has been formed and all are giving their efforts towards the first motion picture ball that has ever been held in western New York.

This will be held on the 15th of May, at the Elmwood Music Hall, the largest and most popular hall of the city; and from the enthusiasm shown not only by the committees in charge, but in fact by all the members, this promises to be an artistic and financial success.

The different producing companies will be asked to favor the ball with the appearances of such of their stars as may be reached at that time.

While this club is a purely social organization and primarily belonging to the members of the exchanges, still it will have for its basic purpose the closer co-relation between the exchanges and the exhibitor, a spirit of unselfishness and co-operation.

Since the formation of the club most of the exhibitors have shown great interest in it and are desirous of joining.

There is a strong tendency towards increasing the admittance price of theatres to ten cents every day in the week, and quite a number of exhibitors have said that it is with just this co-operation between the exchange and exhibitor that this can be accomplished.

BERNARD, IMPRESSED WITH "NEWS" REPORT, PLANS EXCHANGE IN NEW ORLEANS

A. C. Bernard, representing the Fidelity Film Company, Inc., of Galveston, Texas, arrived in New Orleans last week and is making preparations for the opening of a Crescent City office which will handle features for Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

Mr. Bernard probably will locate in Baronne street. His company deals exclusively in state rights films.

Mr. Bernard says he went to New Orleans because he was attracted by a story in MOTION PICTURE NEWS depicting the unprecedented activity of theatre building in that territory during the past few months.

GREENE AND ABRAMS GET RIGHTS TO RAVER PICTURES

State rights were recently secured by Walter E. Greene, of the Greene Feature Film Company, of New York, and Mr. Abrams, of the Boston Photoplay Company, on the pictures, "The Other Girl," from the Augustus Thomas play, featuring James J. Corbett; "The Fortunate Youth," from the novel of the same name by Will J. Locke, and "Driftwood," the successful Owen Davis play, featuring Vera Michelena.

Mr. Greene secured these pictures for states of New York and New Jersey in competition with five others of New York's leading exchanges; Exclusive, Moss, Samwick, Pioneer and Variety exchanges, from Harry R. Raver, president of the Raver Film Corporation.

For the past five years Mr. Greene has bought every picture that Mr. Raver has ever released for this territory.

Mr. Abrams, who is an officer in the Paramount Company, purchased the rights of these pictures for his Boston Photoplay Company for the New England states in the face of a keen competition from his territory.

HAMMELL AS HEAD OF GENERAL IN PITTSBURGH

J. A. Hammell, formerly manager of the Fourth avenue office of the General Film Company in Pittsburgh, is now manager of the Pittsburgh branch of that corporation. He succeeds N. I. Ehrlich, who resigned last week.

Thomas S. Bradley is the new manager of the Pathé Exchange in Pittsburgh, B. F. Lyons having resigned some time ago. Mr. Bradley was formerly roadman for Pathé, working out of Kansas City.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN SCREEN CLUB PLANS A SERIES OF ENTERTAINMENTS FOR CELEBRITIES

"PEG O' THE RING," the new Universal serial, has created a great amount of discussion throughout the Denver territory, and letters of inquiry have swamped the Universal exchange there. Manager Goldstein says that W. A. Calkins, the new roadman for Universal, will offer a new stunt in presenting "Peg o' the Ring" to the exhibitors.

Certified checks are being received each day by Anna Solan, cashier of the exchange, from exhibitors who are anxious to be among the first booked for the new serial.

The Rocky Mountain Screen Club of the intermountain territory extended an invitation to Joe Howard, headliner of the Orpheum theatre, that city, for the week of March 19, and Max Fabish, manager of that theatre, to be the honored guests at their luncheon on Friday, March 24.

It will be the policy of the screen club each week hereafter to invite stage celebrities to be present at a luncheon or ball in their honor. The screen club is making great headway in the territory, and the exhibitors and exchangemen from all parts are sending in their names.

Roscoe Moore, manager of the State Right Film Exchange, Denver, booked "Cabiria" at the Tabor Grand, that city, for one week, starting March 19. The Tabor played to capacity during the run of this picture and will play a return date.

"Cabiria" is the first big feature to be handled by the State Right Film Exchange. Moore is negotiating for state rights on several other big features.

The United Film Service, under Manager L. D. Purdy, had a run on the Gene Gauntier Irish pictures—"Come Back to Erin," "A Daughter of Old Ireland" and "For Ireland's Sake."

William T. Binford, manager of the Metro exchange, Denver, reports that the Sidney Drew comedies are very successful in that territory. "Count of Ten" was released at the Strand theatre on Wednesday, March 22.

Wesley Bennett, former head of the poster department of the Universal, has accepted a position to head the poster, inspection and shipping department for the Metro.

METRO IN CANADA TO HOLD BALL UNDER AUSPICES OF TORONTO EXHIBITORS LEAGUE

W. CAMPBELL, manager for Ontario for the Bluebird Film Corporation, has been in Montreal for the last week on business for his company. Mr. Campbell expects to have some news of big bookings to give out for both Montreal and Toronto before many days.

The Metro Film Company, of Canada, has been using large space in the Toronto papers for the last two weeks announcing that the company is about to have a ball. Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne will be the guests of honor, and the whole affair is ostensibly to be under the auspices of the Toronto Motion Picture Protective Association of Exhibitors.

The date for the ball is April the fifth and will be held at Arena Gardens, one of the largest and finest auditoriums in Toronto. Mr. Sawyer would not say whether the other exchanges would be invited to participate actively in the festivities or not.

The Metro company, from its head office in Toronto, has announced that it has completed arrangements with the Motion Picture Protective Association, of that city, to supply the fifteen houses, which are represented in the association with Metro features at a flat rate, on a six months' contract.

It has been learned on god authority that the Metro people plan to divide the exhibitors into groups of five and alternate them, one group having first run this week and the second group having first run next week, and so on.

The whole fifteen houses, it is stated, are paying a flat rate of two hundred and fifty dollars, which comes to something like sixteen dollars per week for three features for each house.

James Orkney has been appointed to the Montreal managership of the Bluebird Film Corporation.

Mr. Orkney is a man of experience, both in the exhibiting end and in general film work.

RONKEL DOUBLES OFFICE SPACE IN CHICAGO FOR BLUEBIRD ORDERS

Bookings of the Bluebird features have increased so rapidly in the Chicago territory that I. Van Ronkel, manager of the Chicago branch, has had to double the office space. The exchange now occupies more than half of the third floor at 109 North Dearborn street.

In addition to these spacious new offices, the Bluebird company maintains one of the largest exhibition rooms in the city, since two hundred people can be accommodated.

Three new roadmen have also been added to the Chicago Bluebird sales force. I. R. Parnass, formerly with World Film; C. H. Miller, formerly of the Central Flm Company, and P. Dumas, recently of the V-L-S-E, have been engaged to push the Bluebird features.

PRIVATE FEATURE FILM, CLEVELAND, MOVES TO 712 COLUMBIA BUILDING

The Private Feature Film Company, of Cleveland, has removed to larger quarters at 712 and 714 Columbia building. The Private Feature Company has taken over the stock of the Apex Feature Service, including the rights to "The Melting Pot" in Ohio and Kentucky, formerly owned by the Apex organization.

In addition to absorbing the Apex and other smaller film organizations, the Private has produced an imitation Charley Chaplin film, a war feature called "The Destruction of the European Nations" and acquired the laboratories of the Cleveland Film Company.

FULLER MADE MANAGER OF WORLD IN ST. LOUIS; LEVY REPORTS LARGE FOX CONTRACTS

GEORGE W. FULLER has been appointed manager of the St. Louis branch of the World Film Corporation, at 3626 Olive street, to take the place of E. W. Dustin, resigned.

Mr. Fuller came from Illinois originally, but had been employed for some time in the New York office of the World.

I. P. Rosenberg, who is in charge of the Kleine-Edison features for St. Louis, attended the recent convention at Chicago to meet George Kleine and a number of the western exchange managers.

Joseph Levy, manager of the Fox exchange, 3632 Olive street, has been out in the territory covered by the St. Louis office for the last few weeks and reports having made several good contracts for Fox features.

At the General Film Exchange, 3610 Olive street, a special office has been established under the care of E. E. Erickson, for the handling of the Kalem serial, "The Social Pirates," in the St. Louis territory, and the bookings already made show very promising business for the serial.

Harry E. Strickland has just returned from a very successful business trip through Illinois, Indiana and Missouri for the General Film Company.

The Universal Exchange, at 2116 Locust street, St. Louis, under the management of Barney Rosenthal, is busy with advance orders for "Peg o' the Ring." "Graft" is making a fine showing all over the district, according to the officials of the exchange. M. P. Rosenburg, who specializes on Bluebirds, has gone to Kansas City for three weeks.

There was much excitement in Film Row on Olive street, on March 25, when it was learned that S. W. Hatch, in charge of the St. Louis branch of the V-L-S-E exchange, had gone and got married.

The bride was Fredericka Haines, of East Liberty, Ohio, and the ceremony was performed in the home of a prominent clergyman of St. Louis.

ST. JOHN-BRENON ACCOMPANIES ROGERS TO OTTAWA

Mr. St. John-Brenon, the manager of the Fox Film Corporation at Montreal, accompanied L. T. Rogers, Mr. Fox's Canadian general manager, on a flying trip to Ottawa last week, where they met Mitchell Granby, the Fox manager at Toronto.

The Ottawa exhibitors were entertained by Mr. Fox's representatives, who it was understood secured some good business while there.

James Orkney, one of the city's youngest exhibitors, has formed connections with the Universal Film Company and is now representing the Bluebird interests in the Province of Quebec.

HARDEN GOES TO NEW ORLEANS FOR FOX

Charles W. Harden has been appointed manager of the southern district for the Fox Film Corporation, and will be in New York shortly in conference, before going to New Orleans to take up his duties.

His territory will include the gulf states. Mr. Harden has since March 15, 1915, been manager of the Kansas City exchange of the Fox company, previously for a year, handling the Mutual exchange at the same place.

For twenty years he had been in the show business—indicating again the good preparation of that business for the film industry. He has been markedly successful in the Kansas City territory. Upon his recommendation—his urging, in fact—E. H. Wachter, since last August in the field under Mr. Harden, is made manager at Kansas City.

Mr. Wachter is in close touch with Mr. Harden's policies and was able to plunge at once into the arduous duties of manager.

"I'd rather be in the field under Charley Harden than holding down the big job," said Mr. Wachter, speaking regretfully of the "chief's" departure.

The exchange men of Kansas City gave a banquet in honor of Mr. Harden at the Baltimore Hotel the evening of March 28.

CRAWFORD, FOX, MEETS ROGERS IN MONTREAL

Carl Crawford, formerly attached to the staff of the Fox Film Corporation at Toronto, paid a recent visit to Montreal to meet L. T. Rogers, Canadian general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, who left last week for St. John, N. B., where he will open an office for the Fox Film Corporation, Limited, to serve the Maritime Provinces.

Mr. Rogers spent a week in Montreal looking up local conditions and generally sizing up the situation. He took Mr. Crawford to St. John, N. B., to look after the Fox interests in that locality.

Speaking of conditions Mr. Rogers stated that Fox features were certainly coming into their own and there was no question that a big demand had been created for the features, a demand which is proven by the fact that the Fox Film Corporation is serving no less than nine theatres on one street alone in Montreal.

While in Montreal, Mr. Rogers was entertained by Arthur Hirsch, of the Tivoli theatre, and J. Rosenthal, one of the directors of the same house.

E. AND R. JUNGLE COMEDIES IN REACH OF ALL EXHIBITORS IN UNITED STATES

E. H. Emmich, located on Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, Cal., has purchased the exclusive rights for the product of the E. and R. Jungle Film Company on the West Coast.

This sale coming close on the heels of the E. and R. contract with the Celebrated Players' exchange, Chicago, seems to prove beyond a doubt the drawing power of these one-reel comedies featuring Napoleon and Sally, the clever chimpanzees.

Little unsold territory now remains except a few of the southern Gulf States and exchanges covering this area are negotiating with the E. and R. heads for the marketing rights there.

It is only a matter of days when this territory will be sold and the comedies will thus be placed within the reach of every exhibitor in the United States.

EDMONDS GOES BACK TO PACIFIC COAST

William O. Edmonds, who went to Kansas City from the Pacific Coast last fall to manage the Kansas City exchange for George Kleine, has returned to the coast.

He left Kansas City March 29 for San Francisco, where he will have charge of the entire coast business, as district manager, for Mr. Kleine.

Mr. Edmonds has done some big things in the Kansas City territory, and is recognized as one of the bigger and broader men of the business.

His successor at Kansas City, Arthur C. Melvin, had his coat off and was deep on the job March 28. Mr. Melvin has been in Philadelphia for the entire three years of his film experience. He was recently with Kleine, handling a large territory, and was previously with the World. He was fifteen years in the show business with Klaw and Erlanger and others.

PEERLESS, FRISCO, HANDLES E. AND R. JUNGLE SUBJECTS

The recently formed organization, the Peerless Film Company, with headquarters at 100 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, is now ready for business with a large list of subjects at its command. In addition to handling the E. and R. Jungle films and "The Mutt and Jeff" comedies it controls a number of Griffith photoplay productions.

SHERMAN VISITS LOS ANGELES

Harry A. Sherman, Minneapolis exchangeman who handled "The Birth of a Nation" and other subjects through the Central West, spent several days of last week in Los Angeles, the purpose of his visit being to learn of future subjects now being prepared.

MAGNAR BUYS RIGHTS TO "DUMB GIRL OF PORTICI"

The Nat A. Magnar Company has purchased California, Arizona and Nevada rights for "The Dumb Girl of Portici" from the Universal Film Company, and will open at San Francisco. The southern part of the state will be handled by H. E. White, manager of the Los Angeles Magnar branch.

Manager W. E. Knotts and the staff of the Los Angeles World Film Exchange, who have made a very earnest attempt to win the five-hundred-dollar prize offered to the exchange that would show the greatest increase in business between February 14 and April 1, believe they have a good opportunity for winning this prize.

They have been near the top during most of the contest, and two or three weeks headed the list.

The All Star Feature Distributors Los Angeles Exchange, which has been handling the George Kleine productions, has been receiving numerous inquiries regarding the Kleine-Tribune serial starring Billie Burke.

GOLDSTEIN ORDERS MORE PRINTS OF "UNWRITTEN LAW"

The Exclusive Features, Inc., 71 West Twenty-third street, New York, reports that it is rushed with orders for bookings on "The Unwritten Law."

Joseph M. Goldstein, president of the company, was compelled to add additional prints to those that are now in use in Greater New York, and asks the exhibitors to bide with him as he is doing the best he can under the circumstances.

He promises to fill the dates of all exhibitors, as he receives them in rotation. "First come first served" is his policy.

BRANDON LEAVES SINGLE RAIL LONELINESS FOR DOUBLE TRACK HAPPINESS

When he travels, it's Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Brandon, for W. C. Brandon, manager of the V-L-S-E exchange in Atlanta, is a benedict.

It only happened a few weeks ago, and Mrs. Brandon was Miss Madge Horne, a native Atlantan.

KLEINE WESTERN REPRESENTATIVES MEET IN CHICAGO MARCH 25-26-27

A CONVENTION of all the Western representatives of the George Kleine organization was held at the Kleine offices, 166 North State street, Chicago, on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, March 25, 26 and 27.

The sessions were presided over by Mr. Kleine, who went to Chicago for the express purpose of explaining to his audience the tremendous expenditures that have been made in the filming of "Gloria's Romance," the new motion picture novel from the pen of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes, in which Billie Burke, the international stage favorite, is being starred by special arrangement with Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr.

All the exchangemen reported that, owing to the rumors that had spread with regard to the lavishness of the forthcoming film, they had already been flooded with applications for bookings on the Billie Burke picture though at the time the various managers left their home offices the release date, May 22, and title of the production were still unknown.

Now that both have been determined upon it is expected that the largest and best theatres the country over will vie with one another in bidding for first run showings.

Ere the exchangemen departed, several of the early chapters of the film were run off for them in the comfortably-appointed Kleine projection room.

MEDDLERS AT WORK AGAIN OVER CENSORSHIP IMPOSITION IN SAN FRANCISCO

THE local censorship problem, which exhibitors were commencing to believe had been settled in San Francisco for all time, following the disposition of "The Birth of a Nation" case a few months ago, has broken out in a worse form than ever and the moving picture industry of San Francisco is now facing a most serious situation.

An entirely new ordinance for the regulation of the exhibition of moving pictures has been drawn up and this has received the endorsement of a number of prominent clubs in which women predominate, as well as ministerial organizations.

Efforts are also being made to secure the approval of labor bodies and it is understood that in the absence of opposing arguments considerable headway has been made.

All of the provisions of the proposed measure have not been made public, but the new ordinance will be presented to the board of supervisors before the close of March.

It is known, however, that one feature will be a board of censorship consisting of nine members, a certain number of whom must be women, and that all films must be approved by them before being shown in any moving picture theater.

Under the present ordinance the board consists of five members and films are inspected largely after they have been booked, hundreds being shown without being seen by members of the board.

Upon learning of the proposed measure a meeting of exhibitors was hastily called to act upon this and other important matters and the San Francisco local of the state league was reorganized.

A second meeting will be held on March 29, when a permanent organization will be perfected and plans made for combatting censorship.

A large delegation of exhibitors and film exchangemen will attend the meeting of the board of supervisors, at which the censorship proposition will be discussed, and will urge that the recently favored plan of doing away with censorship entirely be followed out, instead of more drastic legislation being passed.

FREE MAN FROM SABBATH BREAKING CHARGE AND WANT TO FINE MEN WHO LENT HIM THEATRE

SEVERAL new questions never decided in Indiana courts have been put to Judge Charles A. Burnett, of the Circuit Court in Lafayette, Ind., for adjudication in a case at Lafayette, involving the opening of motion picture theatres there on Sunday.

Misha Rubinoff recently was cleared of the charge of Sabbath desecration in a case which attracted an unusual amount of attention and lasted more than three weeks.

David Maurice, Luke Balfe and Charles Reichard, local theatre men, who gave Rubinoff permission to use their theatres for Sunday motion picture shows, were found guilty of violating the Sunday law in the same case in which Rubinoff was discharged.

Attorneys for the State and the defense argued on March 27 on a motion by the defense to discharge the three defendants on the ground that they could not be found guilty of aiding and abetting Rubinoff so long as he was found not guilty of any offense.

The defense attorneys contend that the Indiana law against Sunday work has only one meaning, and that is to give every workingman one day's rest in seven.

They say that if a man who observes Saturday as his Sabbath is not permitted to work for another man on Sunday he can only work five days in a week instead of six. This, it is asserted, is an unjust discrimination.

The court has taken the matter under advisement.

OAKLAND AND BERKELEY WANT LICENSE FEES REDUCED

A movement is under way at Berkeley, Cal., to secure a reduction in the annual license fee paid by moving picture houses. It is set forth by exhibitors that the present license fee was originally made high to protect a young industry by keeping out traveling moving picture and other shows, but that it is no longer needed for this purpose and is a drag on established houses and interferes with the educational work done by moving picture houses.

At Oakland, Cal., another suburb of San Francisco, a reduction in the license fee was recently secured and it is anticipated that the Berkeley City Council will grant the petition of the exhibitors.

LICENSE ISSUANCE AT DISCRETION OF CIVIL OFFICERS

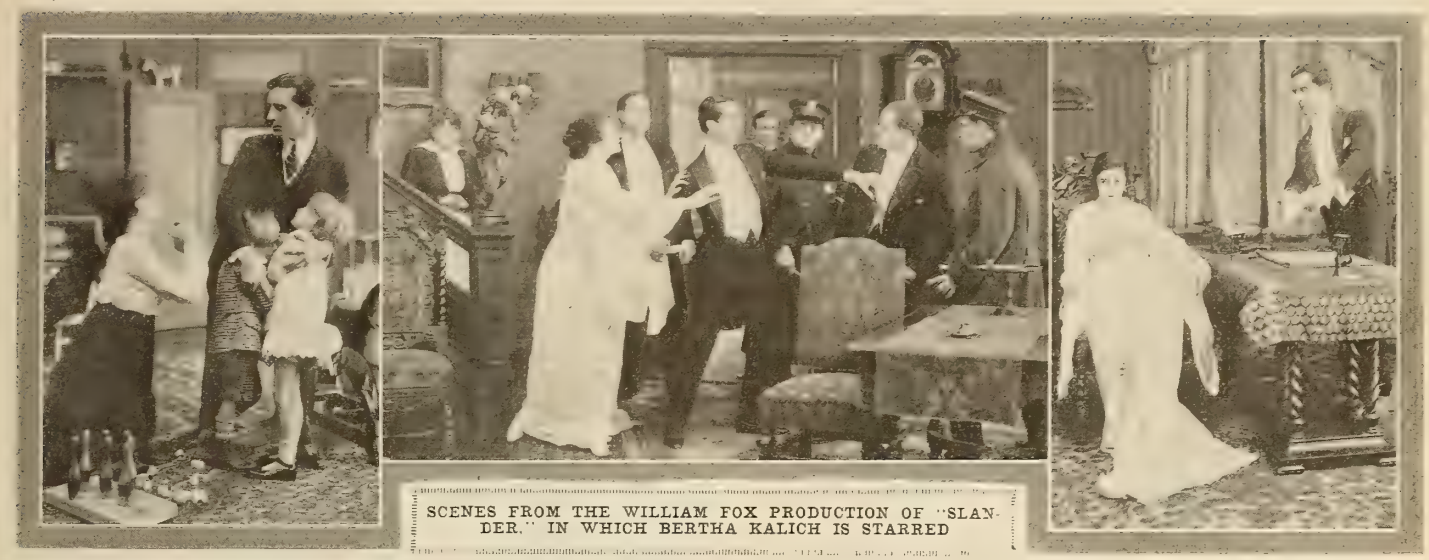
A decision given recently in the Supreme Court of Alberta by Chief Justice Harvey, sets forth that any person desiring to do business under a city license may be refused such license at the discretion of the authorities.

The case which brought about this decision was one instituted by Martin E. Elves against the city of Edmonton, which had refused to grant him a license to conduct a shooting gallery, on the ground that he was not a sufficiently moral citizen to justify the action.

Elves then appealed to the city commissioners, who received reports from the license inspector and the chief of police, and sustained the ruling previously made. Elves, who contended that all the city had power to do was to issue licenses and collect the fees therefor, finally asked the Supreme Court for a mandamus order which would compel the city to issue the license, without regard to whether he was a fit and proper person to conduct the business.

In refusing the mandamus, Chief Justice Harvey ruled that the city charter gives to the city the power to inquire into the qualifications of an applicant, both morally and in a business way, and may withhold the license if their investigations seem to warrant such action.

The decision applies, of course, to exhibitors of moving pictures, as well as those in many other lines of business.



"CAMPBELLS ARE COMING" NOW HAS MONTREAL CENSOR APPROVAL

When the Montreal office of the Universal company sent to the censors the "Campbells Are Coming" for approval last October, the film was condemned, but the posters were approved.

After the approval of Sir Sam Hughes was obtained this last month, the film was passed by the Montreal board of censors, but the posters were condemned. S. B. Taube, of the Universal office, thereupon called on Police Chief Campeau, who cut the Gordian knot by stamping the troublesome paper.

EXHIBITOR IN WACO, TEXAS, WINS RIGHT TO HOLD SUNDAY SHOW

J. A. Lemke, first of the moving picture show proprietors at Waco, Texas, to be tried for keeping open on Sunday, was acquitted in the County Court, March 22. Several cases are still pending against other proprietors.

SCENES FROM THE WILLIAM FOX PRODUCTION OF "SLANDER," IN WHICH BERTHA KALICH IS STARRED

UNITED FILM SERVICE, CHICAGO, OPENS WITH STRING OF EXCHANGES

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chicago, April 1.

The United Film Service Corporation, with its main offices in Chicago, and with ten other offices located in the principal cities between Chicago and the Pacific Coast, is now ready for business.

The officers of the United Film Service include M. A. Levy, president; D. J. Chatkin, vice-president, and M. Feldstein, secretary and treasurer.

Mr. Levy is, in addition, president of the Motor Necessity Company of Chicago and a prominent contractor and builder of this city. Mr. Chatkin and Mr. Feldstein are both well known film men of wide experience. They have secured for their exchanges live wires well versed in the motion picture business.

With the final tying up of these Western exchanges, the United Film Service is ready to handle any film proposition, large or small, providing that it has merit. It is in a position to market the productions of independent manufacturers in the fast-growing territory of the West and Northwest.

The main office in Chicago is located at 17 North Wabash avenue, and is one of the largest and best equipped exchanges in the city.

Sessue Hayakawa a Star in "Alien Souls," Lasky

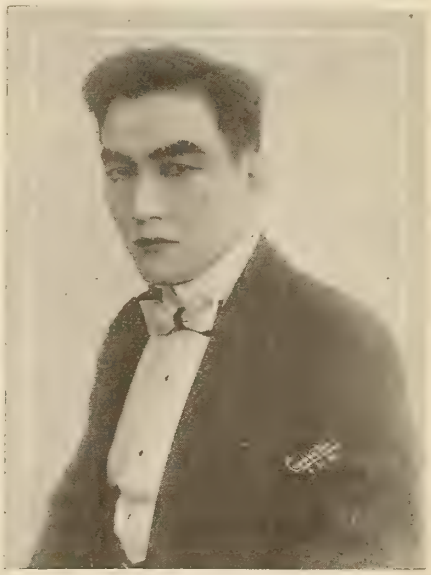
Japanese Actor's Work in "The Cheat," with Fannie Ward, Brought Him Screen Distinction and Induced Company to Raise Him to Stardom

PARTLY in response to the hundreds of requests from exhibitors and photoplay goers all over the United States, the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company announces that it will present as a star early in May the well-known Japanese screen player, Sessue Hayakawa, in a photoplay production entitled "Alien Souls."

Hayakawa's work in "The Cheat," in which he appeared in leading support of Fannie Ward, stamped him immediately as a proficient figure in motion pictures.

Previously he had appeared for the Lasky company in "The Clue" with Blanche Sweet, and in "The Secret Sin" in support of the same popular star.

The new photoplay in which Hayakawa will be starred was written by Hector Turnbull and was prepared for the screen by Margaret Turnbull. Hayakawa's wife, Tsuru Aoki, will have the leading feminine role.



Sessue Hayakawa was born in Tokio, Japan, twenty-seven years ago.

Hayakawa's uncle was a celebrated Japanese actor, Otto Kawakimi, and as the young man was fascinated by the stage, he entered his uncle's company, in which the celebrated Japanese actress, Madam Yacco, was appearing.

Hayakawa appeared in the support of this distinguished artist at the Shintomi Za and the Teikoku Za, two leading theatres in Japan.

When Madame Yacco and her company started on their international tour, young Hayakawa accompanied them to this country. He realized that he needed more education, as he planned to introduce the American drama in Japan.

With this in mind, he studied English drama and literature at the University of Chicago for one year and translated a number of the English classics into Japanese.

SESSUE HAYAKAWA (Lasky)

Returning to Japan, he appeared in the Japanese version of the Ibsen dramas and Shakespeare, making a success as Othello. He returned again to this country and studied and played all along the Pacific Coast at the head of the Japanese organization.

He was selected by Thomas Ince to play the stellar role in "The Typhoon" and "The Wrath of the Gods," and made a phenomenal success.

Madame Kalich in Her First Film Play on April 10

"Slander," a Fox Vehicle Giving Great Emotional Actress Opportunity for Display of Talents, Assumes Role of Persecuted Wife—Photodrama Directed by Davis

MADAME BERTHA KALICH, one of the greatest emotional actresses of the day, is presented by William Fox in what is announced as a most unusual production, "Slander," scheduled for release April 10.

It is Madame Kalich's first photoplay, and one in which she is said to have been given fullest opportunities to display her talents.

The production was under the direction of W. S. Davis, who has shown ability in the presentation of pictures in which heart interest is paramount.

Madame Kalich is herself convinced that in "Slander" she has added to her fame as an actress. She plays the part of a wife persecuted by enemies of her husband.

She loses her children by being divorced and ostracized. Finally, through the discovery of the plots against her, she is reunited to her husband and children.

SOURKES WITH FOX IN TORONTO

Isadore Sourkes, formerly manager of the Midway theatre, and a well-known film man of eastern Canada, has been appointed to the staff of the Fox Film Corporation, Limited, Toronto.

"THEN I'LL COME BACK TO YOU"

(Frohman-World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS feature, produced by the Frohman Amusement Corporation under the direction of George Irving, can be made into a highly pleasing and probably successful release if altered slightly.

The scenario was based on Larry Evans' famous novel and the writer has seen occasion to use the dialogue of the book for leaders in many instances. The resultant fault is a well-known one. The action does not justify such romantically inclined speeches.

If we may be permitted to suggest that they be toned down to a more natural level, "Then I'll Come Back to You" will present a most desirable appearance.

THE FIGHT

Mr. Irving's direction is as usual of a high order. The action of the book takes place in the lumber regions and no more suitable and realistic locations could have been selected as backgrounds for the picture's stirring story.

Lofty mountains, thickly wooded generally, greet the eye in the full outdoor scenes. Those depicting more detailed action show snatches of the lumber harvest in full swing. These interesting bits of realism are not allowed to crowd out the action of the story, yet at the same time they go to convince the beholder that he is seeing a tale enacted in its proper environment.

The picture tells in interesting manner the struggles of Steve O'Mara, engineer on a railroad laid through the forest, against the contriving forces of Archie Wickersham, his rival in business as well as in love. The girl is Barbara Allison, engaged to Archie but loving Steve and Steve wins out in the end.

Steve's road is not an easy one to travel, for besides combating physically with the henchman of Archie he is obliged to work against Barbara's feminine aversion of the sight of brutality, an essential which Steve must employ to gain his ends. Altogether the story is most interesting throughout.

The biggest of the picture's thrills is the prolonged fight between Steve and Barrigan, Archie's hireling. It is one of the best pieces of unskilled pugilistics that we have seen for a long time. It is grim, bloody and carried through to the knockout.

Alice Brady is featured as Barbara, while Jack Sherrill is seen as Steve. Mr. Sherrill is a little too polished for a man whose best years have been spent in the lumber country and at times his acting is too obvious.

Others are Eric Blind, Leo Gordon, George Kline, Marie Edith Wells and Ted Dean, who plays the part of Steve ten years before the main action of the picture transpires.

"THROWN TO THE LIONS"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WE hasten to state that this is not an animal drama, save in respect to a few allegorical scenes that preface the body of the picture. Quite the opposite, "Thrown to the Lions" is a feature dealing with the struggles of a cabaret girl to live straight.

It derives its title from the fact that the author has drawn a parallel between the innocent maidens of Nero's time who were thrown to the lions for the mere sport of the emperor and the unsophisticated girls of the present who are thrust out on the sophisticated world with no knowledge of its pitfalls.

Norbert Lusk wrote the scenario from a story by Wallace Irwin while Lucius Henderson produced it. The body of it is not novel but the ending is, for the girl who believes at last that she has found a trusting man is suddenly disillusioned when he believes the words of a profligate as to her past. It is an unusual finale and will no doubt evoke favorable comment.

The picture as a whole is strikingly entertaining. The situations are handled in a capable way with the result that the full force of their dramatic contents is realized. Together with the scenes, the great majority of which are staged in a very good cabaret setting and in the adjoining dressing room, the plot presents a most entertaining surface.

Linnie Carter is a cabaret entertainer with her friend Irma. Harry Sullivan, the ward boss, is very attentive to Linnie and finally asks her to marry him. She consents believing his motives to be sincere.

LINNIE'S FIRST TASTE OF CAY LIFE

Sullivan takes her to a hotel where a mock marriage is gone through. By this time Irma and a clown, Billy Wood, discover Linnie's danger. By a ruse they draw Sullivan away from the hotel and then rescue Linnie and tell her the truth. Time goes on and District Attorney Bryce meets and falls in love with the cabaret entertainer.

The day for their wedding is set. Gangsters, on the lookout for Sullivan, shoot and mortally wound him, with the result that he lies to Bryce about Linnie's relations with him. Bryce believes all and Linnie turns to Wood as the only real man she ever met.

Mary Fuller registers in her usual attractive style in the role of Linnie. Joseph W. Gerard gives a consistently fine rendition of Sullivan's role and Augustus Phillips is equally good as Bryce. Finita DeSopia makes a lively figure of Irma and Clifford Gray has the role of Wood, in which he is rather wooden.

"BIG JIM GARRITY"

(Pathe Gold Rooster—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

MELODRAMATIC loving persons will find the fullfilment of their hearts' desires in "Big Jim Garrity." It is melodrama, pure and simple, with any number of tense situations that show to much better advantage on the screen than they did on the stage.

"Big Jim Garrity" was not overly successful on the stage, but we are quite positive that it will be as a picture. The wildness of the spoken lines is silenced and convincing action takes the place of heated words.

The great scope of the motion picture camera has been advantageously adapted to this feature. The mining scenes, for instance, are truly the best that we have ever seen on the celluloid. The mine is the locale for the early events of the story and shortly after the opening we are treated to a big thrill that sends our interest up many degrees.

THE DISCOVERY

This thrill is served by way of the dynamiting and flooding of the mines, done by the villain in order to get rid of Big Jim.

The scenes purporting to be below the earth, showing the water gradually rising and a crowd of men struggling and fighting to save themselves are excellently handled, from the standpoints of direction and acting, and the utmost suspense is thus secured. Big Jim at last makes an opening and all are released.

The villain, incidentally a dope doctor, who is envious of the hero's fortune, having failed in his attempt to drown Big Jim, tries again and accuses him of a murder which he himself committed.

Big Jim is arrested, but he escapes and then the action shifts several years. Jim under an assumed name has made a small fortune and is in the act of breaking into high society. He becomes acquainted with a society girl who is addicted to the drug habit through patronizing the self-same villain of the mines.

The man whom the doctor accused Jim of murdering was the girl's brother. Things come to a close when Jim marries the girl, discovers her curse, and finally exposes the doctor as a quack and the real murderer.

There is a series of scenes presenting most pleasing comedy, which come when Big Jim bursts in on society. Elsewhere, however, the piece is heavy.

Robert Edeson is ideally cast in the title role and once more he proves himself equal to any exigencies of his part. Eleanor Woodruff is a talented and charming heroine, while the supporting cast includes Carl Harbaugh, Lyster Chambers, Charles Crompton and Carleton Macey.

"THE STEPPING STONE"

(Triangle-Kay Bee—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

FRANK KEENAN gains new honors in this, and strengthens the impression that he is one of the screen's foremost actors. His role is that of "The Lion of Wall Street," a man of ice and steel. Mr. Keenan renders the part with the force and magnetism that have become associated with his name. It is a powerful piece of acting.

The story, which sets forth what happens when a wife carries the burdens of the family, bolstering up her husband's weak will, and actually doing a large part of his work for him, awakens sympathy in the spectator at once. The subject is a very real one, and it has been handled to fine effect here.

Mary Boland is seen as the wife, and does excellent work in creating an appealing character. Robert McKim, cast as the husband, is almost a perfect selection for the part physically, and succeeds in making the character thoroughly despised, which is what he was intended to do. With Keenan, these two virtually carry the action, although Margaret Thompson, Joseph Dowling and J. Barney Sherry appear in minor parts.

There is more than one highly dramatic situation in the picture, and the whole is surcharged with a quiet power which guarantees its hold over the spectator. The settings are entirely adequate and some unusually fine lighting effects appear. A set of considerable size is used to represent the stock exchange, with its crowd of frenzied brokers. The ornamental Ince subtitles are present as usual and add greatly to the attractiveness of the offering.

Coincidence is used to bring the Lion and the wife together several years after the caddish husband has killed himself, but suspense is also one of the ingredients, and this fact redeems the convenience of the situation.

"The Stepping Stone" is a picture with an idea, which is presented in a dramatic, not a sermonizing fashion. We commend it to exhibitors as a worthy offering.

"THE GREAT PROBLEM"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

TO prove his theory that environment breeds criminal tendencies, George Devereaux, a social reformer, transplants Peggy, a young thief, from the slums to the luxuries of his home and at the end of two years the logic of his ideas is substantiated.

Social reform, then, is the underlying theme of "The Great Problem." But incidentally social reform is nicely subordinated to the dramatic side of the picture. The reform end of it, however, plays an important part in the suspension of the story's interest which is merely of an average sort.

Violet Mersereau as Peggy is the center of familiar scenes

"ARE YOU SURE SHE'S ALL RIGHT?"

during her initiation into the ordered ways of a well regulated family household. She injects into these generously large pieces of action a lively personality accompanied by prettiness of face and form, but the charm of such scenes has been materially deadened by long usage. Miss Mersereau, sincere as she is, can hardly awaken more than slight interest in this major phase of the picture.

Rex Ingram, author and director, has only presented familiar material in a conventional way. His story follows just one line of action throughout and for five reels there is little of that valuable element of variety. Perhaps if Miss Mersereau's starring scenes had been interrupted now and then with the picturization of a parallel plot, the entire feature would present a more entertaining appearance.

Detail, representing those comparatively small components of a good picture, which when neglected, are apt to draw the attention of even an uncritical audience, has been carelessly attended to in "The Great Problem." There are slips in minor parts of the fabric that detract from the good effect the whole might have created.

Towards the close, the plot grows strong. Peggy's father, released from prison, vows to kill the district attorney, the self same lawyer who twelve years ago sent him up the river. Peggy who has run away nursing what she believes to be a hopeless love for her benefactor, sees her father draw the gun, and unaware of his identity she dashes forward and receives the shot in her arm.

A reunion between father and daughter and daughter and social reformer then takes place and the finale is very happy for all concerned.

Lionel Adams, Dan Hanlon, Howard Crampton, Mrs. J. J. Brundage and William Dyer lend good performances to the major roles, while Little Kittens Reichert as Peggy in her younger days, gives another remarkably intelligent piece of acting.

The settings, including those in the slums and dives, as well as those in Devereaux's house, are both realistic and attractive, respectively.

"HOODOO ANN"

(Triangle-Fine Arts—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

HERE is Mae Marsh in her first Triangle play, fully justifying all predictions of her eminent fitness to be starred in pictures. She has been provided with a typical Fine Arts story, a first rate supporting cast, and superior direction.

Even if Miss Marsh were not surrounded with these, we believe she could not fail to gain a personal success. For, without shadow of a doubt, she was born to the camera.

HOODOO ANN "CONFESSES"

But Granville Warwick's story makes possible her creation of a real character—Hoodoo Ann, drudge of the orphanage; heroine of a fire; central figure in a mystery, and finally Mrs. Jimmie Vance. All Miss Marsh's gifts of expression and pantomime are called into play. She does not act Hoodoo Ann; she is Hoodoo Ann. There you have summed up in four words the whole story, so far as Miss Marsh is concerned.

It may be well to tell you also that this picture will delight not merely your adult patrons, but children as well. It has as universal an appeal as any picture we have ever seen.

Robert Harron, as Jimmie Vance, is Miss Marsh's able first assistant, and is perfectly at home in his role. It is superfluous to talk about Harron's screen ability, or his work in a particular picture. He is always good. Others in the cast—they all do well—are William H. Brown, Wilbur Higby, Loyola O'Connor, Mildred Harris, Pearl Elmore, Anna Hernandez, Charles Lee, Elmo Lincoln and Robert Lawler.

Lloyd Ingraham, the director, and Granville Warwick, the author, lavished cleverness on this production. It is filled with those little human touches for which Fine Arts pictures are famous. This applies to the subtitles also. A neat surprise is gained by the introduction of a character who has nothing to do with the story. This is a clever trick which needs to be seen to be appreciated. Suffice it to say, it supplies a very novel ending.

Another fine stroke is the introduction of a moving picture show which Harron and Miss Marsh attend. They see there an old style Western "mellerdrammer." The picture they see is, of course, really a burlesque on the old school of pictures, but it also is necessary to the plot.

Finally, "Hoodoo Ann" has a high degree of suspense, as well as a high degree of heart interest and humor. The management of the "murder" mystery at the end is exceedingly ingenious. There is no murder, but until the mystery is cleared up, the spectator is anxious for the safety of little Hoodoo Ann. There are other notable things about this subject, but they all point the same moral: it is a real photoplay.

"WILLARD-MORAN FIGHT"

(Champion Sports Exhibition Company—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

EVERY reader of the recent papers knows of the Willard-Moran fight and so its exploitation in pictures has behind it a most complete publicity campaign. Incidentally we refer you to these same public prints for the story of the fight, round by round. It is pictured here almost in toto, from the first moment the champion and challenger entered the ring until they left.

What concerns us considerably more than the fight itself is the way it was photographed. The brilliant lights suspended over the ring furnished a suitable substitute for the studio lamps.

Judging the camera work from the standpoint of that seen in former fights it is excellent; comparing it with the standard of regular feature production it is poor, but nobody expects excellent camera work in a professional fight.

It is clear enough to show off some of the famous blows, some of the faster moments of the fight that an audience who has read the papers is looking for.

As a preamble coming before the fight proper, the fight's backers, Tex Rickard and Sam McCracken, are shown. Then the fighters are introduced exercising and toiling with their sparring partners.

Shifting to the scene of the fight, Madison Square Garden, New York, other notables are introduced: James J. Corbett, Robert Fitzsimmons, John L. Sullivan, "Kid" McCoy, and Joe Humphreys, announcer, and Charley White, referee.

A glimpse of one of the preliminaries, the Levinsky-Savage bout, is then given and afterwards follow the ten rounds between Jess Willard and Frank Moran.

If we ran a sporting department we might give a story of the entire match, but we don't and again we refer you to the papers of the 25, 26 and 27 of March.

"NE'ER-DO-WELL" IS SHOWN AT ADVANCE PRICES FOR TWO WEEKS IN PORTLAND, OREGON

THE Heilig theatre, Portland, Ore., is not a picture theatre, but notwithstanding this fact, "The Ne'er-Do-Well" has just finished a two weeks' engagement at advanced admission prices.

The picture was originally booked to play at the People's theatre, Portland's leading picture house. But after viewing the film, the management recognized "The Ne-er-Do-Well" as one of the big ones, and with the courage to back their judgment leased the Heilig, a stock theatre seating 2,000 people, for two weeks.

As a result, the box office receipts reached $7,000 the first week and $6,000 the second week. Unable to continue the engagement on account of advance bookings the run will resume at this theatre at a later date.

V-L-S-E, which is handling "The Ne-er-Do-Well," by an arrangement with Sol L. Lesser, reports that the picture is meeting with the same success wherever shown.

"ALSACE"

(Authors' Film Company—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"ALSACE" is a drama, and one that we can conscientiously term unusually strong, concerning the bitter hatred of the Alsatians toward their Teutonic conquerers of 1871. The present European war is utilized as a means of closing the picture in a significant and gripping manner.

It is not a picture that we in America would call neutral; that is, judging it from the standards of neutrality laid down by our government. To confirm this statement it is only necessary to mention that "Alsace" is now scoring a brilliant success in France and England. However, it is not our task to discourse on the political aspect of the picture.

Judging it from the standards of feature films, it is exceedingly good, principally because such a vital topic has not been treated before in a way that is only dramatic and not topical and again because every important and near important member of the cast is proficient in his art.

THE MEETING

They are not particularly well versed in the matter of acting for the camera. Most of the cast is from the French stage, but in every movement and expression they define the significance of their roles to such an extent that their very appearance commands the utmost attention.

The settings of the piece taken as a whole are adequately apropos of the occasion. As the time dealt with is the present and the scene Alsace, the French producers have had no difficulty in instilling realism into the story's background. The lighting, too, offsets the drama advantageously.

Mme. Orbey, an Alsatian, grieves over the fact that her son, Jacques, has married Marguerite Schwartz, a German. The marriage proves, as was expected, a very poor match, as the two constantly quarrel over racial affairs. July 31, 1914, dawns and finds Jacques wavering between love for his country and mother against that for his wife and her nation. Through the deceit of Marguerite, Jacques is made to enter the German Empire and forsake his country's cause.

But at the shouts of "Down with France" and kindred remarks, Jacques is unable to restrain his patriotism and in the face of hundreds of Teutons he proclaims his true feelings. He returns to his mother mortally wounded by the mob, but the good woman feels that she has successfully triumphed for her country's cause over the spitefulness of Marguerite.

The picture features Mme. Rejane as Mme. Orbey. Mme. Rejane is supreme in her role. Everything else is forgotten in her marvelous and expressive performance. Mlle. Flori makes a convincing figure of Marguerite and M. Dieudonne as Jacques is another deserving of unusual praise. The rest of the cast includes Mme. Jalabert, Mme. Miller, M. Bosman, M. Barbier and M. Hardoux, everyone a polished performer.

The authors, Gaston Leroux and Lucien Camille, have contributed a fine piece of work to the library of film features and have undoubtedly produced what is considered a masterpiece in France.

"THE VITAL QUESTION"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

ALTHOUGH "The Vital Question" possesses a number of fully developed scenes of strong emotional appeal, which go to make up an interesting and acceptable offering, it is by no means so finished a picture as one might expect from S. Rankin Drew. It does not present the skillful contrasts of which Mr. Drew has recently shown himself capable; and the theme is not welded together so as to present a smooth surface of dramatic and narrative coherency.

It is not apparent, for example, just what "The Vital Question" is, though it might easily be the right of a woman to bestow her love upon whomsoever she pleases. An introductory subtitle to this effect would set the spectator upon the right path immediately. There are one or two other discrepancies, such as the revelation at the very end that the millionaire was really responsible for King's downfall, when this fact had not been previously offered as a controlling factor in the story.

Nevertheless, the picture has heart interest appeal, and this, we believe, outside of all other considerations, is enough to carry it safely into the regard of picturegoers. In this, Virginia Pearson, as Beatrice King, is the central figure. The plight of a woman driven into marriage in order to save her brother from disgrace is a distinct sympathy part, and Miss Pearson expresses it very well. She has some excellent emotional scenes, and is a striking figure in the denoument, where her cruel husband is killed by a man whom he had hired to bribe a juror, and then refused to help escape.

Leo Delaney, as a young lawyer, who shoulders the burden of King's financial misdeeds, after the latter has committed suicide, makes a pleasing hero. Anders Randolf, as the millionaire who virtually blackmails Beatrice King into marrying him, is a thoroughly acceptable heavy. Denton Vane has a characteristic part as a "weak" brother. Charles Kent and George Cooper are also in this capable cast.

THE WIFE IS FORCED TO DECIDE

It is an interior picture, and the settings are quite beyond criticism. For once, however, it is necessary to comment unfavorably upon the technical workmanship of a Vitagraph subject. The print shown for review was so badly streaked that the defects detracted from the effect of the photoplay.

On the whole, "The Vital Question" will please the majority of picturegoers because of its acting, one or two strong climaxes, and its human theme.

NATURE PICTURES FROM EDUCATIONAL BOOKED FOR SYRACUSE, BUFFALO, CHICAGO AND NEW YORK

THE entire series of nature pictures, recently shown at the Knickerbocker-Triangle in New York with great success, are now being shown at the Colonial Triangle in Chicago, the Strand in Syracuse, N. Y., and the Elmwood and Palace theatres in Buffalo, N. Y.

These are one-reel subjects, booked through the Educational Film Corporation of America, with offices at 729 Seventh avenue, New York.

"THE NET"

(Thanhouser-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS story is somewhat on the "thriller" order. It has a dash of melodrama, with the good old villain and hero types, and is set in an attractive surrounding of sea and summer landscape. It is well cast and capably directed, and should be a most acceptable subject for the average exhibitor to handle.

The story is told in a direct and clear way; there are several startling features, which have been furnished at the cost of considerable time, pains and money—for instance, the swallowing up of an automobile and its occupant in the quicksand.

A mysterious girl is wafted ashore on a piece of wreckage and is taken care of by a young fisherman and his mother. The fisherman falls in love with the girl, and a wedding is arranged. But the night before, the girl disappears, in company with a city man who has attracted her fancy.

The young man's sorrow gradually wears away, and then he falls in love with a girl of different type, who has just moved to the village, with her father.

Later it develops that the mysterious girl was a thief, who had been shipwrecked while escaping with a large sum of money. The man with whom she fled was in reality a detective, but the girl bribed him to keep her away from the authorities. The detective, hearing that the fisherman is about to inherit a fortune, induces the girl to go back to the village.

A WOMAN FROM THE SEA

She does so, and tells the fisherman that the man with whom she fled was her brother. But the young villager refuses to cast off his real love. The detective then discovers that the village girl's father is a fugitive from justice, and uses this knowledge to force the daughter to give up her sweetheart.

A wedding is again arranged between the fisherman and the adventuress, but the latter, descending for the ceremony, sees in the room below the man whom she robbed long before. Fearing her secret is discovered, she slips out the back door, jumps into an automobile, and dashes off along the beach.

The village girl attempts to warn her of the quicksands ahead, but thinking it an attempt to capture her, the adventuress drives on until she and the car are swallowed up.

Bert Delaney, Marion Swayne, Inda Palmer, Ethel Jewett, Arthur Bauer and Morgan Jones head the cast.

"THE WALL BETWEEN"

(Quality-Metro Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

ADAPTED from the novel by Ralph D. Paine, "The Wall Between," provides Francis X. Bushman with one of those typical hero roles in which he shines. This time he appears as an enlisted man of the United States Army, at the mercy of the social wall that separates common soldiers from officers.

There is no doubt that this picture will serve to enhance Mr. Bushman's popularity. Due opportunity is afforded Beverly Bayne to display her charms. In the end of course Hero Bushman surmounts all obstacles and marries Heroine Bayne.

Although the picture is largely Bushman and Miss Bayne, it is not wholly so. It is also distinguished by plenty of action, a well-knit story, touches of comedy relief, and the picturesque background of an army post, supplemented by semi-tropical exteriors of beauty.

The direction, by John W. Noble, which is good throughout, included the staging of a series of battle scenes, supposed to take place in Nicaragua. Except that the locations do not suggest Nicaragua with any particular emphasis, these scenes are well done, and kept in their right place as an incident in the story.

KENDALL MEETS THE GIRL

The supporting cast is one of the most pleasing we have seen in a Metro production. Without exception, all the players are excellent types, and render finished impersonations. They are Edward Brennan, as Capt. Gildersleeve; Robert Cummings, as Col. Dickinson; Sidney Cushing, as David Barclay; Charles Prince, as Capt. Ramsay; John Davidson, as Capt. Burkett; Helen Dunbar, as Mrs. Ferris; Thomas Brooks, as Mr. Barclay; and Alice Gordon, as Mrs. Barclay. Special mention should be made of Davidson as the snobbish lieutenant, Cummings as the sterling old Colonel, and Helen Dunbar as the heroine's mother.

It is a pleasure to say that "The Wall Between" is absolutely clean. We see no reason why it should not have a successful career.

"BUD FISHER'S MUTT AND JEFF PICTURES"

(Mutt and Jeff Films)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IF we were in the exhibiting line we would instantly seize upon "Jeff's Toothache" and "The Submarine," the first two animated cartoons drawn by Bud Fisher. And we would do so, no matter what program we were running, no matter what theatre we operated and no matter what variety of audiences we catered to.

"Jeff's Toothache" and "The Submarine" are excellent animated cartoon comedies containing funny drawings and funny plots and real plots. Shown to an audience which has been fed on slapstick pictures until it is sick at the sight of one, they ought to be received as enthusiastically as a blind man would receive eyesight.

Mr. Fisher's series of cartoons, portraying the adventures of Mutt and Jeff, have been running in newspapers for lo! these many years. They are known and are tremendously popular and no exhibitor need be fearful lest his audiences are not acquainted with Mutt and Jeff.

Usually the people were obliged to wait until the next day before witnessing the further antics of Mutt and Jeff after they had digested the morning or evening paper in which they were running. Now they can go to the theatre that afternoon or evening and see these creations in animation. The double diet won't hurt them for a long, long time.

Mr. Fisher has mastered whatever difficulties confronted him when he decided to draw for the camera, in exhaustive style. His cartoons are rapid in action, smooth in execution, void of eye straining jumpiness, and what is superfluous to add, they picture the same Mutt and Jeff that cavort in the papers.

BLUEBIRD
PHOTOPLAYS (INC)

SUPREME in lavishness of production, masterly direction, artistic presentation, character of stars, acting and cast, BLUEBIRD Photoplays have set the highest standard also in presenting the greatest of human stories in fascinating dramas, strongly appealing and especially TIMELY.

Of the features already announced each makes a special appeal as fitting in with daily news stories, or as holding the interest and attention of the public by the timeliness of the subjects. Proof follows:

The Divine Sarah Bernhardt in

"JEANNE DORE"

Released at the time Madame Bernhardt's permanent retirement from the stage was announced and talked about the world over.

The Distinguished Emotional Actress
Helen Ware in

"SECRET LOVE"

As a great legitimate star, Miss Ware's appearance in BLUEBIRD Photoplays broke down the last barrier between stage and screen.

The Perfect Woman, Ida Schnall in

"UNDINE"

A Sea Fairy Tale greater than "Neptune's Daughter." The most beautiful picture ever released.

Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley in

"HOP—THE DEVIL'S BREW"

Produced by the Smalleys. An expose of the opium traffic. Authorized by the U. S. Secret Service. Released at the time of San Francisco's nationally heralded clean-up of Chinatown.

Carter De Haven and Flora Parker De Haven in

"THE WRONG DOOR"

Gave to moving pictures a new type of play—serious drama, brightened by the genius of two of America's most popular musical comedy stars.

The Most Beautiful Woman on the Screen
Louise Lovely, in

"THE GRIP OF JEALOUSY"

A celebrated Australian star whose appearance here in a lavish production of a beautiful play of the Old South met with an ovation.

The Popular Screen Star, Jane Gail in

"RUPERT OF HENTZAU"

This great play by Anthony Hope, has appealed to millions in play and story form, and registered an even greater success on the screen.

The Idol of Millions, Mary Fuller in

"The STRENGTH of The WEAK"

In these days of frank sex discussion, this great play strikes a new and wholesome note in the leading role as played by Miss Fuller.

"THE YAQUI"

Released at the very climax of the tense and strained Mexican situation, showing the exact condtiions of guerrilla warfare along the much raided Mexican Border.

"THE FLIRT"

With Marie Walcamp and Antrim Short

Booth Tarkington's celebrated Saturday Evening Post story. The boy character was the forerunner of the famous Tarkington "Penrod" stories, and Antrim Short is the exact "Penrod" type.

Beautiful Louise Lovely in

"TANGLED HEARTS"

Here comedy and tragedy are separated by the faintest of boundaries. This sparkling production is a splendid example of the BLUEBIRD'S high standard.

One of America's Leading Actors,
Tyrone Power in

"JOHN NEEDHAM'S DOUBLE"

The American stage is proud of the genius of Tyrone Power. Of this remarkable Smalleys picture, an eminent critic said: "As near perfect as the most critical could require."

RICE

"Jeff's Toothache" suggests a lot and there is a lot that is funny in this short half reel. Mutt conceives the idea of fastening a string to the tooth and affixing the other end to a taxi. This done he tells the driver to drive and he is seated inside very comfortably, while poor Jeff is obliged to run for dear life on behind. There are events in transit that are most comical, chief of which is the horror with which Mutt watches the meter click up the dimes during one point in their route. Finally, however, the machine explodes and Jeff comes to earth minus a tooth and bawling loudly. Then he imparts to Mutt that it was the wrong tooth. Finis.

"The Submarine" introduces "the long and short of it" in Europe attempting to gain passage homeward on one ticket. Jeff gets under Mutt's coat and on they go, but in mid voyage their perfidy is discovered and they are obliged to work in the lookout. A parrot whom they teach to sing out at intervals, "Eight o'clock and all is well" furnishes them a chance to take much needed sleep.

But the parrot sees not the submarine which despatches a torpedo to the ship and wrecks the whole affair. The last scene shows Mutt, Jeff and the parrot swimming to shore with the bird singing out "eight o'clock and all is well" constantly.

The two pictures bear humorous subtitles, as well as the usual dialogue between Mutt and Jeff which takes place in the scenes themselves.

"SOLD FOR MARRIAGE"

(Triangle-Fine Arts—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

IN story, acting and settings this is one of the most interesting of recent Fine Arts productions. It has for its star Lillian Gish, who makes a very human, a very appealing figure as Marfa, a little Russian girl. Her work here, as always, gives the impression that she is one of the very few who can justly be called screen stars.

The picture is also extremely fortunate in having for its director William Christy Cabanne, whose command of realistic effects is finely demonstrated. A high point of realism is reached in filming some of the most effective action in a storm. Unlike many screen storms, this one is genuine, and is shown in all it phases, leading up to the climax in which Colonel

"YOU MUST CONSENT"

Gregioff is killed by a flash of lightning, and thus prevented from carrying out his evil designs toward Marfa.

Variety of atmosphere is gained by showing snow scenes in contrast with summer stuff. When the action shifts to America, Los Angeles' "Little Russia" supplies some effective backgrounds. The management of detail throughout is excellent.

The principals, with the single exception of Fred Burns, who appears as a policeman, represent Russian characters, and were carefully selected as to type. Frank Bennett is Jan, whom Marfa loves; Walter Long Col. Gregioff, A. D. Sears Uncle Ivan, Pearl Elmore Marfa's aunt, Curt Rehfeld Marfa's grandfather; William E. Lowery Ivan's brother; Frank Brownlee Nicholas, and William Siebert the undesirable suitor. These players all render sincere and satisfying impersonations.

William E. Wing's story holds without difficulty, its few improbabilities—such as the meeting of Marfa and Jan on the ship—being obscured by the splendid way in which it has been put together. The plot hinges on the attempts of Marfa's uncle and aunt to sell her into marriage against her will. Their unlawful efforts are finally frustrated in California, when the police, guided by Jan, break up the "wedding" ceremony.

Lest anybody get a wrong impression from the title, it can be explicitly stated that this is not in any sense a "shady" picture. On the contrary, it has been handled in such fashion that it can be shown to any audience.

"THE TRAFFIC COP"

(Thanhouser-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THERE is much of the novel and educational in this subject. Scenes in a policeman's life which serve to give an "atmosphere" to the story, are not only interesting, but valuable studies. Any audience in the country will appreciate these glimpses of actual New York life, the regulation of traffic, the guarding of crossings, the protection of homes, police drills, squad mustering, etc., which were taken from life with the permission and assistance of Police Commissioner Woods. Commissioner Woods and his staff witnessed a private screening of the picture in New York, last week, and apparently gave hearty approval.

The story opens with the rescue of a wealty girl, niece and ward of a millionaire, by a traffic policeman. Her horse runs away with her in the park, and the policeman risks his life to save hers.

An attachment springs up between them, and the policeman calls at her home, where he finds that the uncle is a man whom he arrested a few days before for speeding.

The uncle becomes involved in financial operations; he embezzles funds from his own bank, and then arranges to have suspicion thrown on his teller, who is a brother of Casey, the traffic cop. The girl overhears the plot, and helps the teller to escape. She then goes to Casey's rooms to tell him of the situation, and is there when her uncle and the police captain arrive. They find the teller gone, and Casey cleverly hides the girl until she can slip out without her uncle knowing who she is.

The girl leaves her uncle's home after discovering that he has lost her entire fortune in speculation. Casey then learns that the bank cashier, who had conspired with his employer to throw suspicion on the teller, had disappeared, leaving with his landlady a diary which contained a complete record of the crimes of the two. He entices the uncle to the boarding house, and shows him the diary; then, when the millionaire offers to buy it for $5,000, Casey throws off his disguise, gives a signal, and the guilty man is surrounded by policemen.

The real culprits are soon placed behind the bars, the girl's fortune is recovered, and—she marries the traffic cop.

Gladys Hulette is a pleasing figure as the girl, and Howard M. Mitchell is an excellent type for the policeman. Ernest Howard plays the part of the girl's uncle.

"THE FOLLY OF SIN"

(Great Northern—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS subject contains a strong story, well and forcefully told. It is, however, a story of European life, and one whose continental atmosphere is so marked that it refuses to be Americanized. This is not said in disparagement of the film, for neither story nor production need any apology.

There are a number of excellent characterizations, and scenes of unusual interest are presented. One or two delicate situations have been built up, and these are handled in such a manner as to give no offense, even to the most squeamish spectator.

Elaborate sets, with striking lighting effects, have been used, and these have been supplemented by photography of the best.

Two young physicians, Doctor Felix and Dr. Hatton, are in competition for the discovery of a cancer cure, and Dr. Felix is near success. Nevertheless, he bewails his joyless life, and envies the pleasures and social popularity of the dashing Hatton.

A STOLEN MEETING

He rejuvenates Felix, from a social standpoint, and introduces him to the primrose path. Gambling and women soon absorb all of Dr. Felix's attention, leaving Hatton to go ahead with his experiments without the former competition.

Felix falls in love with Margaret Vincent and they meet clandestinely until her brother, a young lieutenant, is informed of their relations. He obtains leave of absence, ascertains that the charge is true, and that Margaret is facing disgrace, then challenges Felix to a duel. The lieutenant is killed, and Felix gives himself up to the police; later he is sentenced to three months in prison.

Upon Felix's release he seeks Margaret in a hospital, only to learn that both she and her child have died. In despair he returns to his apartment, and there reads in a newspaper that Hatton has discovered the long-sought cancer cure, and has won the position of medical eminence which Felix had within his grasp.

The ruined man sees a vision of Hatton, as Mephisto, and as the latter says: "I have superseded you; your folly achieved my triumph," Felix swallows poison, and falls back dead.

Joan Peterson is attractive as Margaret, and Charles Wieth and George Tolloway both do excellent work as the doctors.

"BY STORK DELIVERY"

(Triangle-Keystone—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS is fast, furious slapstick, cleverly produced, and filled with laughs. The central situation is a chase after a dog which is supposed to be dragging a baby along in a kennel. The chase is led by Mack Swain, who performs the new (to us) stunt of leaping on the wheels of a moving locomotive, and remaining there for several revolutions, subsequently transferring himself by a leap to a handcar.

Dog, kennel and Swain finally roll down an embankment, and it is discovered, of course, that the baby is not in the wreckage. Then Swain and his assistants speed back on the handcar, and the baby is found safe at home in the backyard.

A good deal of fun is also made out of an exchange of babies, and there is a small riot when the black janitor and his wife invade Home Loving Tailor Swain's apartment to claim their own.

The picture as a whole indicates that the supply of mirth and stunts at the Keystone studios is in no danger of being exhausted. Fred Fishback is announced as the director.

In the cast are May Emory, Vin Moore, Baby Marie Kiernan, Joe Lee, Ivy Crosthwaite, Bobby Dunn and Polly Moran.

"THE CITY OF ILLUSION"

(Ivan—Six Parts)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THERE can be little doubt of the success of this feature written and produced by Ivan Abramson. In all its outer essentials it carries the same appeal that his productions have borne in the past and the story has been well brought out by a very good cast that in some respects shines unusually well.

There is, however, confusion resulting from the working out of the denouement. It has too much to do with checks and the purchasing of love at high prices. Finance has no place in climaxes, but even so, if Mr. Abramson would go over his last reel and scatter a few leaders here and there the picture would be clearer.

The story tells of a young country girl, Claire, totally unsophisticated, who marries a wealthy Southerner, Stanford, merely for the sake of the glamor and the change. Claire very much like all country people, has a beautiful illusion regarding New York, and her chance to go there comes when a lawyer, Hobson comes to visit her husband and falls in love with her. Stanford sees the two in an embrace, but afterwards tries to persuade his wife that her place is by his side.

Finally still obdurate, Claire divorces her husband and goes to the city to seek Hobson. She discovers that he is married and in the midst of a promising campaign for district attorney.

She wants him to obtain a divorce because she divorced her husband for him, but his wife manages to smooth matters over with money, which is a little unconvincing. Then Stanford arrives on the scene and with his heart set against his wife, he determines to expose the true character of Hobson by bringing in Claire's name in connection with his wife. The money matters, however, are again introduced here and finally things are straightened out.

THE FIRST MEETING OF CLAIRE AND HOBSON

Mr. Abramson's story is in general convincing, and when it is not the cast carries it over the weak spots.

Mignon Anderson as Claire interprets her role well. Carleton Macy as Stanford gives a polished performance and Guido Colucci as a farm hand who goes the wrong way in the city is excellent, specially in the first scenes where he is the chief comedian. Paula Shay as the wife of Hobson, Maxine Brown as her sister, Bradley Barker, Joseph Burke, Blanche Craig, Mathilda Brundage and Willard Case complete a good cast.

"BLUE BLOOD AND RED"

(William Fox—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

MR. FOX, departing from his usual style of photoplays, gives us here a typical Western melodrama of high class. It serves to introduce as a screen star an athletic young man by the name of George Walsh, brother of Director Raoul Walsh, whose skill as a producer is well illustrated in this subject. George Walsh is an excellent selection for the role of a young ne'er-do-well, whose expulsion from Harvard for inattentiveness to study opens the way for his various adventures in California whither he drives in his car, accompanied only by his father's butler, Peterkin.

The picture is permeated with the spirit of the great outdoors, and moves with the rapidity, coherence, and interest typical of Raoul Walsh's direction. The theme, analyzed, does not show marked originality, but the treatment of it does show originality of a high order. Not the least effective thing about it is the handling of humorous situations, of which there are a great number. They are presented without resort to slapstick in any form, and are built around the personalities of the characters themselves. In these Peterkin (Martin Kinney) has a conspicuous part, which he carries well.

If you are looking for a film with a lot of human interest, with no shadow of sex stuff about it, we can recommend "Blue Blood and Red" without reservation. It has a stirring fight, some thrilling riding, some of the most impressively beautiful mountain scenery ever filmed, and a complete gallery of characters. In addition, it maintains interest to large degree by presenting surprises which come when you least expect them.

Doris Pawn, who has the feminine lead, photographs wondrously well and makes an altogether pleasing figure of the heroine. Others are Vester Perry, as the villain, James Marcus, Jack Woods, and your old friend "Alkali Ike," who is Augustus Carney in real life. This cast is very good throughout.

Settings and locations are exceedingly good. A large Western saloon interior is the scene of the fight in which the hero puts on the gloves to knock out a pugilistic celebrity. In this scene a large number of extras appear, and their work shows the effect of careful coaching.

"Blue Blood and Red" is an excellent piece of entertainment. It is one of those refreshing pictures which do not have to be great in order to win an audience completely.

"THE SOCIAL PIRATES"

(Kalem—Third Episode)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE PARASITE," the third number of Kalem's fascinating series, again takes up the fight of Mona Davenport and Mary Hartley against the wolves of society. The Social Pirates, as these two young women are termed, succeed well in paying a blackmailer in his own coin as well as keeping the spirit of the audience up to the top notch.

Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby, the two charming actresses who are lending their beauty and talent to the roles of the Social Pirates, keep up the good work which marked their appearance in the first two numbers of the series. The assisting cast, including Frank Jonasson, Thomas Lingham and Paul C. Hurst, lend good support to the two principals.

Mona and Mary have an apartment adjoining that of a woman who is receiving calls from Thomas Reynolds, a notorious blackmailer who has cleverly eluded the traps set for him by the police. The woman is unaable to meet the price demanded by Reynolds, and as a result he threatens to publish some letters connected with her past.

Mona evolves a plan. She enters Reynolds' house as a destitute widow and he succumbs to her charms and employs her as secretary. The rest is easy. Mary proceeds to make love to a safe cracker and tells him of the letters which she says belong to her. Mona paves the way for his robbery and the end finds the letters in possession of the blackmailed woman and a valuable piece of Reynolds' jewelry in possession of Mona.

The story is told in a convincing way and the direction is very good. The settings and the light effects lend good support to the strength of the story itself.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR THE BUSY EXHIBITOR

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"During the Roundup." (Biograph. Reissue.)—A ranch story concerning a fickle-hearted girl, how she eloped with a robber, was pursued by her lover and finally rescued when the horses started to run away.

It is a Griffith reissue and features such well-known players as Lillian Gish, Fred Burns and Henry Walthal. It is rapid in action, convincing in development and possessed of that reality that all of Griffith's Biographs contain.

"Swords and Hearts." (Biograph. Reissue.)—A Civil War story, in which a Confederate, shunned by those who once respected him, turns to a faithful slavey after his army's defeat. The sympathetic element of this picture is very strong—everything favors the South as is Griffith's way in civil war pictures.

The scenes, photography and detail are admirable. Dorothy West, Claire MacDowell, Wilfred Lucas and Francis Gradon are the principals.

"The Mistake." (Biograph. Reissue.)—Another drama of Griffith's direction. An interesting point is the manner in which the dramatic strength of the story is upheld despite the absence of extra settings which would be introduced if the picture were made in the present day.

It is a story of the eternal triangle in which an Indian massacre brings tragedy into the finale. Henry Walthal, Blanche Sweet and Charles H. Mailes are the principals.

"The Perfidy of Mary." (Biograph. Reissue.)—A fairly good comedy drama concerning a quartette of bashful lovers and a Lothario who, favored by both girls at one time or another, gets the cold shoulder in the end.

This picture is not up to the standard of many of Griffith's old pictures chiefly because the begining is hardly clear enough. Dorothy Gish, Mae Marsh, Walter Miller and Lionel Barrymore play the leads.

"The House with Closed Shutters." (Biograph. Reissue.)—Again a tragic civil war story produced by Griffith with a competent cast composed of Dorothy West, Henry Walthal, Joe Grabelle and Charles H. West. A young girl takes her brother's place on a perilous errand and later in battle still assuming his role she is killed.

Her two lovers believe that it is the brother and after the war come to visit the girl. The mother informs them that she is crazy. Many years later the men discover the ruse. It is the brother who is crazed from long years of close imprisonment under his mother's vengeful guard.

"Millstones." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., April 11.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Bill Dolan, a burglar, rescues Mary Ryan from her dissolute parents and raises the child. She reforms him, but he is arrested for his last robbery.

Mary persuades the district-attorney to release him and is the means of preventing the attorney from unjustly accusing his wife of infidelity. The wife gives Mary a roll of bills, and with this money she and Dolan are married.

In the cast are Darwin Karr, Nell Craig, Edmund F. Cobb, John Cossar, and Peggy Sweeney.

"Vernon Howe Bailey's Sketch Book of Boston." (Essanay. Split reel, with scenic. Wed., April 12.)—Not shown for review.

"The Last Adventure." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., April 15.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Timothy Hayden makes Beatrice, a beautiful girl, support them both by selling the expensive jewelry her men friends lavish on her. Hayden forces her to flirt with Burton, a man with a recently acquired fortune, and Burton becomes her slave.

The plan is to get money from Burton when he discovers Beatrice's past. But the girl falls in love with him and refuses to blackmail him after he has married her. Hayden threatens her, but a butler throws him down a flight of stairs and breaks his neck.

The cast is composed of Lillian Drew, John Lorenz, and Edward Arnold.

"I Will Repay." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., March 25.)—Will be reviewed in next week's issue.

"Millionaires by Mistake." (Kalem. Tues., April 11.)—Ham and Bud are mistaken for two lost heirs in this truly funny number and the manner in which they spend their money consumes most of the reel.

Ham is made the victim of an adventuress, played most charmingly by their new leading lady, and the various predicaments in which he is plunged are enough to set the picture in the class of meritorious comedies.

"Fashion and Fury." (Kalem. Wed., April 12.)—Both hubby and wife are urged to divorce one another and when they employ corespondents, the feminine party of which dresses exactly like wife and who besides has a lover of her own, while the male hireling in the scheme is made love to constantly by the cook, the complications are many and humorous.

In fact, Ethel Teare and her supporting players have in this release a comedy that sets them off to very good advantage, and it is quite certain to amuse wherever exhibited.

"The Race for a Siding." (Kalem. Sat., April 15.)—When a "Hazard of Helen" picture is satisfactory as this one is there is little use of going into the detailed story.

Suffice it to say that the plot is exceedingly well worked out, building to an effective and thrilling climax. Those who believe their audiences enjoy railroad pictures should show no hesitation about booking this one.

"The Fickle Fiddler's Finish." (Kalem. Fri., April 7.)—A "Sis Hopkins" release in which Henry Murdock, the eccentric leading man, is just as prominent, if not more so, than funny Sis. Here he appears as a banana peddler, in love with the slavey.

A musician discovers that he is a great violinist, and in his rise to fame he forgets all about worshipping Sis. But she soon intrudes upon his gorgeous career with disastrous results. This is a burlesque and a very good one. Murdock registers most effectively and gives excellent support to Rose Melville.

"The Fatal Bean." (Lubin. One reel. Mon., April 3.)—Davy Don becomes a quack doctor in this slapstick, which is fairly amusing at times simply because it is highly ludicrous. It is notable, however, for the absence of real humor, and depends on old situations. The cast includes Patsy De Forest and Alice Munn. Edwin McKim wrote and directed the piece.

"The Return of James Jerome," (Lubin Two reels. Tues., April 4.)—An old plot is used in this, and it is none too convincing. There are several slips in direction, one being the appearance of a modern safe in the hero's office on a desert isle. One wonders how the safe got there.

As a whole, the picture is average in interest. Lamar Johnstone, George Routh, Melvin Mayo, Violet MacMillan, Adda Gleason, Jay Moreley, and William J. Spencer were directed by Edward Sloman.

"The Scarlet Chastity." (Lubin. Three reels. Thurs., April 6.)—This melodrama purports to set forth a Platonic relationship between a husband whose indifference to his wife has driven her insane, and a woman to whom he is strongly attracted, and who lives in his home as his companion, only.

Inasmuch as it appeared the husband was to blame for his wife's aberrations, it seems illogical to dispose of the wife by shooting her, in order that the husband may marry his companion.

The sentiment is rather cheap throughout. The cast does its best with the story, and includes George Routh, Helen Wolcott, Josephine Wests, Alan Forrest, Sydney Deane, Adelaide Bronti, Deon Routh, and Ben Hopkins, Wilbert Melville directed.

"Wives of the Rich." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., April 10.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Beauty Hunters." (Selig. Sat., April 15.)—The funny element of this comedy lies mainly in the exaggerated facial contortions of James Bradbury and Martha Mattox. This pair certainly know how to make faces, and if the reason for their so doing is not apparent, perhaps that adds to the humor. Others in the cast are C. C. Holland, Frank Clark and May White.

John Queerphiz and Jane Apeface exchange bogus photographs, and are led by these pictorial misrepresentations to get married over the telephone. When they see each other, they faint, but both decide to visit a beauty parlor.

When they finish the treatment both are so changed that they do not recognize each other, and they carry on a flirtation. When the truth leaks out, they decide to make the best of their marriage.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"The Pendulum of Chance." (American. Two reels. Mon., April 10.)—This is a clean-cut story, conventionally but well acted by Edward Coxen, Charles Newton, Lizette Thorne, and George Field. Tom Ricketts did the directing and got in several good touches.

Churchill has inherited a fine business from his father, and following his father's conservative methods, he is able to enlarge it. But his wife is constantly preaching efficiency, and finally persuades him to discharge many faithful employees, among them, Pelton.

Churchill's rival, Wallace, wants to ruin him, and so engages Pelton to spy on his former employer. Wallace also pays court to Alice, and Churchill is lead to believe that she loves him. Churchill is forced into bankruptcy by his unscrupulous competitor, but is amazed to find that Alice loves him.

"Rube's Hotel Tangle." (Vogue. Tues., April 11.)—Not shown for review.

"Peanuts and Powder." (Beauty. Wed., April 12.)—There is more of the athletic kind of humor in this release than most of the "Beauties" employ, but it is sometimes funny. The plot and subtitles will be responsible for some chuckles, and the antics of Rea Berger, Carol Halloway, John Sheehan, John Steppling, and Mary Talbot ought to pull several laughs.

Puff, a fanatical inventor, has invented a peanut of high explosive power. Crex, a foreign agent, tries to steal the priceless formula and the inventor's daughter, but both these designs are foiled by the intrepid hero and a pet monkey that eats one of the peanuts.

"Silent Selby." (Mustang. Three reels. Thurs. April 13.)—The players and director did very good work with the hackneyed script, and while the situations are all most familiar, the interest is kept going by the acting of the leads and the mystery element, which is well handled. Thomas Chatterton, Anna Little, Jack Richardson, Dick La Reno, and William Tedmarsh are the players.

Silent Selby, a cowboy, is in love with Helen Whitney, the daughter of a ranch-owner. Merton, the foreman of the Whitney ranch, also loves Helen, and annoys her by his bestial attentions. Merton incurs the enmity of Selby and Felipe, a Mexican ranch-hand.

Merton is later found murdered, and Felipe is suspected, but is proved innocent, and Selby is likewise accused and acquitted. Finally Whitney confesses that he committed the crime, but when he explains that Merton had tried to outrage his daughter, no action is taken against him.

"The Awakening." (Mustang. Two reels. Fri., April 14.)—It required a good deal of stretching to get two reels out of the material used in this picture. The amplification is made fairly agreeable, however, by the character delineations of Anna Little, Frank Borzage, and Jack Richardson.

When drunk, Trent, a cowboy, marries Rose, a dance-hall girl. He does not regret this step because she makes a devoted and faithful wife. When he is away on a round up one of the girl's former admirers tries to seduce her, but the husband returns and gives the interloper a good beating.

"Almost Right." (Cub. Fri., April 14.)—This is a detective comedy, in which Luke Sharp and Jiggers seek a notorious crook. They find him at a cabaret, and disguise themselves as waiters and pianists. Nevertheless, the crook steals a woman's bag and escapes. Later in the night the crook enters the same lodging house where the detectives are.

In another attempt to capture him, the two sleuths only succeed in throwing suspicion on each other, and eventually are rounded up by the police.

Billy Armstrong, Tommy Hayes, J. A. Howe, Allen Williams, E. Harvey, A. Van Antwerp, Tom McFarland, Grace Gibson, Mme. D'Orcy and Mlle. Ottawa compose the cast.

"The Wayfarers." (American. Three reels. Sat., April 15.)—Will be reviewed in next week's issue.

"The Improbable Yarn of McQuirk." (Beauty. Sun., April 16.)—Not shown for review.

"A Mix-Up in Photos." (Vogue. Sun., April 16.)—Not shown for review.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"The Iron Claw," No. 4. (Pathé. Two reels.)—"The Name and the Game," as this episode of the new serial is entitled, the action includes a robbery of Golden's bank, by Legar and his associates. The robbery is discovered by the mysterious Laughing Mask, who recovers the money, but notifies Golden that he proposes to hold onto it until the millionaire alters his attitude toward the poor who are in his power.

Margery, who has been rescued a second time from Legar and his band, is recaptured when she steals up to the band to overhear their plot. The Laughing Mask again gets hold of her, and conducts her to a room which connects with her father's mansion by a panel. There Golden and his associates find her. Pearl White, Sheldon Lewis and Creighton Hale head the cast.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Graft." (Universal Special Feature. Eighteenth Episode. Two reels. Week of April 10.)—In this exciting number Mayor Harding pits his forces against the Opium Trust with his usual triumphant results.

He is aided in his mission by a Japanese girl whom he saves from a roue's clutches, and generous coincidence which is as prominent here as it has been throughout the serial.

Most of the action is supposed to transpire underground in the mysterious passages of the opium traffickers. The settings employed for these scenes are realistic always and in some cases very lavish. There is no slow moment in "The Hidden City of Crime."

"Brigadier Gerard." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., April 10.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of April 8.

"Putting Her Foot in It." (Nestor. Mon., April 10.)—A comedy of Christie's concoction produced by Horace Davey. It is entirely too risque and brazen to create much laughter, and after a hackneyed chain of incidents an old-time chase brings it to a close. A shoe clerk is the main character and pulling up the skirts of his lady customers is his chief pastime. Ray Gallagher, Billie Rhodes and Neal Burns are the leads.

"The Voice of the Tempter." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., April 11.)—A drama well flavored with comedy, which though starting off on delightful lines, lapses into a hackneyed "caveman" situation in the last reel, said situation being that in which the husband makes his wife work and forces her to love him.

However, this release will please, chiefly because it gives Stella Razetto many opportunities to act and Miss Razetto can act. Julian de la Cruz is the hero and Eddie Polo rather a weak villain. Olga Printzlau prepared the scenario, while Edward Le Saint directed.

"Held for Damages." (Imp. Tues., April 11.)—A comedy with a lot of laughable touches and a fairly good plot. There is one point where a subtitle was obliged to tell of action that might easily have been pictured, but taking the subject as a whole it fulfills its mission as a comedy. Edna Pendleton and Harry Benham were featured under Jack Harvey's direction.

"Lathered Truth." (Victor. Two reels. Wed., April 12.)—A fair comedy, but we hope that before its release that several closeups showing eggs striking a woman's face be eliminated. Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby are the leads.

The former is a moving picture director, the latter a barber, who poses as a society maiden. Miss Theby's performance is marked by a clever burlesque work. Various inmates of the Fort Lee studio apear, including Jane Gail and Julius Stern.

"The Brink." (Laemmle. Wed., April 12.)—A society drama that attempts to dip into the workings of the inner set, but which in doing so fails to ring true. It is interesting in part and carries quite a bit of suspense, but its appeal is confined to the unsophisticated portion of the masses.

"Public Approval." (Laemmle. Three reels. Thurs., April 13.)—A melodrama dealing with crooked politics and two love affairs that for a time are threatened by its movements. It was written by Harvey Gates and produced by Leon Kent with a cast including Jack Livingston, Agnes Vernon, Duke Worne, Margaret Gibson, Ray Hanford and Malcolm Blevins. It is an average number, a little involved at times, but leaving a good impression.

"Some Fish." (Powers. Thurs., April 13.)—A juvenile comedy not yet shown for review.

"The Doctor of the Afternoon Arm." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., April 14.)—This story of life in the rough depicts the reformation of a dissolute doctor through the efforts of a little girl.

It is told clearly and the strength of the two reels is not to be easily underrated. In fact it is a fine picture all the way through, with some very good acting contributed by Sidney Bracey and Edith Roberts. Others are George MacQuarrie, Paul Kelly and Sydell Dowling.

"The Toll of the Angelus." (Rex. Fri., April 14.)—This drama featuring Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley has not yet been shown for review.

"Some Honeymoon." (Nestor. Fri., April 14.)—A newly married couple bet their friends that they can successfully hide themselves until a certain hour and by disguising themselves as hotel employees they win.

This has suspense and comedy aplenty. Billie Rhodes, Lee Moran and Neal Burns are the leads. The story was by Palmer Brown, while Christie himself directed.

"The Rival Pilots." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., April 15.)—A railroad melodrama presenting three of the most daring thrills ever pictured. One is a runaway engine demolishing a handcar, another is a daring climb by Lee Hill along a rope tied to a freight car and an automobile and the third is Hill's miraculous rescue of a little child playing in front of his onrushing engine.

This last is liable to cause hearts to flutter and flit wildly. The story is essentially and purely melodramatic and is constructed fairly well save that several important bits of action transpire in the subtitles. Henry McRae directed from a scenario by Wright Roberts, while included in the cast are L. C. Shumway and Margaret Mayburn.

"The Stolen Melody." (Powers. Sat., April 15.)—A good drama with Sydney Ayres, Doris Pawn and Val Paul in their usual roles. It contains an interesting amount of suspense, while a number of incidental scenes laid on a stage add to the entertainment value. The ending is a little inefficient, but otherwise the picture will please.

"Hubby Puts One Over." (Joker. Sat., April 15.)—The most illuminating feature of this comedy comes when William Franey and Charles Conklin, each on either side of a mirror frame, act as if the mirror were in place. In other respects, too, this comedy is unusually good, the tricks being laughable at all times. Gale Henry and Lillian Peacock are others. Allen Curtis wrote and directed.

"The Double's Trouble." (L-Ko. Two reels. Sun., April 16.)—Alice Howell in her usual eccentric role and also as a conspiring countess together with Harry Coleman are the leads in this comedy which is fair, while not presenting anything uproariously laughable.

The slavey in the hotel usurps the place of the countess and then innocently betrays a gang of crooks. The finale introduces a laughably sensational climax.

"The Sham Reality." (Victor. Split reel. Sat., April 16.)—Francis Ford, Grace Cunard, Harry Mann and Irving Lippner in a short sketch of the sort that leaves the exact finale to the spectator's imagination. It is a very good subject and leaves a sure impression. The rest of the reel shows an educational, "Zoo Arrivals from South America."

THE BUSY EXHIBITOR'S PAPER

You can get more out of MOTION PICTURE NEWS in fifteen minutes than you get from any other trade journal in an hour.

That's why so many exhibitors find the NEWS is a necessity.

Life's too short to read a paper that isn't as well built as the NEWS is.

BOXING CONTEST

SLIDES

Positively the only Official and Authorized Slides

We hold the only authentic contract covering exclusive privilege for Motion Pictures taken at this boxing contest, all of which has been copyrighted. Any dealer or exhibitor selling or showing slides purporting to cover the Willard-Moran contest, not purchased from us, will be held strictly and legally accountable for so doing.

The slides are made from the most effective incident of each round, reproduced directly from the films.

To all exhibitors unable to exhibit the films, these slides are the only satisfying substitute.

We have arranged with the Kraus Manufacturing Company, 220 West 42nd St., New York, to manufacture and market these slides, or they can be obtained direct from us.

Complete set of 25 slides—$20.00.

All paper now used in the exploitation of the picture in one, three, six sheet lithographs—8c per sheet.

Lobby photos—12 to set—$1.20 per set.

CASH must accompany ALL ORDERS.

AMERICAN PLAY COMPANY

INCORPORATED

ANNOUNCE

the ACQUISITION of

MISS OUIDA BERGÉRE

as MANAGER of its

Players' Engagement Department

UNDER MISS BERGÉRE'S MANAGEMENT

the American Play Company proposes to conduct this Department along the identical lines of HONEST EFFICIENCY and PERSONAL ATTENTION to the BEST INTERESTS of the ACTOR, as have won for it its present unassailable reputation as the business representative of the world's most famous Dramatists and Authors.

THE PLAYERS' ENGAGEMENT DEPARTMENT will not only SECURE ENGAGEMENTS for PLAYERS IN MOVING PICTURES as well as IN DRAMATIC fields, but it also is prepared to act as PERSONAL BUSINESS REPRESENTATIVE for such Players as desire to devote their every energy to their chosen profession, and consequently wish to rid their minds of ALL WORRISOME BUSINESS DETAIL.

A UNIQUE ADVANTAGE

Miss Bergére offers a unique and exclusive advantage to such of her clients as desire engagements in Moving-Pictures: by special agreement she can arrange for the taking of "Test Pictures" of each Player, which film she will show to Moving-Picture Directors, not only thereby demonstrating the certain "filmability" of the Player but also saving an enormous amount of time for all parties concerned. By this method all uncertainty as to whether a Player "screens well" will be positively eliminated.

ON MONDAY, APRIL 3rd

Miss Bergére will transfer her entire office staff to the new suite of offices now being prepared for her by the American Play Co., at 1036-7 Aeolian Hall, New York City.

Los Angeles
California.

It's up to me, and I hereby serve notice:

The artistic features—screen program, music, etc.—of the Motion Picture Exposition at Madison Square Garden May 6-13 have been placed in my charge.

I now take my pen in hand to say that I am already over my ears in the fastest job I ever handled.

I am putting the best work into it that Rothapfel is capable of—which is by way of saying, if I do say it myself, that this show will be ONE EVENT.

If you haven't hooked on, do it now.

L. Rothapfel

Exposition Art Director

For reservations, telegraph to J. W. Binder, Motion Picture Board of Trade, Inc., 18 East 41st St., New York, or Harry A. Cochrane, Madison Square Garden, New York.

OF AMERICA

First National Motion Picture Exposition!

The Place:
Madison Square Garden
Time: May 6-13, 1916

The first real chance you have ever had to get into real touch—direct touch—with so many of your best prospects at once.

Whether you are interested in selling to the makers, the marketers, the exhibitors, or the public, of motion pictures.

Bankers' Day: Addresses by representatives of the American Bankers' Association.

Fire Insurance Day: Discussion of insurance problems—prevention and safety devices.

Other big features—something doing every hour of every day. See the largest motion picture screen ever built. See the pictures being made. See daily productions and projections of the new plays.

Hear the world's greatest band!

Still some space—you can get some of it if you telegraph or write today to J. W. Binder, Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., 18 East 41st St., or Harry A. Cochrane, Madison Square Garden, New York.

TO THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE:

On the opposite page Rothapfel has told you something of the artistic and musical ends of the Trade Show. I am taking this page to tell you that the business end of the show will be just as big and just as successful.

To prove this, I print below a list of the concerns who together have contracted for more than half of the available space. Before the close of the present week, the balance will be pretty well taken. A glance at the list will convince you that as Roxy says, this will be "some" Show.

Here are the concerns that have signed contracts:—

Eastman Kodak Company	400 Sq. Ft.	J. H. Hallberg	500 Sq. Ft.
Mutual Film Corporation	1500 " "	Cooper Hewitt Company	100 " "

Early forthcoming David Horsley productions offer just the class of photoplays exhibitors can advantageously show. They combine box-office value with pleasing quality—a combination that in the first place brings patronage to a theatre and in the second place retains it.

The list of releases includes:

"The Leopard's Bride," a five-part romantic drama of India featuring Margaret Gibson, William Clifford and the Bostock animals. Released April 13.

"The Conscience of John David," a psychological drama staged in five parts featuring Crane Wilbur. Released April 24.

"The Conquering Hero," a rollicking Cub Comedy featuring George Ovey. Released April 21.

Book any of these productions from your nearest Mutual exchange.

By J. H. Hallberg

80—Why is it that in a transformer the iron core is continuous without a break and that in the choke-coil the iron core is always provided with an air gap?

Ans.—In a transformer the iron circuit or the iron core must be closed so as to form a continuous path of extremely low resistance to the magnetic lines of force and the coils must be placed in such a position upon the core that all of the lines of force generated by the primary winding will also pass through that portion of the core surrounded by the secondary windings. It is, of course, impossible to include all of the magnetic lines of force, but in well-designed transformers nearly all of the magnetic lines of force cut the secondary winding so as to generate electro-motive force in the secondary coil.

A transformer, as its name designates, is a device which changes or transforms one voltage into another. A transformer can just as well increase a given voltage as it can lower it, and it is evident that where the transformer is used for supplying power to incandescent lamps or motors it is essential that the voltage should remain steady, irrespective of the number of lamps burning on the system.

In order to secure this steady voltage the transformer must have constant potential characteristics which are obtained by the close proximity of the primary and secondary windings relative to each other, and by a proper design of continuous or closed magnetic core or circuit.

It is true that there are transformers designed with constant current characteristics in which the voltage is not required to be constant, and that constant current transformers also have closed magnetic circuits or cores, but for the time being we will not discuss this type of transformer but will consider the choke-coil.

The choke-coil is, in effect, the same as a rheostat in series with the arc, as far as its regulating qualities are concerned. You know and will remember that the arc is not self-regulating—in fact, it is of such a nature that it will pass a continually increasing current over itself if the potential is not reduced, or if the line fuses do not give away.

In other words, there is no limit to the current flow possible over an arc between two carbon electrodes. In view of this fact the rheostat being introduced in series with the arc, being of a contrary nature as compared with the arc, offers an increasing resistance to the flow of the current with increasing ampere flow, thus establishing an electrically balanced system.

The choke-coil performs the same service as the rheostat, but it has a wonderful advantage over the rheostat on A. C. in that it effects a saving in power of anywhere from 40 to 60 per cent. on a 110-volt circuit. A choke-coil when properly designed does not get more than warm under normal conditions, which is in itself an indication of a small loss. You know that when you connect a choke-coil in series with the line and the arc, you secure a voltage drop from 110 to 35 or 40 volts when the arc is burning and you also know that there is very little heat dissipated in the coil. On the other hand, you know with a similar change from line to arc voltage with a rheostat there is a great amount of heat dissipated by the rheostat.

It is possible to design a choke-coil with a complete iron circuit which will reduce the voltage, but if you should try such a coil on an electric arc you will soon find that the regulating quality demanded of a choke-coil when controlling an arc would be absent and, while you would get a voltage reduction, you could not maintain the arc.

I may modify the above statement by saying that if I made the iron core very long or large in diameter, if I made it circular, I would secure the necessary sluggishness or regulating quality, but it would become entirely too expensive and would be impractical for the purpose. Therefore, electrical engineers skilled in the art developed a core and a coil combined, in which the core has an air gap over which the magnetic lines of force have to pass from one end of the core to the other. By introducing an air gap in the core it is possible to put on more turns of wire in series with the arc and in that manner to secure a device which will reduce the voltage and keep the current almost constant, as is required for the control of an arc with very little loss of power (only 10 to 20 per cent.).

Choke-coils are made so that the air gap or air gaps (because in some coils the designer has provided two air gaps for convenience of construction) can be adjusted. I am sure that if you have operated moving picture or other arc lamps on A. C. with choke-coils you will remember that these devices are furnished with screw clamps or similar arrangement whereby the air gap or gaps can readily be adjusted, and you will also remember that when the air gap is very small the current at the arc is considerably reduced and that when the cores are separated or the air gap increased then the amperes will also increase, in that manner giving an adjustment for the current strength at the arc.

Empress, English Theatre, Is Paragon of Design

Foyer of Picture House in Liverpool Is Faithful Reproduction of Elizabethan Period Decoration—Quaint Inglenooks, Huge Oak Beams, Panels, Old-Fashioned Fireplaces, Striking Pictorial Tapestries and Rich Velvet Hangings Lend Charm to Interior—The Exterior Is Equally Impressive

AMONG English motion picture theatres which have set a standard of artistic excellence is the Empress Picture House, Tuebrook, Liverpool. The interior decorations convey an impression of richness and elegance hardly surpassed in any screen theatre in the United Kingdom.

The foyer is a replica of an old English mansion of Elizabethan times, to which has been added tapestries depicting scenes of the period. In the freize have been wrought with a compelling artistry pictures of the manners and customs of the doublet and hose epoch, casting a halo of romantic glamour over the interior.

Two quaint inglenooks, oak panelling and polished beams of the same wood give the entrance hall an additional old-time atmosphere. Fireplaces of olden days make another attractive feature. Cecilian marble has been used in the stairs to the auditorium and the flooring is of maple. The foyer of the Empress has the distinction of being the only one of the kind in Liverpool picture theatres.

The auditorium seats 910, and is carpeted with a thick pattern of blues ton-sur-ton. Rich purple velour, trimmed and embroidered in shades of gold, drapes the proscenium end of the theatre. The window and door draperies match the carpet in which shades of blue prevail.

The ventilating is as complete as the other features of this up-to-date picture house. Fans in the roof keep the interior constantly furnished with a supply of fresh air. Heating arrangements consist of hot water radiators. The lighting for the auditorium has been thought out with care. A series of dimmer opalescent spheres diffuse a mild glow, without interfering with the light on the screen.

Two Gaumont projection machines have been installed and the throw is one hundred feet. A distempered screen is in use at the Empress. The music consists of a highly efficient orchestra, under competent leadership.

The exterior is equally imposing, with its classic front, and Ionic pillars on the second story. The Empress, located on a commanding part of Derby Road, cost forty thousand dollars.

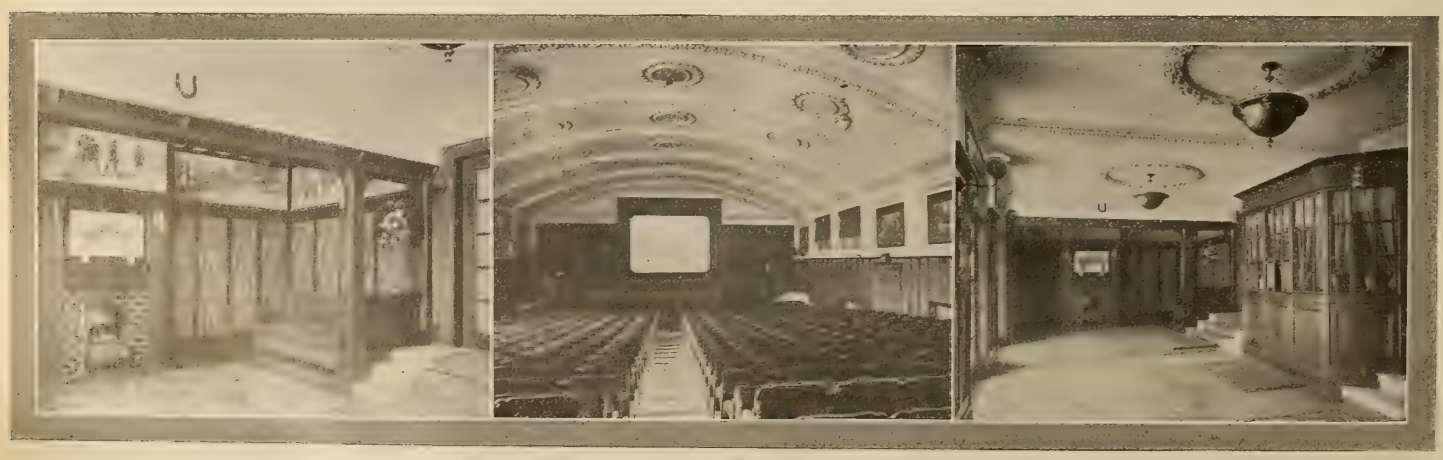
The lobby is spacious and is made notable by attractive decorations. Roll ticket machines are a part of the cashier's booth. The Empress, owned by T. H. Hughes and located in the residential section of the city, offers two shows a night and has no difficulty in drawing large patronage. The pictures handled by Barker and J. D. Walker are shown at the Empress. The subjects featuring Pauline Frederick, Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark and Sidney Drew are in favor with its patrons.

A novelty in construction consists of two waiting rooms for the benefit of early arrivals. Each section accommodates three hundred people. A veranda, striking in design, affords shelter from bad weather.

The manager is Walter Bell, an old-time theatrical man with fifteen years' experience in the show business to his credit. The proprietor, Mr. Hughes, is interested in other picture enterprises. He is the managing director of the Dingle, Smithdown Road, and is a director of the Magnet, Wavetree.

MINUSA CINE PRODUCTS COMPANY PLACES SCREENS IN FOUR ATLANTA, GA., THEATRES

THE Minusa Cine Products Company announces that Charles Kessnich, of the Mutual Film Corporation, of Atlanta, has installed its screens in the Piedmont, Strand and Grand theatres, Atlanta, and in the Vaudette in Athens, Ga.



The Consolidated Film & Supply Company, of Atlanta, has placed an order for a special screen for the Boys' High School of that city.

The Ajax Movie Equipment Company, of Washington, D. C., has made an installation in the New Avenue Grand theatre. This is one of the new theatres of Washington and will open about April 1.

The Wichita Film & Supply Company, of Wichita, Kan., has just completed an installation in the New Palace theatre of that city. This installation was made at the time that Nat I. Brown, director of sales of the Minusa Cine Products Company, was in that city attending the Kansas Exhibitors' Convention.

MINUSA GOLD FIBRE SCREEN INSTALLED IN HOME OF MISSOURI STEEL MAN

CLARENCE V. HOWARD, president of the Commonwealth Steel Company, recently placed an order with the Minusa Cine Products Company for a Minusa Gold Fibre screen for his private theatre on his country estate near Clayton, Mo.

Directory of New Theatres

This department is designed to be a weekly guide to all sales, leases, construction and remodeling of photoplay theatres. If you are building, selling, leasing or renovating, kindly communicate it at once for publication.

CALIFORNIA

AN eight-story Class-A office and theatre building is to be erected at once on Fourteenth street, near Franklin, Oakland, by the Archon Company, contracts for the steel work having already been awarded. The new theatre will be but a short distance from the Franklin theatre, one of the leading moving-picture houses of Oakland.

The Market Street theatre, on Market street, San Jose, has been closed. This house adjoined the Liberty theatre.

The management of the Bell theatre, at Vallejo, has been making a number of improvements in equipment of late, a Westinghouse motor-generator set being one of the latest additions.

A new moving-picture theatre is to be erected in the Mission district of San Francisco by J. F. Seymour.

The Regent theatre on Fillmore street, San Francisco, has been sold to J. Hughes by F. A. Lacey.

The First Baptist Church at Fort Bragg has purchased a moving-picture machine and will give regular entertainments.

The Novelty theatre, at Suisun, has been sold by J. D. Tamm to H. Hicks.

The Tivoli theatre, San Francisco, has reduced its prices to ten cents, except on Sundays and holidays, when ten and twenty cents will be the regular rates.

Property owners at Anaheim are building two theatres, each to have about five hundred seating capacity. At the present time there are two houses in this town of less than five thousand.

J. A. Quinn, who has been manager of a number of Los Angeles downtown theatres, and recently connected with the Superba theatre, of Los Angeles, according to announcement on billboards, has leased the Empress theatre, a former vaudeville house, and will open it at an early date with pictures. The house has a seating capacity of about twelve hundred.

W. M. Clapp, who has been an exhibitor in Los Angeles for the past seven years, has disposed of his theatre, the Angelus, 930 Central avenue.

M. E. Block has disposed of the Portola theatre at 529 S. Main street, Los Angeles, to T. J. Shirley, and has purchased a half interest in the Optic theatre at 533 S. Main street.

L. Liscombe has leased the Palace theatre at Forty-seventh and Moneta, Los Angeles. This house has been dark for several weeks.

G. G. Gwynne recently purchased the Keystone theatre, at Pico and Western avenue, Los Angeles, and after making a number of alterations and improvements reopened the house.

H. W. Riddel has leased the Gay theatre at Thirty-ninth and Western avenue, Los Angeles. This has been closed for several weeks.

H. Stites is the new owner of the Wilshire theatre at 133 Western avenue, Los Angeles, having purchased it from W. E. Crosby.

Trede and Tracy have purchased the Starland theatre at Orange, and reopened the house.

D. H. Russell, former manager of the Clune theatre at Santa Ana, has purchased the Colonial, at Orange, from Harris & Knight.

CANADA

Myer Schlesinger, manager of the Thêatre Français, St. Catherine street, East, Montreal, resigns that position in May.

The Thêatre Français, one of the best-known houses in Montreal, is on the market, and it is understood will change hands shortly.

The Domino theatre, another well-known house in the city of Montreal, goes dark next week unless a new lessee is found; the present lessee, George Capadritis, having terminated his connections with the theatre.

The Scala theatre, a Brock house, on St. Lawrence Boulevard, Montreal, is now on the market.

FLORIDA

The opera house at Pensacola has been taken over by H. M. Navaratt. The house seats 1,500 and will operate on a 10-cent policy.

W. M. Clark has purchased the Alamo theatre at Gainesville, and will at once make extensive improvements.

Manager Catron, of the Bonita theatre at Tampa, has installed a new cooling system in his theatre.

J. C. Boss, owner of the Fotosho and Colonial theatres at Miami, has commenced the erection of a new moving-picture theatre which will seat 1,800.

ILLINOIS

Bert Stout, of Victoria, will shortly open a motion-picture airdome in that town.

W. B. Finn, owner of The City motion picture theatre at Virginia, is making a number of improvements.

Mrs. E. J. Striewing, proprietress of the Crystal theatre at Decatur, is improving the projection department of her theatre by the addition of a new Powers' machine, through the Springfield Co-Operative Supply and Amusement Company, of Springfield.

Samuel Galyon has purchased the motion-picture theatre at Pawnee from Drone and Cole. He is making extensive improvements, including redecoration of the interior and exterior and has christened the playhouse the White Palace.

R. H. Hoyland, of Decatur, has opened motion-picture theatres in Niantic and Mt. Auburn, and is showing three nights a week in each town.

Lawrence Watkins, owner of the Elite motion picture theatre at Petersburg, has begun the erection of a new theatre on the site of the one owned by Watts and Simon, which was recently burned. Mr. Watkins is putting up a thoroughly modern theatre which will have a seating capacity of five hundred.

Guy Durbin has opened a new motion-picture theatre at Murrayville.

KENTUCKY

The Alhambra theatre, Richmond, is being repaired and enlarged. The building is being extended fifty feet and a balcony is being constructed.

The management of the Washington Opera House, Maysville, has secured the local rights for the Triangle pictures.

LOUISIANA

The Colonial theatre, Cambronne and Hickory streets, New Orleans, was sold at public auction on March 23 in piecemeal lots to several New Orleans exhibitors. The sale included two projectors and the house furnishings and chairs. Messrs. Badon and Green, who purchased a number of the articles, will, it is stated, open the Colonial under a new name in two weeks.

An important deal was consummated late in March, by which Josiah Pearce and Sons sold out their interests in Lake Charles, to the well-known Louisiana exhibiting firm of Wachsen and Miller. The sale included their three Lake Charles houses—the Arcade, the Iris and the Dreamland. It is understood that the houses were sold, not because they were unprofitable, but because of the attractiveness of the offer of the purchasers. The Pearce enterprises long have controlled the motion picture situation in Lake Charles.

The Magic City theatre at Bogalusa is being renovated and new opera chairs installed.

C. L. Sherwood has opened the New Sherwood theatre at Homer.

MICHIGAN

Someone has asked for the names of the new theatres that are either in course of erection or that will be built in Detroit this year. We answer with pleasure:

The new Stratford, Dix and Ferdinand avenues, opened on Saturday, March 11. E. V. McGrath is manager. It seats about 1,200.

The Drury Lane, Woodward and Grand Circus Park, owned by Frank Drew, will open the latter part of April.

The Regent theatre, Woodward and Horton avenues, owned by William F. Klatt, will open about the first of May. It will seat close to 3,000 people.

The Ferry Field theatre, Grand River avenue and the Grand Boulevard, seating 1,300, will open during the summer. It is now being built.

The Catherine theatre, Catherine and Chene streets, owned by the Lincoln Amusement Company, is to be enlarged to 800 seating capacity.

The Iris theatre, Grand Boulevard and Joseph Campau avenues, will be started at once. It will seat 1,000 persons all on one floor, the balcony being eliminated. The building will be 90 by 118, and will face on the boulevard. The exterior walls will be of vitrified brick and terra cotta trimmings. The Northeastern Detroit Amusement Company is the owner, the officers being George H. Fleishut, president, and E. A. Holdenhauer, secretary.

The Madison theatre, Broadway and Grand Circus Park, seating 3,000, owned by John H. Kunsky, and ready to open later in the year. Work is already started on the excavation and contracts for the buildings let.

The Theatre de Luxe at Kercheval and Parkview avenues, by the Theatre de Luxe Company, C. M. Orth general manager. It will seat about 1,000, and is to be ready in September. Work not started as yet. The Adam style of decoration will predominate. The projection booth will be between the first floor and the balcony.

The Colonial theatre, Woodward and Sibley streets, owned by the Hoffman Brothers. Work to start within sixty days, and to be opened by October.

The Rialto theatre, Gratiot and Mt. Elliott avenues, seating 1,500 J. C. Ritter general manager. The theatre will be on the amphitheatre style.

On April 1 the Majestic theatre, Detroit, was one year old. During that time it had a phenomenal success, and has made huge profits. It has a large surplus of cash in the bank, and some day a big dividend will be declared. M. W. McGee is manager of the Majestic.

The Washington theatre, one of the Bay City's newest and most elaborate photoplay houses, opened Friday, March 17. The Enterprise Theatre Equipment Company, Detroit, supplied the entire equipment, which is the most modern and up-to-date procurable. The jictures are projected by two 1916 model Motiographs. Music is furnished by a six-piece orchestra, which is supplemented by a piano soloist.

Carter & Son, of Elkhart, Ind., have purchased the Happy Hour motion picture theatre at Coldwater.

Dennis Vanes has purchased the Venetian theatre at Coldwater.

A $45,000 theatre is to be erected at Traverse City. The same will be leased to the Fitzpatrick-McElroy Company of Chicago, which now owns a chain of twenty-four theatres in Michigan and other states. The seating capacity will be 1,200.

W. V. Newkirk will manage the new Palace theatre, Saginaw, which will open on Easter Sunday, playing motion pictures.

Three theatres were destroyed by fire in the state of Michigan during the month of February.

There is considerable talk of more rigid fire regulations in Detroit to prevent the overcrowding of theatres, especially on Sundays.

A new theatre to be known as the Colonial will shortly be erected at Woodward and Sibley streets, Detroit, by Clare and Graham Hoffman. The company has been organized to be known as the Detroit Colonial Theatre Company, and the capital stock is $200,000, a good portion of which will be offered for sale to the public. C. Howard Crane, Dime Bank building, is the architect. It will seat 2,000 people. It will show vaudeville and motion pictures.

A theatre costing $20,000 will be erected in Owosso, for the Strand Theatre Company. It will be of brick and terra cotta.

James Mallery is having plans drawn up for a theatre to be erected at 621 South Saginaw street, Flint.

MISSOURI

A jewel of a moving picture house has been dropped into the turmoil of Twelfth street, Kansas City, and is quietly shining forth in its modest splendor. Twelfth street is said to be the noisiest and busiest street in Kansas City; and it has more picture shows to the block than any other street, mostly five-cent houses, with a few that occasionally charge a dime. Frank L. Newman placed there, between Walnut and Grand, his new Regent theatre, modeled after his Royal on Main street, and is getting the business.

The Regent is severely plain in front, but distinctive; it is made even more distinctive by the absence of all posters on the sidewalk, no pictures being visible except in the lobby, where there are two framed reproductions of stars. The theatre opened to the public March 25. The admission is 10 cents.

The Le Beaume theatre on Cass avenue, St. Louis, which has just reopened after improvements and alterations, is in charge of Manager Cox, who will operate the theatre under a new system.

NEW JERSEY

Photoplays have succeeded vaudeville as a form of entertainment in Plainfield. The Proctor management announced last week that the vaudeville program would be discontinued for motion pictures. The Plainfield house was one of a series of Proctor playhouses in northern New Jersey. It gave the only vaudeville offering in Plainfield. While patronage has been continually decreasing during the past six months, motion picture houses in the immediate vicinity have been playing to capacity audiences.

Frank G. Hall, general manager of the United States Theatre Company of New Jersey, which controls seven high class picture houses in northern New Jersey, has taken possession of the City theatre at Orange and Seventh streets, Newark. Although operating in Plainfield, Orange, Passaic, Paterson and Jersey City, the acquisition of the City theatre marks the first invasion of Newark by the United States Theatre Company.

NORTH CAROLINA

Plato Collins, owner of the Dixie and Palace theatre at Kingston, has secured half interest in the Grand at that place. The Palace and Grand will continue to run, but the Dixie will be closed.

Howard & Wells have acquired the last opposing theatre at Wilmington, the Academy of Music, which has been operated by the S. A. Lynch enterprise at Asheville. The Howard-Wells Amusement Company has been incorporated to operate the Grand, Royal, Bijou, Victoria and Academy of Music, with capital of $100,000. George W. Bailey will continue as manager.

Aaronson and Brown will open the new crystal theatre at Raleigh, in near future, to replace the old Crystal, which burned recently.

H. R. Mason, of the Acme theatre, has commenced the erection of a motion picture house at Goldsboro. The house will seat about eight hundred.

Airington Brothers have discontinued vaudeville at the Grand theatre, Rocky Mount, and will confine their house to moving pictures exclusively in the future.

Batchelor Brothers are remodeling the opera house at Weldon and will install new equipment.

IS COMBINATION OF CORED CARBONS FOR POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE BEST?

William M. Hyde, New Haven, Conn.—Noticing your reply in current issue of the "News" to W. H. R., New York City, in reference to carbon combination and your recommendation that he use copper-coated, cored carbon, I wish to state that in handling optical projection, remedies that alleviate one trouble quite often create others, as is the case of using cored carbons on the negative side, for the following reason:

First, the required arc pressure, instead of being 48 volts, as with the solid negative carbon, must be lengthened up to and including 70 volts, depending upon the amperage carried, 60 volts being common on 50-ampere service.

Secondly, a study of the optical system shows a heavy loss of screen illumination when the light at its source (carbon crater) is not concentrated, as the lens (condensing) only picks up such light as lies at its point of focus.

Then again with an arc not exceeding 48 volts the carbon vapor is maintained at its highest temperature, thus emiting light from the cool colors of the spectrum which produce a white light; while on a long arc the vapor working at lower temperature is composed of the warm colors, thus giving a yellowish or reddish light, which means an added loss in illumination.

Recently, together with a representative of a leading New York dealer in projection equipment, we tested all the makes of carbons at present upon the market on amperages from 35 to 75 and voltage from 48 to 70. We not only satisfied ourselves, but this representative also, that the cored and solid combination was superior to two cored, and also the fallacy of the long arc, which is necessary on the latter trim.

However, in such instances where exhibitors are indifferent to results to such an extent that they employ but one man on duty in the projection room, it is most certainly proper to use a cored combination with a long arc, as the light this way requires very little attention, little feeding and gives the operator sufficient time to attend any duties other than projection.

It might be worth while to state that the exhibitor could reduce his amperage, use a solid negative, have the same screen illumination, and save enough in lost wattage to engage an assistant for the operator and have an improved picture by thus permitting his operator to give his undivided attention to projection.

ANS.—Your letter has been read with a great deal of interest. It brings me back some 20 years ago when I was electrical engineer and designer for the Standard Thermometer and Electric Company, of Peabody, Mass., where I designed and constructed for the said company a complete line of open as well as enclosed arc lamps.

This concern were the manufacturers of the original low-tension open arc known as the Ward Lamp and a later type, the Knight Lamp, and still another design known as the Upton Arc Lamp. During the experiments at that time considerable valuable information was obtained as to the most efficient combination of carbons and arc voltage to be maintained with open arc lamps.

You are right in stating that under ideal conditions a cored carbon as positive and a solid as negative will give, theoretically at least, the most satisfactory results.

With the regular low-tension arc which was operated with 10 to a maximum of 20 amperes, two in series on 110 volt D. C. circuits, having the carbons actuated by a most perfect mechanism electro-magnetically controlled, it was possible to maintain an arc at about 42 volts, the lowest being 40 and the highest used at that time 45 volts.

tive was absolutely perfect. The combination gave a wonderfully steady light, but at no time was it necessary to operate above 45-volt arc potential, and, as a matter of fact, the mechanism was so perfect that it maintained a constant arc voltage on each one of the two lamps between 41 and 43 volts, averaging 42.

At the same time there were in use thousands of open arcs operating in series using solid carbons, both top and bottom on the old T. H., Excelsior, Brush and other series arc lighting systems in which the amperes maintained on the system was about 6.7 for the 1,200-candlepower lamps and 9.8 amperes for the 2,000-candlepower lamps, and the arc voltage for these particular lamps was maintained at about 50 for best results.

With the development of the projector industry, with special reference to motion picture work, however, new conditions had to be met. The automatic control obtained with the ordinary arc lamps, operating in series as above referred to, could not be so readily employed. As a matter of fact, the automatic feed was not until recently allowed in connection with the control of motion picture arcs for fear that the operator would not at all times be at the machine, in case it was of the motor-driven type, which would have made the projector entirely automatic after the reel had been started.

Due to the introduction of the projector arc lamp with hand feed a new condition was brought about, requiring a carbon combination which would allow greater leeway in arc voltage and as a result and also on account of the amperes required ranging from 25 to 35 in the early days, it was necessary to raise the arc voltage as far as from 42, for the automatic feed lamp, to 50 for the hand feed lamp.

With the comparatively low amperages in use when projection was first introduced a cored positive and solid negative carbon proved entirely satisfactory, at least we thought so at that time—perhaps because we were not so critical as we are now.

As the industry has developed, greater illuminating power has been called for, and as a result operators are to-day required to handle D. C. arcs ranging from 50 to 120 amperes.

If Mr. Hyde had followed the development of searchlights he would have found that the makers of this class of apparatus soon discovered that the solid carbon would not give satisfaction in the higher ampere capacities, and it did not take the moving picture machine operators long to likewise discover in practice, contrary to theory perhaps, that the best combination for real results from a practical point of view was to use a cored carbon for both positive and negative. This seems to be the universal opinion of the leading operators in charge of the more prominent exhibits throughout the world where high ampere arcs are used on D. C.

Lester Bowen, perhaps one of the best informed operators in connection with the handling of high ampere D. C. arcs, who has been in charge of the Strand theatre in New York City since it opened under the direction of S. L. Rothapfel, used the combination of ⅞-inch cored carbon for the positive and a ¾-inch cored carbon for the negative.

He insisted upon and continued the use of this carbon combination in spite of all previous theories on the subject, and he made exhaustive tests on the use of solid negative carbons with a 75 to 90 ampere arc on D. C., as used at the Strand. Personally, I know of several other operators to whom there has been submitted the very finest quality of solid negative carbons, but they have never been accepted as the better combination where the ampere capacity has been over 50.

The Kinemacolor Company some years ago used a special solid carbon, 11-16-inch diameter, which had a 3-inch point specially made for them, tapering to about ¼-inch at the end, which gave them splendid satisfaction, with 7/8-inch to 1-inch cored carbons for the positive, but Cecil Wood and Mr. Armstrong, who were among the engineers for the Kinemacolor Company, and Frank Nealy, of the Triangle Knickerbocker theatre, have determined since that time that better results are obtained with cored positive as well as cored negative carbons.

As evidence of this fact, I wish to state that Mr. Wood, who is electrical engineer and projection expert for Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" and other large interests, uses nothing but cored 7/8-inch positive carbons and a cored copper-coated carbon imported from France for the negative and the results have been and are exceedingly satisfactory with ampere flows ranging from 70 to 90.

I fail to see any reason for lengthening the arc to 70 volts, the common arc voltage being between 50 and 60 volts for best efficiency, and if Mr. Hyde conducted tests where he had to use 70 volts at the arc in order to secure perfect combustion, there must have been something wrong with either his equipment or his carbons.

The optical system has nothing to do with the length of the arc, because on the D. C. system the concentration at the crater, as long as it is kept constant, will be just the same, practically, whether the arc is 1/8-inch or 5/8-inch—the only difference being that with the higher arc voltage and greater separation of the carbon points more air, which introduces a cooling effect on the crater, is present, which would tend to lower the temperature of the positive crater, but, on the other hand, the greater influx of air should, at least theoretically, facilitate the combustion of the positive carbon to maintain a clean, round crater.

As a matter of interest, I may suggest that with a longer arc it is possible to maintain the positive crater so that it will be more nearly parallel with the condensing lenses than is possible with a short arc of 48 volts. With a 48-volt arc at 75 amperes the lower carbon would be in the way of the lower part of the positive crater, actually offering an obstruction, and, besides, the crater would then not burn so that the greater part of its face will be exposed to the surface of the condensing lenses. On the other hand, the crater will throw a greater amount of illumination towards the bottom of the lamp house.

Temperature of the Crater

Again, I fail to appreciate the theory of Mr. Hyde that the temperature of the crater is very much higher with the 48-volt arc, because with 48 volts and, say, 80 amperes we will have 3,840 watts at the arc, whereas with a 60-volt arc we would have 4,800 watts, which, in my opinion, will more than compensate for the slightly greater cooling effect present with a greater carbon separation. In reality the crater ought to be just as hot, if not hotter, when using the longer arc, as it is under the tension or influence of at least 25% more energy. In conclusion I wish to state that your theory that the solid carbon on the bottom with the 48-volt arc would save sufficient energy to pay for an assistant to the operator sounds very fine. If you are thoroughly convinced and have also convinced the supply house for whom you say you have conducted the experiments, you will have a nice proposition on which to establish a new branch in the business; but I am afraid you will find in practice that your labor would bring you small returns, and if you have asked for advice, my advice will be not to invest heavily in an enterprise of that kind.

I am of the firm opinion that the average operator of to-day knows the carbon combination which is most suited to his particular condition. I also want to tell you that in my experience, extending over many years in both the electrical and especially the arc-lighting line and the projection end of the business, I have learned the lesson that it is impossible to lay down iron-clad rules for carbon combinations and arc lengths to be maintained with projector lamps.

You know, conditions vary greatly and there are factors beyond your or my control which influence the action of the arc. Some machines are furnished with a large lamp house, others with small. Then again there are lamp houses made of aluminum, others are made of sheet iron, and you find more iron and steel in certain arc lamps, and the distribution of the metal throughout the lamp is different in the different make and type machines.

Therefore it is hard to determine before hand just what the magnetic influence will be on the arc, and on this account it is difficult to predetermine the size and the kind of carbons which can be used to best advantage. I believe that the operator in charge of the equipment, with proper guidance, can easily select the best combination.

UNABLE TO GET SPOT ON APERTURE PLATE

F. M. M., Buffalo, S. C.—I am having trouble with my arc. I have a Simplex machine, bought new last August, and I am unable to get a spot on the aperture plate. There are two spots, one above the other. I have 110 volts, 60 cycles A. C., and am using a Ft. Wayne Compensarc. Am using 5/8*-inch cored carbons, top and bottom. Not having but* 30 volts and 40 amperes out of the Compensarc, and without a good spot, I have a very poor light.

I am now using a Gold Fibre Screen, but still have a poor picture. I got hold of a transformer, ratio 2 to 1, and tried that. I had 60 volts then and 48 amperes. That did not make any better spot, but made a much better picture, but it would get the carbons red hot from the arc to the carbon holders and would burn the upper carbon to a taper from the holder to the arc, so I could not use that. I have changed the position of the carbons every way, but can't get the spot. Will you please advise me what my trouble is and how to remedy it?

Ans.—In response to yours of the twenty-first, I beg to say that you ought to be able to make a fairly satisfactory light on your screen with the Simplex machine and your Ft. Wayne Compensarc.

For your convenience I refer you to the January 22 issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS and ask you to look on page 432, under the heading "Motion Picture Projection Simplified," where you will find illustrations Fig. 33 and 34. These illustrations show in Fig. 33 both carbons sitting one above the other vertically and in Fig. 34 the lower carbon is set vertically and the upper one slants backwards at an angle of from 30 to 40 degrees, back of the vertical line.

By this method of carbon setting, it is possible to keep the carbons closer together than usual so that you can focus both craters into one spot on the aperture.

The Ft. Wayne Compensarc on the highest notch gives 60 amperes and that is a rather heavy load for a 5/8-inch Cored carbon and I would recommend that you use 3/4-inch carbons for better results, although if the 5/8-inch Cored carbon does not pencil it is satisfactory to use it.

With A. C. at the arc, you should not have over about 33 volts and the Compensarc gives on the low notch about 35 amperes and on the middle notch about 45, and on the high notch 60 amperes.

Your Gold Fibre screen should give you splendid satisfaction if it is one of the good make Gold Fibre screens.

If you would tell me how you now have the carbons set by illustration (a rough sketch will answer the purpose) and also give the distance from the lens to your screen and the size of your picture and if you will also state what make Gold Fibre screen you are using, then I may be able to give you further advice, but if you will read the issues of January 15, 22 and 29, of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, you will find under the heading "Motion Picture Projection Simplified" a most complete description of how to set and handle the carbons with A. C. at the arc.

The transformer which you mention was no doubt an ordinary 2 to 1 ratio regular constant potential transformer which, of course, is unsuitable for the operation of an electric arc, as it will force considerably more amperes through the arc than the carbons will stand and I don't wonder that your carbons got red hot all the way to the holders.

Also state what make carbons you are using, as better results can sometimes be had by changing the brand of carbon.

DISMISSAL OF TWO OPERATORS IN LOUISVILLE, KY., CAUSES BOYCOTT OF STRAND

A DISPUTE between the management of the Strand theatre, Louisville, Ky., and the Motion Picture Operators' Union, Local 163, growing out of the dismissal of two union operators, has caused the union to institute a picket campaign against the theatre.

Pickets have been stationed near the theatre, distributing cards which state that the house is unfair to organized labor. The men discharged are E. S. Carpenter and C. L. Snedeker, who have been employed at the theatre ever since it opened, which was about three months ago.

In giving the union's side of the controversy, Virgil Winters, assistant business agent of the local union, said: "The management of the theatre wanted one of the operators to put up signs outside the house while the other operated the machine. Both refused, as the rules of the union permit them to do nothing but operate and maintain the machine, whereupon they were discharged.

"We tried to have Manager McRae meet us and try for some settlement of the trouble, but he refused. The union wage is $22.50 a week, and the management put cheaper men in the places of those discharged."

R. V. McRae, manager of the Strand, said: "We were unable to do anything at all with these men. They did just as they pleased and caused us no end of trouble. We were paying them for eight hours' work a day and taking only about four hours of their time. If we asked one of them to stay a while longer at night, he would refuse and walk away, thereby leaving us in the lurch.

"We are willing to have union men, but not these two any longer. It is merely a question of our refusing to allow the union to force us to employ men whom we cannot control."

A request of the theatre management to the police to arrest the pickets who were distributing cards was refused. The police declared that the union men were acting within their rights as long as they created no disturbance and remained off the property line of the theatre.

GOLD KING SCREEN COMPANY MOVES TO LARGER QUARTERS IN HIGHTOWER BUILDING.

OWING to the great increase in business President Jones, of the Gold King Screen Company, has been forced to seek larger and more commodious office space. A lease has just been signed for the entire suite of offices in the second floor of the Hightower Building, the largest and most completely appointed office building in Altus, Okla., and an addition made to the office force which will enable the company to handle the clerical work more promptly.

E. W. Green, representative of the company in the State of Kansas, while attending the recent convention of exhibitors held in Wichita, made an installation of a large screen in the Crawford theatre, and took orders for twelve other screens.

REEL DISSOLVING
The machine they are all talking about

The voltage of the Martin poly-phase converter is maintained constant so that the starting of the second arc positively does not disturb the light given by the first arc. This makes the dissolving of the reels as simple as if the arcs were operated in a Direct Current district.
Our emergency panel provides A. C. for the lamps in case the rotary should be out of service and thereby eliminates the cost of compense-arcs for emergency purposes.
The placing of the converter in base of panel board makes it a self-contained outfit and cuts the wiring and installation cost in half.

RETURNED SOLDIERS, SEEKING EMPLOYMENT IN CANADA, BECOME GRAVE ISSUE FOR OPERATORS' UNION

THE returned soldiers who were put in to replace the striking operators at the Allen, Monarch, Bijou, Princess and Empress theatres in Calgary, Alberta, when the men of Local No. 302 walked out, continue at work, and are reported by Manager J. B. Cronk of the Allen theatre to be giving entire satisfaction.

Mr. Cronk stated that the managers had no quarrel with the union because it is a union, but that they were dissatisfied with the union demands and the conduct of some of its members. Consequently, when the authorities approached them with a request to furnish the returned soldiers with employment whenever possible, the theatre men took up the matter of training the veterans for the work required of them.

Although these men had passed the provincial examination for operators, they had not secured cards from the city, as required by law. The city took no action, however, and it was said that none was contemplated.

A rather disquieting statement emanated from Manager Belmont of the Bijou theatre, who announced that there was a strong probability that returned soldiers would be substituted for the present operators all over Canada, and that a scheme of this sort is now being worked on by the Moving Picture Theatre Managers' Association.

It was stated that one of the operators at the Empress theatre, where the soldiers took their lessons in operating, short-circuited the switches there recently, and also put some gum on the automatic fire shutters. A soldier who afterward went there to practice narrowly escaped injury when the fuses blew out. The union man's city license was cancelled by Chief of Police Cuddy, who also requested the provincial authorities to withdraw his provincial license.

The strike was the principal matter under discussion at the last meeting of the Calgary Trades and Labor Council, and a statement dealing with the matter was prepared. The union claims that the soldiers are being exploited, and are receiving from six to eight dollars less than the new scale submitted by the union.

Manager J. B. Cronk of the Allen, however, stated that the new men were receiving $22.50 for a week of six days of six hours' work a day, and with overtime paid at the rate of one dollar an hour. This, it is stated, was the union scale as agreed upon, being twenty-five dollars, with a reduction of ten per cent. during the war.

In Vancouver it was stated that many reels have arrived at the Universal exchange, from theatres in Calgary, in a very bad condition, as the result of the inexperience of some of the new men. Manager James E. Finch stated that the twelfth episode of "Graft" was so badly damaged that it was necessary to wire East for a new copy.

A noticeable feature of the whole strike situation is the injection of patriotic considerations, and the exclusion of practically all other questions. The returned soldier is the issue.

MAYOR AND MEMBERS OF TOWN COUNCIL GUESTS AT REGENT OPENING, NEWARK, N. J.

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Newark, N. J., March 31.

MAYOR ROBERT E. TORRANCE, members of the Kearny town council and other local officials, were guests of honor Monday night at the opening of the Regent theatre in Kearny avenue. The Regent theatre is built entirely of fireproof materials, and will accommodate 2,000 persons. The chairs are of the self-raising variety. An organ has been installed at a cost of more than $10,000,

The lobby is finished in chestnut wood. On the walls of the foyer may be seen beautifully-framed colored portraits of the popular motion picture stars. Two of the latest improved motion picture machines have been installed. A mezzanine room that will be used for reception purposes will be a feature of the conveniences of the new Kearny playhouse.

Mary Pickford in "Poor Little Peppina" was the opening attraction, and if the first week's business may be taken as a criterion the success of the new Kearny house is assured. Manager James W. Shaw said: "The Regent will be the home of the best photoplays obtainable. I want to build up a clientele of the very best."

The Camera

A Department Devoted to Motion Picture Photography in All Its Phases, Studio and Laboratory Work.

Too Much Should Not Be Attempted by Exhibitors

Amateur Photographers Must Not Suppose It Is Possible to "Stage and Produce a Photoplay With Characters and Use Sets Equalling Those Made by Regular Releasing Companies—But With Determination Good Photography Is Attainable"

IN our previous article we endeavored by a number of practical suggestions to help the exhibitor who makes his own films of local events, to improve his results and make the photographic quality of his efforts on a par with the other pictures on his program.

As we stated on introducing this department, the exhibitor or amateur should not imagine that he can stage and produce a photoplay with characters and use sets which will equal those made by regular releasing concerns; but with determination and practice, good photography can surely be attained.

Having given the camera and the film stock the attention which it deserves, as pointed out in our last article, we will suppose that some scenes or events have been filmed.

The next consideration is developing the negative and securing a positive print. Excepting in rare instances it will not be practicable or advisable for the amateur film maker to undertake the development of his negatives and the subsequent making of the positive print.

Results will be more certain, and it is more economical, now that developing materials are so costly, to entrust the work to a laboratory which does work for the trade in general.

Such concerns are found in all of the larger cities and the advertisements of many representative and reliable laboratories will be found in the NEWS. How to get the film to the laboratory in the best possible condition is the subject of this article.

Keep Can, Black Paper and Adhesive Tape

In unpacking a fresh roll of negative film stock, preparatory to loading the camera magazines, it will be found that in addition to the can the film comes in, it is also wrapped in tinfoil and black paper. The can, the black paper and the adhesive tape which seals the lid of the film can should be preserved. After the exposed film is removed, in the dark room, from the camera magazines, repack in the cans, having wrapped the rolls securely in the black paper originally around them.

The lids of the cans should now be sealed with the adhesive tape which will prevent accidental opening. The corrugated cardboard box in which the can of film comes will now be very useful to repack the exposed negative stock in prior to shipping to the laboratory.

Occasionally the exposed negative stock may include scenes taken in varying conditions of weather and light. Under such circumstances the best results will be obtained by giving the different scenes separate development.

Before taking a scene in a doubtful light open the camera and cut a V notch in the edge of the film. Do the same thing at the conclusion of the scene and enclose with the film written instructions, to the laboratory, to cut such portions of the film out and develop them separately.

When any doubt exists as to the amount of exposure to give a subject, it is always best to give too much rather than too little time. While overexposure can be compensated for to a considerable degree in developing a negative, a gratifying result is rarely obtained when the film has been undertimed.

Prior to shipping his negatives for development the photographer should cut short strips from the ends of his rolls of exposed negative and sometimes at other points in the film. These he should develop himself, to see how near correct the exposures have been.

Seeing these test strips turn out all right relieves the cameraman of all worry about the balance of his day's work and also gives him an idea of what may be expected of the finished print.

How to Save Cost of Titles

Should any titles be required for the positive print a list of the same should be sent to the laboratory, where facilities are at hand for making them neatly and properly. If only one print of the subject is required, instructions should be given the laboratory to make direct or camera titles. In this way the expense of having negative titles made, and then printed from, is eliminated.

Too great care cannot be exercised by those who use motion picture cameras to keep the camera and lens clean and absolutely free from dust. The inside of the film magazines and particularly the velvet covered light-traps or mouthpieces of same should always be thoroughly cleaned with a camel's-hair brush before using.

This will remove all accumulated dust and grit and the same treatment should be applied to the gate, the film channel and other parts of the camera. Especially is this necessary when X Back negative stock is used, as the coating on the back of this stock rapidly accumulates in the camera.

As to the lens it should always be capped when not taking pictures, and should invariably be fitted with a sunshade or hood projecting an inch or more from the front glass of the lens. All the makers of lenses, suitable for motion picture taking, can supply these sunshades, and they screw right on the front cell of the lens.

A sunshade cuts out all extraneous and side rays of light, which tend to veil the image over, making it flat and foggy, and pictures taken, with a shade properly adjusted to the lens, possess a great deal more snap and brilliancy than those taken without one.

As the lens is the component of the camera which actually produces the pictures, keeping it clean is of high importance. In cleaning a lens, an old and oft washed soft linen handkerchief, slightly moistened with alcohol, is the proper thing to use.

Do not be content with merely wiping off the front glass, as many photographers do; clean the rear combination also. Occasionally the lens combinations should be unscrewed from the mount and the inner glass surfaces also cleaned.

A motion picture camera, like any other piece of machinery, should be oiled from time to time to ensure its running smooth and lightly. One drop of oil to each bearing or running part is enough at a time. The pinions driving the shutter and claw movement require the most attention in this respect, as they run at higher speed than the rest of the mechanism. After the camera is oiled see that the surplus oil is wiped off and none left in any place that the film can come in contact with.

The exhibitor or photographer who follows these suggestions will have gone a long way toward securing good results.

OWNER OF THREE THEATRES IN GEORGIA BUYS THREE SIMPLEX MACHINES FROM LUCAS.

SUBSTITUTE FOR METOL IS NOW AVAILABLE FROM BERLIN ANILINE WORKS, NEW YORK

THE difficulties experienced by motion picture laboratories, and other branches of photographic business, due to the scarcity of Metol, will be alleviated to some extent by the appearance of a new developing reagent called "Metol Substitute," which has been brought out by the Berlin Aniline Works, 213-15 Water Street, New York.

This developer is identical in composition with, and is in fact the same as the compound known as Metol. Its superiority over many of the substitutes for Metol now offered is due to the fact that the phenol (the most important chemical used in the manufacturing of Metol) is imported and of the highest purity.

Many of the Metol substitutes now made are compounded with phenol of American make, which as yet has not attained the stability and purity of the imported article.

As has been found by practical usage the developers containing domestic phenol oxidize quickly, stain the gelatine of film a yellowish color, and quickly lose their strength.

We have seen film processed with this new Metol substitute of the Berlin Works and can say that its action was rapid and the positives contained the necessary vigor with no trace of stain. The keeping qualities proved as good as that of the baths of a couple of years ago.

The Berlin Aniline Works are disposing of the Metol Substitute at a fair price, which is at present in the vicinity of $30 a pound. In line with their usual fair-minded attitude toward the motion picture and photographic industries, they are limiting the weekly allotment of the chemical. Only enough of the Metol substitute is supplied at a time, to the various users, to take care of their actual and immediate requirements.

This should be appreciated in the motion picture trade, as it prevents the chemical speculators securing it in quantities and re-selling at exorbitant prices.

DUPLEX MACHINE COMPANY WILL PUT NEW CAMERA ON MARKET SHORTLY.

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, April 1.

G. W. CARLETON, one of the owners of the Duplex Machine Company of Brooklyn, New York, manufacturers of motion picture machinery, is at the Coast spending a week or more with laboratory men.

The Duplex people have long since had their line of laboratory accessories perfected, and Mr. Carleton states that they will shortly place on the market a new camera.

NATIONAL TICKET PRINTING REGISTER IS NEW MACHINE PLACED ON MARKET

THE National Cash Register Company, of Dayton, Ohio, announces that it has placed on the market a new National Ticket Printing Register.

This register carries two different rolls of ticket paper, each one of a different color, so that that, for example, the five-cent ticket will be printed on pink paper and the ten-cent ticket on green.

These rolls are placed in the machine absolutely blank and each ticket is printed and numbered consecutively as it passes through the mechanism of the machine.

BROWN HURRIES FROM CONVENTION IN WICHITA TO ATTEND ATLANTA MEETING

NAT I. BROWN, an official of the Minusa Cine Products Company, of St. Louis, returned from a convention held in Wichita, Kan., on March 20-21, and departed immediately to attend another convention of the same nature at Atlanta, Ga., on March 30-31, and April 1.
